

Jimmy Parker To Perform At Coffeehouse

The SGA Coffeehouse Program presents Jimmy Parker in concert Feb. 4, at 8:30 pm in Chat'em Inn. The second for the semester, the concert marks the beginning of weekly Coffeehouse programs and also the first for several local on-campus artists who will perform over the remainder of the semester.

Jimmy is a man who writes and speaks the language of music as if it were his native tongue. From Gadsden, Jimmy is a junior here at JSU, majoring in chemistry and minoring in biology.

As evidence of his talent, he recently signed a contract with Chuck Sagle of Chuck Sagle Production Inc. of Nashville, Tenn.

Jimmy calls his songs "life songs." "Everything that happens is a part of life. I don't just write "America" songs or love songs." His favorite is the love songs.

"Love songs are real; they say what it's all about. Love's a state that you're either in or just out of."

Although he plays 6 or 7 instruments, the guitar is his favorite and is what he writes his music with. He describes his style as "easy-going, laid-back guitar and vocals."

Jim's style, because he writes most of his material and has no formal training in music, could be said to be an extension of his own personality. It is what he is.

"I write to show where I am, for others to see where I am and maybe take the good points. I hope they see it as another opinion to use in forming their own."

You don't have to go places to learn things. I think you can learn more by being open and listening to people and realizing their needs."

Come and listen to a quiet evening of Jimmy Parker.

Sumner Directs Coffeehouse

Kerry Sumner has been approved by the SGA Senate as Coffeehouse Coordinator for the spring semester, SGA Vice President Bert Stewart announced last week.

Stewart was pleased with the first Coffeehouse program, calling it "a big success. The only problem is that we may need a bigger place."

"I felt the program deserved more attention than I could give it because of working on large concerts and the movie program. Kerry has worked real hard during the Fall semester on our concerts, and I felt he had picked up the necessary knowledge to handle this job."

Kerry is from Arab, Ala., majoring in general business and minoring in economics at Jacksonville. A senior, he plans to graduate next December. He plays trumpet in the Southerners.

About his appointment, Kerry said, "I'm honored to be placed in this position. I'll try to the best of my ability to bring what the students like. I'd like to encourage all students to come out and take part in it."

His duties as Coffeehouse Coordinator will be to coordinate the facilities, performers and other arrangements. The Coffeehouse is designed for an informal atmosphere where students can come to enjoy music and meet other students for little money.

Stewart praised John Childs and the Chat'em Inn staff for "an excellent job" done for the first program and thanked them for their offer of future assistance in any possible way.

Valiants Will Perform

-What's that on the stage?
-A bird?
-A plane?
-Superman?

Heck no! It's Vince Vance and the Valiants. Yes, Vince and the Valiants are coming to Jacksonville Feb. 14. Perhaps you've already seen this group on TV or read their reviews in some mag.

If not prepare to experience this authentic 50's group. Complete with leather, spit and gobs, not dabs, of Brylcreme. Rave reviews from across the nation emphasize their almost perfect blending of sounds with their stage show.

Hailing from New Orleans, Vince and the Valiants blew out Bourbon Street before carrying the attack to the rest of the United States.

Be prepared--V-Day (Vince-Day) is only eleven days off. Take the necessary precautions--first, rush to the SGA and grab your tickets and secondly, bag it to the stores and get your bobbie socks and plenty of hair grease.

What Are They Doing Now?

BY BILLIE NAPPER
Staff Writer

Everybody seems to be on a nostalgia kick. Almost all the "new" songs sound extremely familiar to me. Invariably when I run into an old friend I haven't seen in a while, they will want to sit around and shoot the bull about how great it was back in the "good ole days." Sometimes I wonder if I'm talking to the person I really knew or if it's an imposter. A lot of times the way I remember events doesn't sound anything like the way they remember them. Maybe I'm just not romantic enough.

Anyway, the conversation usually turns to the ole school paper. Remember those dumb columns we wrote? You know. The ones about Public High School 81 wouldn't be Public High School 81 unless. . . Or how about "I wonder what would happen if. . ."

Well, I know I should have better sense, but the other day I started a list of the people who wrote these columns then and what they are doing now. It goes like this:

-He lists the ingredients on the little packets of cream that isn't really cream that restaurants give you to go in your coffee.

-She's the nurse that wakes you up at 11 p.m. in the hospital to give you a sleeping pill.

-They are married and have four kids, three dogs, six cats, and 1,297 guppies.

-He is "up the river" for plagiarism.

-She's a seventh semester sophomore majoring in failing.

-He's still trying to get a high school degree.

-He plays jazz trombone in lower Mississippi.

