Energy commission organized on campus

By SUSAN ISBELL
Assistant Editor

Staff writer Blake Pettus found out that there’s some high flying going on at the Jacksonville and put his findings together on page 2. There’s also some high flyin’ of another sort going on in Montgomery: the AEA is really spreading its wings, Editor David Ford talked with Dr. Paul Hubbard, executive secretary of the AEA, and put everything in an article on page 6. But, the Gamecocks waited too late to take off last week and got their wings clipped a little, so Sports Editor Jerry Rutledge and his staff had to include the first loss of the season in all of the sports wrap ups on pages 10 and 11.

Energy commission

Organized an Energy Crisis? If so, will it affect Jacksonville State University? Yes, there is a crisis, and the university has organized an Energy Commission to cultivate the guidelines to JSU’s energy consumption reduction.

"A large fraction of the public behaves as if there were no energy problem. This summer gasoline consumption has been setting records. Sales of automobiles during August were at a peak for the month. Use of electricity has been at an all-time high. Consumption so far this year is more than 7 percent above that of a year ago. The present behavior is consonant with polls which indicate that a majority of citizens are uninformed about energy problems. Only 48 percent of the people know that we must import oil to meet needs," according to Philip H. Abelson’s article in Science Magazine.

Certainly, there is a problem here at JSU. Dr. Stone and some other people who are concerned with the financial stability of the university began to observe closely the utility bills, and from their observation they realized the university was working itself into a corner.

For the month of August, the electricity bill alone was over $9,000. It is interesting to note that the school was not in session from Aug. 9 until the last week in August.

"Unless we sit down right now and reduce consumption of energy on this campus, whether we are talking about electricity, or natural gas, or other energy sources, unless we can cut back on how much we have to buy from Alabama Power Company or Alabama Gas Corporation, then we are going to keep paying more and more money each year for our energy and that’s going to take a bigger part of our budget each year so we have less to spend on our faculty, students, and salaries," commented Dr. Howard Johnson, geography instructor and chairman of the JSU Energy Commission.

Also serving on the Energy Commission is Mr. James McArthur in charge of operations and maintenance: Dr. Pu-Sen Yeh, engineering instructor; Mr. Robert Trathen, accounting instructor, and Mr. Larry Smith, financial aid director. The Energy Commission (now functioning as a steering committee) met Monday, Oct. 10 with President Stone, vice president, Montgomery, and the university's steering committee for Oct. 23 in session from Aug. 9.

The Energy Commission hopes to include representation from the students and from the high school and elementary school complex. They also want to establish a major sub committee that would include representatives from each building on campus.

The steering committee feels that the Energy Commission should have student representation. One person from the SGA will be sitting in as a member of the Energy Commission, the Steering Committee wants to encourage the students to create their own Student Energy Conservation Committee. The members of this will elect someone from their committee to sit in on the university level committee, permitting two student representatives on the main commission.

"We have a list of energy conservation measures that have been used successfully at a number of other universities around the country. The things these universities did have been grouped into three categories," stated Dr. Johnson. The first category consists of measures that the university can take to save energy at virtually no cost to the university. One example: To turn off the unnecessary refrigerated drinking fountain which runs all winter long. There are items to add 10 per cent further into the second category: To reduce energy consumption by 15 per cent. If we utilize the items on category (2) we can add 10 per cent further reduction depending on how economically feasible the items are under category (3). We could reduce consumption up to 30 per cent by the time we work our way through all three categories.

"Energy conservation and who want to work on the student energy commission can do so by filling out the Student Energy Commission Coupon. Energy Commission Chairman Dr. Howard Johnson commented, "With 7,000 students on campus, the attitude of the students toward the program is going to determine its success or failure. If the students ignore the program or refused to cooperate with the program, it is unlikely that we will be able to reduce energy consumption as much as we have to."

