

Six to vie for SGA top spot

TIPTON: "Steeped in student gov't"

"I have some good ideas to help the SGA, and by helping the SGA to help the school. Up until now the SGA has been a pseudo governmental body, its been a quote 'farce.' A lot of people get in and say, 'look at me, I'm in SGA.'"

"I think now with the times changing (Dr. Stone, mainly) that this is the best time for the SGA to stop being a quote 'farce.'"

Lilburn Tipton, graduate of Anniston High School, gave these reasons for running for SGA president. Tipton who feels himself well steeped in student government has a long list of past accomplishments to back him. They include: State Youth Legislature, Student Council (AHS), class officer, chairman of the American Chemical Society.

EDEKER: "I Can Communicate"

"I think that I would be a good president because I am very adaptable and understanding. I can accept new ideas, due to my background. I am sympathetic to those struggling."

Quang Edeker, who made the remarks above, is a Korean American who came to this country in July of 1963 at the age of 14. Edeker spoke no English at this time.

MARTIN: "Reasonable Choice"

I am a graduate of Bessemer High School, Bessemer, Alabama, where I served on the School Student Government Association for three consecutive years, holding the office of parliamentarian my sophomore year and vice-president of the senior class my senior year. I was an officer in the Key Club, and vice president of the "B" Club. I was involved in many activities such as varsity football, basketball, and track with a letter in all three. My interest in school activities continued into college when I was elected president of the Freshman Class, here at Jacksonville. As president of the Freshman Class, I headed many committees such as the Cancer Drive, which collected the most money ever collected at that time. The freshman float, which to my knowledge was the first ever to reach a parade, placed second in all the competition. As you can

ROYAL: "Full Time"

"I think I better represent the majority of the students and am more in line with what the students want. I'm willing to go to bat for the students."

Finis Royal made these statements when confronted with why he is a candidate for president of SGA. A political science major, Royal is a graduate of Ider High School, a former member of SCOAG, has worked

ROLAND: "No promises"

Unfortunately, promises made during a campaign of any type have a tendency to get lost during terms in office. Constituents, administrators, and priorities change. Therefore, I cannot limit myself to a specified platform which would probably have to be changed a dozen times in the course of a year. The issues now could conceivably change without much notice, and all candidates should consider

GRAY: "Student Power"

Hans Dieter Gray is a senior from Rainbow City, Alabama. He is also a candidate for the SGA Presidency. The tall and mustached history major and geography minor states that he is "running on a student power platform." His purpose: "to give the students more say in what goes on in the university."

Gray outlined his "student power" platform in six statements. First, there has been no action on the ROTC question. "If nothing happens," says Gray by next fall, "the SGA will sponsor a boycott of all ROTC drills." Second, the last set of rules for women were "completely and totally undesirable" Gray went on to advocate "equalization of rules for men and women." Third, Gray pointed out the need for "free speech on campus." Anybody the students choose to speak should be

TOLEDO

Louis Toledo, a native of San Juan, Puerto Rico, is a political science and Spanish major and economics minor who plans to be a lawyer. He is active in student reform activities here at JSU. He has had no experience in the Student Government Association, but was active in that area on the high school level.

Asked his idea of the "ideal vice president," Toledo stated, "the vice-president is the number two man in the government structure. He should serve the students' needs. As number two, he can exert more power than is now exerted. The SGA needs to get more involved and not just accept what the administration says. I believe there is a great deal of dissent among students nowadays, and the problems should be presented to the administration in a way that they will realize what we want.

"I don't think we should be appeased any longer. There is a great need for more interaction."

Toledo feels the SGA's relations with the administration is "strained," and he added, "there is always room for im-

FRAZIER

Jeff Frazier, a political science major and history minor, is a Birmingham native with aspirations of becoming a lawyer. Frazier is currently an SGA senator, a member of President Stone's Liason Committee, chairman of the Student Curriculum Committee, and SGA representative to the Jacksonville City Council.

Frazier's conception of the ideal vice president is, "Myself, because if I don't have faith in my own qualifications, then how can I expect to win the support of my constituency?"

