Kay wins with 51% margin

By JOE BRYAN

Deborah Kay, a political science major at Jacksonville State, was elected the new president of the Student Government Association last Tuesday. The former treasurer, Ms. Kay, defeated Gene Wisdom and Tom Young in a close race by compiling 51 percent of the votes.

In the other elections, Ty Spears won the vice-presidential bid with 53 percent, while Lisa Brooks was voted treasurer in a close finish with Donna Boomer.

Ms. Kay ran on a broad campaign platform based on such programs as the further development of university communications (including a student directory), the creation of a director of intramurals, the creation of a director of minority relations, the development of a tram system, further development of IFC and panhellenic councils, improvement of lighting around various campus buildings and the creation of a director of international relations.

The president-elect has been in the Student Government Association for two and a half years along with her affiliations with interclub council, the Student Conference on American Government and Alpha Xi Delta sorority.

Deborah Kay could not be reached for comment due to a seminar she attended this past weekend.

Spears, vice-president-elect, was elated with the victory. Yet he did express his concerns, "The trouble in the past has been that everyone in the SGA administration has been working in different directions. In the new administration, we'll see changes and improvements to benefit everyone at Jacksonville." He also said, "I'm gonna do my best to work as close as I can with the other officers and for the campus. If I don't do a satisfactory job, I expect to be run out of office."

Spears is a junior education major from Alexander City. He has served as senator on the Student Government and is also a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity.

Lisa Brooks, the new treasurer, had this to say about the election, "I was pretty disappointed with the turnout, but I would like to thank those who voted for me." Ms. Brooks was elected in a runoff Thursday in which only 80 people voted. A senior banking and finance major from Scottsboro, Ms. Brooks has done well in her experiences with the responsibilities of her office events. In response to her new position she stated, "I just want to work with the SGA administration to ensure the students every possible opportunity and advantage."

In related news, the SGA is preparing for senatorial elections. Anyone wishing to run for a seat on the senate should check with the SGA office on the 4th floor of Student Commons for details.
The Chanticleer

The next time I hear a gripe about the SGA I think I'll punch out the person who voices it. I have heard so many complaints about the SGA in my four years here, I was naive enough to think that the students get mad enough to do something about it.

But after learning that only 378 students voted in our last student election, I have again been proved wrong. This isn't a case of student apathy. This is student stupidity. Apparently there are only 11 percent of the students here that really care anything about what goes on around them.

We all have gripes. Since I have been here, I have sat through endless dormitory discussions on the inadequacies of this university. If it isn't the parking, it's the entertainment. It isn't the food or the housing, or the administration. Fact is, I agree with most of your complaints.

But I don't want to hear it anymore. The SGA is involved in every way it knows how to involve itself. I know this because I'm involved with the SGA. But so many of you do nothing but go to class and complain. It is easier to do that than to become involved in the decision-making process and have to take the blame when something goes wrong. So you depend on everyone else like an unsatisfied leech might cling to his carrier.

But come concert time, or homecoming time, or get mad because your lunch wasn't quite up to par, and who gets the blame? The SGA, of course.

Next year, the SGA's budget will surpass $65,000. That isn't peanuts, and it's all your money. With the economy the way it is, there are countless places to spend this money where it will be more appreciated. Maybe it should be given to charity. After seeing this election, I think it's a good idea.

It is ridiculous, shameful, and embarrassing that only 11 percent of us decided who will run the SGA next year. There is no excuse for this.

But who cares, anyway?

The perfect wife

Sex is one of the most sheltered subjects in America today. Any subject related to sex is subconsciously shunned in public.

Of all the subjects related to sex, I have never heard or seen a man discuss, in detail, the qualities he would like to have in a wife.

The qualities of my wife which practically all men would agree with include simply beauty and personality.

As for personality, a woman with vitality would be perfect because her overabundant life would constantly keep me from dipping into states of somnambulism.

But for me, a wife must have other qualities also. Not only would I like for her to have beauty and charm, but ambition for her own, superior intelligence, sincerity, and true gentleness.

My worst nightmare would be to marry a woman who does not want some kind of career. I simply cannot grasp the idea of being threatened because my wife does better than me. I fail to see what difference it makes. After all, her success just adds that much more to our potential to have fun. However, I must admit that I constantly fear the situation of our careers outgrowing our marriage; but, a resolution to this is relatively simple in my case.