United Nations Day Tea

Each year the International House observes United Nations Day with a tea and open house. This year's program is scheduled for Oct. 20 from 3-4:30 p.m. at the International House. All area citizens are invited to attend. Making the preparations, from left, are: Michael Ohman, Sweden; Mohammed Hamid, Pakistan; William Parker, Birmingham; Jasmin Eslait, Colombia; and Yasunuki Otauka, Japan.

Announcements

Class meetings Wednesday

Classes will meet Wednesday night, Oct. 19, to nominate students for class favorites, beauties, Mr. and Mrs. Friendly. All meetings will be held on fourth floor of Student Commons Building. Tony Killen is elections chairman. Class presidents will preside over the meetings. Class presidents for this year are senior class, Angela Kincaid; junior class, Cedric Fuller; sophomore class, Joni Wingert; freshman class, Steve Taylor. Schedule for classes to meet: Seniors will meet at 7 p.m.; juniors will meet at 7:30 p.m.; sophomores will meet at 8 p.m.; freshmen will meet at 8:30 p.m.

Students are urged to attend their class meeting.

Interested in a health career?

All people interested in a health career except nursing and medical technology should meet with the health careers committee in room 121 MAH this Thursday at 7:30 p.m. If you are contemplating a health career, other than nursing or medical technology, it is urgent that you attend this meeting.

Pilot training, parachute jumping available

By BLAKE PETTUS
Staff Writer

The Jacksonville Municipal Airport, located in south Jacksonville, has been operating as a flight training center for one year. Charles Murray, the airport's owner, has been involved with flight training for 14 years. Along with Murray, other flight instructors are Donald Vickers, Rick Daniels, Joe Carrague, and Carlton Johnson. About 40 people are presently taking flying lessons at the airport on a regular basis. After receiving a private license, veterans can take lessons on the Veteran Training Program with a reimbursement of 90 per cent paid by the government. Anyone can take flying lessons. To get a complete private license a person must have 40 hours of flying time. With 100 hours a person can receive his commercial license.

The airport owns eight airplanes and two helicopters, and maintains six privately owned airplanes. The airplanes consist of Cessna 150's which will seat two passengers. This is the world's most popular flight training airplane and travels at a speed of 100 miles per hour. The other type of planes are Cessna 172's which will seat four passengers, Piper Arrows, Seneca's and Lark Commanders. The Seneca is a six-passenger, twin-engine airplane and can fly as far as Miami or Chicago non-stop.

On weekends Murray Aviation has a skydiving program, directed by Ray McBurnettof Rome, Ga. The cost of jumping from an airplane is $45 which pays for five hours of ground training, rent of the airplane, parachute, and other equipment. After the first jump, each jump thereafter costs from $2 to $10 depending on the altitude. Although most of Murray's planes can ascend as high as 10,000 feet, the first jump is usually from about 3,000 feet.

Businesses have greatly increased their use of small aircraft over the past 10 years in travelling across the United States. The use of small planes has generally been more convenient than the use of larger planes because the smaller ones can transport a person to small towns whereas a larger plane cannot.

Flying as a sport is becoming more popular in this area through airshows which display aerobatics and precision maneuvers such as drawing patterns in the sky. The show is a spectacular and colorful event which can be enjoyed by everyone.

Psychology Club offers tutoring

A tutoring service for all psychology students is now being set up. Members of the Psychology Club will offer tutoring services in most psychology courses. Concentration will be on statistics and introductory courses. A small fee of $2 an hour will be charged. Interested students should contact Al Turner Service coordinator or Dr. Donald Patterson.

The Psychology Club met Wednesday, Oct. 12, to elect officers for the fall semester. Mike Wood, president; Brenda Baird, vice president; Pat Morrison, recording secretary; Cathy Ratliff, correspondence secretary; John Boyd, treasurer; Charles Stewart, list ombudsman; and Jennifer Hudson, 2nd ombudsman. Faculty sponsor is Dr. Donald Patterson.