-She's a lady cop.

-She's a clerk-typist GS1 with the government.

-He's the human bomb.

-She's engaged for the 127th time.

-He's a script writer for "The Price is Right".

-He is "Spinner of the Month" at the local cotton mill.

-She's still trying to find out if there really is a good fairy.

-He's making car tags.

-She's a marriage counselor. She really ought to be an expert in the field. She's been married five times.

-He's in training to replace Smokey the Bear.

-He installs the bathroom in 747's.

-She bottles beer-illegally.

-She empties 1,342 bedpans every day.

-Just in case you're wondering which category I fit into, I don't. My "Little ole high school English teacher" told me I might as well give up my great ambition. She said I would never write well enough to write for any paper.

Murray Offers Advice

Students may have better luck have stolen goods returned—that is, if they follow University Chief of Police Murray's suggestion.

Murray asks all students to record the brand name and serial number of valuable items and keep it. He said officials have better luck in retrieving stolen goods if they have a better idea of what they're looking for.

Faculty Union?

University of Minnesota (IP)—College and university students will lose power if the faculty unionizes, according to Paul Murphy, faculty spokesman for the American Association of University Professors at the University of Minnesota.

"Students would inevitably suffer," Murphy said. "Their participation in the advisory process, like sitting on committees, would probably be eliminated." "Under normal union contract, the law provides for only two parties, faculty and administration," Murphy explained. "So students are either pushed out of policy-making positions or forced into collective action to protect their own rights."

"Students on some campuses who have found themselves in this third party position have unionized," he said. "If I was a concerned student, I would be very apprehensive about faculty unionization," he said.

Half Of Legacy Offered

Eastern Washington State College (NOCR)—"Inherit a fortune. See me," read the sign above the table in the Eastern Washington State College student union. The deal, explained attractive Nora Connelly, was that her grandmother had recently died leaving her a $100,000 inheritance, but that in order to collect it, she must be married at the time of the formal reading of the will the next afternoon. She was willing to split the legacy 50-50 with a hastily found husband, she said.

She had 30 application questionnaires and all were soon filled out by eager male students. Before she slipped away, she was stopped by the student newspaper to confess that it had all been in experiment for a communications class at nearby Gonzaga University.

What did Connelly learn from her experiment? "I learned that people are really motivated by greed," she said. "There were only about three or four guys that were really sympathetic to me; the rest were just interested in the money. If I had really been in that situation I would have been very disappointed."

This Week The SGA Circus Responds

The recent critique on the SGA by Mr. Roy Roberts is, to put it mildly, a narrow viewpoint. First, Mr. Roberts sees our legislative body as an organization filled with influential members whose "only" concern is to promote self-interest! Is it self-interest when Bert Stewart spends eight hours a day to promote the best entertainment seen in Jacksonville in four years and produce the first concert to make money in as many years? What interest is promoted other than congratulations from a few sincere people? Is it self-interest that motivates Sindo Mayor to spend two weeks ordering, sorting, moving, and renting refrigerators for dormitory students? Where are the concerned senators desiring to promote the common good at these times, surely the "loud-mouthed clowns" have not barred their participation here? When the comment is made, "I am disgusted and discouraged with the performance of some of our senators" I can only think that I am disappointed with the lack of some of our senators" I can only think that I am disappointed with the lack of performance by SGA senators.

On the second point concerning the corruption of the Student Government Association into a circus where parliamentary procedure has been abandoned I must disagree. It must be remembered that the senate is composed of students, not politicians, and as such many are knowledgeable of the intricacies of parliamentary procedure. To use this method with people unfamiliar to its practice often creates confusion, disruption, and in the long run proves ineffectual.

Finally, our informative critique on the SGA tells us of the "mere attempts" of the Senate to legislate and channel the budget towards helping the students. To clear the air on this subject lets look at the record; first, this SGA has paid bills not only incurred by this years administration but also bills left over the past two years. This senate has given money to promote the building of a school radio station, allocated money for lectures, honorariums, SCOAG, student services such as movies, concerts, a coffeehouse, and even uniforms for cheerleaders representing our school. Actions have also been taken to extend library hours, alleviate parking problems, improve dormitory living conditions with further plans for a free weekend long concert and many other moves that show a deep concern for the overall welfare of the students and the school.

With Mr. Roberts I agree that our budget is adequate, our resources great, and our potential mounting but this is due primarily to the conscientious few who have worked so hard only to be reprimanded as promoting self-interest.

Modern Technology Gives Rise To Better Business

Modern technology has come a long way since the use of the wheel. Man now has the know-how to put another man on the moon, but cannot yield a candy bar to a hungry consumer.

