Democrats retain control of state

Fob James Receives his mandate

By DAVID FORD

Democratic candidates swept the state in last week’s general election. Led by gubernatorial candidate Fob James, the party retained its tight control of the state government.

Although not stiff competition, Republican Guy Hunt surprised many observers by garnering 25 percent of the vote on what could be termed a low-key campaign. Estimates vary, but the figure most often quoted for campaign expenses of Hunt is $500,000. In spite of a small scale rush of media advertising in the waning days of the campaign, Hunt spent most of his efforts on personal appearances across the state.

By contrast, Fob James ignored previous trends in state politics and continued his media blitz following his victory in the Democratic Party primary. In the past, winning the Democratic nomination equated winning the general election.

Donald Stewart Breakfast to Senate

By DAVID FORD

What began in the early months of last year as a series of breakfasts with influential people in the state ended last week in the election of former State Sen. Donald Stewart to the U.S. Senate.

Bucking all odds, the 38-year-old legislator of Anniston told people at that time he planned on being the next senator Alabamians sent to Washington. That prediction proved true, though not in the way Stewart originally planned.

At the time of his decision, Stewart was attempting to succeed retiring Sen. John Sparkman. His chief opponent would probably be Gov. George Wallace.

Former state Supreme Court Chief Justice Howell Heflin entered the race. Wallace announced he would not be a candidate. Congressman Walter Flowers of Tuscaloosa announced he would run. The state’s other senator, Jim Allen, died unexpectedly of a heart attack.

When Gov. Wallace appointed the senator’s widow, Maryon Allen, to fill the seat until a special election, (See STEWART, Page 2)

SGA meeting 'calm'

By MIKE MOON
At the Nov. 9 meeting of the SGA Senate a number of reports were made by various committees and three Senators introduced new bills, one of which would change the procedure the SGA follows in introducing motions. The meeting was considerably more orderly and less controversial than the previous week's meeting.

The meeting was called to order by Vice President Joe Macciole at 7:38 p.m. The minutes were read and the roll was called. For the first time holders of proxies had to present written statements of proxy from the Senator they were to represent.

During the committee reports a special report was given by Gene Wisdom and Marcus Hammonds on a Student's Rights Seminar they attended in New Orleans. Both expressed some disappointment in that several of the lectures were general in content. However, they also stated that other lectures were very interesting and informative and added that the SGA would receive some cassette and various written materials on the legal rights of students. The motion for a dead week which had been passed the week before was brought up during old business by Marty Moore. The bill, which had been introduced by Moore, called for no tests to be given during the week of homecom ing in the fall and during the week of spring splurge. President Keith Peinhart stated that motion had been sent to the Liaison Committee and would have to await action by the committee.

Three motions were introduced under new business. The first introduced by Jeff Brussard concerned the introduction of new motions to the SGA Senate. The motion called for all motions introduced at future SGA meetings to be written out in long hand and turned in to the Secretary before the meeting. The motion also stated that any new motions which might arise during a meeting would have to be written out in proper form before action could be taken by the Senate. The bill passed with little opposition.

President Peinhart moved that the Senate approve Doug Moon as parliamentarian and Ed Davis as co-parliamentarian. The motion was approved.

Next Marty Moore brought this motion to the floor. It calls for an open cut policy for all 300 level and above courses and the retention of the 15 percent attendance requirement on 100 and 200 courses. The premises behind this motion was that students taking 300 or higher courses be more mature and experienced to know what is required of them, while freshmen and sophomores who take 100 and 200 classes may not yet have an understanding of the requirements for college level study. The motion caused quite a bit of discussion and was finally tabled.

Williams retires from Nursing

By CHERYL J. ANDREWS
Dr. Mary Margaret Williams, first dean of the Lurleen B. Wallace College of Nursing, was recently feted with a retirement reception. The eminent Dr. Williams, fondly referred to as Dean Williams, whose experience in the nursing profession extends over a period of 40 years, retired after 10 years of service to the Jax State College of Nursing.