Guest speaker at the meeting was Dr. Gardner, faculty member, who suggested a trip to Chattanooga's Mental Institution in the near future.

Any psychology student interested in joining the psychology club must first submit an application of membership to the club president, attend two consecutive meetings, and be voted on by charter members. The membership fee is $2 every semester thereafter.

The next meeting will be held Monday, Oct. 17, at 3:30 p.m. in room 217 of Ayers Hall.

Sociology instructor enjoys diversity found in teaching

By LENHARDT FITZ
Staff Writer

"I always wanted to be a teacher," says Mrs. Carolyn Dunaway, sociology teacher, "but I didn't know what I wanted to teach. I got into teaching with my first child at Huntington College in Montgomery."

Mrs. Dunaway comes from the south Alabama town of Elsaula, known for its traditional courthouse square and ante-bellum houses. "When I went to Auburn I experienced culture shock, and every time I go there back to southern Alabama I feel like an outsider. However, it was not as much Old South as Mississippi. It is so desolate with some 'Gone With the Wind' scenes thrown around."

"My father was a general practitioner as was my grandfather and great-grandfather before him. The family tradition ended when my mother gave birth to girl twins—Ann and I, my sister. Ann and I think that my father was a major influence on my life by living a life of service to others. I think of teaching as a service profession." A turning point in her life as well as that of her twin sister came when they were seniors in high school. "Ann and I used to dress alike until then. We began to suffer identity crises and began to stress our individual interests. We still remain close, though."

"I added that they were never jealous of one another because each was so like the other."

Mrs. Dunaway enjoys her work. She believes that some of the most rewarding moments in eight years of teaching has been when a sociology class helped a person to decide to return to school. "Sociology is boring only if you don't like people. To be fair in grading is my objective. You cannot design a completely valid test, however, because of the great differences in individual perception. I get an intrinsic reward from education as well as monetary remuneration."

Theodore R. Dunaway first taught at Huntington College after getting additional training at Auburn and the University of Alabama. "I'm a marginal person, because I am caught between the two major factions of Alabama culture and society." When her husband, William, became principal of Amston High School in 1971 to '72, she became an instructor in the new Sociology Department at Jacksonville State University. Then she left for a short time so that her husband could work on his education doctorate at Ole Miss. She returned in 1974 and has been in the classroom since then. She enjoys the diverse student types that trod to her office and classes, although she confesses that it is sometimes hard to find a common field of interest so that she can give examples to classes which include would-be evangelists, veterans, fraternity people, athletes, beauty queens, and intellectuals.

She is presently working on her doctorate at Auburn University and hopes to soon obtain the degree. This has to be done in the summer so that her husband, a teacher in the Education Department, and her six-year-old son can be provided for.

After she receives this degree she hopes to travel, although she has never been able to really do anything although she has lived in most of the major cities of the state, as well as Oxford, Miss. Despite her stays in several places over long periods of time she believes that the Jacksonville area is the most beautiful that she has ever seen. She thinks that the sociologists at Jacksonville, despite their dissimilar opinions, work well together and that the Department of Sociology is interested in helping the students.
AEA is strong force
because of necessity

By DAVID FORD
Editor

Last week, Dr. Paul Hubbard, executive secretary of the Alabama Education Association, was in Anniston and I had the chance to talk with him on such topics as the AEA becoming a labor union for teachers. He refused to admit that the AEA is a labor union but readily admitted that the AEA does have the characteristics of a labor union, in that it lobbies the state legislature about such matters as teachers' salaries and benefits.

If education can be compared to a business, the administration of education has worked itself into a corner, much as business has worked itself into a corner with recognized unions. A union organizes in an establishment when workers feel that they have been exploited. Teachers in Alabama have traditionally been underpaid and have felt it necessary to, in effect, beg for a salary increase. At the same time the teachers have often been required to conform to the wishes of a dictatorial type administration official, knowing that the next classroom could be the unemployment office. This charge of course would be denied, but I have known people who have been forced to look for themselves in that predicament.

