Inauguration will be new beginning for administrator

New beginnings will be part of the feature of the inauguration—for Jimmy Carter and Mrs. Julia Snead, director of Alumni affairs.

For Jimmy Carter it will be the beginning, he hopes, of economic recovery and improved international relations. For Mrs. Snead, who will be attending the inauguration ceremony and the swearing in, it will be putting the past year's difficulties behind her.

MRS. SNEAD, who worked on the Carter campaign, says she needs a few days away from Alabama, the scene of many unpleasant times including surgery and the burglarizing of her home. And what better way to begin the new year than to attend the Presidential inauguration.

"I think this is going to be interesting, especially since this is our first 'modern' president," said Mrs. Snead.

There are also many events surrounding the inauguration that she is anxious to see, especially a showing of the "archeological discovery of the century," the treasures of King Tut, which will be on display in the Senate Foreign Relations room of the Dirkson Building.

AT THE KENNEDY CENTER, Mrs. Snead also plans to see Leontine Price in the American Folk Ballet. Another highlight of her visit to Washington, says Mrs. Snead, will be the Interfaith Prayer Service at the reflection pool at the Lincoln Memorial.

"The last time I was there I attended a candlelight service for Lyndon Johnson the night after President Kennedy was assassinated," she said. It was an occasion she won't forget, she said.

Six inaugural parties will be going on in Washington, and Mrs. Snead plans to attend the one at the Mayflower Hotel. It will not be the party for Southern Carter supporters, but the Mayflower is "my favorite hotel in Washington."

OF COURSE, she'll be attending the swearing in at 11:30 a.m. inauguration day.

"If I get to do all that," said Mrs. Snead, "I'll have considered myself to have had a very delightful time."

BSU pays tribute to King

The Jacksonville State University Black Student Union dedicated its second annual tribute program to the memory of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. The program, billed as a success by the BSU, was held Jan. 11, in the Student Commons.

A mixture of singing and speeches, the event started with the singing of the Black National Anthem, "Lift Every Voice and Sing". Then the guests were greeted by Dr. Montgomery and Johnny McAlfee.

Providing music for the occasion were the Thankful Baptist Young Adult Choir of Piedmont, Jesse Maxwell, and Harlan Winston. Following the music, Deborah Heard gave a history of Dr. King.

The keynote speaker for the tribute, Rev. Samuel Pettagruie, pastor of Sardis Baptist Church in Birmingham, was introduced by Cedric Fuller. Pettagruie, also the president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) chapter in Birmingham, gave a warm talk of Dr. King, which the audience cheered with a standing ovation.

Immediately after the speech, two more solos were performed. Then Rev. Aniton, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Jacksonville pronounced the benediction.

NEA to meet

The Student National Education Association will meet Wednesday, Jan. 19, at 4 p.m. in room 108 of Bibb Graves. All students interested in education, and especially those now student teaching, are urged to attend.

Student intrigued by Mimosa's portrayal of J'ville campus

By DAVID FORD
Assistant Editor

There are many different reasons around campus as to why a student chose to attend JSU. However, one freshman probably has his own reason that is by far more different than any other. That person, Carl Jones, chose to come to Jacksonville after being intrigued by the 1974 edition of the "Mimosa".

Jones, born in Selma but reared in Chicago, saw the yearbook while visiting relatives in Selma. When asked specifically the part of the yearbook which helped him decide to select this school over others Jones replied, "I don't know. From the pictures and all, it just looked like a nice place. Besides," he continued, "I like it down here."

One thing about Jacksonville that Jones found a little disappointing was the lack of recreation. "In Chicago, there's always some place to go, things to do, like the parks and stuff," he commented. Another contrast between the two cities is transportation.

"In Chicago," he said, "buses run everywhere. Besides, everything is so close together that you don't need a car." However, this has not proved to be an obstacle that can't be overcome, and he has adjusted to the ways of a small Southern town. Whenever he wants to shop, he either grabs a ride with friends, or walks to his favorite shop on one square.

