Alabama Education

Education has been in the news since Governor Wallace has asked for record appropriations for schools. Governor Wallace has also called for a guaranteed pay increase for teachers and free textbooks for elementary and secondary schools.

Most people seem to be in favor of some increase in the money appropriated for education and it seems likely the legislature will pass a substantial increase in money allotted for schools and education.

Can it be that Alabamians are beginning to see the importance of education? Can it be that the people of this state are beginning to see that more money must be appropriated to further education? We have all heard the old saying, “The South is going to rise again.” It is no longer conjecture, but established fact, that if that rise does come about, the South, including Alabama, must accomplish it through education.

It is not difficult for an Alabama college student to see the inadequacy of the education he receives in elementary and secondary schools. Indeed it is not difficult for him to see the limitations placed on his college opportunities and curriculum because of a lack of money in the school system. These limitations resulting from inadequate finances are plainly evident here at Jax State. The recognition of the need for far better education systems is basic to substantial improvement upon the existing systems. Many of the people of Alabama have yet to realize that their sons and daughters are not getting the full value of education that most students in other states are getting. Or perhaps they realize it but have done nothing about it.

Moving frequent in Alabama is a sight of school children going from door to door selling flower seeds, candy, light bulbs, and cookies. With this money they buy things needed in the classroom recreational equipment, or needed equipment. Certainly there is nothing wrong with students selling things for extra money for classroom needs, but this is often not extra money—it is needed money! There have been Alabama schools in the last two years which could not be sure they could open their doors at the scheduled start of the year because of lack of funds.

Bama.

Recently during the time when there were rumors that a large part of the Marshall Space Center would be moved from Huntsville, NASA director James Webb stated that the move was being contemplated because of a lack of personnel with higher education in Alabama. Whether this statement was true or not may be debated but the fact remains that this statement could not only be made, it was accepted by many people as proof that the people of Alabama are uneducated.

Should the state furnish free textbooks for all elementary and secondary schools? All students, no matter what the economic station in life, deserve the same opportunities to obtain an education. It would seem that this and would be accomplished much easier and quicker through having the state supply them; it might possibly be cheaper, since the state would buy in such great quantities.

Students here at Jacksonville need not look far to ascertain the urgent need for increased expansion and construction of additional facilities. This problem is prevalent all over Alabama. JSC will turn away several hundred applicants next year simply because the current facilities are inadequate. This is not restricted to housing, it extends to the need for a larger faculty and other important areas. This means that many prospective students will be detained from attending college, many of them will lose interest during the waiting period and never make it to college. This is extremely regrettable because Alabama needs, now more than ever, all the educated people she can produce.

If Alabama is to continue to make progress in the field of education, and hence, progress in the national esteem, the people of Alabama must be willing to pay. All these situations can be corrected only with more money and a lot of hard work. But first of all there must be more money.

Should all of Alabama’s citizens have to contribute to education through increased taxes? Should people who have no children in school be forced to share the burden of increased revenues for schools? It stands to reason that a more educated Alabama will be a more prosperous Alabama.

Appraisal Of JSC Library

In the last edition of the Collegian, it was noted that the JSC library had received a grant of $1,000 in the form of equipment from the Association of College and Research Libraries. Perhaps while we have the library in the spotlight a general appraisal of its facilities would be worthwhile.

According to Miss Bennett, the director, the library now has nearly 100,000 volumes. It subscribes to over 500 periodicals, with past issues of many in bound volumes. Government publications complete the list of materials and books. The equipment which the library received through the grant was microcard readers and selected microcards. A major increase in the use of microcards is expected in the future because of the space-saving aspect of this material. A number of pages are printed in microscopic letters on each small card. The microcard reader projects this card onto a screen the size of an ordinary sheet of paper. Thus, a whole book can be in the form of a comparatively few cards. Microcards will also allow the library to obtain old and out-of-print works.

In an attempt to keep abreast of the expansion of the college and the rapid increase of the student body, the library has added over 7,000 books per year for the past several years. The number of periodicals and government publications have also increased. This year there have been a marked increase in the circulation of books and other material. The library sometimes checks out over 500 books in one day—nearly double the circulation of last year. That more students are visiting the periodicals room and using more current periodicals would seem to indicate that students are reading out of their reading with recent information.