One teacher in the Jacksonville City School system did not have her contract renewed. She claims that it was because of a disagreement over a grade change for the child of a JSU faculty member. The official reason is that she was hired for one year only, to replace a teacher who had taken a leave of absence.

Whether or not the failure of the Jacksonville Board of Education to renew her contract was valid will be decided in the courts. The AEA has filed a suit in her behalf.

In years past, the teacher would not have returned to the school and that would have been the end of the matter. Even some members of the AEA do not agree with everything that organization does, but it is an inevitable fact that when a group of workers, in whatever field, feels they have been exploited, the next step is an organized force. Education officials, like business leaders, have brought this force on themselves.

National health care

Never ending battle between politicians

By LENARDT FITTE
Staff Writer

It has been the great discovery of both the Conservative and the Leftist politician to use the promise of the alleviation of human suffering as political capital. The majority of those statesmen who call themselves "conservative" say that they are against governmental supervision of medicine, but go to such places as the naval or army hospitals when they are ill. The same for those statesmen who are styled "liberal." No matter how much the Right demands "welfarism" and "socialized medicine" it must be remembered that Reich Chancellor Otto von Bismarck, the father of the modern conservative idea, was among the first to force compulsory health insurance on the German workers in 1884. The rabidly anti-socialist dictator of Hungary, Admire Miklos Horthy, reorganized his nation's medical care scheme in 1927—almost 30 years after Austro-Hungarian Kaiser Franz Josef proclaimed it.

Long before it became fashionable in polite circles to admit that the fledging Labor Party could seize Parliament the Liberals and Conservatives were battling each other for votes with "social security" and universal suffrage schemes that became the foundation of the British welfare state.

Lloyd George, the liberal prime minister, finally got a National Health Insurance Act passed under the prevailing system of "war socialism" which eroded the already precarious position of the old voluntary health organizations.

Compulsory medical care becomes the tool for demagogic political crusades, pro and con. It is the tendency of the modern corporate state to collectivize the basic economic

Letters To The Editor

President Carter recently made a statement on the insignificance of the Panama Canal as an asset to American defense saying that last year only a handful of American warships passed through the zone. He failed to cite how many vessels would pass through in a time of national conflict when naval traffic through the zone would increase many fold.

He maintains that half the American warships today are too large to pass through. He fails to mention the fact that most supply ships and light war vessels are able to transcend the canal and these would supply much logistic support during a crisis. There is also contemplation of the building of a hydrofoil fleet which could pass through the zone regardless of the size of the vessels.

Many people fail to remember the value of the canal during the last war when Allied vessels passed through while Axis warships sailed around Cape Horn. President Carter has showed an interest in creating a sea level canal through which large, high speed vessels could pass.

He thinks this could be negotiated after we sign to the existing canal over to Panama. Considering the Marxist influence in Latin America this could hardly be logically assumed.

Looking from an ethical point of view the canal is in Panamanian territory but it was built by American engineers and workers, many of whom died during construction of a disease which was conquered during that same period by an American doctor. However, if we are going to give back all land that was supposedly ethically acquired by the U.S. let's start with the continental U.S. First we should ask Spain to reoccupy Florida. After giving Spain a good whippin' and a few

AEA plans to fight repeal of utility tax

By DAVID FORD
Editor

Dr. Paul Hubbard, executive secretary of the Alabama Education Association, was in Anniston last week to address the Calhoun County Education Association.

During his talk, Hubbard mentioned a time some eight years ago when he was in Anniston to address a group of educators about a problem confronting education in Alabama, specifically the problem of finances. Hubbard said, “Those were the days when we thanked God for Mississippi, because Mississippi kept Alabama from being 40th in the country in education.”

Shortly after that meeting in Anniston, and others around the state, the state legislature passed a group of revenue bills for education which included the four percent sales tax on utilities.