Actually though, Jones does very little shopping or socializing. Instead, he concentrates on his career, that of a dietician. His reason for deciding on such an occupation reveals his practical side. "People are always going to need to eat and find different ways of preparing food," he explains, "and there will always be people sick in hospitals that will need someone to cook their meals." For this reason he feels that becoming a dietician will place him in a job market which will always have room for steady employment and advancement.

Although he doesn't become actively involved in politics, Jones has observed changes in the political tone of the country, and especially in the South. He feels that people who once stood in school-house doors to prevent the admission of blacks have abandoned ultra-conservative views for more moderate positions. In keeping with this feeling, he thinks that prejudice is lessening. "People here are friendly to me. They're all right," he says.

The friendliness still doesn't cure an occasionally case of "home sickness". "Sometimes I get so depressed that I just want to go home," he says. But those moments of depression usually clear away as soon as he joins friends.

CARL JONES

Or sometimes he likes to listen to his favorite music to take away his troubles. "Mainly," he states, "I like disco-type music."

Besides other students and music, he also has plans that might combat "home-sickness" in the future. He plans on recruiting some of his friends from Chicago to attend school at Jacksonville. "I won't build it up to be something it's not," he says. "I'll just tell them the truth. I think they'll like it here." When asked if he would decide on Jacksonville again, after being on campus, he replied "Yes. I think I would."

Students seek radio licenses

(NOCR) WUVA, the University of Virginia's independently chartered, student-owned radio station, has applied to the Federal Communications Commission for a commercial open-air FM license. If the license is granted the station would, reportedly, be the first student-held FM license. Currently the station broadcasts on a carrier current AM license and a cable FM license.

Because the university provides free on-campus space, WUVA falls under the jurisdiction of the school's Media Board. But the FCC license would require the station to be autonomous from the school and not be under the jurisdiction of any university government body.

WUVA attorney Richard Marks said the station has requested the school's Board of Visitors to alter the Media Board so that WUVA can satisfy FCC regulations. He said, "I am optimistic because I feel WUVA is beneficial to the campus community and I would hope the university recognizes that contributions the station makes to that community." He added that the station is anxious to retain its closeness with the school.

At the University of Minnesota a student-operated city-wide FM station moved a step closer to reality last month when UM President C. Peter Magrath recommended to the trustees that student fees be raised 50 cents to help fund the proposed $1.3 million station.

Princeton's clubs parallel frat trends

(NOCR) At Princeton clubs are the social units comparable to fraternities on other campuses. And just as the fraternities are enjoying a resurgence nationally, so are Princeton's clubs booming in popularity. Last year's sophomore "bicker" (rush) drew 670 students compared to 490 the year before. And there are indications that the peak is yet to come.

The return of the clubs has caused the Princeton Food Services an unexpected drop in revenues of about $100,000 since one selling point of the clubs is their non-institutional type meal service.

The membership crisis the national fraternities experienced in the late 1960's and early 1970's caused some changes that are likely to remain permanently in the fraternity system. One such change is deemphasizing the image of exclusivity. The deemphasis was brought about partly by social pressures against elitism and by financial problems; many houses simply were forced to pledge any warm body with enough money to pay dues.

This trend away from exclusivity is also evident at Princeton. Five "non-selective" clubs—members prefer to use the word "open"—recently held their own membership drive apart from regular club bicker.

Officers of the open clubs say they want to change their clubs' images of being a second choices for those who didn't make the selective club they wanted.

Trend reverses in cohabitation

(NOCR) About 30 per cent of the U. S. college population has lived with a member of the opposite sex outside of marriage. But, after peaking between 1971 and 1975, the cohabitation trend has reversed itself, according to Ohio State University Associate Professor of Sociology Nancy K. Clatworthy.

A survey by Clatworthy shows that the reasons students live together without marriage aren't that different from the reasons students marry. And the partnerships aren't that much different from legal marriages except for the negative aspects, such as the pressure of parental disapproval.

"The vast majority of live-feel their relationships are beneficial," says Clatworthy, "but specific questions indicate they really aren't as happy as they say they are. Perhaps one reason is that live-ins don't get from their relationship what they think they will: security." And that, she says, may be the reason cohabitation is becoming less popular.

