Naval official to be on campus

Lieutenant Mark E. Doub, Jr. and Lieutenant (Junior Grade) Thomas F. McDaniel of the Naval Recruiting Station, Officer Programs Division, in Montgomery, Alabama will be on the Campus of Jacksonville State University 11, 12, and 13 September 1972 to test and interview students interested in becoming naval officers after graduation.

Aviation Officer Candidates receive 16 weeks of training in Pensacola, Florida prior to earning their commissions as Ensigns in the U. S. Naval Reserve. Flight training Air Stations are located in the Pensacola area, Meridian, Mississippi and Corpus Christi, Texas. Candidates for Reserve Commissions in unrestricted line, Civil Engineering, Nuclear Propulsion and the Supply Corps go to Newport, Rhode Island for 19 weeks of instruction. Women are also commissioned after only 16 weeks of training and serve for three years.

New dining hall program defended

By JOE STAHLKUPPE

During the mini and Summer semesters perhaps the most fruitful negotiations ever to take place between students and administration at JSU were evidenced in regard to the dining hall problem. What may well become a landmark decision by the executive committee of this school's board of trustees was the result of long weeks of hard work, talk and double-talk on the most talked about subject on this campus.

A committee composed of three administration persons and three student persons met in hours-long sessions to first debate and then decide a proper course of action to recommend to Dr. Stone and the Board. After the committee reached a unanimous decision recommending the establishment of a voluntary program, the real chess game began.

Like Fischer and Spassky, both sides presented their pawns, castled their kings (or presidents, and the case may be), and worked their rooks. Mismoves and blunders secured on both sides of the issue. Eventually the wisdom of the prescribed solution won out, and the program ordered into existence.

Now another difficulty must be faced. A program is only as good as its implementation. Dr. Stone and the executive committee have fulfilled their role. Richard Reid and his committee have fulfilled theirs. The question remains, will the hired bit players complete the scene. The hired whose responsibility it is to carry out directives from above are now charged to implement the new program. They can, if they will. The new program will work with their help, or it will work without them if they can't or won't implement it.

The new program justly deserves no criticism in itself, for it only involves students using their own powers of discernment to decide where they want to eat. Proper implementation by James Haywood, Dir. of Food Services is all that need be carried out. Mr. Haywood has said that he will function equally under any system adopted by his superiors. That must remain to be seen. Dr. Stone said last Wednesday that the current problems involved in the program would be ironed out.

The new dining hall program needs no defense, but poor or willfully biased implementation is indefensible.

Florida rotarian visits International House

Mr. Joe Pendleton, president of the Fort Myers, Florida, Rotary Club was a special guest of the International House on Monday, August 28.

Each year, Mr. Pendleton and members of his club invite four of the International House foreign students to spend the Christmas holidays in their homes. The students not only have the opportunity to observe and participate in an American home's celebration of Christmas, but also have the opportunity to visit the numerous scenic attractions which make Florida so popular.

Mr. Pendleton terms this endeavor as one of his club's, "big projects." Many months of preparation are involved in insuring that the short Christmas holidays will be long remembered by the foreign students. According to Mr. Pendleton, the foreign student's favorite thing to boast about is that of "swimming on Christmas Day." "Too," he added, "they like to come back to Jacksonville with a Florida sun tan."

While the students are guests of the Fort Myers Rotarians they are kept very busy. They visit Disney World, take a private plane ride over the everglades, go deep-sea fishing, and take a shopping spree in one of Fort Myer's large department stores just before Christmas. If the foreign students find that the sales help is extremely courteous, it is probably because the department store is owned by a member of the Rotarians.

Mr. Pendleton admits that the foreign students who are guests are not the only ones who "learn" about different cultures and ideas.

One student who spent the holidays with the Rotarians a few years ago was shocked to discover that Americans have special foods for their pets while their fellow human beings are starving in other parts of the world. Another student from Guatemala impressed the Fort Myer's Rotarians so with his country's pride and desire to help

The drunken driver whose loss

Those of us who drive today are survivors. Every day, thousands of other drivers who take to our highways aren't so lucky. They wind up victims of the motor car which, in its brief life, has already claimed more lives than all the wars in our history.

to reduce the tragic toll of death and injury that each year mars our highways. The toll has been reduced in other countries. It can and must be reduced here.

