Jacksonville State University’s Lurleen B. Wallace School of Nursing was formally dedicated Feb. 2. Present at the 20-minute ceremony were the Honorable Hugh D. Merrill, Chairman of the JSU Board of Trustees, and Dr. Theron E. Montgomery, Vice President for Academic Affairs and Dean of the University.

Also present were Mary Jo Ventress, a long-time friend and companion of the late Mrs. Lurleen B. Wallace, and Miss Lee Wallace, the youngest daughter of Governor Wallace. The governor was unable to attend.

Merrill acted as presiding officer at the ceremony. The invocation was given by the Rev. Wm. Tadlock, Director of the Baptist Campus Ministry. Montgomery then introduced the guests. Mrs. Ventress gave the Commemoration of the late governor, and a portrait of her mother was unveiled by Miss Wallace.

Stone, in the dedication statement said, “The late Governor Lurleen B. Wallace was indeed a great American. She was gracious in spirit, gentle in nature, kind in action, proven in foresight, and ever ready and anxious to promote the welfare of her people.”

Stone also said, “This school of nursing, being one of the most modern in America, is appropriately named. It is destined to project into history, helping, as it will, to bring relief and cure to the sick and needy. This is like Governor Lurleen would have it to be.”

The ceremony was attended by approximately 500 persons, including members of the Calhoun and Etowah County, Medical Societies, health leaders, and doctors. Also present were interested friends of the university, families of present nursing students, and prospective nursing students.

Wallace School Of Nursing

Stone added, "The Wallace School of Nursing will be the first speaker in a series of three guest lectures for GY 403, Conservation of Natural Resources, taught by Dr. Howard Johnson. Bylsma will speak on recreational land-use management Feb. 13 at 7 p.m., in Room 108, Bibb Graves Hall. Future discussion topics include visual resource management and urban forestry."

Student Senate Updates Constitution

Constitutional amendments were the major topic at the Feb. 3 meeting of the Student Government Association.

Dennis Fantazis, chairman of the SGA constitution committee, suggested the following changes be made in the current laws:

- Article 4, Section 1 be amended to read that a senator who has been dismissed is barred from seeking office in the student senate.

- Article 3, Section 5 be combined to form three separate courts—the Judicial Court, the Judicial Council and the Board of the President of the University. The Judicial Court had been separated in a men’s and women’s branch.

- Article 4, Section 2 be reduced from five justices to three in the Judicial Court. The senate passed these motions. A motion to include the graduate class as a separate, viable class in the constitution was defeated. The senate also tabled a motion by Carl Phillips to include a ceiling on SGA election spending in the constitution until the amendment was published in The Chanticleer.

Gary Wolfe, chairman of the Lyceum Committee, announced Jeb Stuart Magruder will be speaking on campus April 14. He also said he was trying to schedule Truman Capote for a campus lecture.

Terry Farmer, chairman of the Liaison Committee, reported that three proposals to amend the present cut system were being studied by university officials. He said fraternity and veteran outside lighting were also being considered.

In other business, the senate:

- Approved a motion by Tom Janiero to recommend that the men’s dormitories have new furniture installed in the TV rooms.

- Approved a motion by Ricky Phillips to remove the gymnastic equipment from Mathews Gym to Mathews Coliseum.

- Agreed with a suggestion made by Roy Roberts to find out the reasons for the two or more meetings some senators have missed.

Many students faced with an insufficiency of jobs and scholarships, and with an abundance of loan sources, graduate owing from $6 to $5,000.

A loan administrator at the University of Wisconsin said, "Although a college education may be worth something intellectually, its turning out that it is not such a good investment. People are not getting jobs. They’re not finding the employment that will enable them to pay back the money they borrowed."

Student Bankruptcy

Anyone may file for bankruptcy without hiring a lawyer. The bankruptcy petition, which costs $50, must include a schedule of all assets, liabilities, the location and value of all properties, and the names of creditors with the amounts owed to each.

"The funny thing is that when my bankruptcy went through, I became respectable again. I have no debts, I have a decent job, a good income and I’m a good credit risk because under the law I can’t go bankrupt again for another six years," commented one former student.

One such academic bankrupt, a psychology doctoral student in the Midwest, along with her husband, owed $33,000 in New York State loans when they declared bankruptcy three years ago. Last month she secured another federally insured student loan.