According to Clatworthy, many women 26 and older are breaking off their "live-in" relationships. She notes that most married women of that age have had their last child and she speculates that older women are beginning to get a bit panicky about not having any children and don't want to have them outside of marriage.

"When live-ins break up it is almost identical to divorce with the same emotional

Art society forms at J'ville State

The National Art Education Association was organized in October, 1976. The main goals of this group are to promote professionalism in art education and to raise and maintain a high standard of quality of art education on campus and in the community. Dr. Burn, the advisor, comments, "The organization will give the students an opportunity to become involved in the profession as teachers. They will receive a magazine from the National Art Association which will keep them abreast of what's going on in the field of art."

Projects for the upcoming year include State Art Education Association workshop and the Regional Youth Art Exhibit. Dr. Burn is particularly excited about the Regional Youth Art Exhibit which the students will sponsor to celebrate Youth Art Month. The show consists of the work of elementary and secondary students in the area and will open in Hammond Hall Gallery, March 20.

Officers of this club are Rick Pugh, president; Anna Simon, vice president; Leesa Mince, secretary; and Dutch Carr, treasurer. Members include, Constance Currier, Teresa Weldon, Susan Henshaw, and Susan Thrash.

Brazilian studies English, art, the American people

By VESTA COLEMAN
Often seen in the halls of Hammond Hall is a smiling Brazilian, named Sonia Maria de Moraes. She is a 21-year-old living in the International House this year and majoring in art. She came to the Jax State campus to broaden her knowledge and ideas about artistic designs, the English language and the American people.

Before coming here, Sonia lived with her journalist father and her mother, who teaches elementary school in Rio de Janeiro, located on the east coast of her South American country.

IN ADDITION TO attending the Instituto de Belas Artes (Institute of Beautiful Art), there, Sonia taught reading and writing to pre-schoolers near her home for three years. This teaching experience is one that is sorely missed by Ms. de Moraes, mainly because of her love for children. She says this love probably stems from the Brazilians' close family ties, and as a result, she would like to have a house full of children of her own to love and take care of.

After being notified of her acceptance into the International House program, Sonia Maria "dreamed all the time about coming here" and now says she "feels so free here, and (is) really learning a lot."

Through her studies here, she has found that the student-teacher relations are better here than in her tropical homeland and wants to give recognition to her "kind and warm-hearted" teachers.

WHEN ASKED ABOUT other interests, Ms. de Moraes responded enthusiastically in naming the many sports in which she participates, including swimming, ping-pong, and running. But, a noninterest for her that she discovered last semester was football. As she put it, "They will kill me when they read this, but teaching profession. The members undertake service projects to benefit the campus and community. Kappa Delta Epsilon points up teaching as a profession and as a way of living.

Refrigerator Rentals

All students who have not renewed or returned their SGA refrigerators from last fall are asked to contact the SGA office this week and make an effort to do so. The refundable deposit can be reapplied to rental for the spring semester. Last day for refrigerator rental is Tuesday from 12 to 4 p.m.

Food Committee

The SGA Food Committee is seeking interested, responsible students for membership. This committee works in cooperation with Food Service Director Larry LoVoula in planning menus, monitoring student needs related to food service, and suggesting policy changes in the existing system if necessary.

All interested persons should apply in the SGA office before Jan. 21.

BSU

The Black Student Union will meet tonight, Jan. 17, in room 108, Bibb Graves Hall.

Circle K organizes chapter on campus

With a new semester starting here at JSU, a new club is also being organized on campus. The Circle K Club was organized at the end of fall semester with the help of Gadsden State Junior College's Circle K members and their advisor, Steve Means.

Circle K is a coed extension of the Key Club, a high school organization. It is a service organization composed of college students who work together to do such things as benefitting needy or afflicted children and adults, helping solve problems confronting students here on campus and serving the community in any way possible.

Circle K is sponsored by Kiwanis International and is located on more than 700 college campuses across the United States and Canada. Twenty clubs exist in Alabama alone.