First of all, the book says, we have to overcome complacency. We must build public opinion to the point where drunk drivers will not be tolerated on our highways. And we can begin by examining our own opinions and

But new research techniques and investigation procedures have finally exposed the drunk driver as the greatest menace on our highways. What can be done about this situation is outlined in the 1972 book of highway accident statistics compiled by The Travelers Insurance Companies.

feelings about this problem. The drunk has long been viewed as a comic character, harmless and amusing. But behind the wheel, he's a potential killer! And it is only in curbing this potential for destruction that we can ever hope

Half the deaths, injuries and property damage occurring on our highways every year stem from accidents in which alcohol is involved. For a long while, the effects of alcohol on accident rates lay buried in the very statistics of accidents. Alcohol was rarely listed as the "cause" of an accident. When, for instance, a drunk driver smashed into a tree at 80 m.p.h., only "excessive speed" was likely to be entered as the cause on the official accident report.

We have the means at hand. But what seems lacking is a sense of urgency. Right now, a nationwide campaign is underway aimed at heightening public awareness of the dangers of the drunk driver and channeling public action against what has clearly become the greatest scourge in our nation's history. One important development in this campaign occurred in 1966 when, under the provisions of an act passed by Congress, the Federal Government entered the field of highway safety. One of its first targets was the drinking driver.

The Travelers book, "Death by Ounces", notes that the drunk driver killed 27,000 men, women and children - almost double the number killed as the result of violent criminal acts.

He was responsible for a daily economic loss amounting to nearly $20 million.

He caused suffering and grief that no one can begin to measure in terms of economic loss.

Research, surveys, new legislation, and action programs are all signs that we are at last moving to meet the problem of the drinking driver head on.... before it meets us on the road.

LEADERS

Dear Veterans in College:

The nomination of Senator George McGovern for the Presidency has been greeted with enthusiasm by veterans all over the nation. Letters pledging a willingness to work or financial support for the campaign have come from people on active duty in Vietnam, Germany and bases throughout the world.

Twenty-five years of preparations for war have brought to American ten years of actual war. The veteran has become the forgotten man in this deadly game of "brinksmanship". Senator McGovern's proposal to reduce defense spending to a reasonable level and to divert our resources to the more pressing social and economic needs of the American people is of great importance to the veteran.

The legislative record of George McGovern has reflected a strong stand for the veterans of all wars. A decorated combat veteran of World War II, he favors increases in the GI Bill to meet the rising costs in education and extensive government action in cooperation with private industry to curb the high rate of unemployment confronting today's veterans. Unlike Richard Nixon, Senator McGovern does not have a "secret" plan for peace that has failed at the expense of over 20,000 American lives, countless more Vietnamese and billions of dollars. Unlike Richard Nixon, Senator McGovern would not continue to bomb indiscriminately, nor would he bomb at all. The McGovern plan for peace is public, in keeping with the honor and integrity of the American people. The Nixon "game plan" which equates "peace and prosperity" with more war, massive bombing, inflation and greater unemployment must cease. The veteran can play a key role in restoring peace and purpose to American policy at home and abroad; the election of George McGovern as President will bring a new and better government to the American people.

Veterans for McGovern organizations are presently forming on campuses and in communities across the country. Working closely with local McGovern for President offices, many are still understaffed and lacking funds. We encourage and need your support. If you're short of time and money--remember, it takes little time to register and no money to vote. If you have any problems, questions or suggestions, feel free to write or call--we're here to help you out.

Sincerely yours,
G. Dudley Acker, Jr.

Faculty member co - authors biography

An instructor of English here at Jax State has co-authored a popular biography which tells the intriguing story of the life and death of a Livingston sheriff. Mrs. Ruth Pruitt, who teaches English here, and her brother, Warren Rogers, are the proud authors of STEPHEN S. RENFROE, ALABAMA'S OUTLAW SHERIFF.