There is no room for errors when dealing with a man's life. Every second is accounted for in our space program. Instruments must be precise. When only a 10-cent candy bar or 25-cent Coke is at stake, the instruments can be somewhat crude and ineffective.

When it is profitable, man can be a little on the stupid side. Giving someone something for his money and realizing a small profit is good business. Taking his money and giving him nothing is "better business."

Better

"Better Business" is practiced throughout the campus of JSU. The smooth operating machines always seem to jam, stick, or lock-up each time you drop in a coin.

Modern science has still another frontier to conquer—the great "American vending machine."

While visiting his ancestral country, the cop, who has a wife and a few children in America, falls in love

Dr. Calvert: A Romantic

By Michael Orlofsky
STAFF WRITER

Benjamin was certain Dr. Calvert was a Romantic—even before they met he was certain. He was told Dr. Calvert thought his sequestered house a Romantic place. This bit of information, coupled with the fact that Dr. Calvert had written a book on Byron, fostered Benjamin's notion of the man's Romanticism.

"Do you think you're still as much of a Romantic as you were in your early twenties?" asked Benjamin.

Dr. Calvert brightened, "Well, the vital sap does die down as one gets older," and he cough-laughed as he looked at his wife. She was smiling, too.

During Benjamin's and Dr. Calvert's talk she had sat quietly, listening. Benjamin thought that perhaps Mrs. Calvert was so quiet because she felt he had come to speak with her husband and not her. Was Mrs. Calvert that shy, or so schooled in courtesy that she would speak only when it was the best thing to do? As Benjamin wondered about Mrs. Calvert she rose and said she must get ready for an appointment in town that afternoon.

To fill up the embarrassing, momentary vacuum caused by her departure, Benjamin asked Dr. Calvert about his book, BYRON: ROMANTIC PARADOX. Byron was Benjamin's favorite Romantic poet...mainly because he thought Byron's rhymes in "The Vision of Judgement" were pure, poetic genius, and the last stanza of "Written After Swimming From Sestos to Abydos" as being some of the greatest stuff in English..

"I was the first person to take Byron's critical stance seriously," said Dr. Calvert—Benjamin couldn't tell whether he was being facetious or quite earnest in his statement. His voice took on a tone of authority while talking

"I looked at Byron as a critic, and a thinker...his mind was a confused jumble of clear ideas. But, Byron did think fundamentally, you know."

Benjamin nodded docilely.

"BYRON was published in 1935. Every year I get ten or fifteen dollars from the publishers. My royalty is fifteen cents on every copy sold, which means about one hundred copies are sold each year...that's pretty good for a scholarly work. Mostly new libraries buy them."

"...Actually, BYRON was only the introduction to my 1,100-page Ph.d. thesis," he said, mischievously chuckling.

"What was the title of your thesis?" asked Benjamin eagerly.

"THE INFLUENCE OF SHAKESPEARE ON BYRON...it was so long that after a time I began tiring Professor Lowes' patience with it."

Dr. Calvert abruptly changed from the subject of Byron to a description of John Livingston Lowes, followed by a short eulogy. Lowes was a four-foot, eleven-inch expert on the English Romantics, especially Coleridge; his book concerning Coleridge, THE ROAD TO XANADU, is still considered the most brilliant book of its kind in the English language.

"His book influenced me greatly on my work on Byron."

Benjamin, still interested in the thesis, told Dr. Calvert he marveled at writers who wrote on and remained dedicated to a certain subject for years.

"I did become depressed during the time I wrote the thesis," replied Dr. Calvert.

"I began at nine o'clock in the morning and wrote to eleven, then after lunch I would continue writing to night-time. I came to a point though, where I just couldn't write any more...my brain wouldn't function. I talked the problem over with one of my professors and he told me to get on a definite schedule. So I set up a schedule and worked two hours in the morning, and three hours in the afternoon...when the final hour ended I quit exactly where I was. Surprisingly, I got more done in those five hours than in the previous ten."

He told Benjamin he left Harvard in 1922—before receiving his Ph. d. "I was determined not to be financially dependent on mother and father...so I went to teach at Washington and Lee." He left Washington and Lee and returned to Harvard for a year in 1923. Then in 1924, still without completing the Ph.d. program he accepted a teaching position at UCLA. The teaching load there, however, prevented him from enjoying teaching. Although he had assistants to help him grade papers he usually found himself singly correcting the weekly themes of 180 freshmen.

In 1926 he returned to Harvard and completed the requirements for his Ph.d. He graduated in 1928.

During the same year Dr. Calvert became an instructor at Williams College. "At that time Williams College was the wealthiest small school in the country...but it didn't make me rich," he quipped. His salary was never more than $3,000 a year.

