SGA Senate allocates money for weight room

By RANDY HARTLEY, Editor

A bill authored and sponsored by Efram Clark "to allocate two-thousand dollars from the university to buy weights for the student weight room" passed the student senate by an overwhelming vote Monday night, November 30, and has been signed by SGA (Student Govt. Assc.) president Bill Morris.

The student senate enacted that "a committee be set up to purchase four sets of olympic weights.

"All monies not spent by January 31, 1982 shall revert to the SGA fund."

Also discussed by the SGA was the theft of "fourteen or fifteen" class rings, worth a total of about four-thousand dollars, from the SGA office.

"We're not gonna suffer a loss," Bill "Moose" Morris assured the senate. "We're insured one way or another." He further commented that if you know of anybody with extra cash all of a sudden, or rings to sell, to let the authorities know about it. But he added, "They do have a lead on it."

WLJS - basic communication operation

By SUSIE IRWIN

The main function of WLJS is to teach persons interested in the field of communication the basic operations of a commercial station, said Allan Rhodes, 92-J station manager.

Licensed as a top-40-album station over six years ago, Rhodes said the volunteer staff was obligated to follow the format of a top-40 station. Concerning recent criticism on lack of black artist representation, Rhodes said that it just happened that in the last three to four months more white artists were present in the top-40 range.

To the question of advertising on 92-J, Rhodes said a recent campaign sponsored by a local beverage manufacturer was promoted at the station as a promotional consideration. Following the Federal Communications Commission's regulations for an educational station, the campaign was promoted, not the product itself; therefore the station was in agreement with the FCC guidelines, Rhodes said.

In regard to the past complaint of excessive sports time on WLJS, Rhodes said he agreed with the less than one percent figure estimated earlier by J. Allan Brown, speaking for the station. The percentage of sports time took into account the 19 hours a day and 365 days a year the station is on the air, Rhodes said.

Dunn to lead Southerners

By MIKE PALMER

Steve Dunn, a junior, was selected as the new head Drum Major for the Marching Southerners after a two-day elimination process on November 23 and 24.

Twenty people tried out on the 23rd before the section leaders and Dr. Walters. Six of these were chosen to perform for the band on the following day, and a vote was then taken.

Ricky Walker will be returning as assistant.

Dunn came to Jacksonville on a band scholarship in 1979 and has been Trombone Section leader for the past two years. He began his music studies at the age of "four or five" when he first took piano lessons. In the sixth grade, Steve entered the band program at Mobile High School learning to play trombone. He became Drum Major at Mobile High in the tenth grade and continued as such until graduation.

Steve learned about Jacksonville's music program when he represented his high school in Boy's State here, and when he met some music graduates back home. Dunn said he had heard "there was a pretty good marching band" here.

"In most bands, the band director does everything," Dunn says. "Dr. Walters writes most of our music and drills, but the section leaders teach their sections. Dr. Walters is a brilliant man. He is willing to let us work and help us if we have any problems."

"Our job," he says about the drum majors, "is to put the whole thing together." "It's a lot of work." "It takes about fifteen hours of work for a fifteen minute show."

It must be worth it, though, judging from Steve's comments. He said that there are

By Sam Hilleh

Her name is Cathy Edwards, 18 years old, blonde hair, blue eyes, a freshman, a straight A student. She is a senior in J'ville High School taking several courses at Jax State.

She would like to become a secretary in a big company and maybe get a doctorate degree.

Cathy is the best quarter back in her girls senior football team of which she is the captain. She is a well-rounded sports woman, she has appeared as the best baseball player of Jacksonville High and she is a professional bowler, to.

Cathy is very pretty. She is the only child, she loves music and likes to help her mother to cook. She always likes to see her house clean.

"so many good things." "You meet a lot of good people and make a lot of friends." You feel that you are "producing something not just good but extra good." The "responsive crowd" makes it all worthwhile, and it's just plain "fun," explained Dunn.

Steve Dunn is a very active student. Besides his involvement in the Marching Southerners, he is a member of the Omicron Delta Kappa honor society, A Cappella choir, Brass choir, and Symphonic band. He has also done an outstanding job as director of the Baptist Campus Ministry Choir.

After graduating from J.S.U., Dunn plans "to go to graduate school and get a degree in composition." He hopes to develop a career in composition and arrangement of church music. He has been arranging instrumental music for his home church in Rome, Ga. for the past two years, and says that instrumental church music is a field that is just opening up.