Presented to the College of Nursing at the reception, at which approximately 100 persons were in attendance, was a portrait of Dean Williams to be hung within her walls in commemoration of Dean Williams’ years of dedicated service. According to Mrs. Clyde Wilson, Admissions Counselor for the College of Nursing, who was in attendance at the reception, “Dean Williams simply said, ‘Thank you.’”

Honing the BS degree in nursing at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio, Dean Williams later earned the PhD degree from Stanford University. One of her latest appointments was to the Emory University College of Nursing, where she served as professor and director of the Graduate Program of Nursing from 1963-69.

One of the highest honors that can come to anyone in the nursing profession is to be named to the American Academy of Nursing. Dean Williams was one of the Charter Fellows named to this academy when it began in 1973. She was the only person to be honored from the state of Alabama that year.

Dr. Rosemary Tolliver, a 1976 graduate who is now employed at Howard University Hospital in Washington D. C., made the following comment. “I would like to extend my gratitude and appreciation for all the things made possible for me by Dean Williams, the school and I shall am mere her. I wish her the best of luck and good health.”

AAA gives list

Afro American Association (AAA) representative Calvin Sledge and his colleagues represented minority students Thursday, Nov. 2, at 3 o’clock in the Office of Public Relations. Also present were Dr. Bascom Woodward, Vice President for University Services, Dr. Theron Montgomery, Vice President of Academic Affairs, and Mr. Jack Hopper, Director of Public Relations.

The meeting proceeded with an open discussion. It was suggested that Black cultural studies be offered and more minority instructors be hired. The students added, “This would help student - and administration communications.” “Black studies had been offered in the past,” stated one of the administrators, “but was discontinued due to a lack of interest.”

Sledge suggested, “Now that there are more minority students, there is a cumulative interest.” It was favored that a meeting with the English, Economics and Sociology departments be scheduled to discuss further the feasibility of the previous proposals. As for the minority instructors, “Most well qualified Black instructors preferred living in the larger cities, which did represent a recruiting problem,” asserted one of the administrators. Mentioned, also, was the position of minorities in the lesser preferred job. Dr. Woodward agreed to look into the matter further.

Several other grievances were discussed: those pertaining to impartial judges in contests and a lack of minority counseling.

The minority students reaction to the meeting seemed to be that it not only allowed their voices to be heard but that suggestions were made to help increase minority representation as well.

Where is Route 73?

During the summer months a position was advertised nationwide by JSU for a well-qualified cartographer (one who draws maps). Dr. Thomas Baucom, a graduate of Jacksonville State University, accepted the position.

Baucom, who received his bachelor's degree from the University of North Carolina and Mike, reside outside of Jacksonville. Their son, who both play in the Jacksonville High School band, are quickly learning about campus life. At the beginning of the school year, Baucom plans to teach the Geography of Palestine, aimed not only at understanding the Holy Land but also as an opportunity to share his knowledge of the Bible, and where it is applied.

How to make zeok dikeuknodel

by GABRIEL MEIXNER

This is a special Austrian recipe.

"Zwelcold" means a sort of small plum and "nokold" means something that you can only find in Austria and Bavaria.

A "nokold" in general is nothing else than a ball of dough prepared by dough - there are many recipes - which is finally put into boiling water.

If you like to make "Zwelcoldnokold" you will need:
- instant potatoes
- make a soft dough out of it by adding milk, water, salt, and flour,
- an egg makes the dough smoother. Now the dough needs to be kneaded.
- After preparing the dough with your hands, form a ball in your hand and press the dough with your other hand until it is a flat, round piece of pastry.
- The dough sticks less on your fingers if you put flour on your hands. Now put one small plump on the middle of the dough and wrap the dough around the plum with the dough is totally covered.
- Meanwhile you put some water on to boil. After all the "nokolds" (the plum with the dough around it) have been formed, they are put into the boiling water; the water should go on boiling, but not too rigorously. After some time (five to 10 minutes) the "nokolds" are ready for the next process.
- Melt some butter in a pot and put unsalted bread crumbs and sugar in it and saute it under continuous stirring.
- When you take the "nokold" out of the boiling water you should put them immediately in this mixture.
- Roll them around, so that they are all covered with unsalted bread crumbs and sugar. Then put them on a nice plate and serve them hot with sugar.
- Instead of plums you may also use apricots. The pit can be substituted by a piece of sugar to make the fruit sweeter.
- I hope that it will turn out well when you try it.

