MR. WISE VISITS COLLEGE

Mr. Wise makes regular visits here in the interest of the college students who have disabilities, and always receives a warm welcome from the officials of the school.

IT CAN BE DONE

Many young people become discouraged in reading college catalogues and figuring up the expenses of a college education. Kenneth Sanders was not so easily discouraged. He left his home last fall with the expectation of attending college. He first went to a college where he had been given a $250.00 scholarship, but on arrival he found that it would be necessary for him to board in the dormitory and pay other school expenses which would run his expenses for the year much higher than he expected when he left home. He did not give up as many young men would have done, but immediately boarded a train for Jacksonville. On arrival here he took up his abode in one of the cottages belonging to the school and was able to make a note for his room rent payable after he begins teaching. "I lived very extravagantly for the first few months," Kenneth said, "and spent around $4.50 per month for food." Later this amount was reduced to considerably less. By doing his own washing, ironing and pressing and buying food as economically as possible, Kenneth found that he had spent at the end of nine months for necessary articles of clothing and all other expenses, approximately $110.00. This amount, of course, does not include the cost of room rent for which a note was given, but which was only $2.50 per month, including lights, water, cooking utensils, bedding and other necessary articles for lighthouse-keeping. If this amount should be added to the other the total cost would be only $132.50 for the nine months. In spite of such economical living, Kenneth says that he has enjoyed good health because he has eaten plain food and has not partaken of the many dainty foods which may cause decayed teeth, indigestion and other troubles of that nature. Kenneth has passed all of his work and expects to continue his education until he has prepared himself for the problems of life. Other ambitious young people who have a desire for a college education should immediately make up their minds to start in this fall. Anyone wishing to have a conversation with the person about whom this story is written should communicate with the Editor of the Teacola.

MAUDE LUTTRELL ADDED TO COLLEGE FACULTY

Miss Maude Luttrell, Head of English department of Anniston High School, has recently been added as a member of the English Department of the Jacksonville Teachers College for the summer quarter. Professor J. E. Wright, Principal of Calhoun County High School is also a member of the faculty for the summer quarter. A greatly increased enrollment made it necessary to add these and others to the faculty.

Students Are Urged to Trade With Advertisers

An appeal has been sent out over the college by members of the Teacola staff to all students urging that they trade with the people who advertise in the Teacola. Each issue of the paper is carrying much advertising and it furnishes a good medium for business people to reach prospective customers.

Finland was the only nation to pay its war debt to the United States June 15th.

SOMETHING NEW

Human nature tires of one thing. It wants variety. It demands something new. It ever harps upon the desirability of a change. That change may mean progress, or it may mean retrogression. From the housetops, some people are howling for the adoption of experiments. This cry is not all political. Most of it is social. It is seen in the home and among friends.

Now much of this noise is nothing but ballyhoo. It is the incessant clamor of unthinking minds for something—something different from what we now have. No matter how precious the heritage, the value of the results being obtained, the efficiency of methods, people demand something new.

They get what they want, and something new comes along. But the new soon becomes old, even as the shine quickly vanishes from the child's toy and he wants a new toy, though nothing is the matter with the old toy. Merely moving, changing, discarding the old, and adopting the new will not bring us the things which we need. Tomorrow may be a better day than today, and it may not be. Tomorrow will depend very much on yesterday and today. Youth needs to learn this.

How quickly, too, people forget—forget all the good things they had under an old order, which had to go in response to the craze for something new. We would not lose so many of our blessings if we did not abuse the treasures we have—for instance, civil liberty. Dictators hold forth only in those places where people abused what they had, disregarded the landmarks and danger signals, and lost control of themselves.

They wanted something new, and they got it—something not as good as before. Many races, nations, and civilizations have experienced this fact. Many a job-hunter has learned his lesson.

Many a church would be a far more positive force for good in the community, "serving and being served", if it did not cultivate and cater to the craze for something new, if it stuck to religion.

Many a community would be in pitiful financial straits today had it not answered every demand for something new.