We are looking forward to seeing you at work next Fall, Steve.

Soundtracks a good beginning

By SUSAN KINGHORN

A compilation of 11 dance compositions was watched by approximately 40 people in the Ernest Stone Auditorium on Tuesday evening.

"Soundtracks" was the JSU Dance Company's fall presentation.

The company, directed by Mrs. Peggy Roswal, are all members of the dance lab, which meets every Monday and Wednesday from 3-5 p.m.

The show was the result of dance lab's work this semester and the dances were choreographed and produced both by Mrs. Roswal and by members of the group.

The program commenced with the curtain rising slowly to reveal a vigorous "warm-up" session, shared by the whole company and (approximately) entitled "The Body Shop." A strong visual picture was made by the 23-strong group of dancers although there was, at time, an element of bunching on the slightly overcrowded stage.

On the whole, the program seemed slightly under-rehearsed and, as a result, lacked energy and polish. It contained, however, some very effective pieces of choreography.

The highlight of the show was probably a character piece set to "All That Jazz" from "Chicago." Choreographed and performed jointly by Amy Uhl and Toby Crawford, this number was highly imaginative and allowed both dancers to demonstrate their considerable dramatic abilities.

Beginning with a rival situation between two characters, the piece developed into a seductively romantic engagement, ending in mock tragedy when, declaring "nobody walks out on ME!" Ms. Uhl drew a gun and shot the unfortunate ex-lover who proceeded to die a long and painful death at her feet.

Another extremely good number was "Workin' in a Coal Mine" from "Heavy Metal." This was choreographed by Karen Fairleigh and danced by 19 girls dressed in denim overalls. Particularly effective were their short, sharp hand and arm movements silhouetted against a blue backcloth. The piece contained a greater variety of steps than some other numbers and possessed an enthusiasm and vitality unfortunately lacking from many parts of the show.

There were some very nice moments in the second piece, "Music and the Mirror" choreographed by Amy Uhl; one in particular when the four dancers formed a line perpendicular to the audience to create a mysterious eight-limbed effect.

Other memorable points were the ending steps of Katrina Spivey's "Hot Lunch Jam," which left one dancer on her feet to perform a brief comic turn amidst her collapsed fellow dancers; and a moment in Mrs. Roswal's "Godfather Waltz" when the 14 dancers formed a back-to-back ring to dance what looked like a dance from a Jewish wedding feast!

"All For the Best" from "Gospel" was well-danced. The steps successfully captured the light-hearted, almost humorous, "tap-dancing" mood of the song and fit well with its frequent changes of tempo.

There were to quieter numbers in the programme, "A thur's Theme" choreographed by Connie Elmore and "Open Arms" by Angela Melliadis. Both were delicate and sensitive but perhaps rather timid in their choreography.

Less memorable was "Flash's Theme" from "Flash Gordon." Despite colorful and interesting special effects and acrobatic tumbling, this piece lacked clarity and the dancing seemed to fall short of the lively aggressive "fizz" of the music. "Flash's Theme" was full of good ideas but not as "flashy" or dynamic as it could have been.

But if the dancing did not do justice to the music in this number, it was the other way around in the final piece when the music failed to do credit to the dancing. The downbeat nature of "on Broadway" made the finale something of an anti-climax, despite inventive and well-performed roles from small groups and individuals, such as an impressive gymnastic piece from Beth Owens.

Other outstanding performances in the show came from Amy Uhl and Penny Brackett. The entire company, however, displayed talent and commitment.

Dancing in "Soundtracks" were Cynthia Brown, Jo Ann Luker, Connie Elmore, Jeanne Johnson, Angela Melliadis, Nancy Mann, Melissa Koon, Mickie Gilbreath, Karen Fairleigh, Amanda Smith, Sharon Wilson, Katrina Spivey, Connie Knight, Jo Ann Patzschke, Darlene Powell, Cecilia Wiggins, Kim Prater, Tracy Hyde, and Lynn Mason.

Acting as assistant directors were Katessa Porter, Jan Darnell and Tami Casey. The show was lit by Dr. Carlton Ward and his stage lighting class and sound was by Paige Smith.

Next semester the JSU Dance Company will present a spring dance concert entitled "Kidstuff."

Bear for sale: only $2,500

What's soft and cuddly and six feet tall? The Bear Bryant Bear, available for the mere sum of $2,500. Unless, of course, you're Bear Bryant, in which case you get one free.

