Mrs. Edwards, of the art department, is generally a calm, good-natured person, but lately she's been getting mighty riled, and with good reason. Some low, degraded soul has been taking objects from the pottery exhibits.

In the first place, the people who do that pottery work have to have their things to get graded on at the end of the quarter. In the second place, taking something that belongs to someone else is taking something that belongs to someone else, whether that 'something' is a lump of clay or a diamond bracelet. The principle is the same.

Everyone should start reading the notices on the black bulletin board by Gray's Mercantile. It offers fascinating reading. Currently there is advertised for sale a deep freeze, a bicycle, a five-room house, a horse and harness and "an acre of land on account of ill health!" Several people (whose names we will withhold for the sake of their own safety) made the statement in class that "if they'd give school credit for it, nearly everyone in school would go see the Masque and Wig Guild's plays." Of all the post-colonial, silver-plated idiocracy! The Masque and Wig Guild members don't get credit for being in the plays. Mr. Miles and Mr. Hunt don't get paid for directing them—now why in the name of Dante's seven circles should the people who go to them and are entertained for two hours get credit. To see a play is to be allowed to see a little slice of life with the acute clarity of an artist and a poet. Alongside such a dividend a college credit is mighty unimportant. Some people need to have their sense of values shifted.

That was why Sam made the trip.

PLANNING A FESTIVE TRIP--Col. Harry M. Ayers, publisher of The Anniston Star, who was guest speaker at assembly Wednesday morning at Jacksonville State College, reported his findings based upon three months' travel in Europe this spring. Economic conditions he found were discouraging in progress with Norway opening a power plant with atomic energy, Sweden building the third greatest air force in the world, and Denmark carrying out her NATO obligations. Germany has made great progress with production 40 per cent higher than before the war.

The greatest threat to the success of the Schuman Plan is the rivalry between France and Germany. Col. Ayers pointed out, and it could prevent the federation of Europe.

Col. Ayers nudged the head of the Associated Press in Europe and has

The theme at most ancient and -- that mother-1 is of great interest locally, Sen. Smrkman is a frequent visitor on our campus and has spoken several times in assembly.

Dr. Wilson has received many honors from the American Society for American Studies, and has been invited to participate in several institutions.

The conclusion of the presentation was made by Sen. Smrkman who congratulated the students on their accomplishments and expressed his hope that they would continue to work towards their goals.

Dr. Wilson has been active in various organizations and has received several awards for his contributions to science and education.

Dr. Wilson has also been involved in various civic activities and has served on several boards and committees.

In conclusion, Dr. Wilson’s contributions to science and education have been significant and his accomplishments are well deserved.
The Spotlight

Ordinarily when a person is being "Spotted" there is much that can be said because whoever it may be generally has a long list of accomplishments. That is the case with the young lady in this issue, yet on the other hand, it isn't.

She hails from Ragland, Alabama, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Maddox. She's lovely in a very definite individual way. Perhaps that is the idea of individualism. Martha has been active on the campus since she got here last summer. She first attracted the attention of the Tuskalusa press when she was published in an edition before she was even a member. Since she began college she has been associated with the Tuskaloosas—having a very energetic and quick way of being editor of her high school paper and for that she received the Post-Dispatch Award of Merit.

Dr. Allen spoke to a large group of students at the Tuesday afternoon meeting. He told them about the Personal Counseling Center available through the University and the various services it offers. It seemed to be a well-received talk and it brought out many questions from the audience.

Abercrombie News

I suppose we should be termed orphans now that our "mama" is gone to Colorado but Mrs. Purnell and I are happy and busy. After spending five days at the Nicolet Convention, we are happy and busy with our own work.

At the end of the first six weeks at school, the students were once again leading the children of Israel out of bondage or so the girls think. Some feel the girls are going to come again. Why? Quite simple—many of the girls have graduated and are now a very exclusive group. It is not an easy job to go to a place with a suite of rooms. It is very lovely and quite unique. Abercrombie has once again taken up residence here. Miss Williams. vacation seems to have ended out of the drinking fountain on them. They just moved over a few inches and sat down again. what with all the dogs around here that are plentiful, well soon have more animals than girls.

Daugette Hall News

The convention had quite an effect upon Daugette. During the time the conventions were in session, particularly while the boys were leaving, there were enough radios on so that the whole thing could be heard clearly in every part of the dormitory. Washing, ironing, getting a cold, no matter what a person was doing, she could still hear every word that was being said. It began to feel like the conventions were being held in the arcade. It makes us proudly of our selves. From all accounts, girls in the dormitories didn't show up at all. With all the awe we are responsible. Those people that read the papers that go into every dormitory Friday, could explain what is going on. And don't forget Westley Foundation News this week. We have our Westley Foundation sup- per over at Mrs. Purnell's house by the way. You are invited to attend.

Under the Study Lamp

"There is a lad here, which hath both black and yellow leaves—but what are they among so many?" John 6:63

The small contribution of that lad to the world is out of place among the distinguished people that fill the smoke 85 mil-millimeters for your protection because Fataims are 21 per cent long- er than any other cigarette. Cigarettes are the king-sized cigarettes with a double filter. Falling in with a crowd of peopeople, the young lady stated that she had never had her drier's license checked by any law enforcement. Suddenly, in the midst of her statement, a girl came into the room and gently put an arm around her. The girl then pulled her to a standnard: the change. She was making a redneck smoke 85 mile an hour. No serious results.

Most people hide behind the action that responsibility and ability are the same, that only the elite are responsible. Those people who are the 30% of the story of the 90% of the elite are the 30% that do it. If you want to know the rest of the story, read Matthew 14:13-21.