The Sigma Nu's also sponsor a "nookold" hunt in the spring for the children from our area that has been an annual tradition. Maybe you've seen a student at a distance with an arm load of books and some other kind of oddity you just couldn't make out. If you happened to pass close enough, you noticed, or you thought you noticed some kind of work of art (a painting, sculpture or something). You might have thought, "That surely is silly for a college student to be carrying around, or maybe it's some kind of initiation ritual and he is being forced to carry it." Then again, you might have thought, "That poor student has reverted to a more secure time in life and has his security blanket with him."

Well, have no fear. If you watched closely and long enough, they probably went into the art building. Now you think, "If that's art I'd better stay away because I surely would feel silly making that." If this was your line of thought and you're planning to enter the field of education, you'd better stay out of elementary education, because this type of course is required. It is course 611: Art For the Elementary Teacher.

The course provides an understanding of the artistic capabilities and needs of children and a knowledge of art techniques, art media and teaching methods for art. It provides an opportunity to prepare lesson plans properly for art and to demonstrate student-oriented projects.

The objectives are:
A. To give the classroom teacher a knowledge of basic visual art problems, techniques and media as they relate to the needs and education of children;
B. To provide the teacher with essential competencies in lesson planning and working with student materials utilised in the elementary school classroom.
C. To introduce the classroom teacher to current developments in the philosophy and methodology of art education;
D. To develop the ability on the part of the student to analyze a work of art critically and develop a rationale for aesthetic judgments.

The description of objectives of the class come from Dr. Holmer 611 Elementary Art class. He assigns his students outside projects on the elementary level. Some of these may be a homemade bird feeder; a science project; a toy; a painting of a flower; a sculpture or a painting. All this depends on the grade level involved but is used to help teach and make the day more interesting for the student.

So there you have it. The next time you see anyone around the art building with something you think is a little weird or childlike, look again. Think back for a moment on your elementary school days. Did you do anything like that? If you did, you know how interesting the day was and if not, you missed out on some fun and learning in school that would have contributed to your aesthetic development.
U.S. in Iran?

Pro

By MAURICE BOWLES

The United States Government should pay more than passive interest to the events taking place in Iran. The repercussions that will take place in that country should its present government be overthrown would be felt world wide. The Russians, it can be said for sure, are carefully scrutinizing the internal affairs of their next door neighbor.

Iran's geographical location gives it a strategic importance. Already an oil rich nation itself, the largest oasis of a thirsty world's oil suppliers are within a stone's throw of this country. The Soviet Union which borders on the north, would gain and control thereby that could shut off virtually all the world's future oil resources.

The United States has more to lose than oil supplies.

Iran possesses our super secret Phoenix missile, the F-14 supersonic fighter, and other military secrets that would be detrimental to this country's defense.

This is not to say that the present government in Iran is totally acceptable. Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavics has anything but a democratic government. His autocratic tactics have reached worldwide fame. But he is in a 'damned if you do and damned if you don't' situation. In trying to modernize his country, he is buffered by traditional Islamics that oppose social reforms, while leftists insist he is not reformatory fast enough.

The powerful Moslem leader Ayatullah Khomeini, exiled in Paris, is leading the revolt. He has made clear his intentions of severing ties with the United States should his faction successfully overthrow the Shah.

The Russians would certainly take advantage of another cozy relationship.

The United States cannot permit this situation to arise. The country is of too great an importance to let it fall the way of Angola and Vietnam. Although military intervention irritates a deep craw in the stomachs of many Americans, it should be considered by our government. This would not be an act of imperialism but one of survival.

It is not a pleasant thought, but the situation could eventually negate it. The repercussions of Russian dominance in Iran are a much worse thought.

By DAVID FORD

Editor

Calling for a U.S. military intervention in Iran makes about as much sense as calling the Atlanta police to quash a disturbance in Munford.