Gov. Wallace has just proposed that the utility tax be repealed, and Hubbard says that repeal “would be devastating for education in Alabama, and we would once again return to the era of ‘thank God for Mississippi.’”

If the legislature does repeal the tax, it is estimated that the revenue loss for the state’s educational trust fund would be about $70 million next year.

Hubbard indicated that Wallace’s decision to push for a repeal of the tax is politically motivated and stated, “It is my honest opinion that the Governor of Alabama was goaded into that position primarily by one particular news writer, one who publishes a magazine called ‘Alabama.’ This particular writer who happened to have been a member of the cabinet of the administration which placed this tax on brought up on the last two issues that the tax was the solution to the problem of education in the state. Each time such a proposal has been made, it has been met head-on by educators, especially through the AEA, and has been limited to $36 million.

This action has caused some people in the state to charge that the AEA has become a special interest group with enough political clout to control the legislature. This fact was made light of when Hubbard was introduced as a man who has been called the real governor of Alabama.

Hubbard did not deny that the AEA is a special interest group, but he discounted the thought that the term “special interest” is a negative one. See AEA, page 11

Unitarian fellowship opening doors to public

Rev. Pat Green, from the Birmingham Unitarian Universalist Church, will deliver a sermon entitled, “The Good News of Our Unitarian Universalist Faith” Sunday, Oct. 23, at 7:30 p.m. in the Anniston Museum Auditorium.

Green’s visit will mark the opening to the public of a Unitarian Universalist Fellowship organized this past March by members from the Anniston-Jacksonville area.

Rev. Green will be followed on Oct. 30 by Dr. Grady Nunn, also from the Birmingham Church. His talk is entitled, “Private Religion.” The hour and place will be the same. The public is cordially invited. Dr. Robert E. Brewer at 435-4575, will be glad to answer any questions relating to these meetings.

Unitarians and Universalists trace their heritage to the early Christian Church and the Reform movement. The two groups formally merged in this country in 1861, creating the Unitarian Universalist Association. This international association, serving more than 1100 churches and fellowships around the world, has the following as its bond of union:

The members of the Unitarian Universalist Association, dedicated to the principles of individual freedom, in seeking the following:

1. To strengthen one another in a free and disciplined search for truth as the foundation of our religious fellowship;

2. To cherish and spread the universal truths taught by the great prophets and teachers of humanity in every age and tradition, immemorially summarized in the Judeo-Christian heritage as love to God and love to man;

3. To affirm, defend and promote the supreme worth of every human personality, the dignity of man, and the use of the democratic method in human relationships;

4. To implement our vision of one world by striving for a world community founded on ideals of brotherhood, justice and peace;

5. To serve the needs of member churches and fellowships and to extend and strengthen liberal religion;

6. To encourage cooperation with men of good will in every land.

The Unitarian Universalist Association has no formal creed. Individual congregations, therefore, vary widely in such matters as worship service, religious beliefs, and religious practices.

The Unitarian Universalist Fellowship in this area, organized in March of 1977, has the following for its statement of purpose:

With a desire to strengthen and perpetuate individual freedom of religious belief, we join together in Unitarian Universalist fellowship for the improvement of self and humankind.

Officers of this group are Dr. Robert E. Brewer, president; Mr. David Cary, treasurer; and Mrs. Mari Carroll, secretary.

Anyone seeking fellowship and in agreement with the statement of purpose above is welcome at meetings.

and socializing cultural institutions. The natural regimentation society under the corporative state leads to the control of public health and private well-being by either a state or corporate bureaucracy.

Underprotection for both sick and well eventually results, with the devaluation of the coinage and currency. A higher cost of living and greater controls upon group hospitalization plans result, and there is a tendency to underprescribe or over-prescribe drugs or treatment. The tendency toward hospitalization for even minor ailments with a pill-filled, their pill-filled, hypothesis lives, a socialized medical plan will evolve.