The first official meeting of Circle K in Jacksonville was Dec. 6. Elected as officers were Cedric Fuller of Huntsville, president; Danny Barbour of Atlanta, vice-president; Laura Henderson of Fairhope, secretary; and Phillip Albury of Cedartown, Ga., treasurer.

"Circle K doesn't propose to have all the answers to the world's problems, but it does offer college students a direction to travel to combine and share their efforts toward alleviating some of the problems they do see around them," said a Circle K spokesman at Jacksonville State.

Some of Circle K's projects are blood drives, consumer food price checks, roadblocks for cancer donation collections, fund raisings for Multiple Sclerosis, Cystic Fibrosis and other diseases.

The next Circle K meeting will be Jan. 20 in Room 108 Bibb Graves.

Don't get hung up on exams!

Part I

(From AAP Student Service)

"Depend on it, sir, when a man knows he is to be hanged in a fortnight, it concentrates his mind wonderfully."

Samuel Johnson might well have been talking to students about pre-examination time and that gnawing feeling of foreboding! Examinations can concentrate one's mind wonderfully, but in a positive, practical manner that will not only increase your learning potential but help your performance.

The key to both success in exams and enjoyment of college work lies in the ability to use time wisely. A pattern of good study habits begins as the term begins, but nowhere do you need them more than at examination time. You will be able to handle exams with a minimum of stress if you observe these six suggested steps:

1. Make a term study plan;
2. Use good review techniques;
3. Develop a confident attitude;
4. Organize pre-exam hours;
5. Pace the exam carefully;
6. Reassess your work.

Make a term study plan

At the beginning of each term develop a daily schedule. Allocate time for class preparation, study, review, recreation, eating and sleeping.

A study area is important. Have on hand the texts, study guides, outlines, dictionaries and reference books, paper, pads, notebooks, that will allow you to concentrate without interruption.

Study and review differ from each other. Study refers to learning something for the first time. Review is critical because it strengthens your retention of this new knowledge by viewing it as part of a whole.

Forgetting takes place most rapidly right after learning. Review and recall, therefore, are more effective soon after study. After each class go over the main points for 10 to 15 minutes to reinforce them in your mind.

Don't overtax your memory or stamina. Research shows that most people can absorb and retain just so much knowledge at one time. It's important to study day by day, week by week. Each period of study should be no longer than one or one and a half hours, followed by recreation.

Take legible class and study notes. Throughout the term underline your textbooks and make pertinent notes in the margins.

Use good review techniques

Preparing for exams is largely a question of review. The time needed is not as extensive as some students think, provided you have been consistent in your work. You should be able to review for weekly quizzes in no more than 15 minutes, for a mid-term hour exam in two to three hours, and for a final exam in five to eight hours.

Your preparation for a final exam should be carefully scheduled into the two weeks prior to exam day. Organize a plan that does not interfere with your regular study and on-going classes.

Plan your review systematically. Use textbook chapter headings or your instructor's outline as guides. Go from chapter notes to class notes, recalling important headings and ideas. If some points are unclear, then reread the textbook. Don't plan to learn something for the first time.

Making summary notes is helpful. In four to eight pages, outline the main points of your detailed class and text notes. This helps reinforce the major ideas and important details.

Summary notes can also serve as a self-test toward the end of your preparation for exams. Put a sheet over each page and slowly uncover the first heading. See if you can remember the main points listed there.

Try to predict the exam questions. Be alert throughout the term to the emphasis instructors put on certain topics, ideas or aspects.

Ask your professor what he recommends for pre-examination work. Use these comments as a guide but don't try to outguess him or her.

Group reviewing can be helpful. Limit discussions of significant points and possible test questions to 30 or 45 minutes, with no more than four or five people.

Avoid cramming. If you have followed a regular schedule of study and review, you should not have to cram.

... to be continued next week.

problems. The only difference I can see is that they don't have legal fees," she said. Most "live-in" relationships break up for the same reasons marriages do: boredom, incompatibility, personality and sexual conflicts. However, there are the added factors of a partial commitment by one partner and the lack of legal bonds.