If her career is moving up, it is probable that she will be near a good university, where I would be perfectly content to teach.

A solution can always be found to the problem of my doing research, if I look hard enough.

Slippin' away

As the academic year comes to a close, I notice my junior status slowly slipping away as I prepare to enter the exciting world of seniorhood. Although this could be viewed as the final leg of a long journey, I see it as only one more year to realize many dreams I've set aside for my college days.

There are certain things I'd like to be able to tell my grandchildren about college life while I sit in my well-worn rocking chair with a glint in my eye and a metaphorical violin on my shoulder. Imagine how boring and bland it would be to tell all that one does in college is to go to class, eat, study and go to bed every day for four solid years. That would be like telling someone how I was in charge of supplying the executive officers of World War II with paperclips and rubberbands while battle was taking place in the trenches. No friends, 'College is Hell,' and I've got to jump in there and get my hands dirty and any toot too, and about six other major cliches.

Therefore, there are just a few things I'd like to do before I graduate:
1) Drive an Izod Volkswagen.
2) Kneel the top of the library.
3) Go to classes all day and skip a party.
4) See Jimmy Buffett at Pete Matthews Coliseum.
5) Wear a raccoon coat and have a 'State' pennant on my wall.
6) Hold Sparkman Bell hostage until Ted Kennedy is reelected. (Can I have a note?)
7) Stay up all night NOT studying.
8) Sell a book back to the bookstore at full price. (Editors note: Some things are less conceivable than others.)
9) Do a 'heavy metal' show on WJS.
10) Watch the entire fourth quarter of a Monday Night football game at the Students Commons Building.
11) Attend a JSU football game where the entire JSU student body cheer.
12) Play in an intramural game without anyone complaining about the officiating.
13) Have every member of every fraternity and sorority gather to 'The Greeks Don't Want No Freaks.'
All who wish to submit announcements should have them typed and turned in at SCB Rm. 104 by 12 noon Wednesday.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I am writing in regard to the article that appeared in the March 25 Chanticleer, "Louisiana girls are 'snooty'." I am one of those Louisiana girls and I would like to make a few comments on some of the ignorant remarks made by Mr. Bryan.

Before I start, I would like to point out that Mr. Bryan made generalizations about the Louisiana people on the basis of one visit to one of the many universities in our state, and need I mention that many of the people attending L.S.U. are not native Louisianians, but students from other states. After all, are all here at Jax State native Alabamians?

Mr. Bryan was correct in one statement he made. There is much beauty and tradition surrounding the campus in Baton Rouge. This beauty and tradition can be found, of course, all over Louisiana. As far as the beauty being "superficial", I suggest that possibly it is Joe Bryan who is too "superficial" to understand and appreciate our beauty and tradition.

Why was it so "interesting" to find that all Louisianians are not cajuns? To assume that would be unperceptive, irrational thinking. It is true that there are many cajuns in the state, but they do not all congregate on the L.S.U. campus. By the way, most "true" Louisianians have no problem with "Louisiana" being pronounced "O-luh-su-ah-neen."

I am sorry that you were disappointed in our lack of Confederate spirit. Louisiana is a state where very little prejudice exists. (Toward anyone.) I wish I could say the same for your state. There is a great deal of wonderful Civil War history in our state, but we have more pride in our French descent than we do in the waving of a rebel flag. I think that when Mr. Bryan accused us of seeming like Northerners, he was probably referring to Louisianians' proper use of the English language. No, we do not "talk Southern" as you said, if what you mean by that is the horrible grammar so often heard in Alabama.

I do think it a little asinine to accuse our state of lacking dignity and hospitality. Our largest and most beautiful city possesses one of the most successful tourist trades in the nation. I am obviously speaking of New Orleans, which happens to be my home. How can a state that attracts millions of people from all over the world be accused of lacking dignity and hospitality?

We do not resent the Alabama football team coming to our state. We do resent the behavior of many Tide fans when they are in town. Most tourists visiting our state enjoy the many unique characteristics found in New Orleans and are welcomed back year after year, but the majority of the Alabama tourists during Sugar Bowl week are rude, obnoxious, and "redneck." I don't wish to imply that all visitors from Alabama fit this description. I am sure there are many who don't. I merely try to explain why many Louisianians feel the way they do about Alabamians. I must say that I join them in saying their feelings are totally justified.