Asked why he feels he is qualified, Frazier stated, "I have a working knowledge of the administrative process and those administrators responsible for the policy-making decisions for this university. I believe, as Thomas Jefferson did, in revolution by the ballot, if we utilize the ballot in determining actual student opinion and add the basic facts of the issue through research, we can realize the necessary changes that need to be made, where marching and making demands have less influence."

"I believe that I have the necessary finesse to impress and persuade

EDEKER

After attending elementary schools in Kentucky when his father, an Army non-commissioned officer, was stationed, Edeker came to Anniston. Edeker finished Saks High School in three years and came to Jacksonville State While at Saks he was a member of the National Honor Society, the Key Club and Hi - Y.

When asked why he thought himself a worthy candidate for the presidency of the SGA, Edeker stated, "I can talk to anyone no matter what their belief on any issue. I can communicate with feelings as well as words."

When asked for a platform, Edeker named over ten topics which he believes are of great importance to the students.

Edeker's first point was the need for additional outside speakers on campus. He believes these to be an important part of a college education.

The ROTC topic, still much alive in this campaign, brought response from Edeker. An advanced cadet and a ranger he said, "I love ROTC; however, I strongly believe in voluntary ROTC."

Entertainment seems to be a popular platform and Edeker had the word, more. He pointed out the need for a larger grab, better auditorium accommodations, a place for plays (perhaps in the new library), as well as more modern style entertainment.

Edeker mentioned the high prices in Chat 'em Inn and the possibility of its use as a training point for business students. This, run at cost, would provide more student jobs and give a place for student responsibility.

The SGA, according to Edeker, should also try to bridge the gap with Jax State Alumni.

Edeker spoke of a new plan for revamping the student newspaper, the Chanticleer. He was for a continuation of the board which now selects the editor, but he favors senate approval before a final choice is made.

As for the SGA itself, Edeker's watchword was organization. He proposes more preparation, a permanent curriculum committee (to solve the text book problems especially) and to have a re-evaluation of various degree requirements.

The meal ticket situation was discussed with Edeker and he offered two solutions to the problems.

1. A cafeteria for full time tickets, one part time.

2. Buying of one meal ticket by lots (say 10-12 at a time).

Of late women students liberation has been in the news here, Edeker had two thoughts on further reforms needed. First he pointed out that an 18 year old girl who can vote and get married should be allowed off campus housing permission. Secondly, he expressed the need for a combined SGA - faculty com-

TIPTON

Tipton says that the main issue of his campaign is that he believes that he can get things done that other people cannot.

When asked about his platform, Tipton explained that most of it would be detailed in his speech before the student body, but gave us a six part general outline of his candidacy.

Tipton's first point was the strengthening and streamlining of the SGA. He proposes to do this by increasing planning and organization, trying to work with (as opposed to agree with) the administration, and to be active in all student affairs. He expressed the belief that students should handle 99% of student affairs and leave the administration to handle academics.

Commuters are neglected, according to Tipton (a commuter from Anniston in the past). Tipton believes that they should be polled as to their wants and be better provided for by the SGA.

The subject of what is to be taught when was brought up by Tipton, especially the offered courses in summer school and at night. He was strongly in favor of allowing the students in each department to help decide this.

Everyone seems to have an opinion on entertainment and this is, more. Tipton proposes a $10 fee per student which would allow for name groups to be brought to campus. He believes that the allied arts card idea is not working. Tipton also mentioned other kinds of entertainment such as dances, barbecues, and perhaps a professional carnival. These would be geared to giving everyone a reason for staying on weekends.

"The speaker program is a good idea, students should be exposed to these ideas," Tipton reflected a tone of reservation here when he added that the administration should not be excluded from consideration here.

In view of recent changes, Tipton commented on the curfew regulations. He said that he personally believed in open hours for seniors, open weekend hours for other upperclassmen, and only a 12 p.m. - 2 a.m. curfew on freshmen.

mittee to research the counselor problems.

Edeker's last topic for discussion was additional scholarships and grants. He pointed out the need for scholarships for scholars and not just for friends. He also suggested the need for recognition (such as tuition discounts) for sophomores or above with at least a 2.50.

on the campus newspaper, and worked with the Junior Class. Royal characterizes himself as "willing to work with anyone."