Many a man and woman would be happier, more secure, more useful today, have better homes, and consequently there would be a better citizenry, had they not in their youthful days constantly demanded something new in the way of companionship, associations, and personal interests in that highly important transitional era of their lives.

In all of this agitation for something new, let us remember that much of the old is worth preserving. Newness of old treasures wears off, but the sacred interest often regains its luster and shines again in contrast to the acquisition which was the idol of our dreams. Many a dream of that kind is only a pipe dream. But we find it out too late.

The flitting butterfly may demand something new, ever and anon, but in this day of big tasks and problems and sacred treasures, the demand is not incessantly for something new, but for men and women who have some regard for a great past, and for something else than a mere change of scenery.

THE VALUE OF INSPIRATION IN TEACHING

Every teacher is expected to have a thorough knowledge of subject matter in order that he may be prepared to teach it to the children. There is something else that is equally as important in the art of teaching which is often overlooked in the training of teachers and that is ways and means of inspiring the pupils to have a desire to learn. A person may be full of his subject-matter and be a complete failure as a teacher.

Those who are laboring this summer with their courses to get an academic foundation should also devote time to studying ways and means of imparting an inspiration to the children whom they expect to teach next year. Another important thing to consider in teaching is that of good citizenship. It is thought by many that the schools today are a failure because young people go through our schools and colleges and then become criminals.

We should as educated people be more careful drivers of automobiles. We should be ashamed to violate any traffic law or be guilty of having a wreck. We should also be ashamed of ill health because an educated person should in most cases be smart enough to know and develop health habits.

Even the person who has a high school education should be so well trained in the ideals of citizenship that others may look to him as a model.

THE COUNTY ORGANIZATIONS

Much good work can be done in the county organizations during the summer quarter. The contacts made and friendships formed while in school will be of untold value in life. Every student should endeavor to know every other student from his county.

It is not the intent of the faculty members of the school to have students work all the time as there are many other things to be gained in an education other than from a text-book. Those who are here this summer should take a part in the organizations and learn to spend their leisure time pleasantly and to a good advantage.

WHATZIS

BY EUGENE CROWE

Once more I come to bat. Maybe this attempt won't be a strike-out as the other two were.

S. T. C. may be on two red hills, and all that, but I wanted to get back after an absence of only one week.

Recently I heard a remote control broadcast from the heart of the Western flood area. It told of the damage that had been wrought to the homes and property of the people. When this broadcast was completed, the network was taken over by a male vocalist. His first rendition was "River Stay Away from my Door."

The wives of many noted men try to forge into public life too much. It is gratifying to see the wives of famous people try to remain in their homes and devote their time to the rearing of their children. A reliable daily paper is now carrying a story each day concerning the wives of a few of these renowned men. These women compose the background for their more illustrious halves. More power to them.

Ezra Nash must be feeling the effects of a cold wave (or is it a wet wave?). He always carries his blanket with him when he goes out.

Just what kind of people are we anyway? One of my professors said that we are pagans, and another stated that we are parasites. I'm beginning to wonder.

One of the highlights of a certain American Literature class is the poetry reading by the renowned blond, Johnnie Allbright. He is All-bright all right.

Overheard: One girl to another, "I wish I could sit down and dash off a column for the Teacola like some people do". "Oh".

These industrious, hard working, diligent, busy, and attractive students at S. T. C. really like to get up early. All of the 7 o'clock classes are full and part of them are having to be divided into smaller groups.

"For he had no hair on the top of his head in the place where the hair ought to grow." This quotation applies to what big, bald, handsome, and dashing upperclassman. By the way, I'm not being charged any rent for these forceful adjectives.

I am missing many students who left S. T. C. at the termination of the Spring quarter. Among these are the two promising young journalists, Thad Barrow and Harry Herndon. Thad is taking a vacation in Florida "Where men are men and women are tanner"—(Or should it be "more tan.")

Our own Dr. Felgar says that 13 is his lucky number. He was awarded his A. B. degree in 1913, and he received his first position on Friday, the 13th. His thesis, recently completed, contained 13 chapters and he stood his first examination in room 113. Here's hoping that the number 13 will follow him through life.