It is sad that Mr. Bryan's impression of Louisiana was such a poor one. I hope that those of you who have never been to Louisiana will not take Joe Bryan's word for it. (Or mine either, for that matter.) If the opportunity ever arises for you to visit New Orleans, please do. You will find a city with a uniqueness and authenticity that sets it apart from all other cities in the world. It is a city and a state that will take you in, treat you to delightful, unequaled experiences, and welcome you back home time and time again. It is unfortunate that all visitors to Louisiana do not have the intelligence or profundity to understand and appreciate all it has to offer.

In closing, I would like to say this to Mr. Bryan; I am sure that Louisiana will be all the better if you say in your "Sweet Home Alabama", and I will happily return to my "God's Own Louisiana".

Sincerely,
Beth Jones

Aging studies students conduct JSU tour

The Aging Studies spring practicum students coordinated efforts with the JSU Alumni Office to conduct a campus tour of “The Friendliest Campus in the South” for residents of Stonecreek Elderly Apartments, the new housing project in Jacksonville.

The JSU tour, held Wednesday, February 27, 1980, started at the Student Commons with a warm welcome from Mrs. Julia Snead, Director of Alumni Affairs and the JSU Foundation.

Highlights of the tour were the Merrill Building, the Houston Cole Library, and the International House.

Dr. Doug McConatha, Aging Studies Program Director, addressed the group and discussed the importance of studying aging from an academic viewpoint. He also discussed recent literature on aging.

Stonecreek residents who attended the tour were Ruby Rogers, Ruth Frazier, and Evelyn and Ollie Roper. Each resident was given a MIMOSA and a copy of the CHANTICLEER and INSIDER as mementos of the tour.

Bernette “Tooch” Harris, JSU junior with a gerontology minor, was the student in charge of the tour. She stated, “The purpose of this outing was to help these seniors become more aware of the resources that JSU has to offer to persons seeking professional degrees.”

As part of the practicum, the students staff the senior center at the housing project. They organize and carry out programs on everything from social security benefits to how to survive during a tornado.

Piano playing and films. Potluck dinners and bingo. Plans for a buddy system and a community garden plot. Who said there is a generation gap?
Gifted children critique ‘Cyrano’

On February 28th, the Special Education Clinic for Gifted and Talented children was invited to the first performance in the new Performing Arts Building. They were the first audience to attend a performance in this new facility as they were the guests of the drama department for their dress rehearsal of the performance of Cyrano de Bergerac. The students were given a tour of the new facility and demonstrations on lighting, makeup, costuming and scenery were given by the students in the drama department.

Shane Pike-Group 1

I liked the play and the costumes.

What I liked the best about the costumes were the making of the costumes and the French touch. And especially in the new Performing Arts Building.

Jennifer Douglas-Group 2

Dear Sir:

Cyrano De Bergerac was very entertaining. All I lacked was better financial backing, improved sound effects and a good supporting cast. Even with these problems and a grand performance by the main characters it still made a very enjoyable evening, especially in the new Performing Arts Building.

Eric Hancock
5th grade
Willborn Elementary

Dear Sir:

Other than a little problem with the heat and the tape slipped from the tape player at the beginning, the play was very good. Most of the players knew their parts perfectly. Mike Scroggins, who played Cyrano, had three fourths of the lines, yet spoke them perfectly. The changing of the scenery was done very quickly, and every little noise of the changing could be heard by the audience, and then only the audience in the first few rows could hear it. The play ran very smoothly, sound effects making it even more exciting for the audience, and the players not only knowing their lines but acting them well also. Some of this play was sad, some of it was happy and some of it funny. The performance kept you wondering what was going to happen next. It was very much like an excellent television show with periods to change the scenery, not for commercials. Another problem was that the first four acts were in the same year (1640), while the fifth skipped fifteen years (1655). Other than the problems mentioned, it was an excellent performance.

Cyrano de Bergerac
Jacksonville State University presented the play Cyrano de Bergerac, February 27 through March 1, 1986, in the new auditorium of the Ernest Stone Performing Arts Center.