No doubt, the Russians are carefully watching the situation. We would watch a similar situation in Mexico. However, the geographical location of Iran does not give the United States the right to act as policy agency for the troubled Shah and his country. If we learned anything from Viet Nam, it should be that we have no need a public relations campaign with the rest of the world and this is no way to wage such a campaign.

To argue that we must keep a friendly Iran because we need their oil is to argue that we must remain dependent on foreign sources for our needs. If Iran falls and severs ties with just the United States, it will hurt us; there is no argument there, but we just do not have the right to enter another country everyday a conflict arises that has the potential of creating a friend.

WASHINGTON—The oil companies sometimes seem more eager to drill tax loopholes than oil wells. This is quite understandable, since the loopholes often bring greater returns than the gusher.

Tax breaks, like oil wells, are often also located in unexpected places. A little-noticed tax treaty with Britain, for example, now soon contain a multimillion dollar loophole—if the oil lobby has its way.

Under the treaty, Britain would pay at least $350 million in tax rebates to U.S. multinational corporations, plus a guaranteed $85 million a year thereafter.

This might appear on the books as British benevolence. But the American taxpayers would pay for it indirectly. In return for the tax rebates to American firms, British companies would get a tax break in this country.

Among the largest beneficiaries of the complicated arrangement would be the international oil companies, who would escape certain domestic taxes. They have pulled out all the stops, therefore, to push the proposition.

The oil firms operate on a more excited level than most other special interests. Armand Hammer, the grand old man of Occidental Petroleum, for example, wrote a private letter directly to Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal.

The letter was intended for Blumenthal's eyes only; but we have obtained a copy. Hammer addressed the letter to "Dear Mike."

The oil tycoons, it seems, are always on a first name basis with political leaders. Enjoyed our chance meeting at 'Tip's office," he began, amiably. "Tip, of course, would be House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill.

The oil magnate brought up the British tax treaty. He explained that he had already given President Carter his views on the treaty during our lunch." He went on to drop two other big names before he finished the letter. He mentioned that Sens. Russell Long, D-L.A., and Alan Cranston, D-Calif., shared his favorable opinion of the treaty provision.

It was a simple, friendly letter. But it may be worth millions to Occidental Petroleum. It has been this kind of quiet, chummy lobbying that has permitted the oil men to escape paying untold billions—thanks to tax loopholes.

Pentagon Pipeline: Some of our fighting men are in a turbulent mood over their headgear. The Special Forces wear green berets; soldiers in the elite task force often wear black berets; and the parachuting infantrymen of the 82nd Airborne Division wear purple berets.

This is too much for Gen. Bernard Rogers, the Army chief. He has issued an order banning all of the distinctive headgear, except for the Special Forces' green berets. The order has raised a howl from the troops who regard their fancy hats as a source of pride.

The general has agreed to listen to their complaints. But our fashion consultants in the Pentagon believe the colorful hat styles are out. There is absolutely no hope, they say, for the stetsons. The general would like to banish all cowboy hats to dude ranches.

The military brass, meanwhile, go on wasting the taxpayers' money. The Army, for example, paid $400 million for a new fleet of tanks with possibly faulty engines.

The lightweight gas turbine engines, experts say, might break down under battlefield conditions. During tests, dirt and sand kept filtering through the engine seals and grinning the engine to a halt.

The Pentagon generals were warned about the defect, but they claimed the tanks were desperately needed. So they went ahead with a $400 million order for machines that can be stopped with a stop and dirt and sand.

—Both the United States and the Soviet Union have agreed that this is in case of war, nerve gas should be banned. The weapon is considered too diabolical for one country to use against another. But Pentagon planners don't trust the Russians. They have ordered the distribution of nearly two million units of nerve gas antidotes to American servicemen—just in case the Russians do not live up to their part of the bargain.

Operation Intercept: Ugandan dictator Idi Amin has launched a sinister psychological warfare program against his own people and those Ugandans who choose to seek refuge in the United States.

Amin's thugs have been stationed at post offices across the country and instructed to intercept and open mail addressed to or from the United States. Money or valuables found in the mail are often pocketed by the dictator's men, and the letters of Ugandan citizens are carefully screened.