The 148 page biography was actually completed in 1966 after more than three years of hard work and thorough research. The book is really two in one—one part telling of the Reconstruction years which set the stage for the hero's life, and the other accounting the escapades of the notorious sheriff's life, itself.

The initial idea for writing the biography began while Mr. Rogers was doing research for his doctorate which concentrated on the period of time in which Stephen Renfroe lived. In nearly every source that Rogers consulted, was a common name—that of Stephen S. Renfroe.

Sometime around 1880, a man appeared in Livingston. Although no one knew anything about him, he was considered to be the epitome of an honest man and his popularity grew so that by 1878, he had earned the office of sheriff of Sumter County. After his election, his actions convinced the citizens that he was the only man for the job. He broke up a gambling operation and did other similarly important deeds that were expected of a sheriff. Stephen S. Renfroe was believed a good man.

By 1880, however, citizens of Sumter County began to change their idea about this character. Renfroe became notorious for drunkenness, robberies, and blackmails. Arson and thieving, too, soon became trademarks of this man who spent the six years which followed in and out of jails. Stephen S. Renfroe eventually became the Harry Houdini of Sumter County. He became notorious for his inconceivable jail escapes—it seemed that none could hold this outlaw.

Finally Stephen S. Renfroe was captured by a group of Livingston citizens who lynched him. Stephen S. Renfroe had one son, and before he was hanged, Renfroe requested that his wife take his son and flee to another city and both change their names.

Reading this book, makes one wonder why the writers of Alabama's History chose to leave out these adventures. The life of Stephen S. Renfroe would make a fantastic fictitious play, short story, or novel. Ironically, however, the story of Stephen S. Renfroe is history, it is a reality, it is definite.

When Mrs. Rogers and her brother began research for their book, they met many obstacles. One of the most common of these was the popular idea that no one would ever find out the "truth" about this notorious sheriff. All of their research, too, was novel. No one had ever taken time to investigate Stephen S. Renfroe—they had to dig for every piece of information—there were few known facts.

Mrs. Rogers, who has published several newspaper articles, has always had an overwhelming ambition to write a novel, and would like nothing more than to write the "novel version" of Stephen S. Renfroe's life. "Writing," she believes, "is ninety per cent hard work and ten per cent inspiration."

Mrs. Rogers admits that she had difficulty in disciplining herself to refrain from "jazzing up the facts." There were so many times when she found herself conscious of trying to neither condemn, or condoning the actions of Renfroe. It was her brother, Warren, who constantly reminded her that everything had to be factual—there was no room in the biography for personal interpretations.

There were so many times in Stephen Renfroe's life that would have caused the reader to attempt to interpret this character's personal thoughts. The most prominent incident being that of the time just before Renfroe's hanging. "I would have like to treat this aspect, but I would have had to use my interpretation," Mrs. Pruitt admits.

Now that the book is published, and doing quite well, Mrs. Pruitt believes, "it's a little unreal and almost anti-climatic to think that you'd put so much work into just that much...It does give me, however, a sense of satisfaction and a good feeling."

The book is published by the Sentry Press, P. O. Box 2235, Tallahassee, Florida, 32304. Copies of this book which has its climax set on the limb of a chinaberry tree in Livingston may be obtained from the publishers at $7.50 each.

survey is questioned

There has been a controversy at JSU in the last week concerning the political survey which was taken of students at registration in Leone Cole auditorium.

Students were asked to fill out cards calling for the student's name, address, county of voter registration if any, choice for President of U.S., and choice for state senator. There were also items where the student indicated whether or not he needed an absentee ballot and whether or not he needed transportation to register to vote if he were not already registered.

The cards were provided by the organization Young Republicans and were to go the the organization's headquarters in Montgomery. The SGA, however, was to receive the information from two of the items on the survey, the ones concerning absentee ballots and unregistered voters. The SGA gave its authorization to those conducting the survey.