Mike Scoggins portrayed Cyrano de Bergerac, a beautifully creative writer and highly admired swordsman.

The plays tell of his love for a woman who loves another man. Cyrano keeps his love for her hidden until the final moments of his life.

The actors were well rehearsed and played their parts well. Their costumes were customarily designed. The scenery was very simple, and gave focus on the actors. In all, it was a comical yet heart-warming love story that was an interesting play.

Hope Davidson
7th grade
Cobb Jr. High School

Dear Sir:

The play, Cyrano de Bergerac, was one of the best reproductions I’ve ever been acquainted with. The cast was remarkable. Through the dialogue they presented beautifully, you could actually see the long, hard hours of diligent work that was put forth. Everything was very spectacular. The costumes looked authentic. It was a sheer delight just being there in the audience seeing what a lot of effort and hard work can do.

Sincerely,

Spring has almost sprung

I knew it was going to be one of those days when I sat up in bed, looked out the window, and saw two giraffes, two elephants, and two polar bears boarding the Ark. But it wasn’t until Noah said, “Good morning,” that I realized I was going to be swimming to classes. It never rains at night when I’m asleep.

I brushed my teeth, decided what to wear, and ate breakfast. Then the thunder, disguised as an alarm clock, woke me from my morning dreams, and I staggered from under the warm, dry covers, all the while contemplating a bowl of hot chicken soup, a comfortable house robe, and a good Erma Bombeck book.

You don’t know what fun is until you walk from Bibb Graves to PAB during a thunderstorm, watching a hundred cars splash by full of warm, dry passengers. Your blue jeans are soaked to the knees auditioning for a paper towel commercial, your White Rain hair spray just decided it can’t take a flood, your waterproof mascara got fooled, your umbrella suddenly got tired of being turned down so it decided to try being upturned for awhile, and your Ugus just floated off your feet. Yep, there’s nothing comfortable, miserable, hard to get away from, and all wet.

I guess rain does have its good effects even if it does make the ground think it’s quicksand. They tell me that it replenishes the earth with good nutrients, and it’s a blessing to the farmers’ crops. But if this keeps up, the only thing they’ll be harvesting is rice fields.

Instead of squirrels, I keep finding fish playing in the trees, and the flowers can’t cross-pollinate because they’ve all caught colds. Everywhere I go, I hear people crying, “Sand! Sand!”

Englishman accepts U.S. as home

By JASON WILLIAMS

Clive smart, a native of Stratford-on-Avon, England, is a self-proclaimed ambassador to the Jacksonville State University campus. Majoring in Special Education, Clive has given many presentations around campus about his native land, such as the recent slide show of the Sociology Department. He is minorring in History and plans, after graduation from JSU in approximately three years, to teach mentally retarded children in the United States.

Before coming to the U.S., Clive made many accomplishments in England. At one time, he was a guide in the home of Shakespeare, as well as that of his daughter. Clive also served as an English policeman. Says Clive about this, “I never had fired a gun until I came to the U.S. As you know, the English policemen aren’t allowed to carry firearms.”

He also attended college, South Warwickshire College, where he received certificates in Sociology, English, History, English Government and Politics, and English Literature. While at college, Clive also served as the Chairman of the College Association, which is comparable to the Student Government presidency in American colleges.

After arriving in the U.S., Clive was awarded the honorary citizenship of the state of Tennessee, as well as the key to the city of Memphis, Tennessee.

Clive is very pro-American and believes in a strong Anglo-American relationship. Says Clive, “I was very pleased to see Prime Minister Thatcher supporting the U.S. government in their moves to thwart the Iranian and Afghaniain crises.

Clive has also become quite astute at imitating the Southern drawl and says, “The South is a very nice place and its people are magnificent, but I just can’t get used to the buttermilk and grits.”

In closing, Clive wished to say, “I consider it a rare privilege to have had extremely good instructors here at JSU and am grateful for their enlightening instruction. I also would like to congratulate Dr. Elaine Tutwiler for an excellent job on advising me in my academics.”

Considering the prestige of the English educational institutions, I think you will agree that JSU is indeed honored to have this high praise extended from a man who has studied and received degrees from such exalted schools. We at JSU thank you for your kind words and wish you the best of luck in the future.