Loan Defaults

Since most loan programs don’t require repayments until six months after graduation, locating debtors can be a problem.

To date, defaults on federally insured student loans are an estimated $252 million. In fact, a recent General Accounting Office study reported that 24.3 percent of all student borrowers default on loans.

A loan administrator for the National Direct Student Loan program said no delinquency prosecutions at the federal level and few at the university level have been conducted, "because these are essentially character loans..."

Rather than prosecuting defaulted loans on the federal level, the NDSL reduces by the uncollected amount the allotment received by an institution. For example, Columbia University’s allotments diminished by $100,000 in one year.

"At JSU collections have been very good because of the fine students with high qualities of integrity, said J. E. Pain, director of Auxiliary Services, who is responsible for loan collections.

Larry Smith, director of Financial Aid at JSU, said Jackson State has "one of the lowest default rates in the South, maybe even the nation."

Proposed Regulations

The current bankruptcy law in the United States was enacted in 1898 and revised in 1938. Legislation is now pending that might repeal the old law and create a new one by 1976. Designed HR10792, this new legislation was introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressmen Don Edwards (D) and Charles Waggans (R). HR 10792 would create a new agency tentatively titled the United State Bankruptcy Administration (USBa).

Under the USBA, the six-year limit for filing a bankruptcy would be changed to five years, and students with huge loans would find it difficult to reweigh their options.

The Side Door

Dr. Calvert Talks Of His Hobbies

By Michael Orlofsky
STAFF WRITER

On a late night after the first meeting, yet before the second, Benjamin was walking down the deserted highway between the town and the university. The old moon hadn't risen, and the spotlights on and around the university buildings were off. "The Magnolias" was a dark, vague mass among the trees. But in the surrounding darkness of the night world Benjamin saw the glow of one misty-haired light. The light shone over the side door of Dr. Calvert’s house.

Again a white amulett remained on Benjamin's knuckles after knocking on the side entrance's frame. It wouldn’t rub off.

Mrs. Calvert answered and let him in. Benjamin told her he and Dr. Calvert had arranged to meet that afternoon, and he asked if Dr. Calvert was able to talk with him.

"I think he’s on the phone upstairs," said Mrs. Calvert. "Just a minute and I'll go see." She turned to Benjamin after a few steps, "...what's your first name?" she asked.

"Benjamin Wesley, from the university." He added the extra information, instinctively it seemed, to aid in acknowledging him, and perhaps even in remembering him.

She slightly bowed her head after he repeated his name.

"William..." she said, "calling up the stairs, "Yea," came a reply, "slightly muted from its quietness. "Benjamin is here to see you."

Benjamin was a little surprised and flattered that Mrs. Calvert used only his first name. Immediately, without conscious effort his regard and admiration for him grew into the not easily forgetting shade of his soul.

In a few moments Dr. Calvert hurriedly came stepping down the stairs. He had forgotten the appointment—and in a short while he and Mrs. Calvert would have to leave for Anniston. Dr. Calvert apologized; Benjamin said he could always come back another time. But Dr. Calvert said if Benjamin didn’t mind, he was welcome to ride with them to Anniston.
Northern Arizona University (NOCR)—To raise money for a scholarship fund, students here staged an Evel Knievel-type tricycle jump. The event grossed over $600 but the featured dare-devil, the student body president, ended up in the hospital with two cracked ribs after his trike flipped during the 15-foot leap. Let's hope our SGA President has enough sense not to do this!!!

‘All The Presidents Men’ Watergate’s ‘Best’

Like most book topics the first book on Watergate, ALL THE PRESIDENT’S MEN, is the best.

Bill Ward, an instructor at Southern Illinois University, recently made the following observations with which I heartily agree.

‘The reader becomes fascinated by who that anonymous source (‘Deep Throat’) must be and tries to put together random clues from the book: ‘He must be tall because he leaves a note for Woodward on a cement ledge of an underground parking garage and Woodward, who is 5’10”, cannot reach it.

‘He must be near Woodward in Washington, D. C., because to contact him Woodward signals with a red construction flag in an old flower pot set on the balcony of his apartment.

‘He has access to both the White House and the Committee for the Re-election of the President (CRP).

‘If deep Throat wants to meet Woodward he marks the time in Woodward’s apartment-delivered ‘New York Times’ which Woodward has not seen.

‘Deep Throat smokes. He is a long-time friend of Woodward’s. He has long been in Nixon government.