It suits the Medical Industry to have a compulsory health scheme, in no far as they will control it. Everyday they tell us to take this or that medicine, or have annual or even monthly checkups if possible. Mass inoculation, no doubt may halt the ravages of an epidemic, even if the highly touted virtues of the vaccine is at best spurious. In hospital the patient, even if newly afflicted, may be in jeopardy due to the mechanized treatment system. The sentimental notion of the terminally ill man or woman learning the art of death in the privacy of his own home has been replaced by an erratic pip on the oscilloscope.

Yet we all think we want the blessing of good health, while we worry and work ourselves into the grave over it.

—Jimmy Sasser Jr.

dollars we took this territory. Let's give the Louisiana territory back to the Indians who were robbed of it by Napoleon. Of course we paid cash money for it but if you bought a Continental Mark V for ten dollars wouldn't you think it was improperly acquired by the seller. Next, let's return the western territories to the Mexicans whom we so gallantly overran while fulfilling our manifest destiny. That doesn't leave much.

The point: it is preposterous to consider giving a defense asset such as this one to Panama. The Latin Republics have generally been about as stable as the contents of the Hindenburg. We should not make Panama the apple of the Communists' eye by giving her this canal. If we want the Panamanians to be done after the construction of a sea level canal.

Campus hostess plays vital part in social functions

By ARNETTA WALLIS
Staff Writer

"If I can be of service to the University and help in any way to spread good will, then I am thankful." These are the words of the jovial Mrs. Margaret Wellborn, JSU hostess.

Mrs. Wellborn, a member of the JSU family, lives here on campus. She is also a member of Epistle Pi Chapter of Alpha Xi Delta Fraternity. Greeting guests with outstretched arms and a warm heart, Mrs. Wellborn surely exemplifies our slogan that JSU is "the friendliest campus in the South."

Scrubbing the pots and pans washing the dishes— hurry, scurry, rustle hustle—the constant life of Mrs. Wellborn. But these are only insignificantly means to a more enjoyable end, according to the cheery Mrs. Wellborn.

For five years, she has represented the university and hosted numerous luncheons and banquets in honor of celebrated guests, on both the national and state level, who have visited our campus.

Last year Mrs. Wellborn served approximately 6,000 guests at receptions held on the beautifully decorated third floor of the Houston Cole Library where the atmosphere is stately, the setting lovely. The floor, decorated by Mrs. Wellborn and friends (especially Mrs. George Haywood and Mrs. John Chilepaleich) is also used for seminars.

Faculty members also enjoy the atmosphere of the club—for social enjoyment, reading papers, enjoying the view or simply to rest and to relax. The aim of the club is to make the guests' visit as pleasant as possible.

When asked if she had a position, as such, Mrs. Wellborn replied, "Yes, from general flunky to the director, the dishwasher, the cook, the hostess and I love every single phase of it. There is no part of it that I dislike."

On such an active campus with so many extracurricular activities and so many people sponsoring activities, some go unnoticed. Such a person is Mrs. Wellborn, JSU hostess.

Variety of cultures found in International House

If a student wanted to learn about the cultures of more than 2% Asian, European, and South American nations he could do so without leaving the JSU campus, without sitting through a lecture, and without wading through reference books in the library. Where would he go? To our International House where students from Pakistan, France, Belgium, Guatemala, Panama, Sweden, Japan, Bolivia, Peru, Italy, Brazil, Colombia, Taiwan, Holland, Germany, England, Finland and Vietnam can give you first hand knowledge and information.

The International House is not a dorm. Fondly referred to as "the zoo", it serves as a center for 40 people as diverse as humanly possible. Its purpose is simply to enable students to have access to different people, cultures, customs, and beliefs. The International House is sponsored by the International Endowment Foundation. The International Endowment Foundation is a non-profit, tax-exempt organization which has as its main purpose the financial support of the International House program. This organization is made up of business, professional, civic, and religious leaders from throughout the state of Alabama. It was through the efforts of this group that funds were provided to construct the first International House at Jax State in 1964. Twenty scholarships are awarded annually to foreign students. Of the organizations which annually award funded scholarships include the Alabama Federation of Women's Clubs, Rotary International (District 666), Alabama Rotary Club, and Alabama - Guatemala Partners Scholarship.