Would you please print a notice to this effect in your college or on your local bulletin boards.

Thank you for any consideration given this request.

By ALLEN CLARK

Crossroads was only a tiny package store, but then owner David Carnes decided that this town needed something totally new and different.

What he came up with was a rough hewn timber filled bar with several different geometrical designs that, believe it or not, have some meaning. Take for example the symmetry of the boards on the outside. If you’ll notice, they’re laid in a red-white sequence. If you really want to find out what the several others designs mean, then you’ll have to take the time to go down and talk to Dave but it would fill this page to go through the entire story of what used to be (and by the way still is) the busiest package store in Jacksonville.

The atmosphere is totally “kick-back” and that’s exactly what Dave had in mind before the first cement was laid. The music you’ll hear isn’t something you will want to disco to, but then again there’s quite a few of us who have good taste in music and for us, disco isn’t where it’s at.

Crossroads opened up with the world-renowned Johnny Stines, and he sweetened the ears of 20-old people who told it only right to party all night while the man played his fabulous blues till the wee hours.

Hunky Hog Get Down showed up the next weekend, and if you like that downhome Bluegrass, then you really missed a treat if you weren’t there. It might just be in the making that they’ll show up again this coming Friday or Saturday night. Check with Dave on that to be sure, and you’ll find the number listed if you can’t stop by.

Now to talk a little about what it looks like inside. As soon as you walk through the door, the first thing you’ll notice is the copper bar that just sets off everything. Dave heats Crossroads with a nickle plated Fischer wood-burner and if the bar doesn’t impress you then add on the stove and it starts warming the old heart up. Just to the right side of the room you’ll find the spiral staircase leading up to the window lined balcony. Now when you get up there and find a seat, then you’ve got the perfect view of inside and out.

This could go on and on, but you’ve got to see if yourself to appreciate the “nicest little bar in Jacksonville.”

Billy Keel, a JSU senior, demonstrates his winning talent lifting 639 lbs. at the Collegiate National Powerlifting Championships held at Texas Christian University March 14-15. Keel won first place overall in the competition. Several JSU students have expressed interest in the construction of a weight training facility.

In my usual tradition of featuring a specific person in this column, I'd like to dedicate this week's space to one of my favorite people. Me.

This is the last column I'll ever write for The Chanticleer. Exactly two weeks from today, I’ll be moving to Louisville, Kentucky (thank God)–leaving this ‘back-porch of the South’ for an illustrious writing career and a journalism degree from the University of Louisville.

Fans who wish to keep in touch may call 435-3129 for my new address (that was tacky, wasn’t it...).

But seriously, there are several things I'd like to say before I'm gone and several people I'd like to mention in this column.

First, I'd like to thank Rick Bragg for his help and guidance. As a result of endless phone conversations, 2 a.m. typing and layout sessions in The Jacksonville News office, and many semi-serious Yankee vs. Redneck arguments, I’ve learned so much about the newspaper business and feel ready to ‘go out in the world’ and put this knowledge to use. Though his appearance is somewhat deceiving, Rick is a genius and I've come to think of him as a very close friend (even if he is from Possum Trot, Ala.).

To my parents and Valerie (my roommate), what else can I say but thanks for your patience? Mom and Dad, your encouragement has meant so much, and I promise not to let you down when I’m gone. Valerie, well at least you won’t hear the typewriter at 3 a.m. anymore, and I won’t be chasing after you yelling, “Read this! Whatcha think of it?” Rest in peace, friend. After two semesters, you deserve a break. (You and Mortimer Snedr.) Good luck with ol’ blue eyes and your Carole King imitation.

A VERY SPECIAL loving thank you goes out to my fiancé Neal Collins for all his support, concern, and faith in my ability. Even though he lives 400 miles from here-in Louisville—we’ve always managed to share the good times together and he’s always been around when I needed a shoulder to cry on and when I've felt like throwing The Chanticleer and the reporting business into the deep inner depths of hell. (Oh, Lord—please lower our gas and phone bills). Neal, I love you.

To all the coaches of this university and to those athletes who were the subjects of the weekly feature, thanks for your time and cooperation. Keep up the good work.

Thanks to Dr. Clyde Cox for his valuable instruction and for occasionally letting me forfeit turning in homework in favor of not missing a deadline.