When asked about his platform early in the campaign, Royal gave five general headings which he thought were important. His first statement was the reform and efficiency increase needed in the SGA. Royal proposed to do this by killing the many standing committees and appointing only those enumerated in the constitution plus three super committees to handle the majority of problems. He also proposed a change in the procedure for securing judges for the student court. Under the new plan the senators would each submit names which would go to the president and then the final nominees would be approved by the senate.

Royal also pointed out the need for better procedure in passing bills. He suggested that the bills be introduced, sent to committee to be reported and then and only then voted on. He also suggested a roll call vote that could be posted for the students on "important issues."

Royal's second platform is a more student oriented SGA. By this he says that he wishes this to be strictly pro-student, not anti-administration, but pro-student.

Royal stated on the ROTC issue that he hoped that this would be solved before next year, but if not that he would push for voluntary.

Under the student SGA, Royal also hopes to adopt a Gripe Session where student factions may air their problems directly with the SGA.

Royal summed up his whole campaign as that of a full-time president. Pointing out that his grade point average could stand the strain, Royal said that he can reduce work load to 12 hours because he has the time. He asked that his telephone number (435-4093) be given to all students so that they can talk to him at anytime.

Royal said that many of the issues in this campaign were "old, but still around," and that they would be until solved.

Murphree and Supon clash for secretary

Ethelyn Murphree, a sophomore from Childersburg, Alabama, has entered the race for SGA secretary. Nursing is her major and minor.

In an interview with the Chanticleer, Miss Murphree elaborated on her idea of the "ideal secretary": "I think the ideal secretary is the person who is prompt in his response to sources seeking an immediate reply. The secretary of an organization such as ours needs the secretary to keep accurate notes of all the meetings. Along with qualities of a good secretary, I feel a willingness to serve other people is a contributing factor of a good secretary. These are all characteristics which I would like to have working for you." Miss Murphree is currently an SGA senator.

Miss Murphree's platform "is no promises of greatness; just one -- to serve and to do my very best."

Asked to comment on the problems of the students, Miss Murphree replied, "Part of our problem has been a feeling of suppression. It looks like now we are gaining ground with the administration. It's impossible to evaluate all problems because we are never entirely happy, but I do have an open mind and am receptive to others' ideas."

The Chanticleer asked Miss Murphree what relation she thought the SGA had with the administration and the student body. Miss Murphree responded: "I think with the change in the administration, we have again found a co-operative president. I feel that even with all the complaints of some students that the SGA has no power, it is a highly respected group and the administration is most receptive to the ideas of the SGA. I think that with the creation of the Liaison Committee, the closeness will become stronger."

One of two candidates vying for the office of secretary of SGA is Cathy Supon, a sophomore majoring in English and working toward a double minor in sociology and German. Although having held no previous position in student government, Cathy's basic qualifications are commendable. Not only can she claim a 1.8 overall academic average, but she has also been honored with such positions as scholarship chairman of Alpha Xi Delta Sorority, former entertainment editor for the Chanticleer, and membership in the A Capella Choir.

Cathy proposes no platform as such as she feels that the office of SGA secretary is not in such a position of power. With regard to her views on recent campus events, Cathy is most lucid. Concerning the new rules, she feels that not only were changes needed but that a good compromise was also effected. According to Cathy, the new regulations were not made under pressure.

Upon discussion of student government associations, Cathy stated that in all schools SGA has been dormant, that is just beginning to come into a position of action.

Speaking in Cathy's behalf, campaign manager Lynn Ash stated the candidate's belief that, for purposes of adequate representation, a pulse should be taken of the student body, for, after all, the officers are elected by the students. In such a case, it is the fault of the student if he feels that he is not represented.

Viewing the election to be a very interesting one, Ash proposed a general platform for Cathy. Special emphasis was delegated to accurate records, acceptance of responsibility, and efforts toward total involvement. Because a secretary has certain duties to consider, such a platform cannot be controversial. In sum, Ash feels that "Cathy would represent the students."

TOLEDO: "bound to be more demonstrations" provement. The SGA has time and time again refused to take certain issues to the administration or else has not been forceful enough. I recall at one meeting a student asked for freedom. I believe you should not ask for freedom -- you should demand it."