Ugandan citizens who write to relatives and friends in the United States sometimes mysteriously disappear.

Under the Dome: One of the last acts of the 95th Congress was a $20 billion tax cut, but it cost the tax-payers a bundle just to report the vote. The final session lasted 34 hours and the rhetoric filled six volumes of the Congressional Record. The cost of printing 40,000 copies of the six-volume edition came to $200,000.

—Sixty employees of the House dining room were all fired for the duration of the congressional recess. They were told they should be rehired when Congress reconvenes. In the meantime, they are out of a job.

HOMECOMING

On Oct. 28, JSU had its homecoming game. To many of the students we had a big victory on the football field; yet, to others we had a bigger defeat in our hearts.

The Chanticleer, established as a student newspaper at Jacksonville State in 1934, is published each Tuesday by students of the university. Signed columns represent the opinion of the writer while unsigned editorials represent the opinion of the Executive Editorial Committee. Editorials do not necessarily reflect the policy of the JSU administration.

Should Washington, D.C., be allowed to have two Senators and one of Congress? The Senate and House of Representatives obviously think that this idea received the necessary proposal by the Congress after the Senate voted 57 to 42 in favor of the idea. It is now up to 38 states to agree with Congress before D.C. will have its Senators and Representative(s).

The U.S. Constitution presently states in Art. 1, Sec. 2 that “The House of Representatives shall be composed of Members chosen every second year by the people of several states” and in the 17th Amendment that “The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each state.” According to the proposed amendment, the District of Columbia shall be treated “as though it were a state . . . for the purpose of representation in Congress, election of the President and Vice-President and Article V of this Constitution.”

Unquestionably this amendment is quite specific and does not have nearly all of the faults that many conservativs are concerned about. One of these problems seen by many conservativs is the completely urban population of the district. As an editorial in this month’s Conservative Digest states the Senators would not have any “acquaintance with the problems of rural life or agriculture.” It seems that the writer of that editorial has forgotten that since the passage of the 17th Amendment and its dispoal of the principle of states’ rights with regard to the election of Senators, they are elected ‘in order to represent the constitutions; in this case all of those constitutants are urban.

Another weak argument is that with only 31 percent of the district’s eligible voters having voted in 1978 (compared to a nationwide figure of 57 percent), the citizens there have not taking advantage of the voting rights that already exist.

Before I am denounced for holding the same irrational objections as those mentionned above, I will point out that I am opposed to the amendment but for a much different reason. The primary objection of this writer to D.C. representation is that, as Sen. S. I. Hayakawa (R-Calif.) was quoted in National Review, “Washington rises or falls with the expansion or contraction of the federal government.” The district’s representatives will have a definite state in whether fedgoy continues to enlarge or shrink since, as the article in Conservative Digest states, “Washington, D.C., is a company town; its prosperity (when its only duty, the U.S. government, is growing).” According to a Heritage Foundation study, district senators would be

CONGRATULATIONS

Dear Editor:

I must congratulate all those who gave their time, their energy, everythign, in making the 1978 homecoming a success. But the question I want to ask you is: what preparations have you made for your homecoming? In case you do not fully understand what homecoming means, then open your ears and listen to this message from The Almighty God Jesus Christ of Nazareth. Jesus said, “It is appointed unto men once to die but after this the judgment.”

When it comes to homecoming, time is eternal. Vanity of vanities says the preacher, all is vanity.

The Bible says “For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God.” If you are reading this article, you are sure you will go straight to Heaven. If your answer is no then I want you to ponder and answer these questions in your heart.

Do you realize you are a sinner before God? Have you asked God to forgive you all your sins? Truly believing with all your heart that Jesus Christ died on the cross for you. Have you asked the Lord Jesus Christ to come into your heart as your personal Lord and Savior? Do you have a personal relationship with God?