To my many friends here, it'll be rough leaving such a fantastic group. It's been fun. I'll miss you.

Now that I've elaborated on the thank you’s and goodbye’s, let me talk briefly on other matters. I've noticed several things during my two years at JSU—some of which will be mentioned here, and some that can’t be printed.

-Now that we have an Ultimate Frisbee team, how about organized trout fishing in the coliseum pool? (Don't take that wrong. Actually, I like frisbee. A little.)
-Is there really an athlete going to school here on an illegal scholarship, or did I miss a small flaw in all the (See SHEEHY, Page 11)

The Jax State wrestling team has earned a place in the NCAA Regional Qualifying Tournament at Pensacola State University in North Carolina. Other teams listed were Livingston College, Florida International University, the University of Central Florida, and Elizabeth City State University.

Edwin Johnson, who captured first in the 150 lb. division, Henry Edmonson took third in the 167 lb. class, and Frank Hovey (167 lbs.) finished third. Florida international University placed first with 320 points in the 118 lbs.

Several JSU men were represented, Erwin's victory qualified them for the national tournament at the University of Omaha in Nebraska.

In the past, the team has won two national titles, and sisters growing up, and I learned how to take pride in the craft of gymnastics. The team will be looking for a national title in this tournament.

Denise Balk:
A sports story

JSU's golf team placed ninth in a tournament hosted by Nicholls State March 13-14.

Troy, capturing third, and Shorter College of Georgia, were the only other Division II teams. The remaining teams were Division I.

Coach Steve Bailey commented, "I was disappointed. We should have finished in the top six. Southeast Louisiana (who finished eighth) only beat us by one stroke.'"

The team also participated in a tournament at Shorter College March 17-18 finishing third, while Troy was first. JSU's record is now 14-11 for the season.

Coach Bailey remarked, "We played a lot better, and the course was easier. We were tied for first, but we put the choke stroke on them." Bruce Kelley, JSU's top ranked player, finished ninth at Nicholls with 181. He then made the All-Tournament Team at Shorter, placing in the top five.

The Conference Tournament will be hosted by Troy April 24-27. The Intercollegiate Tournament will be played in Montgomery April 16-19. Five teams from our region will then be selected to participate in the National Championships hosted by Nicholls at the Ellendale Country Club May 15-18. Bailey concluded, "We have an excellent chance of going to nationals if we play well at our next tournament. So far, Troy is the only Division II team to beat us."

For three years, Jacksonville State University has never had a losing season in women's gymnastics but has always been second in place at the conclusion of the regional championships. All this changed March 22, however, as the JSU women danced and tumbled into first place at the AIAW Regional Championships.

The final team score for the Jax State women, ranked 13th nationally, was 139.10. Georgia, with a Region 11 win and a 13th national ranking last year, was second with 138.45. Florida, the pre-meet favorite, finished third with 138.00. Alabama was fourth with 136.10, and Auburn had 132.05.

The pressure was especially on Denise Balk, who was the meet's final performer. After a near serious fall on balance beam, she hit an 8.80 on floor exercise. "Denise needed an 8.2 or 8.3 to win the meet for her team," Coach Hobert Dillard said. "If there was one gymnast I could depend on to be the last one to perform, it was Denise. She's worked under pressure before."

Jax State won both the bars with a 34.95 and the vaulting event with a 34.46. They slipped to an 8.26 on beam, which Georgia won with a 34.60. Florida won the floor exercise with a 35.40 while Jacksonville scored 35.20.

"We opened up with bars much stronger than did the teams in the morning sessions," Tiller said, "but our scores didn't show it. Then we went out and almost blew the meet with a fiasco in the beam. We were only 0.2 of a point ahead when we went into the floor exercise. We usually win the floor, but we still had to be concerned."

A lot of pressure was on the girls in this final event. "We asked them beforehand how long they've been working for this," Dillard said, "then we said 'now go out and do it.'"

Denise's sister Susan competed in the bars only due to a recurring knee injury, and Dillard was pleased with her performance. "I think she did her strongest routine today."

Two Jacksonville women took honors in the individual event finals. Denise Balk placed third in the vault and second in floor exercise, and Julie Garrett captured first on bars.

Jacksonville has finished its season with a 13-3 record.