Speaking of the SGA's relations with the student body, Toledo said, "there's been a lot of criticism lately. A lot of students have gone to meetings and seen how they are handled. I know ten or fifteen students who are upset that once you pass new business, nothing else can be brought up. Students don't really understand the SGA; they are just now waking up -- and are lost. Relations could be better. Some senators work hard but I do not believe the majority of them do. I'm sure the officers put in many long hours. Dr. Cole said he wished he knew the students better. I think the SGA should know the students better . . . I do not think it should take demonstrations to bring about change. It should be the SGA's job to change."

In reply to a request for his platform, Toledo smiled and stated, "I'm not a polished politician. I don't want to separate myself from the people and don't want a polished image . . . however, there are things I would like to see changed, such as appropriations for the SGA. "It can't be run on $2500 a year." Other areas needing change include women's curfews; they "should be changed to what the women demanded. Also I believe we should do away with compulsory ROTC. And I'd like to have an outdoor concert using the stadium but I've been told that was tried before and turned down."

Toledo named some problems at JSU, saying the dorm life should be more attractive. "When Dr. Stone announced new curfews, he completely ignored the new housing suggestions for allowing off-campus living of women students. I would compare dorms now to cells. When they prohibit the hanging of pictures, that doesn't leave much of an atmosphere for the students to create."

"I believe dorm directors should be replaced with people with new ideas on improvement. They have reached the point of stagnation where it's the same, year after year. I think Sparkman Hall will be a good idea -- suites -- that is a step forward.

"Another fallacy is dormitory counselors. They have no formal training, how are they qualified to handle problems of other students. I believe people who are qualified in the areas of guidance counseling should be hired. This would bring about a better atmosphere.

"I believe the system of punishment, such as call-downs, is ridiculous. They should not have any place at a university. I think these young ladies are old enough to know what they are doing."

Toledo also mentioned the parking problem. He referred to Dr. Stone's announcement that the students will be consulted in the selection of location of new buildings, etc. Toledo stated, "Now we will have to see if that will be the same consultation as the others (ROTC) where the students were ignored."

A veteran of the Air Force, Toledo had this to say concerning ROTC: "I am not opposed to ROTC as a system because it provides the armed services with forward-thinking young men who are needed in the future of our country. What I am opposed to is compulsory ROTC. I suggested to Glen Salter that a committee be set up of advanced cadets to go out and talk to freshmen and sophomore cadets and find out their gripes about ROTC and then make suggestions to the ROTC staff. If ROTC is voluntary, the ROTC department will have to make their program more attractive to students. Also the credit given for the course is not commensurate with the time the student spends. He has to clean his weapon, clean and iron his uniform and perform other duties as well as go to class."

Toledo believes the SGA constitution, concerning the representation of students, is faulty. "I do not have statistics yet, but the representation of commuters as compared to residents is out of balance. The commuters should be given a bigger voice. This should be apportioned to population. If the base figure is to be 100, the commuters stand to gain. They probably should have 50 per cent of the senators instead of the present 8."

Asked his feelings on entertainment, Toledo stated, "I would like to get some super groups here, such as Grand Funk and Mountain. We also need some speakers. I do not accept the position of the SGA now, accepting the administration's refusal of allowing certain speakers, for example, Ella Baker. I would like to see Julian Bond on campus."

Toledo ended his interview by referring to the recent demonstration against women's rules. "I believe that was the first time on this campus that the students got it together, and I hope it won't be the last. The beauty of it was it was all legal. The students do have a right to dissent and to have their opinions heard. I am almost sure there are bound to be some more demonstrations."

Committee to recommend a voluntary ROTC program. As a result of this committee's action, we will possibly realize voluntary ROTC next fall."

Another suggestion by Frazier is the creation of a campus dating bureau, "to increase the social life for a lot of girls who sit in the dorm at night."

A communications problem is common with both students and the administration, said Frazier. "I plan to increase the responsibilities of the publicity committee in order to better inform the students, and as I've previously mentioned, I favor expanded use of the Liaison Committee."

Frazier ended his interview by saying, "there are many other problems, but due to the limited time in this interview, we'll have to go into those at another time."