Eight years after the death of Jimi Hendrix, the long-awaited release of his improvisational, hard-rock album with jazz overtones is promised for early 1979. This month also will see the release of a biography by poet David Henderson called "Jimi Hendrix: Voodoo Child of the Aquarian Age." January will mark the date for three albums of Hendrix material, one recorded by the New York City Band, one by Salama Players and a third, a disco version of "Purple Haze" by the French group Brain. A 1979 release date is also predicted for a new movie based on Hendrix's life.

Alan Alda is co-starring in two movies due out around Christmas: "California Suite," with Jane Fonda and "Same Time Next Year," with Ellen Burstyn. He also wrote and stars in "The Senator," slated for spring release.

Dinah Shore went to her studio to tape the program marking the fifth anniversary of her show, "Dinah!" (to be aired Nov. 13) and in the place of her expected guest, she found Sonny Davis Jr., who informed her that this was her own special roast. Out came the crowd of well-wishers, including the king of the talk shows himself, Johnny Carson.

Brooke Shields will play a 14-year-old pinball wizard in her upcoming movie, "Till." Dustin Hoffman plays a New York ad man whose wife walks out on him one day leaving him to care for their six-year-old son in his new film "Kramer vs. Kramer." "Midnight Express" is based on the life of Billy Hayes who was imprisoned in Turkey for four and one-half years on drug charges. Brad Davis plays Hayes in this movie.

Elton John was hospitalized last week for chest pains. Doctors ruled out heart problems and said that he was overworked.

Nick Gilder's new follow-up single to his No. 1 "Hot Child in the City," "Here Comes the Night," has been released and is already climbing the charts.

Barry Manilow refused to cancel his first concert in Paris, despite the fact that he fractured his ankle one hour before curtain time. He did his complete show including a disco dance number that is part of his "Copacabana" routine.

"Close Encounters of a Third Kind" is to be released next spring but with an added feature. Director Steven Spielberg is at work in filming several new sequences that will be added to the movie.

Roszak book will speak for the 70s

Theodore Roszak's new and controversial book will speak for the 70s as "The Making of a Counter Culture" spoke for the 60s. He addresses himself to the current frustration felt by so many people over their inability to cope with society so big that the person has become totally lost. In a carefully developed, and brilliantly written analysis, Roszak begins by stating the rights and needs of both the person and the planet. He shows how the trend towards personal self-discovery which is characterized by the humanistic therapies and "new" religions is an expression of those rights.

This move can also be considered a disintegrative force that has risen in response to the present ecological emergency at hand. He then explains how the commercialism of American culture and the individualism of the capitalist world have also contributed to that emergency and to the loss of the flesh and blood reality of the person.

Roszak singles out the city as the most important force which has caused the personal scale of life: the role of the home, school and work in the life of the person, offering along the way a criticism of modern education, a glorification of marriage and the family, and an explanation of the importance of work.

Finally, Roszak turns to history and the monastic orders that kept the world together during the Middle Ages. He analyzes "monastic economics" as an excellent example of the "economics of permanence": small-scale, communitarian, person-centered, economically sound, and highly productive, and then suggests how this model might be adapted in a non-sectarian way to the needs of the present.

"It must no longer be the size of the cities, of factories, or the technological apparatus or the economic product that matters most to us, but the size of our own lives." Roszak predicts that a strengthening of "personalistic" values (growth, fulfillment, autonomy) an...
Program expanded

The National Endowment for the Humanities announced in 1985 that it is expanding its program of research and study fellowships to put new emphasis on helping undergraduate teachers further their own scholarship and strengthen their teaching abilities in college humanities courses. The Endowment will continue to offer fellowships enabling scholars, teachers and others to undertake full-time independent study and research in their fields and to offer them the opportunity to produce works in the various areas of the humanities.

The National Endowment, established by Congress in 1965, is the government's principal agency supporting scholarship in a wide array of academic pursuits and aiding projects designed to foster public participation in cultural and educational programs.

A new division of the fellowship programs (known as Category "B") is aimed at graduate students primarily engaged in undergraduate teaching, in the early stages of their careers. The fellowships, offered for periods of six or twelve months, are designed to free these scholars to pursue studies that broaden their abilities in teaching humanities courses and, at the same time, enable them to make their own contributions to the humanities.