While at Williams he contracted tuberculosis. He spent five months in a sanatorium before the infection was arrested. During the same time the Depression was becoming more and more serious. "I thought the Depression soon would be over, and that I might return to Williams. But by 1932 Williams was forced to fire half their faculty; so I had little chance of regaining my position. I was out of a job—with no hope much of getting one."

During the years from 1930 to 1933 Dr. Calvert divided his time between Chapel Hill, N.C., and his birthplace, Pittsboro, 25 miles farther south. At Chapel Hill he spent much of his time participating in the academic and social life of the University of North Carolina.

"I made more friends at Chapel Hill than anywhere else in my life - mainly because I've been too busy ever since." In Dr. Calvert's voice Benjamin noticed a trace of fluttering embarrassment over the imparting of a rarely told sentiment.

"But why, after teaching at schools like Williams, and Washington and Lee, did you finally choose Jacksonville?" asked Benjamin.

Jaxmen Ease Past Saints

After trailing by 20 points with 13 minutes left, team pride and the team of Herman Brown and Andrew Foston eased Jax State past St. Bernard, 94-91.

The Gamecocks outscored the Saints, 25-7, in a five-minute spurt to catch St. Bernard at 83-all with 4:39 showing.

With two seconds remaining, Harlan Winston clinched the win with two free throws.

After the game, coach Bill Jones said, "I know it's trite to say 'team pride' can win a game, but this is exactly how we won tonight. We didn't really tell them anything at halftime (when the Jaxmen trailed 53-37) except that we couldn't win until they made up their mind to go out and do the job.

Herman Brown, a transfer student from Clarendon Junior College in Texas, paced the Jax attack with 34 points, but received help from Foston, who recently became eligible.

Coach Jones said of Foston, "He did a great job clogging up the middle on defense, and had several key baskets."

Trailing Brown in double-digit scoring were Eddie Butler, 12; Harlan Winston, 11; and Foston and Ron Money, 10 each.

Top scorers for the Saints were Luke Fencher with 21 points, and Eddie Lapsley and George Jackson with 14 each.

Led by seniors Bruce

Stewart and Ron Money, the Jaxmen--trailing by 15--rallied to clip Nicholls State in overtime, 93-88.

With 11:40 showing and a 15 point deficit, Bill Jones needed someone "who would get the ball to moving, get the tempo going, take it down inside and run (the offense)"--star benchwarmer Bruce Stewart.

Aside from scoring 12 points, Stewart fed Ron Money who garnered 32 points, 10 of them in the overtime, and 17 rebounds.

After the score became knotted at 78-all as regulation time expired, the Gamecocks outscored the Fighting Colonels, 15-10, to win the game.

Other top Jaxmen were Herman Brown with 20 points and seven rebounds, and Andrew Foston with eight points and 14 rebounds.

The Colonels' scoring attack was led by Jay Carlin with 20 points, Shelby Hypolite with 18 points, and Richard Polk with 15 points.

Jax 69, SE La. 65

Scoring two field goals in the last 19 seconds, the Gamecocks squeaked by Southeastern Louisiana, 69-65.

After exchanging the lead several times during the night, the Lions moved to a 65-62 lead via Mike Rance's field goal at 1:31.

With 1:14 showing, JSU's Herman Brown missed a shot, pulled down his own rebound, and converted a three-point play to knot the score at 65-all.

While working for a last second shot, Howard Hatcher was fouled, but missed at the charity line. The ball was snatched by Ron Money who gave the Jaxmen a nine-foot field goal and the game.

Money and Eddie Butler, a recent GSC "Player of the Week" paced the Gamecock win with 16 points each and 13 and 12 rebounds respectively. They were ably assisted by David Webster who made 13 points and by Herman Brown who grabbed 10 rebounds.

For the Lions, Ray Richard garnered 16 points, Mike Rance--who led Southeastern Louisiana with 20 rebounds--totaled 11, and Freddie Lucas had 10.

Webster Sidelined

Last Tuesday junior forward David Webster suffered a broken wrist in practice and will be sideline at least two weeks, according to Dr. John Duncan, the JSU team physician.

After learning of the injury to the 6'8" transfer student, coach Bill Jones said, "Dave was just starting to find himself and we were counting on him for strength under the boards and scoring punch down the stretch.

University Inn?

University of Miami (IP) - How would you like to live at the University Inn? "I love it. The rooms are great, we have color television, maid service and a pool right outside our doors," a new University of Miami student said here recently.