FRAZIER: "finesse to impress"

those empowered to make the decisions where student welfare is in question. I also feel that I can communicate with students and give them a fair shake, and that I am dedicated enough to treat the everyday problems involved in running the vice president's office as if they were of major concern. Also, you've got to realize, that you can't be a fair-weather vice president and you have to accept the everyday work along with the emotional issues at hand."

Frazier feels that the SGA and the administration presently have a "limited relationship because of the lack of dedication by both the SGA and the administration. If I am elected, I will do all that I can to influence the senators and the administration to improve relations through delegation of responsibility, which is the quickest way to capture interest."

In reply to a statement of his platform, Frazier began, "One of the major planks of my platform is SGA reform. We will amend the SGA constitution to establish some basic committees and incorporate subcommittees. When we encounter a problem in SGA that doesn't necessitate immediate action, we will assign the issue to its respective subcommittee for investigation, with the report to be made at the next SGA meeting. In this way the senators will have more of a responsibility to their constituency in that they will be required to find out how the people they represent want them to vote. I want to win the faith and respect of the students for the SGA."

"Also, I'd like to see increased utilization of the president's Liaison Committee. This committee has the potential of really helping the student if we use it more extensively."

Concerning entertainment, Frazier stated, "In that the SGA constitution delegates entertainment as the vice president's primary concern, we have some very definite plans to increase the entertainment program to bigger and better things, and to bring it up to a parallel with the other major universities in our state. Specifically, we plan to do all that we can to achieve the raise in the activity fee that a majority of the students have indicated that they are in favor of raising it $3 per semester. Dr. Stone has informed me that he sees no reason why we can't raise the fee by that amount. We are in the process of trying to make this change. With the present enrollment, this would mean approximately $18,000 per semester for entertainment.

"I haven't fully decided whether or not we'll sell allied cards, but if we do I'll be here this summer and will prepare a tentative booking list of groups so that when allied arts cards go on sale, students will know who they're paying to see."

"I will create an entertainment committee comprised of interested students to help select the groups to come because this is everybody's money, and students should have more voice in the groups that are selected."

"I'd also like to see an increased speaker program and film program. I don't see why we can't have some of the more recent films."

"These are the main points of my platform," Frazier concluded, "but I will go into further detail in my campaign speech."

According to Frazier, JSU students are affected by certain problems. "I'm in favor of improving dorm life, especially in allowing students to decorate their rooms and the inter-visitation of coeds in men's dorms."

"I'm in favor of responsible women being given permission to live off campus."

"I was chairman of the committee that went to the university Curriculum

Vann, Moore, Cummings run for money

Shaping up to provide interesting and hearty competition, the treasurer's race has brought to the limelight three aptly qualified individuals: Rusty Vann, Jim Cummings, and Glynda Moore. Sincerely dedicated to uplifting the values and standards of student government, each offers promise in the attribution of honor and service to the Jacksonville State University Student Government Association.

Hailing from Gadsden, Alabama, is Rusty Vann, presently a sophomore at Jax State. A graduate of Gadsden High School, Mr. Vann is working toward a political science major with an economics minor and aspires to eventually become established in the field of law. Having proved himself to be a conscientious student of dean's list material, Rusty currently holds the position of SGA senator, under which title he recently was selected a SCOAG delegate. In addition to these honors, he has served as a judge on the men's judicial court and has claim to membership in the President's VA honor committee. Further evidence of Rusty's ability and dedication is reflected in his being dubbed outstanding freshman cadet by the ROTC Department for the first semester of the past school year as well as his being named superior cadet of the year by the Department of the Army.

With regard to platforms, Rusty proposes no particular program as he feels that "platforms are not too important for treasurers." Rather, he considers that his qualifications for the office lie in the fact that he is "fairly responsible," a partial result of his involvement in SGA and the men's judicial court, which have made him strongly aware of "what's going on."

Despite the absence of definite policies of his own, Mr. Vann expressed his intention of supporting certain positions with regard to present and upcoming issues. Foremost on his agenda is his desire for the accrument of student support for Dr. Stone, a primary strategist, he feels, in the accomplishment of student demands. An advocate of voluntary ROTC, Rusty stated that he would like "to see the silent majority become 'un-silent,'" a reflection of his belief that there exists much unvoiced student interest. In another vein, he verbalized his desire that action be taken against drug abusers. Here again, he contends that the majority of the people are concerned and that effective measures can be imposed. In summation, through support and acceptance of such policies, Rusty feels that his paramount goal can be realized -- "a more active and effective SGA."