The stipends for this category range up to $2,000 for the six-month fellowship and a maximum of $30,000 for the 12-month study period.

For the 125 fellowships expected to be available in 1981-82, the deadline is June 30, 1981.

The Humanities Endowment is also continuing its Category "C" fellowships which are designed to provide study and research time for scholars, teachers and non-academics whose work seems "likely to lead to significant contributions to humanistic thought and knowledge." These fellowships are also for periods of six and twelve months, with maximum stipends of $10,000 and $20,000, respectively. It is hoped that 125 fellowships in this category will be available in 1980-81. The deadline for applying is June 1. Forms should be available in early 1979. A third category of continuing Endowment fellowships, Category "C" provides opportunities to undergraduate teachers to participate in seminars with distinguished scholars and undertake further work on their own.

Chicago has new album

The title of Chicago's current hit, "Alive Again," is an appropriate one. The accidental death of guitarist Terry Kath nearly put an end to the group responsible for such hits as "Color My World," "Saturday in the Park," and "Wishing You Were Here." But Chicago pulled through—and with a new guitarist, Donnie Dacus, a new producer and a surprisingly different new album, it would seem that they're a band reborn. "The one thing we weren't exploring enough. A lot of the music these days." For the first time, the Chicago album bears a name instead of the usual "Chicago" logo."We've gone through a lot of changes," said percussionist Laudir de Oliveira. "We thought it would be a gas." Chicago ran into them when they were doing the album sessions at Miami's Criteria Recording Studios and they invited the Brothers Gibb to come in and sing on a song written by bassist Peter Cetera. Chicago returned the favor by going next door, instruments in hand, to add horns to some tracks for the Bee Gees' upcoming LP. "It was impossible for them to build a stage big enough," explained De Oliveira.

One of the surprises on the new album is the presence of the Bee Gees on one cut. Chicago returned the favor by going next door, instruments in hand, to add horns to some tracks for the Bee Gees' upcoming LP. "It was impossible for them to build a stage big enough," explained De Oliveira.

As far as Parazaider is concerned, the new projects are only the beginning. "We've really only scratched the surface with our past 11 albums. With the new LP, it's a new beginning for us, for obvious reasons. We've got so much to say..."

The National Endowment for the Humanities announced today that it has changed its Publications Grant program to make more manuscripts available regardless of whether the manuscript was the product of research performed under an Endowment grant. Previously, the Endowment had established an expanded program is open to trade publishers who seek this financial support for university and trade presses. The deadline for the next cycle of grants under the expanded program is Nov. 15. In the past year, the Endowment approved grants to 24 publishers totaling more than $10,000 per manuscript. The program is operated by the Endowment's Research Grants Division.

The Endowment program provides grants to publishers of up to $10,000 per manuscript to make possible the publication of significant works that might otherwise not have been published. The manuscript's eligibility for this program is determined by the Endowment's Research Grants Division. The Endowment officials stress that the program is open to trade presses as well. Publishers who seek a grant must apply to the Endowment's Research Grants Division.

The National Endowment for the Humanities' 1978 grant is the government's principal cultural agency supporting scholarship in a wide array of academic pursuits and aiding projects designed to foster public participation in the humanities. Publishers who wish to inquire about support for publication of eligible manuscripts should call the Publications Program at (202) 724-0226 or write to the National Endowment for the Humanities, 800 18th St. NW, Washington, D. C. 20506.

Gamecocks take Troy to the woods

In a key Gulf South Conference battle at Paul Snow Memorial Stadium, the Gamecocks crushed Troy 42-21, behind the potential aerial circus of Bobby Ray Green and Mike Watts.

The duo of Gamecock field marshals put the ball up 30 times, completing 19 for 370 yards and three touchdowns. Green was true on 14 of 22 for two TD’s, while Watts hit five of eight for one TD. Sticky - fingered James Moreen gathered in four passes for 150 yards and two TD’s.

Donald Young snared six passes for 102 yards and one TD, while Butch Barker caught three for 33 yards. “There’s just no way they can cover all of us,” pointed out tight end Barker. Besides having the three top receivers in the GSC in Barker, Moreen and Young, the Gamecocks gave Troy fits by flooding the Trojan secondary several times with five receivers.