Termed the "Winningest Bear," the huge teddy bear was recently created to commemorate the career of the University of Alabama's winningest coach, Paul

"Bear" Bryant (who got his nickname by allegedly wrestling a bear at the age of 12). The bear wears a red Alabama Blazer and the traditional hound's-tooth hat, and comes in two more affordable sizes: 25 inches, for $250; and 18 inches, for $26.

The six-foot version that made its debut in Alabama's homecoming parade is a prototype for a limited edition of 315 to be manufactured. That number represents the number of wins with which Bryant broke the record for most coaching-career wins, making him the winningest coach in the history of college football.

The bear was created by Bonnie Masterson, owner of Bonnie Belle's Dollhouse, a toy shop in Birmingham.

The Xmas story

It was a night like any other night, lonely and empty. Emil the shepherd was tending his flock. There were stars in the sky, but none shining so brightly it could be used as a guiding light. Like the Wise Men, the astronomers of their day, the shepherds spent much of their time gazing at the sky. It was always the same. But then everything was most always the same.

Angels didn't pop up, or down, to talk to Shepherds. Why would an angel talk to a shepherd? Besides, a normal shepherd would probably ignore something like that as being a figment of his imagination. Acting on a conversation with an angel would be sufficient cause for one to be kicked out of the shepherd's union. And there was nothing for the angels to sing about, no news to share with the shepherds.

The Magi, or Wise Men, some say there were three, may have gone off in pursuit of a bright star, a conjunction of three planets maybe, but it wouldn't lead them to a little stall in Bethlehem and then stop.

The Wise Men had been sent in search of a newborn babe, born king of the Jews, so the rumor went. Why would a mighty king like Herod fear a little competition from a baby? And would he really order the death of every male child under the age of two in his kingdom? Likely story. How far would a thinking Wise Man lug presents of gold, frankincense, and myrrh?

Randy Hartley
Editor

Let's see. We have shepherds dropping everything they're doing and running off to town. The shepherds never left their flocks. We have "Wise Men" traipsing all over the country, from a meeting with a king to a rendezvous with a tiny baby in an unlikely manger in some stall. Like I said these Wise Guys were checking on a conjunction of three planets.

Yet assuming that a virgin, with child (pregnant for you freshmen), did wander into this alleged stall in Bethlehem to have a baby. You know the horses, cows and such, especially if you've lived on a farm, you know those animals in that barn didn't allow a stranger amongst them, to have a baby yet, without doing an awful lot of squawking.

But aren't you glad it didn't really happen this way?

Budget cuts won't be felt until next year

By LARRY SMITH, Financial Aid Director. While the current national swing toward conservatism is having its side effects on student financial aid, the full force of budget cuts will not be substantially felt until next academic year.

In an effort to cut back on the multi-billion dollar financial aid programs, Congress passed the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1981. This act may just be the tip of the iceberg of things to come. If the Reagan Administration is successful in balancing the national budget, decreasing taxes, and increasing military spending, severe cuts must be made somewhere, and no program seems to be safe at this point. The Guaranteed Student Loan Program suffered more than any of the other programs due to the Reconciliation Act. Previously available to all students without regard to income, the loan is now restricted to students whose family adjusted gross income for 1980 was $30,000 or less. Those whose income exceeded $30,000 must prove need for the loan through a needs test. This change went into effect October 1, 1981.

The GSL Program also now requires the borrower to pay a 5 percent origination fee at the time the loan is made. This eliminates some of the subsidy the federal government had previously been paying. Interest rates on this loan were raised from 7 percent to 9 percent recently.

Other changes in the GSL Program require all Social Security and Veterans benefits to be directly applied to the student's cost of education. For example, if a student is receiving Social Security benefits of $200 per month, $1,600 would be subtracted from the student's estimated cost of attendance for the academic year. Heretofore the Social Security and Veterans benefits were counted as family income and not applied directly to the borrower's budget.

Independent students are no longer eligible for $3,000 per year on the GSL. The Reconciliation Act made both independent and dependent undergraduate borrowers eligible for the same amount -- $2,500. Graduate students are still eligible for up to $5,000 per year.

The Federal Government will spend around $3 billion on the GSL Program this fiscal year through interest subsidies to lenders and default claims (some 12 percent of all borrowers default on the loan).