A good library is essential to college education. It serves as the foundation for excellence, but the expansion of excellence must come from another source. Everyone should understand that the library is the best source for expansion of this excellence. English Conference

The Association of College English Teachers of Alabama opens its 17th annual conference at Alabama College in Montevallo on March 26. Jacksonville State College will be represented by Dr. Rainwater of the English department. Dr. Rainwater will participate in a panel discussion on the topic “Freshman English for the Povertly performing student.”

Dr. Calvert To Give Lecture

Dr. Calvert is also on the program, taking part in a similar panel discussion on “Freshman English for the Advanced Student.” Other topics up for consideration by the conference include the English Major, The English Classroom, Librarians, and Graduate Study in English.

Prepared Student: Dr. Calvert

Dr. Calvert will discuss the new Webster’s Third International Dictionary and the controversy it has caused in certain intellectual circles.

“It Went Over Like”

All of us have heard the expression “It went over like a lead balloon.” We feel that this is becoming trite and that Jacksonville State should have some “it went over like” expressions of its own. Listed below are some of the new “it went over like”:

- like asking Dean Montgomery to skip semester exams
- like folding, spindling, or otherwise mutilating IBM computer programs
- like wearing short shorts into the library.

“Now, you won’t have the slightest memory as to the history behind…”

“When you were leaving Bay St. Louis on the ferry, as I remember it, we all went down to tell you goodbye and I said I didn’t have anything to remember you by. You reached down and pulled the shoe string out of your shoe, and this is it…”

The string was wrapped around a card on which appears my name and May 29, 1925.

Why will people remember you?

Dr. Calvert will discuss the new dictionary and the language division on literary vices which exist now give the public a sense of security. Perhaps this is the beginning of a great move forward for the state. Let us hope that such efforts will continue.

“Do you know who does X associate with?”

Dr. Calvert asked.

I replied that in recent months I had often seen X with Y, which will be remembered because I associa ted with them.

“Would you call this a recommenda tion?”

Dr. Calvert said.

I asked, “Yes, fairly well.”

“Wouldn’t you have a better chance of being seen with you than seeing others?”

Dr. Calvert asked.

I replied, “Yes, it would be advisable to remember that you might be remembered because I would undoubtedly remember you in the future.”

Dr. Calvert said, “This is to be remembered because of the strength of character and determination. Each work at whatever was available to help improve the quality of life. By Prof. Leon McClure

Book Review

Opie Read: American Humorist by Prof. Robert L. Morris of the University of Arkansas was released by Helotes Book Publishing Co. on Feb. 25.

Opie Read was editor of the phenomenon success ful humor magazine The Arkansas Traveler for two generations. Because of its reputation, Read became a much-sought-after lecturer on the famous Chatanooga circuit. He was also the author of a series of hastily-written but robust and humorously flavored novels which reached a large and devoted public.

Prof. Morris discovered the attraction of Read's works when delving into Arkansas folklore and history, and he raises the serious question of why no sampling of Read's voluminous output is included in most anthologies of American literature offered to students.

Prof. Morris, author of the book, is professor of English and American literature at the University of Arkansas and is the author of several plays dealing with the creative careers of Thomas Wolfe, Henry James and Stephen Crane.

The Jacksonville State College Gamecocks basketball team are the newly crowned Alabama Collegiate Conference Tournament champions by virtue of a thrilling 73-71 victory over St. Bernard on Feb. 27, at Athens.

The Jaxmen ended the season with an 18-game winning streak and an overall final record at 16-6. This is one of the best coaching jobs done by basketball coach Tom Robinson. This was supposed to be a rebuilding year also for the young unexperienced Gamecock team.

Bill Jones was the man of the hour as his 23-foot shot with five seconds left in the game gave Jax State their second ACC title since the foundation of the conference. A marvelous job was done by Charles Ayers who hit seven straight points when the Gamecocks were trailing by seven points. These points tied the game up with only 2:30 left to play.