‘He knows literature well. He drinks scotch. He is outspoken. He uses profanity.

‘He has direct access to Nixon, at least to his conversations.’

The book, completed in February of last year, could hardly afford to name ‘Deep Throat’, as Nixon was still in office.

Possibly the best use which can be found for this book is to provide a model for inexperienced investigative reporters. The pair occasionally stray from their own rules and lose their contacts and credibility.

This book, which has been a best-seller since June, will probably be on the best-seller list for a few more months now that it is in paperback form.

However, I would like to know who Deep Throat is now that Nixon has resigned.

ALABAMA SCHOLARSHIPS FOR DEPENDENTS OF BLIND PARENTS

Children from families in which the head of the household is blind, and whose income is insufficient to provide educational benefits, are eligible for assistance from the State of Alabama. For more information, write the State Department of Education, Montgomery, Al. 36104.

ARMED SERVICES PROGRAMS

Most branches of the United States military now offer attractive programs of assistance to students who pay all costs of attending college. Once the recipient of these programs graduates, he generally serves a specified length of time in the service as payment for the assistance he received.

Practically all branches of the military maintain offices with recruiters in the courthouse of each county to explain these programs.

G. I. BILL

Most veterans with service after Jan. 31, 1956 are eligible for assistance to attend college under the G. I. Bill. Single persons usually receive about $270 per month for full-time attendance. This amount is higher for married persons and each dependent child.

For further information, write: Veterans Administration Regional Office, 74 South Court Street, Montgomery, Al. 36104. An office of Veterans Affairs is also maintained at Jacksonville State University to assist veterans on the G. I. Bill. It is located in the Admissions Office.

Two technical fouls at crucial times flustered the Jaxmen and gave them a loss to South Alabama.

Leading by 4-39 at the half, and 52-51 with 12:56 left in the game, the Gamecocks drew a technical foul when a player did not report to the scoring table. Within two minutes the Jaxmen had fallen behind by 12 points, 64-53.

The Gamecocks with 6:28 left, cut the Jaguars lead to 71-64, but drew another technical foul which lead to three straight South Alabama field goals.

As both teams scored on 36 field goal attempts, the winning margin proved to be 18 successful foul shots by the Jaguars as compared to nine by the Jaxmen.

Top scorers for the Gamecocks were Herman Brown, 26 points and 12 rebounds; Eddie Butler, 20 points; and Ron Money, 13 points and rebounds.

Facing the Jaguars scoring attack were Glen Selph, 18 points; Dave Davis, 18 points; Ray Edwards, 12 points; and Rick Sinclair, 12 points.

The Jaxmen won the rebrending battle, 44-39.

Bama Forfeits Rifle Title

The Jax State rifle team won, by default, the championship of the northern district of the Alabama Collegiate Riflery Conference (ACRC), according to Sgt. Edward Herbert, rifle team coach.

JSU team captain Janice Jennings said Alabama forfeited the championship because it failed to pay its dues in time.

According to Dr. David Gunderson, manager of the Bama rifle club, the team began the year without a sponsoring organization. The Military Science and the Athletic departments declined to support the team.

In early October the University Recreation decided to support the ACRC dues are payable on Oct.

The previous coach Sgt. John and Mike, totaled 16 points each. Efell Williams tallied 14 points.

The Jaxmen, now 5-2 in the Gulf South Conference, lead the GSC in free-throw accuracy with a .750 mark. They are second in team scoring with a 78.2 average.

voice was soft and quiet which Benjamin thought stemmed from her natural reserve and gentility. Benjamin knew, surely, that her interest in the old-Jacksonville homes was influenced by her own mother’s concern for the traditions of the South. It was in her mother’s—Mrs. Dauggett’s—book on the older histories of Jacksonville that he learned the Lee place’s pet name. They both seemed to be dressed up for some social affair, thought Benjamin. Mrs. Calvert was wearing a white, cotton dress, and her dark-brown hair was done up in an unaffected style. It was a nice change for Benjamin from the layerd, air-blown tresses of which many women seemed so fond. Dr. Calvert was in a coat and tie—Benjamin smiled inwardly over his flared and cut pants.