Paul Dodd, "Skeets" to you, is a budding lexicographer. Lately he has been telling a certain person the meaning and pronunciation of a certain words. Our most sincere wishes are hereby extended to this Winston county product.

I am just wondering of Clyde Westbrook will ever be as famous as that other native of Jasper, Tallulah Bankhead. She is now appearing in a current success on Broadway. I don't think she aspires to the office of Governor of Alabama, as does Birmingham's Gail Patrick.

Just what do these co-eds mean when they call you a "cootie?"

As I write these words I am deeply saddened by the untimely passing of Joel Gains. Joel was a fine fellow, loved and respected by students and teachers alike. It is with sorrowful hearts that we say our farewells to him. Our heartfelt sympathy is extended to his bereaved family.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

I am just a silent admirer of the Teacola and I want everyone who reads the paper to know how splendid I think it is. Especially do I want to congratulate you for the superb issue you published last time. I have seen many school papers, but none to equal this one.

Dear fellow students, I am writing you individually through the paper to tell you just how I feel about a school paper. I think it is a paper where the hopes, ideas, feelings, as well as the jokes of the student body as a whole should have proper expression. I think it should be a paper made so interesting that all people reading it would have a sudden desire to come to Jacksonville to school. I have watched the Teacola grow, and become one of the best student publications in the state and I realize how fortunate we are to have such a fine paper.

One thing is imperative to the success of any paper; cooperation, and we have that here. Students are anxious to turn in articles for the paper; write-ups are numerous, they are interesting as well as educational.

So this for the thoughtless student, whoever he may be; while you sit and sleep on your job others are enjoying life, having a perfectly splendid time and also contributing their part to student activities. Wake up, shake yourself and make a resolution to have a good time too.

Yours Sincerely,
DEE

Voice of The College

By CHRISTINE GOSLIN

It has been said that civilization is but a thin veneer which imperfectly covers the innate and pre-mordial impulses of human nature. How many of us will dare resent the statement if we but pause for a moment and recall our actions and impulses when we have allowed our tempers to get the upper hand and have thus compelled reason to give place to rage?

Foreigners say we are filled with egotism. But are we egotistical to think that the United States has the most stable money system of any nation on the globe? Probably this is true. Since our present system has been in existence, there have never been any fluctuations in either value or volume.

It has been reported to me that Dr. Calvert, Dr. Mock, and Mr. Hendrix have a few A students. Very well, here is a sentence for you to punctuate: "That that is that that is not is no is not that it it is."

Mr. Proboscis,
When not amiss
Informed me quietly of this:
"It seems to me
That I occasionally see
Billy West with Dixie."

Some students in Mr. McCluer's classes seem to be very smart.

The following are some of the questions often asked with the answers he received:

Mr. McCluer: "Was President Lincoln killed while in office?"

Dodd: "No, I thought he was killed in a theater."

Mr. McCluer: "What's the difference between a polar expedition in the Arctic and one in the Antarctic?"

Mae Gardner: "Oh, there's a world of difference—"

Mr. McCluer: "Why was it necessary for Aristotle to study what we today call pharmacy?"

Waldrop: "Well, 'cause he wanted to be a farmer, I recon."

Mr. McCluer: "What kind of ships did Columbus have when he made his first voyage?"

Kinney: (Just waking from her usual nap): "He had many hardships while crossing. Some of his men died."

Dr. Allison: "If you were condemned to die, what death would you choose?"

Joyce Nance: "Old age."

"Birds of a feather flock together." Why couldn't the birds of a feather of this school get together in the organization of a Fowl Club, including all students whose names appear under the bird category, such as, the Crows, Partridges, Hawks, Martins and Goslines. The president could even be a Bird-song.

MYSTERY

Somehow, sometime, the veil will lift,

The clouds depart, the shadows drift:

Hard lessons shall a meaning teach
My human weakness could not reach.

Some time, a span, a step, a line;
None may that slender hour define;

I only know, remote and far,
It is hoped shining like a star.