Surprisingly, only 15 per cent of the partners in a "live-in" arrangement see it as a prelude to marriage and approximately the same percentage actually do marry their "live-in" partners. She said that the marriage of people who lived together before marriage are less successful but statistically this is hard to pinpoint. However, she said, married couples who have never lived together generally have a more positive attitude and have fewer arguments, fewer financial disagreements, fewer sexual problems, and less outside pressure.

football is very strong and very crazy playing. I didn't understand it, but just like boxing, they hit each other too hard!"

After this school year, Sonia will return to Brazil to complete her last year at the art institute. During that year she will also teach reading and writing to the Amazon people of her land in order to help them form a civilized colony of educated people. She then hopes to study architecture, and eventually become a truly great artist and designer.

Student Dietetics Assoc.

recognized by senate

A new organization was approved at the first meeting this spring of the SGA Senate.

The Senate approved a motion by Cedric Fuller to recognize the Student Dietetics Association as an official organization on campus. The purpose of the organization is to convey information on food and nutrition to students.

IN OTHER BUSINESS, Larry LoVoula, Saga Food Service director, informed the Senate that as of Jan. 9 students will be ticketed if their cars are parked anywhere from Tredaway Drive on up to the Gamecock Cafeteria parking lot because the parking situation has prevented supply trucks from getting into the area. LoVoula said his employes have special stickers on their cars, and anyone without a sticker will automatically receive a ticket.

The SGA officers and business manager, Joe Mucciolo, clarified the refund on the refrigerator rental question that came up at the meeting. According to Glenda Brackett, co-chairperson of the Dorm Committee, some residents of New Dorm have complained that they were not informed they had to return their refrigerators by a specified date in order to receive a refund.

SGA president Mike Humphries said the date when the refrigerators are due back is specified in the refrigerator rental contract, and further announcements about the date were made in the Chanticleer, on WLJS and on the Gamecock sign.

He said a refund will not have to be made unless the refrigerator is returned by the date specified in the contract. However, the deposit is still good if the refrigerator is renewed.

IN OTHER BUSINESS, the Senate approved a motion by Stan Graham to place Kappa Alpha fraternity in charge of the spring blood drive.

"We feel as a group we could do something for the good of the blood drive in so far as getting people out . . . We could benefit the campus as well as the blood drive," said Graham.

Cinematics Arts chairperson, Joy White, also informed the Senate that the movie nights have been cut to two days—Wednesdays and Thursdays.

Attention, students!

The movie schedule for the Spring Semester has been revised and differs somewhat from the schedule published last fall in the SGA Handbook.

The dates, times, and movies to be shown have all been effected so it is very important that you make note of the changes.

Women gymnasts improve

By DAVID FORD
Assistant Editor

The JSU women's gymnastics team has come on strong in its second year of existence. Currently the team stands at 2-0 with wins over the University of Florida and Jefferson State College. Florida, the regional champion last season, may have been a turning point for the women this year.

According to Coach Robert Dillard, "If we continue to improve and not have any injuries, we should be a contender in the state and region this year." Dillard also feels that the next few meets should signal what kind of season the women will have.

Last year, the team's first, the gymnasts compiled a record of 5-3 with no experienced performers. "This year we have girls who have competed before. The experience factor is very dominant in women's gymnastics," says Dillard. "This year's team is much farther along because the girls have competed before, and the freshmen we picked up were already competing."

Of the nine girls on the team, Dillard feels that no one stands in front of the others. "We have pretty good depth. We have potential for great gymnasts, but I can't make that decision for them. Right now we're pretty constant, which is what it will take to win," he explains.

In the two previous events, Amy Arnts and Cathy Balk, both freshmen, have performed extremely well.

Women

Dillard also said that two other freshmen, Becky Vedel and Eva Blastow, have been improving. Carole Pitts, the only senior on the team, won the beam at the meet in Florida, and Melinda Haywood, a junior, won the parallel bars against Jefferson State.

Besides Dillard, the team has an assistant coach,

Hollie Durbin, and the pianist, Mike King.

Concerning the turn-out for future home meets

Dillard stated, "We're expecting a good crowd. Students with ID's are admitted free, and we're trying to let everyone know about the events."