Jax State utilized the tricky "trips spread" formation, frustrating Troy by lining up the quarterback as the only man in the backfield and freeing five potential receivers, two usually going deep.

Moreen grabbed a 75-yard touchdown pass out of the "trips spread" formation late in the first quarter to stake the Gamecocks to a 14-0 lead.

The Gamecock victory knocked Troy out of the Gulf South race and set up a final game duel with the University of North Alabama for the conference crown. Jacksonville can wrap up the GSC title with a win over UNA Saturday, while North Alabama needs a win to capture a first-place tie with Southeastern Louisiana.

Jax State is currently 5-1 in the GSC, trailed by Southeastern and UNA, each with only one loss and a tie against them. Southeastern and UNA played to a 7-7 standoff early in the season. Southeastern eliminated Nicholls State from the race Saturday, 19-9, and North Alabama zapped Mississippi College, 30-0.

Jax State snatched the conference lead with the win and moved into position to clinch the title and the probable playoff berth that goes with it. The Gamecocks were ranked ninth in the nation going into the Troy game, and the Trojans were ranked fifth. Thus, a win Saturday by Jacksonville would almost assure the Gamecocks of a return invitation to the eight-team field of the NCAA Division II playoffs.

Jax State got on the board first following a Troy fumble. Gamecock defensive back Bo Emerson recovered the loose ball at the Troy 38-yard line, and it took Jax State nine plays to cash in on the Trojan miscue.

Wayne McCoy darted from three yards out on an option around right end. Rocky Riddle booted the PAT, and with 6:30 to go in the first quarter, Jax State was on top, 7-0.

Jax State’s next score came when Watts connected with Moreen on a 75-yard strike. Riddle was true on the PAT, and with 40 seconds left in the first period, the Jammers extended their lead to 14-0.

Troy fought back with a 67-yard drive in six plays. Running back Boyd Grant rambled in from three yards out on a TD. Rusty Adams crashed over from the one with 40 seconds left in the second quarter.

The contest remained tied until Jax State blew the home game wide open late in the third period. Freshman Benny Hill broke through the line and smashed a Troy punt to the ground. Alert Rod Green scooped the ball up and raced 40 yards for the 21-14 lead.

Hill hit the PAT to up the count to 21-14, and the stunned Trojans never recovered.

Less than three minutes later, Green lifted a 62-yard bomb to Moreen, and it was...

Nicholls ranked 1st in cage poll

HAMMOND, La.—Both the Gulf South Conference basketball coaches and the league's sports information directors tab Nicholls State as the team to win the 1978-79 cage title, but neither group expects it to be a runaway.

The league's cage bosses picked Nicholls State by a scant three-point margin over Livingston University, the only two teams to receive first place votes in their poll.

The SIDs foresaw an even closer race with Nicholls ranked just two points better than Livingston, who filing Alabama right behind. All three received first place votes.

Nicholls, which has all five starters returning from last year's team, accumulated 61 votes, in the coaches' voting based on an 8-5-3 scale with six first place choices.

Livingston, with three key starters back from last year's runners-up team, received 58 points and three first place ballots.

North Alabama followed third with 49. Delta State was next with 40 and Southeastern Louisiana University tied for fourth with 33. The second division pre-season picks included Jacksonville State (26), defending champ Mississippi College (25), Tuscaloosa (19) and Tennessee-Martin (16).

The GSC publicists predicted the race to be even closer with Nicholls (58), Livingston (56) and North Alabama (53) tabbed for the top three spots. NSU had four first place votes with Livingston three and U.N.A two.

For the record

Due to insufficient information supplied to the Chauttelier, an incorrect reference concerning a certain track event was made in this recent edition. The race was not sponsored by the Coosa Valley Track Club. This in error was corrected by the Jacksonville Recreation Dept. and the JSU PE Dept. The National Jogging Day event was held at German Spring.

Also, due to a production error in last week's gymnastics section, Sharon Dygert's name was misspelled in last week's edition.

The Chauttelier regrets the error.