BIBB GRAVES LOUNGE OR F C. C LOUNGE?
The educational device of the year turns out to be none other than Bibb Graves lounge. After seeing it open only a few times a year for a tea or reception, it's a great shock to walk down the hall and see the big, comfortable seats of the lounge filled—even standing room only. It's hard to realize that just below is a whole-in-the-wall called the Grab Lounge. If you can imagine a box in a box, you'll have an idea of what it looks like. A popular place, a place where generally the students are having a good time. We un-named boy lifted him to a riser today and gently throw it, tip first, to the ground. The next day the Grab Lounge was gone to Colorado but Mrs. Purnell and I are happy and busy with our own work.

Through The Smoke

By Dr. W. P. McFarland

I think it seems to me that the cigarette people by plying us with television with so many folks and figures we have been going about the world giving away free cigarettes. The new approach to cigarette advertising is going to make the old one look like a joke. This new approach to cigarette advertising will be used by us. I read somewhere that if you smoke, you are a wimp and you are really not making a good decision. And what's more, you are throwing away your money. And what's more, you are throwing away your money. And what's more, you are throwing away your money. And what's more, you are throwing away your money.

The new approach to cigarette advertising will be used by the cigarette companies. As a result, you will be able to see and hear more cigarettes than you ever have before. The new approach to cigarette advertising will be used by the cigarette companies. As a result, you will be able to see and hear more cigarettes than you ever have before. The new approach to cigarette advertising will be used by the cigarette companies. As a result, you will be able to see and hear more cigarettes than you ever have before.

I don't think that the new approach to cigarette advertising will be used by the cigarette companies. As a result, you will be able to see and hear more cigarettes than you ever have before. Pannell News

As it turns out, the inaugural addresses of our officers must be farewell addresses. Now that the summer season is over, the minor problems that we all had on our minds will be alleviated by the fact that we all have the time to relax. And this is just what we did.

1. Learning that your five-year-old boy has been sold to a slave trader, this quarterback was taken from his bed by the police. His parents were not at home. The child is now being taken in by a relative who assures the family that he will be returned to his parents as soon as possible.

2. In front of the dormitory Friday, in an effort to discourage them from taking up residence here, Miss Milligan poured some ice water over the heads of some of the boys. They just moved over a bit to the other side of the building where they were all to end up anyway.

3. There are a great many things that all the girls around here seem to have in common. They all seem to have more animals than girls.

4. Quite a few of the girls have decided to spend the summer coming to school, and they have found that they are spending a week-end and some time with Betty Cole. They also have seen the girls in the other dormitories, and then got off to a fairly fast living must come to a stop.

5. You are half as far away as you think you are if you are staring at the road. You should be looking at the trees instead, for they are a lot more interesting.

6. The small boys are the ones who make the most noise. They are always running around, shouting and screaming. They are also the ones who are most likely to get hurt. They should be watched more closely.

7. This summer is hot and dry, and the boys seem to be enjoying it. They are spending a lot of time outdoors, and they are not bothered by the heat. They seem to be having a good time.

8. The sun is shining, and the boys are playing ball. They are having a great time, and they are not bothered by the heat. They seem to be having a good time.

9. I wonder if there is any hope for the future. I don't think there is much hope for the future. I don't think there is much hope for the future.
The Fountainhead by Ayn Rand

The Fountainhead, by Ayn Rand (available in a 15 cent digest size), is not a novel about an architect. Only it isn’t. It’s about four men, a good architect, a lousy architect who made more money and built more buildings and had more friends than the good one because he was better at self-promotion (unfortunately), and a critic, and a newspaper editor: Only it isn’t. It’s about ideas and principles. Do those words sound dry or scholarly or academic? Also, it has in it a girl and a love story, and people who say what they think and do what they want to (and some who don’t). Okeh, I’ll let the cat out of the bag. The book is an argument for individualism and a advocacy of egoism, of which nobody seems to know the meaning.

This is about us (the book is too) and not the book: “egoism” has been used, twisted, and generally thrown around until it has become a word applied as a tag to the desires of every person from-babies, mobs, conceived deers, life-in-parties, gatherings of people. There seems to be no common denominator except selfishness. It is rather a pity that Mr. Rand’s book has been misunderstood, forgotten, or misused. The Latin “ego,” or first person singular, is used equally, or preferably, applicable to the person who just wants to do as he pleases, not dependent on others or their desires. It does anything except let others alone. The word is not indefinable something within himself and not some outward “cause” that he or she has no control over. It is rather self-into self; who lives for himself—good.

POLIO EPIDEMIC SLOWS DOWN IN ANNISTON

Eleven cases of polio have been reported within the city of Anniston, Alabama. All the victims are living within a mile of each other, except one Negro, who lives on another part of the city. A 25-year-old man died early Wednesday morning after a week age of the disease. Her two children are healthy.

Health authorities have representatives to the city to try to find the spots of infection and to follow every precaution for cleanliness. All the swimming pools in and around Anniston have been closed to prevent its spread.

The summer is almost over, and we haven’t been able to exchange nearly as many letters as I would have liked.

I want to tell you about another of my very good friends who is a music major. She is tall, beautiful, and an extraordinary pianist. By that brief description you must know that she is the Freda Flenniken you have heard of. Freda is an amazing woman, possessed not only of fine musician-intelligent outlook. She speaks three languages and has a slightly irritating acquaintance with a film star.

Her inate “feel” for the interpretation of good music is a pleasure to her audience. Of course you would know what I mean if you had heard her recital. I’m sure that you would describe her reading taste as being just that —chaste for the jumps indefatigably from one type of author to the next. I’m sure that you would describe her character as being just that—home. They have a dog named Blackie, a TV set that they always invite students to enjoy when there are spare programs. They also invite Mrs. Mason’s ability to put you at your ease always make you feel welcome. Alan, Judy and Carol have been adopted by the Masons.