I only know that which has been
Will nevermore return again;
And yet, each forward step must be

Nearer that hidden mystery.

I do not question what or why
The futile dream, that would not die;

I only know that time will teach
That which my wisdom could not reach.

"Red" Head Club Is Still Active Through the Summer Quarter

The hot weather has not found the Red Heads lacking in pep and enthusiasm. They are full of it! An interesting meeting was held Wednesday, June 12, at which time "Red" Huff gave a short talk on the chief characteristics of the members. A motion was moved and seconded that "a person must have red hair." As you have heard, the rule is red hair and not red head as some may have been led to believe. If your hair is not red and you really want to belong to the most active organization on the campus and have a fine time then ask someone experienced in that line; try "Red" Sorter.

Seven new members were taken into the meeting. Others want to belong because:

"There are Brunettes in plenty,

So sage and so tall.
There are Blondes, typical and florid,
Some big and some small.

But the best of the lot,
Within this old wall,
Are the cute 'Red Heads,'
The 'Reddest' of all!"

Reporter—Henry Warren

Seventy-five persons were killed in an explosion at the Westphalian-Anhalt munitions factory, Reinsdorf, Germany. Floods in Colorado, Nebraska and Kansas left 180 dead or missing and destroyed $50,000,000 in property. Another flood caused great property damage in Texas.

Mr. C. L. Whitworth Enters School With His Children

Mr. C. L. Whitworth of Etowah County, in spite of being 65 years of age and having taught school 45 years, is enrolled in Summer School at the Jacksonville State Teachers College working toward a degree. Mr. Whitworth has reared a family of seven children and has given all of them an opportunity for high school education and is at the present time attending the college with two of his youngest children. Mr. Whitworth began teaching when the opportunities of schooling were very limited. He found it difficult to continue his education at the same time that he was educating his children but now that the youngest of them has finished high school and is in college he feels that it is his time to raise his certificate and better prepare himself for the service that he expects to continue to render to the children of the state. During the entire period of 45 years Mr. Whitworth has taught within a radius of about three miles of his home. He has taught the children of many of his former students who started to school in the first grade with him. His neighbors are now his former pupils. At the present time he is teaching nine miles from his home, which is the furthest away that he has ever taught. "I like school better than any other thing that I have ever done," Mr. Whitworth said in answer to the question of how he was enjoying his work. He is one of the most active students in school in a physical way and will be taken by most of his classmates as a person who is much younger than he is.

GOLD DIGGERS OF J. S. T. C.

Let me tell you about three maidens,
And you had better avoid them with care,
Because anytime you enter the grab
You will be sure to see them there.
It seems that this is their hang-out
And that they stay there all the time
If you haven't got fifteen cents to spend on 'em
They will gladly accept a dime.

I don't know what it is about them
That makes you not seem to care,
For spending your hard-earned money
While their rich laughter fills the air.

Sometimes I wish that I was rich,
I would try to fill their "tummies" up
With gallons of cold Coca-Cola,
So that they would never want another sup.

Now Mr. Arnold knows his Biology,
So I want this question answered for me,

Is it something in their internal structure
That causes them to eat thru a spending spree?

Now if he can't answer that question,
(Although I am very sure that he can),
Will he please tell me the reason
They hold so much more than a man.

I wish that colleges would sponsor contests
Throughout this and all other states.

To pick the heartiest eaters and drinkers
So we might know how each school rates.

I would like to enter three from our college,
And do you know who they would be?

None other than the famous trio,

The group joined in the singing of "Work for the Night is Coming" and "Follow the Gleam."

During the business session the following officers were elected: Kitty Hannah, Reporter; and Mrs. Elrod, Mattie Lou Cannon, Bessie Mae Tucker, and Luzone Tucker; Program Committee.

The program was closed by the repeating of the watchword.

President Lazaro Cardenas of Mexico has concentrated the military in Mexico City in the event of revolution by former President Calles. A split in the government last week caused Cardenas to dismiss his cabinet summarily.