Officers of the International House are:
1. left to right, Byron York, SGA representative; Judy Maynor, secretary; Shilakka Makela, chairperson; and Ronald Walton, co-chairperson.

Dian Lawler
Voice instructor performs for different audience now

BY SUSAN ISBELL

"Arty people are so different...they're actually giving their gift to someone else," commented Miss Lawler, the talented JSU voice instructor.

Miss Lawler began teaching voice at JSU in the fall semester of 1976, and since has shared her musical gifts with music majors and minors. The giving of her gift is obvious to her students, one of whom said, "She makes class fun, and makes me feel at ease."

Miss Lawler holds a B.A. from Converse College in Spartanburg, S.C., an M.A. from the University of Illinois. She has always loved to perform. How much? "I used to sing to my father's cows and horses. The horses would run, but the cows just looked dumb," stated Miss Lawler.

During her 1971, 1972, 1973 summers between college and fall semester, she performed in the Brevard Music Center, an opera workshop. The summer of 1974, she visited Austria, working with AIMS (American International Music Students). Miss Lawler has participated in several beauty pageants while attending Converse College in South Carolina, she was crowned Miss Spartanburg, S.C., 1974.

The following year, she competed in the Miss South Carolina beauty pageant, where she won the talent competition and was chosen as one of the 11 finalists. Her radiant smile is expressed in her music as well as in her teaching.

Geography Club hits new depths

Last weekend the Geography Club went on its second trip of the semester, an overnight camping venture to Little River Canyon. The group started out at 6:30 on Saturday morning under rainy skies. After arriving at Little River Canyon everyone helped to set up the tents and stow the gear inside. Then the two truckloads of hikers drove to the top of the canyon for the eight mile walk back to the campgrounds. Despite the rain, which continued to pour all day, every one enjoyed the hike, especially the magnificent scenery of the canyon.

The rain showed no signs of letting up as the hikers returned to camp, so it was decided to cut the trip short and return to Jacksonville. After everyone had had time to change into dry clothes, an informal meeting was held at Bob Elam's house, so everyone could pick up their gear. The hamburgers that were to be "the best" were eaten along with potatoes and corn. After a slide show the meeting was adjourned.

The next meeting of the Geography Club will be on the 19th of October at 4 p.m. at 326 Bibb Graves Hall.

Gamecocks drop first game 27-20

The matchup was a real attention-getter, a battle featuring two of the South's finest Division II football teams.

No. 3 Jax State versus No. 7 Tennessee Tech. Something had to give, the Gamecocks did.

The Gamecocks rallied after falling behind for the second week in a row. The previous week's rally ended in a 14-10 come from behind win over SE Louisiana. This time the Gamecocks fell short, suffering loss number one, 27-20.

Coach Jimmy Fuller made no excuses in describing his team's effort. "We have a good football team, probably the best offensive team we've played this year," Fuller said. "They were well prepared and executes well."

Fuller felt that mistakes had a lot to do with the Gamecocks' loss, the same type mistakes which had plagued the team all year. Two major distance penalties when the Gamecocks were threatening early, prevented an early Jax State lead.

"I've said all year long that if we continued to make those mistakes against a good football team, we can't play with the yardage they had," Fuller said, referring to the fact that the Gamecocks were down at one point by 27-6. "I want to give credit to our team for fighting back like they did and coming close to winning the football game in the end."

The game, played on artificial turf at Tech's Overall area had almost 2 inches of rain preceding the game. "This was a real attentiongetter, a battle," Fuller said. "I want to give credit to our team for fighting back like they did and coming close to winning the football game in the end."