The Alabama Citizens for McGovern conducted a similar survey during registration. The group did, however, inform the students that the information on the cards was for the use of Alabama Citizens for McGovern.

There has been no response at this writing from the SGA or the Young Republicans to the criticism of the McGovernites.

Karl Krutchfield of Alabama Citizens for McGovern in Jacksonville expressed the feeling of the group that the survey was "misrepresented as unbiased" because the students filling out the cards were not informed that the poll was partisan. The McGovernites feel that the SGA should have access to all the material on the cards and that the information should be made available to all those interested. Krutchfield found fault with the SGA in that it had given support to a partisan organization in authorizing the survey.

Off The Field

By Marty Jones

Whether we realize it or not each of us competes in various ways every day. We compete with ourselves when we get up in the morning as to whether we will make it to class and compete with the clock to see if we are on time.

Man has always had a thriving for competition which is universal as proven by the Olympic Games. The Olympic Games give men a standard to measure their accomplishments by and thus provide the stimulus required for many athletes to train.

What has made competition so popular for man? The desire to win? The agony of defeat? The pain of injury? The answer would be a culmination of all of these factors with pride and self respect added. Competition allows us to blow off steam in a desirable way and to gain respect from others as well as from ourselves.

There are many types of competition with the most obvious being sports. Sports were invented for controlled competition with the greatest satisfaction coming from winning. In college we compete against fellow students for grades and later in jobs against our fellow workers for success. The most important part of competition is competing with yourself. Expecting the best you are capable of and settling for nothing less is the only way to win this competition. So remember! It's not whether you win or lose or how you play the game, it's whether or not you compete.

The Marching Southerners move a step ahead

By JIM OWEN

There are many organizations that support the Gamecocks during the football season. One of the better supporting groups is the Marching Southerners and Ballarinas.

The band is under the excellent leadership of Mr. Dave Walters. Mr. Walters is the composer of many of the great tunes used by the Southerners.

The new field general of the Southerners is Patrick Henry of Chattanooga, Tennessee where he has held positions in the band. Pat is a member with experience dating back for the past four years.

The featured twirlers for this year are lovely Donna McCormick and Helen Nutze. These girls are expected to bring many varied and exciting routines during the half-time extravaganzas.

Last but not least is the beautiful Ballarina crew headed by Head Ballarina Johnnie Lou Payne, a senior from Hueytown.

Looking over the top

Arkansas

The Razorbacks have another outstanding team that isn't expected to yield to anyone without them knowing they have been in a whale of a battle.

The team has quarterback Joe Ferguson the S.W.C. offensive player of the year and four all conference men, Danny Rhodes-linebacker, Mike Reppond-receiver, Ron Revard-center, and Tom Reed-guard.

The Ferguson-Rappond coupling is thought to be equal to the Sullivan-Beasley duo at Auburn in 1971. John Richardson heads the backfield horses as he is expected to get plenty of help from soph-fullback Marsh White and Tailback Dickey Morton (5-11,175) with a 6.5 yard average in 127 mail carrying trips.

The defense along with Rhodes is expected to have conerback Louis Campbell, tackle David Reaves, linebackers Scott Bennion and Jon Rhiddlehover. These are the men who make up an experienced team.

Washington

Give the Huskies the running backs of U.S.C. and there would be no questions as to being the title holder in the conference. The question of running backs looks brighter with the return of Pete Taggares, Larry Dumas, and the addition of Willie Hendrick for the frosh team. The running game is the only major question with the 40 lettermen back with 17 as double award winners composed of 32 seniors with 10 offensive and 9 defensive starters and 7 defensive back-up men.

Sonny Sixkiller heads the offense sled of firework with his aierals going to wide receiver Tom Scott, tight end John Brady, and little Dennis Brimhall with Scott Loomis and Dan Wesley in reserve.

The offensive line has Rod Stanley (245) and Rich Hayes (230) at the tackle spots; Fred Miller (210) and Dave Enders (235) at the guards, and finally Jim Andrelenas (235) at center.