"The rooms are great. It is really nice to come back from classes and find your bed made and the room straightened up," another student commented. University Inn manager and owner, Bob Weiss, has had no complaints so far. "We are more than pleased with the students staying at our motel. Their conduct has been just great," Weiss said. "The University Inn is giving a special rate on the students' rooms. The cost is being subsidized by UM," University Housing Director James Grimm said. "The students are paying the same rate at the motel as they would be paying at the dorm, although UM has been paying extra."

George Marlin, a graduate student, has moved into the University Inn to coordinate student activities between the motel and the university. "He has gained the respect of all the students and without him the situation at the motel would have been unsuccessful," Weiss said.

"Rental rates have increased 25 to 50 per cent for off-campus living and students are coming back to the dorms," Grimm said. He said UM's rent for campus living has gone up, but is not as high as off-campus living. The number of upperclass students wanting to live on campus has also increased tremendously, he added.

Calvert

"I came here because I was offered the job," he said matter-of-factly.

"...And how did that come about?"

"I applied to the Southern Teacher Agency hoping they could locate a teaching position for me. The first job offer I received also required that I teach Sunday School. I turned the offer down because I couldn't guarantee my orthodoxy."

"Later, the agency informed me that an opening was available for an English teacher at a small college in Jacksonville, Ala. I accepted the position, though in a state I had never been in and a school I never heard of."

The talk ended for the day. Dr. Calvert excused himself saying he must take his wife into Anniston; Benjamin reciprocated by replying that he had a class to attend.

They agreed to meet again in the next few days.

Yale President Calls For Sweeping Changes

Yale University (IP) - President Kingman Brewster, Jr. of Yale University has called for sweeping changes in the financing of higher education in this country to draw on federal funds without the danger of political interference and loss of liberty in the colleges and universities.

His plan: "I would permit any student enrolled in an accredited institution to receive an advance of up to estimated room and board costs, say $2500 each year, from an authorized private lending institution."

"The lender, upon documenting the transaction to the Treasury, would be entitled to reimbursement, dollar for dollar with a negotiable government bond or note. The student would commit himself to pay a small percentage of his adjusted gross income as an addition to his income tax liability for however long it would take to make the Treasury whole.

"Whether the institution raised its tuition or other charges would be determined just as it is now: competitive judgment in the light of all available resources. Students in turn would be making the same judgments about costs and value received which they now make. Institutions would have exactly the same incentives they now have to maximize private and public support."

Buckingham Nicks

Michael Murphy

Buckingham Nicks And Murphy Perform

Her hair falling in a long, tangled heap of curls, Stephanie Nicks stepped onto the platform followed by Lindsey Buckingham and the other three members of the Buckingham Nicks. Sometimes serious, but always loud, the band left twice only to be called back by an ecstatic crowd.

Before the last song, Ms. Nicks told the audience this was the band's last tour. The audience seemed displeased with the announcement, but cheered loudly when she said, "Lindsey and I are joining Fleetwood Mac."

As far as the group's music is concerned, they're good. They perform well together, and their harmony was near perfect. Ms. Nicks has a unique voice that stands out above all else. As she stood center stage, staring into the audience, she sounded almost demonic at times. But the crowd loved her.

Warm-up musician Michael Murphy and his band brought a different sound. He sang of Indians and snow and wild horses. Sometimes his songs were nice, but he and the two members of the band who sang harmony with him didn't always harmonize. As a matter-of-fact, they seemed to hit too many off-key notes.

One of the highlights of Murphy's spot was the introduction of an unusual instrument to the JSU campus. Murphy introduced a friend who had worked on a Sioux Indian reservation in the Dakotas. The man had with him a Sioux love flute, an instrument hand carved from reed. The instrument was difficult to hear at times, for it is meant to be played outside when you feel close to nature. Even so, the soothing notes that came from the flute seemed to charm the audience who had, only a minute before, been clapping and cheering Murphy on.

As the Murphy band left, members of the audience began yelling for more. Someone seated near me yelled, "He's just gotta come back." That seemed to be the sentiment of the entire audience.

Even though Mathews Coliseum was only about half-filled, the concert was a success. Almost everyone cooperated by not smoking, eating or drinking in the coliseum area, conduct that demonstrates students are pleased with the top name entertainment that is coming to JSU.

In the three-year period which followed the murder of President Kennedy and Lee Harvey Oswald, eighteen material witnesses died-six by gunfire, three in motor accidents, two by suicide, one from a cut throat, one from a karate chop to the neck, three from heart attacks, and two from natural causes.

An actuary, engaged by the London Sunday Times concluded that on November 22, 1963, the odds against these witnesses being dead by February, 1967, were one hundred thousand trillion to one.