"I think we had the best team here," said Dillard after the meet. "But if you don't hit, you don't win. I think we can score a 141 at nationals."

supporting evidence?
- To the PAB hiking club, the track team is looking for new recruits.
- In terms of athletics, do a few high administrative officials sometimes have more power than the man who should, or did I miss another flaw in the evidence?
- After two years of covering gymnastics here, I often sit back and wonder how many average readers actually know the difference between a Tsukahara and an aerial.

All in all, these two years have been an unique, memorable experience. Even with our list of complaints (PAB, the food, registration, etc.) we must admit this is a pretty good school. After all, no place can be perfect, and we may indeed have the 'friendliest campus in the South!'"
Coming up at Talladega

Winston 500 Week just around corner

TALLADEGA—The first day of May at Alabama International Motor Speedway will be one of the busiest days in the history of the world’s fastest speedway.

Speedway officials have announced first-day pole position time trials for both the $355,000 Winston 500 and the $76,000 May 3rd Alabama Sportsman Grand American 300 will be held Thursday, May 1st.

Atotal of 40 stock cars will earn starting position time trials at 1 p.m.

Winston 500 competitors will be chasing a $25,000 pot of gold, the largest Busch-Pole Day payoff in motorsports history, with the fastest qualifier earning $6,000 and those earning starting positions two through 20 earning $1,000 each.

“With our record pole day awards, there will probably be 60 cars or more trying to earn those top 20 spots for the Winston 500,” says Talladega General Manager Don Naman. “Every Winston Cup driver I’ve talked to says ‘he’s planning to be here for the first day of time trials because they all have a chance to earn $1,000 if they can get one of the top 20 spots.’”

“Even the drivers who normally don’t try to earn a starting spot until the second day of time trials have dedicated they are going to make an all-out effort the first day this time around. I think our Pole Day qualifying will be an outstanding event in itself.”

Qualifying for the top 20 starting positions in the Alabama Sportsman - Grand American 300 will follow Winston 500 time trials.

Waltrip and Benny Parsons of Elberbe, N.C., have logged close to 1,000 miles over the newly-resurfaced Talladega track during the off-season and Waltrip has praised the smoothness of the new surface.

“I don’t know whether the track will be any faster or not but I know it’s going to make things a lot closer,” he said. “You can’t be chasing a car anywhere on the track you want to now. It’s super smooth. People might see three and four cars side by side in the corners.”

Naman said the record $25,000 Pole Day awards has certainly bolstered interest among the drivers. “A lot of the drivers have asked me who made the top 20 last year so they’ll know who they have to beat for $1,000. I can’t remember them all but I know Buddy Arrington, one of our top independent drivers, surprised everybody with a fourth-place starting spot.”

At Aims Pro-Am

Motorcyclists warming up

American Team Honda, boosting three of its top motorcycle riders in the nation, has entered the Talladega Pro-Am on April 12-13th at Alabama International Motor Speedway. The factory-backed racing team is composed of veterans Steve McLaughlin and Ron Pierce, and fast-rising super-star Freddie Spencer.

McLaughlin is the senior member and manager of Team Honda's road race program. He is a well respected world class road racer, with an impressive list of victories, including the 1978 Superbike 100 at Daytona.

Pierce is also a veteran campaigner on the American racing scene. He was the 1979 Daytona Superbike 100 at and finished third in a photo decision there two weeks ago. He also finished seventh in the prestigious Daytona 200.

The newest member of the American Team Honda stable is 30-year-old "Fast" Freddie Spencer. In 1977, at the Western and Eastern Road Racing Association, he took the national championship in four different classes, a record that still stands. In 1983, his first year as a pro, he won every 200 cc road race he entered, and the AMA Novice National Championship, and took third place in the superbike division.

At Daytona earlier this month, Spencer was second in the Superbike 100, giving Team Honda a 1-2 finish, then he led the highly-competitive Daytona 200 for over three-quarters of the race before a mechanical malfunction sidelined his bike.

This trio will be riding modified Honda 750s in the pro class at Talladega. Spencer, in particular, will be a threat to break the track record of 113.207 miles per hour, set by Yvon du Hamel in 1979.

This will mark the first appearance of the motorcycles at AIMS since 1974, with the races being run over the 4.06 mile combined infield and oval course.