The defense has the leagues finest senior front four in Kurt Matter (225), Dave Worgan (230) at the ends and Gordy Guinn (220) and Ben Albrecht (225) at the tackles. The linebacker crew has Ben Ferguson, Doug Preston in the middle, and Brian Dahony as the big men.

The backfield has All-American safetyman Bill Cahill, senior cornor man-Calvin Jones and two other seniors Phil Andre and Tony Bonwell.

The kicking game is in good hands as the nations number sixteenth rated man, Steve Wuzbowski handles the chores. A real strong team except for running game.

Ohio State

The Ohio State Buckeyes have an exceptionally strong team with 37 lettermen returning with 11 of them as full time starter.

The Buckeyes pride themselves on their defense and this year is no exception with Randy Gradishar, Vic Kaegel, and Rick Middleton as possibly the top three linebackers in the conference.

The defensive line is equally strong with six tackles headed by George Hasenabrl (6-1, 255), Shad William, and Dan Catills with handy help from Charlie Bucrof, and Fred Pisanili.

The supper sophs are playing the end as exemplified by Tom Marendt and Van DeCrex.

The safety jobs are held by Jeff Davis and Rick Siefert, a pro prospect that is attracting attention. Good depth is shown in this position as four other players battle for the back up spots.

The offense is solid with much of the same type of talent as the defense. The offense is led by two quaterbacks Greg Hare and Dave Purdy.

The offensive line has some big men in All-American tackle John Hicks and Merv Teague. Chuch Bonica and Jim Dregel should give the offense plenty of protection to operate. The veteren Tom Nixon is a good snapper for a quarterback to be behind. The split end job is up for grabs between four players headed by Billy Ezzo, who has 95 speed in the 100.

The backfield is a settle threesome of fullback John Bledsoe, wingback Rick Galbo's and tailback Morris Bradshaw.

Colorado

The thundering herd of Bufalos are reappearing in the mountains after being driven from the plains and they are ready to stampede back onto the plains to their first conference title in 11 years and the sharp shooting of the other opponents may not stop them.

The offensive backfield is led by the bull of the herd, Ken Johnson at the quarterback slot after a big sophomore show of last year and tailback Charlie Davis made himself felt as the M.V.P. in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl while being picked to the national back of the week twice.

Behind the leading Bufalos are chargin the slotback Joe Kenworth, Gary Campbell, Bo Mathews, Mike Bennett and Bill Cramer. Johnsons place at the head of the herd is not safe with Joe Dueneas, and soph fine Clyde Crutchner charging hard and fast.

The offensive line has the muscle to surround the herd for protection. With Jake Zumback and Greg Horton as tackles, Chuck Mandrill and Bruce Peoples at the guards, and Bill McDonald has the center. Finally Johnson's fire power is expected to be caught by tight end T.V. Cain and Paul Seialla.

The defense is anchored by All-League guard Bud Magrum to linebacker Billie Drake as this experienced group is rough and tough with the line averaging 236 pounds per man.

Penn State

The Lions under the leadership of Coach Joe Paterno has had a six year record of 53 wins and 11 losses with one tie and won over Texas by a score of 30 to 6 in the 1971 Cotton Bowl game.

John Hufnagal an All-American candidate at quarterback is returning but his backfield will be new with Franco Harris' spot going to Tom Donchez, Lydell Mitchells' spot goes to John Cappellitti an old defensive man, and finally Glen Cole's replacement at flanker will be Jimmy Scott.

The offensive line will have split end Scott Skarzynski, tackle Craig Lyle, and guard Carl Shaukanitch returning with Charlie Getty is the replacement for Dave Joyner, Rick Brown takes over for Mike Botts and Bob Rickenback for Bob Knechtel.

Defensively the Lions have lost Gary Gray, Chuck Zapiec at linebacker tackle Frank Ahrenhold, and halfback Chuck Mesko. The men to fill these positions are Ed O'Neil for Gray, Larry Ludwig for Zapiec, and Ahrenhold's tackle spot has three men in the running.

The returning lettermen are Bruce Bannon, John Skorupan, and Tom Hull at linebackers, tackle Jim Heller, safety Gregg Ducutte, and end Jim Laslavic.