The Lady Gamecocks keep fighting for victory after victory as they are finally getting the recognition that they deserve. Oct. 6, the Gamecocks hosted a Tri-Match with Montevallo and Alabama A&M. The Gamecocks totally dominated the game as Pam Murdock and Anna Recuart a freshman led the way with their hard driven spikes. The Gamecocks won the match 15-4, 15-2, 15-6 after the match as they went A&M and won 15-4, 15-5, 15-4.

The Lady Gamecocksphone home an important victory against SE Louisiana. The Lady Gamecocks are now tied for the best in Independent League standings.

The Gamecocks try to get back on the winning track against Division I opponent St. Bernard College. No. 3 Jax State versus No. 7 Tennessee Tech. Something had to give, the Gamecocks did.

The Jax State Soccer Team ran its season record to 2-0 with a fine 7-0 victory over Southern Benedict, formerly St. Bernard College. The soccer team kept intact an unbeaten streak which dates back two years. Coach Maged Sandouka got fine performances from his entire team and was especially pleased with his team's offensive effort. "I feel that we have one of the most highly coordinated offenses in the South. I believe if we keep making strong performances we may soon get NAIA sanction."

- Scoring for the soccer team were as follows: Mike Stringfield of Korea, 1 goal; Albert Ruiz of Bolivia, 2 goals; Kuda Mansary of Africa, 2 goals; Javier Prado of Bolivia, 2 goals.

Soccer team tops St. Bernard 7-3

The next home game will be Tuesday: Delta Tau Delta vs. Pi Kappa Phi; BCM vs ROTC. Gametime set at 7:30 at St. Bernard.

The Moccasins return 4 lettermen from their 6-4-1 club of a year ago. Offensively, Chattanooga returns the QR tandem of Tony Merendino and Doug Elstad who shared quarterback duties last year. Their defensive linemen have two all-Americans returning in center Garfield Wells and guard Pete Puelara. The Moccasins are coached by former pro standout Joe Mortavio.

Game time is set at 7:30 at Paul Snow Stadium.

The Moccasins stand 4-1 on the season at this point. "Chattanooga has a fine ballclub. They've lost only one game and their coaches feel that they have one of their best teams in years," Coach Jimmy Fuller remarked when asked about the Moccasins. "I'm expecting a tough battle. At least we've got this one at home," Fuller said.

They also have their own activities. Cultural seminars are held each month, as well as talent night which took place Oct. 12, open house coming up Oct. 24, and periodic parties and dances. Most important, however, is the interaction between the foreign students and their Alabama neighbors. Culture exchange is emphasized as much as academic achievements. More than anything else, the International House is a house of learning of brotherhood, of understanding, and of accepting.

AEA has in the state and commented, “Sitting in this room tonight is enough talent to impact any political race in this county.” He went on to say that there are teachers in every city and county in the state. He urged the group to donate money to AVOT e political arm of the AEA, so the organization can compete with other special groups and get if AEA can not compete with the other special interests, “then they will get what they want; and we’ll get what’s left.”

SGA

The dorm directories will not give combinations out. 2. Saturday mail delivery—Jacksonville Post Office refuses to deliver due to mail being stolen and they were accused. 3. Pannell Hall needs locks for doors. 4. Cable TV. 5. Furniture for dorms. 6. Repair TVs. 7. Vending machines need upkeep and service. 8. Telephone in Dixon Hall. These were unanimously passed by the senate. Pat Long initiated an amendment that all boys dorms be allowed to have phone jacks the same as Sparkman Hall. This was voted on and passed by the senate. President Hall made a motion which read: “I move that the SGA allocate money for a bus for the Troy State game.” President Hall explained that buses have been rented out before and did poorly. He also stated that the cost was $400 and that was also to pay if students do not participate. After much discussion it was decided that Glenda Brackett did not allow students to ride the bus. "This is the interaction between the foreign students and their Alabama neighbors. Culture exchange is emphasized as much as academic achievements. More than anything else, the International House is a house of learning of brotherhood, of understanding, and of accepting."