Fortunately, changes in the GSL Program have had little effect on JSU students, since most applicants had already received their loans for this academic year.

Interest rates on the National Direct Student Loan and Federal Nursing Loan Programs have also increased. The National Direct Loan interest rates went from 4 percent to 5 percent recently while the Nursing Loan jumped from 3 percent to 6 percent. These increases do not concern loans which were issued before August 13, 1981 for Nursing Loans, or October 1, 1981 for National Direct Loans.

Three programs have been completely eliminated—the Law Enforcement Loan, Law Enforcement Grant, and Federal Nursing Scholarship Programs.

Currently it appears that the College Work Study Program will remain at level funding for the next academic year. This means the Congress will in all likelihood appropriate the same amount for this program next year as for the current year. Since new institutions are becoming eligible for the program each year, this means fewer dollars for everyone concerned.

Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants is another program which appears to be in line for level funding. The State Student Incentive Grant Program, however, seems to be in real trouble for continued funding. Even if the Congress continues the program, this money must be matched by each state in order to receive funding. At the present time there is serious doubt that the Alabama Legislature will fund this grant program past this year.

Social Security educational benefits are being phased out. If a student is eligible to receive benefits as of August, 1981, the student will continue to be eligible through August, 1985. During the first year, benefits will be at the current level. From July, 1982 through July, 1983, benefits will be 75 percent of what they are now. Benefits continue to decrease by 25 percent annually until August, 1985, at which point they terminate. No benefits are to be paid during the summer months during this phase-out period. The only exception to the phase-out is for disabled students, who continue to be eligible through their 22nd birthday.

The Basic Grant Program will be called the Pell Grant Program after this year. It now appears that maximum Pell Grants will be cut around $80 for next year. A more conservative needs test, however, is expected to restrict many students who are currently receiving the grant.

Most financial aid administrators are voicing their opposition to the cut-back in assistance funds.

Since the House and Senate are both conducting hearings at present to determine next year's appropriations bills, it would certainly be timely if you wrote your senator or representative and voiced your concern. The Alabama Legislature will also be convening in January to pass an appropriations bill for 1982-83. If you feel the Alabama State Grant Program is worthwhile and needed, write your state legislator and relate the message.

It is evident that this nation has a commitment to helping students in their endeavors to further their education past the high school level. There is no doubt financial aid will continue to help achieve this commitment, but the next few years will see some major changes in these programs. Loans will have higher interest rates, grants will be more difficult to obtain, campus jobs will be scarce, and academic requirements of all these programs will be tightened.

PAYING FOR THE SYSTEM'S MISTAKES

Dear Editor,

I've read several letters to you in The Chanticleer, but never one in which the sender complains of being forced to pay for mistakes at this University, other than his own.

For instance—

I have a friend who was charged by the Financial Aide (sic) Office, two dollars for a mistake in classes by the computer. The computer had her in one section and her trial schedule had her in a different section. Three weeks after classes had already begun she was called to the dean's office and was told that she had been in the wrong class according to the computer. They charged her fifty cents an hour to drop the course and fifty cents to be put in the class she had been attending, to correct the computer's mistakes. It is not the two dollars that she is upset about, but the principle of the whole thing. The mistake was made by the computer not the student herself.

There is another incident, in which a girl in one of the dorms, broke the pane of glass in one of the doors. She is having to pay for the broken door, which is not fair. The dorm's doors have been faulty since the beginning of the fall semester. The doors will hang at the top, but come free at the bottom. The girl came in one night and tried to open the door; however, the door only came half way open. The girl then started to pull the door to try to free it, for it appeared open. She pulled it several times and the pane broke in the door. The door was supposed to be locked, but since it came half open, it appeared to be open.

The locks don't secure the doors properly. They said it was the girl's fault that the glass broke; therefore, she is to pay for it, before she can register, because the doors were locked. However, if the door had been properly secured and locked the door would not have come open; therefore, the glass pane would not have been broken. It seems to me that the problem of this incident is really the lack of proper maintenance (sic) in dorms. I would like to know how other JSU students feel about the errors made by this University, that are charged to the students.

Sincerely,
Vicki D. Germann

RUDE AWAKENING?