These men look strong with a lot of speed for the good campaign ahead.

Texas

The longhorns are expected to take all the other cowboys on a ride as they go for their fifth consecutive S.W.C. pennant. The longhorns are under a new field general named Alan Lowery (5-10, 186) defensive reject with offensive experience. Lowery has plenty of talent with him in the people of All-American tackle Jerry Sisemore, All Conference honorees; offensive guard Don Crosslin and linebacker Randy Brand.

The backfield is headed by Tom Landry and is followed by many improved steeds that show great ability.

The other non-honorees that are returning are fullback-Gleen Gaspard, defensive end-Jay Arnold, Center-Bill Wyman, Splitend-Pat Kelly, Jim Moore, and Bruce Cannon, safety-Mick Bayer, and defensive halfback, Mike Rowan.

With this talent Texas is expected as a big S.W.C. contender this fall.

ROTC

Jax Stater, Tom Roberson has that serious look about ROTC Summer Camp at Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

Jax State ROTC cadets excell

JSU cadets won more honors at the Advanced ROTC Summer Camp held at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, than any other institution in the Third US Army area. Jax State, with three awards and The Citadel with two awards were the only multiple award winners. JSU cadets were recognized at ceremonies on the last day of camp.

Cadet Gene Preskitt of Selma, Alabama, a three-year veteran varsity defensive end with the Gamecocks, placed second of 1,600 cadets to become the top JSU performer of the year. Gene was cited for outstanding leadership potential, physical condition and exemplary performance in marksmanship. On the final day he was selected as the cadet brigade commander for the parade and awards ceremony. Gene is an enthusiastic supporter of the ROTC program and has been invaluable in recruiting basic cadets.

Cadet John W. Holloway of Alexander City, Alabama, was selected as the top cadet in his company of 160 men and was in competition for best cadet at camp.

Cadet Douglas S. Slick of 321 Laurel Place, Birmingham, Alabama, was the best marksman of the 1,600 cadets attending camp. Upon completion of camp he went to Fort Benning, Georgia, where he completed the Army's jump-master training course.

In addition to the outstanding records compiled at Summer Camp, three cadets finished nine weeks of Army Ranger School to earn their Ranger tab. The three cadets were Gayle D. Sams of Weaver, Alabama, Robert C. Rollins of Gadsden, Alabama and Thomas V. Roberson, son of the former JSU basketball coach, Tom Roberson of Jacksonville, Alabama.

Two advanced cadets also completed the Army's airborne school and now proudly wear their parachutist badge. The two cadets were Mike Wamsley of Jacksonville and Vincent M. Costanza of 1021 Daniel Drive, Birmingham, Alabama.

Allied Arts offer student discount

Anyone interested in attending, for the cost of six dollars, five concerts, a nationally acclaimed play, four Warner Brothers movies, a film festival, plus a few dances thrown in the deal, should hurry to the SGA office and buy an Allied Arts Card.

Allied Arts Cards are part of the entertainment program of the SGA. The purchase of a card assures a student of a ticket to all of the events listed above. He pays nothing more than the price of the card. He may pick up his ticket in advance of the event in the office of the SGA Vice-President, Don Lewis. A student not holding an Allied Arts Card will have to buy a separate ticket to each show he wishes to attend. Ticket prices range from 75 cents for the movies to three dollars for some concerts. A student can save as much as 14 dollars in all on entertainment in a semester if he buys an Allied Arts Card instead of buying separate tickets to all entertainment.

There are two types of Allied Arts Cards, single and double. The single card provides the holder with one ticket to each show. It costs six dollars. A double card provides two tickets for each event and costs ten dollars.

The concerts to which an Allied Arts Card holder will have free admission, include It's A Beautiful Day, Goose Creek Symphony, Chilights, the Staple Singers, and Cold Blood. The movies include THE WILD BUNCH, START THE REVOLUTION WITHOUT ME, CAMELOT, and an all-night Alfred Hitchcock film festival consisting of four movies. The play included is CAGE. It will be presented by St. Quentin Prison inmates. The groups who will appear at the dances have not been named.