During the drive, in a big Chrysler to Aniston, Dr. Calvert gave a history of the boxwood bushes on either side of his garage. Mrs. Calvert had climbed three sprigs from a boxwood growing on the estate of her mother’s ancestors in Verne, France. For three weeks she kept the sprigs alive while they continued their trip through Europe. One of the stems died, but the other two survived and took root. Mrs. Calvert and the gardener Snora planted them beside the garage. “For some odd reason the one on the right always was short and more sickly looking than the other,” added Dr. Calvert.

Those boxwoods would make good material for a book,” he mentioned. “They could be the skeleton of a book about human desires and ambitions, and you could include bits of sociology, history, psychology, and philosophy if you wanted.” Benjamin had been told that Dr. Calvert was a fair-weather ornithologist. He unaccountably asked him about his interest in ornithology. Dr. Calvert demurred. Then he asked him if he knew the bird that made, which Benjamin thought to be, one of the most famous, cranking sounds in the woods. Dr. Calvert couldn’t place the mockingbird, but he gave him, so he whistled some bird calls to see if any were the one Benjamin meant. None of them were, so Benjamin tried to imitate the sound as best he could... but it wasn’t a very good call at all. Dr. Calvert mumbled over Benjamin’s imitation and said it must be that of a mockingbird.

“You must be a pretty good bird imitator,” asked Benjamin.

“Do you think I can make a few bird calls... but not all that well. People didn’t know what the bird calls were supposed to sound like anyway, so I got the reputation of being a bird imitator.” They traveled onward.

“You know, and this was a strange happening,” said Benjamin, “the morning after I finished your book you’re all the girls I saw while walking to class reminded me of Angela.” Both the Calverts broke out in a long laugh. Angela wasn’t such a nice young lady.

“Did you tell any of them that you reminded you of Angela?” she joked.

“No,” blamed Benjamin, “I don’t think they might have liked that.”

“I was wondering if the description of those two people in the first paragraph of SAUL were of you and Mrs. Calvert!” Benjamin was greatly certain the fellow with wireless glasses and trenchant eyes was Dr. Calvert’s description of himself, although he wasn’t so sure that the chubby wife in the book was a rendering of Mrs. Calvert.

“No, it wasn’t a self-description... I’m not autobiographic.”

Dr. Calvert went on to say that the “Anglo-Welsh Review” gave SAUL favorable notice, took about two and a half years to write, with another year spent in revision.

Benjamin asked him how he found time to write, especially since he was at that time head of the English department and also was occupied with various other duties.

“I set aside time from six to seven as the morning—six to seven-thirty during daylight saving time—so I could work in bed and write. You’d be surprised at how much you can accomplish in an hour with door bells and phone ringing or bars playing.”

Dr. Calvert dropped his wife off at the doctor’s office, then drove down and parked near the courthouse. He picked up some manuscript he had lined—he tossed it onto his back seat—then turned back again for the doctor’s office.

Just before they crossed the street and turned the avenue most of the town’s stream of life either traveled along or crossed—Dr. Calvert blew the horn in order to have a fellow on the sidewalk, “ Haven’t seen you in ages!”

“I was only making a trip”—the man used to work on his watches.

While Dr. Calvert went inside the building to pick up his wife, Benjamin quickly read some sentences of the manuscript. The fragments he read were dialogue between two Southerners with strong accents; they might have been two blacks, but could not be sure.

On the drive back to Jacksonville the three talked about Shakespeare, birds, and Dr. Calvert qualified some of his references to Dante and Chaucer by quoting them in Italian and Middle English. He reminisced further about Harvard, especially Kittridge, Grant, and Irving Bannister, whose anti-Romanticism constantly irritated his students. “He didn’t have much use for Romans... but we were all Romantics,” said Dr. Calvert ending the statement with his laugh.

Nearing town the conversation turned to Major John Felham, Jacksonville’s Civil War hero. While they talked about Felham, Benjamin remembered that Mrs. Calvert’s grandfather, General John Fort, had been a Confederate together with his reinforcements, was one of the few to recognize the Confederate was the battle of the First Manassas.

Benjamin noticed how pleased Mrs. Calvert was with him when he mentioned that Jacksonville’s original name in the early 1800’s was Drayton.

Dr. Calvert pulled into “The Magnolias” and parked behind the mansion. They could hear this was the day to attend a gathering in “The Magnolias,” so the conversation would have to end just being.

“If you suppose you’d like to continue with our talk?” Dr. Calvert asked.

“If you don’t mind,” answered Benjamin.

“No, I don’t mind at all.”

The two met again Sunday afternoon.