Vying for the honored position of SGA treasurer with a similar fervent enthusiasm is Jim Cummings of Brown's Mills, New Jersey. A graduate of Pemberton Township High School, Mr. Cummings holds the current status of junior, majoring in history, minoring in economics, and endeavoring toward the establishment of a career in law, possibly criminal. No newcomer to student executive office, Jim can claim accomplishment ranging from Catholic Youth Organization treasurer, senior class president, and Economics Club treasurer in high school to president of Patterson Hall at Jax State. Having achieved recognition as a member of advanced ROTC, Jim is of admirable academic standing, having been awarded a New Jersey state scholarship.

With regard to his qualifications for the job of treasurer, Jim presented his personal evaluation of the situation. He began by stating: "Because I'm from so far away, I'm always here. In this respect, I'm full-time more so than others." As he has spent so much time on campus, Jim harbors great concern for what transpires at Jax State. In his words: "I think Jacksonville can be a better university than it is."

Concerning his platform, Mr. Cummings has definite proposals. In the first place, he advocates a continuance of the book exchange. Secondly, he hopes to establish an emergency fund in the event that finances (for bands, etc.) should be depleted. His third point centers around the difficulties of the SGA refrigerator business, which he views as being highly unorganized. In this respect, he feels that the contract should be examined to discover the nature of the problem, why some people that want refrigerators are unable to obtain them, and why certain people were never required to pay for refrigerator use.

If elected, Jim promises to keep his office door open at all times in order that interested students will have the opportunity to fully express themselves. Furthermore, to insure that students are properly informed, Jim intends to present a financial statement each month for publication in the Chanticleer.

Commenting on the present SGA situation, Mr. Cummings is of the opinion that the "officers do want to carry out the demands of the students," but that "the Administration is not going along. In this light, discussion of recent campus demonstrations ensued with Cummings stating: "The leaders in the demonstrations were not the ones the students should follow. They (students) need to get organized and work together." In this manner, "they would have a lot better chance of reaching their goals." And, according to Jim, "the SGA and its committees are the perfect channels."

With regard to his doctrine of student organization, Jim views an initial step as being the delegation of different topics by the SGA to various committees. Thus, SGA meetings could be characterized by orderly committee reports rather than by extemporaneous verbalizations. Another facet of his program would be the hopeful establishment of student committees not associated with SGA. Self-supporting and independent of the SGA, these committees would provide a means of bringing controversial speakers, such as Miss Ella Baker, to campus, thus broadening student outlook.

In conclusion, Mr. Cummings stands firmly on the belief that "more people are getting concerned."

see, I have been involved in school activities for a long time and I have headed many organizations in the past. I am also a member of Delta Chi Fraternity.

As president of the SGA, I propose to work wholehearted for the students at Jacksonville State University and build the Student Government Association up to its fullest capacity.

I propose to be an agent of the students, working for them and with them on their request, on any issue brought to me on my associates. I also propose to work with the faculty and the administration when the time arises that we need their help.

I propose that compulsory ROTC be abolished, which should have been accomplished long ago.

I feel that the Chanticleer should be under the department of the SGA under a trial basis, financed by the SGA from fees paid by the students and written by the students, for the students enjoyment.

administration should not block speakers without consulting students. Fourth, "the SGA should handle all its own funds." The fact that the SGA receives the same amount of money each semester, despite the fact that at times there are differences in student enrollment, is "unfair to the students." Fifth, Gray described the need for "professional counselling services."

Among these services, would be counselling female students on pregnancy "how to prevent it, how and where to get an abortion," psychological counselling, and drug counselling. The university needs a qualified psychiatrist. And sixth, the "editor of the Chanticleer should be elected by the student body." A screening committee of the SGA should be appointed to check the candidates qualifications.

In a lengthy closing statement, Gray stated "the time has come for the students of this university to realize the extent of their oppression. The Administration of this institution must come to the