The SGA is planning to co-sponsor a concert in Birmingham which will star either Elton John or Leon Russell. Allied Arts Card holders will receive a discount on their tickets to this concert.

Allied Arts Cards will be on sale throughout the semester.

his fellow countrymen, that he influenced two Rotarians to visit Guatemala. One Rotarian, having learned from the student of the country's physical beauty decided to visit Guatemala, and is seriously considering moving there. Another Rotarian who just happened to be a dentist, discovered the dire need of the country in medical areas, and decided to spend a two week visit there while on vacation. In just two weeks, he pulled over 2,000 teeth.

The Rotarians of the Fort Myers Club are great hosts. The only complaints that the foreign students have after spending their Christmas holidays there are that there was so much they wanted to do and didn't find time to do, and that it was too short.

The hassle of being a freshman

By DOTTIE LAWRENCE

Every freshman, when he or she first arrives at college, wonders what lies ahead here. Only time can fully satisfy this curiosity. However, since for many freshmen college is such a big change from high school, possibly it would be helpful for them to be given some idea of what to expect here at JSU, of some of the experiences and the problems that they may encounter. This account will be of necessity from the point of view of a female JSU student; therefore it will hopefully be of interest to JSU female freshmen in particular.

Let us begin with the area of college life which is usually considered its purpose—studies. There are certainly some adjustments that freshmen must make in this area. First, the student will find less strict direction in the classroom than he found in high school. Usually at the beginning of a course the teacher gives the class a general idea of what should be done in preparation for each class meeting (for example, reading the material that the lecture will concern). The teacher assumes that a student who wants to do well will keep up with the material, attend class, and take notes. Written homework is not required nearly as often as in high school, and most teachers prefer not to spend time checking to see if students have been keeping up. In fact, in most classes the only check-ups are tests, and even these are usually few in number. In many classes the student has only two grades—the midterm and final exams.

Any student who is having trouble is expected to make it known to the professor. Most teachers are willing to give individual help to any student who needs it if the student asks for help in time (not the day before an exam.)

In general, one of the biggest problems about college work is the fact that assignments can be so easily put off until the last minute. The tendency to do this can be almost unavoidable. It isn't unusual for a student to have left at the end of a semester one or more term papers to do, and-or some outside reading to do, plus four or five exams to cram for.

Obviously, then, self-discipline, the ability to force oneself to finish work well ahead of the due date, is one of the most useful qualities a college student can have. It is the only means by which he can save himself from the "perils of procrastination"—unless, of course, he is very bored and has nothing to do but study.

Like high school classes, classes at JSU range from very boring to very interesting, depending on the material used in the course, the teacher, and also the students. If the students take the time to read the material and are able to participate in class discussions, a course which could have been boring can be fairly interesting.

Unfortunately, too much

"learning" at JSU consists of information memorized the day before a test and forgotten the day after. But, hopefully, when this year's new freshmen are seniors, they will find at least some part of their studies meaningful and useful in their lives.

A surprisingly large part of the knowledge that a college student receives is not gained in his studies. He learns a great deal in his relations with other people. A new student can count on being exposed to a lot of new people, some of whom will have ideas and ways that will differ greatly from his own. He will learn from these people, even if he accepts none of their ideas and changes none of his ways. Rarely would a new student be wrong in expecting to grow very close to a group of people at college. He should also expect that he and these people will get on one another's nerves from time to time. Hopefully he will learn to cope with this and to get along with people who irritate him somewhat.

A new freshman commonly hears such remarks as "You are an adult now, and here you will be treated as one." The male JSU student may possibly feel that he is being treated as an adult, but it is often difficult for the female student to feel like an adult when she is told that she "sign out" and "sign in" in the dorm and must be in the dorm by curfew, and that if she neglects to do this, she will be confined to the dormitory or to her room. So, rather than expecting to be entering into adulthood at JSU, a girl would be more correct in expecting at best a transition period in which she will be able to exercise responsibility in at least a few more areas than before. It may easily be the first time she has lived away from home, and she will have the experience of making everyday decisions on her own that before she would have had her parents' help with. She will be forced to look out for her own interests and to stand up for herself, since, no matter how many friends she makes, there will be times when there will be no one to do so for her. She will also face the challenge of remaining an individual in the midst of pressure from fellow students to conform to their various life styles and pressure from her parents to remain true to the set of values she has been taught. All of this will be a preparation for the girl's emergence as an independent person able to make decisions based on a set of values that is her own.

In the meantime, the typical JSU girl does not neglect having fun. Although Jacksonville is certainly not the most lively place in the world, there are events which are of interest to most people. The Student Government Association does its best to bring the most popular bands to the university, although it has been hindered by limited funds and lack of student support of concerts. The SGA also arranges for speakers from time to time. There are also weekly movies which are presented by the JSU film society. Needless to mention, there are pep rallies and football games during the season.

When boredom strikes and there seems no help in sight, the typical JSU girl must rely on her imagination. Some activities that she may stoop to engage in include water battles, shaving cream skirmishes, peeking out windows at courting couples, and stealing the clothes of people who are taking showers. For those who aren't very energetic, an all-time favorite, particularly in the dorms, is the gossip session.

Freshman girls are probably curious about the manner of dress at JSU. They should pay strict attention to the following explanation, for it would be unthinkable for the members of a freshman class to deviate from the high standards of dress set by the upperclassmen of Jacksonville State University, which, as everyone knows, is one of the fashion headquarters of the nation. And, of course, every girl at JSU wants to avoid looking from the rest and overhearing someone whisper, "She must be a freshman."

The preceding has been a lapse into sarcasm. Actually, individuality in dress, as in everything, helps make life more interesting, and diversity in dress on a campus should be welcomed, not stifled. However, since the purpose here is to give new girls an idea of what to expect on campus, let us consider the trends in dress at JSU.

Dress on campus ranges from casual to downright grubby. For the last couple of years more and more girls have been getting out of the habit of wearing dresses and hose and have become more and more attached to their jeans and knit shirts. In fact, the jeans look has become so widespread that a trend back toward skirts and sweaters and other less casual sportswear is expected in the fall.

Halter tops have become rather popular at JSU during warm weather, as have hot pants and hot pants sets, although hot pants are not officially permitted on campus. Smock blouses have made a start at JSU and may increasingly be used to add variety to jeans outfits.

Longer dresses and knickers have not yet gained much acceptance here. Maxi and midi coats did, however, arrive, and we will probably see a lot of them when winter comes.

In footwear sandals, clogs, and bare feet (now allowed everywhere on campus except the cafeteria) can be expected. In cooler weather we can expect the return of the short boot that replaced the moccasin last year as a companion to pants.

Until the last year or so purses were shunned by everyone except new freshman girls; in fact, they were the mark by which newcomers could be recognized. Now, however, shoulder handbags have become very popular with women students. These purses have the advantage of leaving hands free to carry books.

Hair styles at JSU are basically uncontrived. Long, straight hair styles are still hanging on, but the trend is toward curly and-or frizzy hair. Shags were very popular last year and will probably be so on campus this year, although they are said to be well on the way out in other places.

It is hoped that new freshmen girls will find this account useful in getting a better perspective of JSU. Above all, it is hoped that it will help them to guard steer clear of the extremes of optimism and pessimism as they enter into college life.

Army ROTC. It's no big thing.

First of all, Army ROTC only takes up about three to five hours a week of your time while you're in college. No big thing.

Second, it gives you an edge on the other guys. In areas like management, organization and leadership. No big thing.

Third, it pays $100 a month during your junior and senior years. No big thing.

Fourth, it lets you serve your country as an Army Officer. No big thing.

But the big thing is that little things add up. The education, the background, the experience.

Right now you may think Army ROTC will look small on your resume. But a lot of employers don't think so. And with jobs getting tougher to come by, a little thing like ROTC can start to look pretty big.

Army ROTC.

The more you look at it, the better it looks.