Dear Editor,

The time was 11 a.m. It was a brisk Monday morning just outside of the Jacksonville campus. I woke in time for my second class; today my first class was the easiest!! With eyelids sagging, I reached for my radio hoping to hear some blood circulating rock and roll. The call letters came out, the words were spoken: "WLJS plays the BEST music." I could feel anticipation shimmering over my body! There was a slight pause between words and music, what would my first song of the day be? The moment was perfect. The stage was set, it's... it's... UH!, Welcome Back Kotter!!!! Well, my blood was circulating or should I say boiling! It was at this time that I decided to write my first letter to the paper and voice my opinion on that WHIMPY radio station of ours.

How often do you cut on WLJS and hear music that requires at least partial talent? You usually hear one of three things: 1. Advertisements (sic) 2. Some three choir fruitcake singing about a brokenhearted love affair. 3. A one chord disco "song" with a bass drum that you could set your watch by! When, on rare occasions, you do hear some rock, it's usually faded out half way through to make room for the beat from Brazil! I'm not into heavy rock and roll, I just enjoy hearing something that requires a little more talent. Why not surprise (sic) me and open up a show with "Going For the One" by Yes. Who knows, you might like it.

Thanks for the space,
Tommy Simpkins

WELL WORTH THE EXTRA MONEY

Dear Editor,

In American industries, we reward those doing well by paying them more. When someone has an important job which requires special training, he too is rewarded by a special salary. When someone holds a position which may influence hundreds of individuals, we expect the person to be well prepared and we reward that person by paying him a substantial salary. This is not true in today's educational system.

Today's student, majoring in education, must make 16 on the college entrance test, must maintain at least a 1.25 grade point average, and he must pass the state teachers exam, in order to graduate with a B.S. degree in education. It would seem that someone with this training and qualifications would be paid as highly as someone who has been trained in another field of work. Many excellently trained education majors never make it to the school systems. They are drawn to higher paying and often more glamorous appearing jobs.

These special requirements may be necessary to insure the school systems of the best trained teachers available. But imagine what our educational system would be if we kept those excellently trained teachers we are losing to other jobs. The results might be well worth the extra money it would take to keep those teachers.

Bill Naugher

HANNAH'S SIDE

Dear Editor,

First I would like to say a few words concerning the many letters that appear in the "Chanticleer" that are signed "Anonymous" and "name withheld". To my knowledge there are no such students enrolled at JSU. The anonymous letter is the media of the gutless person. If you are ashamed of it, don't write it. If not, sign your name.

There was one such letter in last week's "Chanticleer" concerning the job being done by the VP of the SGA. I have never read so many words that said so little (695+ words). If we could collect all the fertilizer shoveled in that article, we'd have a bumper crop on the farm.

I will not remark of the efficiency of the VP, because I don't have an unbiased opinion. However, facts are not subject to opinion. The opinion of the majority will be reflected at election time. I'll start where that letter did.

1. Do a little research. The $13,000 net loss from the concert was by no means a record loss. There were outsiders at the concert because the SGA decided that they would like to have the extra proceeds to help offset the cost of the concert (the SGA has rarely, if ever, broken even on a concert).

2. If you can find a reputable outside promotor that the SGA could consult at $2000 per year, I'll take a dozen.

3. The writer spent much time harping on the $200 per month that the VP receives. It is not that much money, considering the number of hours worked per week, and the amount of work that gets done. Also, Uncle Sam and Mr. James get their share.

4. If you don't want to pay the price of a concert ticket, don't (3506 did).

5. Last week's letter sounded as if the writer thought that the VP's only purpose in life is to plan concerts. In comparison with the other duties of the VP, the concerts are only a drop in the bucket. If you want to know what the SGA President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer, and Senators are doing, just stop by the SGA office and ask them. Then you can form your own opinion.

6. The "Southbound Glory" concert. The concert, originally scheduled to be held at the amphitheater, was moved indoors due to rain. There was a large turnout last year, and if it had not rained this year, the concert would probably have had a good turnout.

7. Attacking a person's character in an anonymous letter is just plain scummy. Who puts on the concerts? The SGA. Therefore, when an SGA member says "the concerts we have featured", any person of average intelligence can easily see that the word "we" refers to the SGA. A VP trying to claim credit for the concerts would have said "concerts I have put on".

Next time why don't you put your mind in gear before you put your pen in gear?
Bobby Hannah

JAX HOPPER?

Dear Editor,

I realize that lately a lot of people are writing about the bad things here at JSU. I hate to continue this, but there is something that has been overlooked, and it's getting worse every day. This complaint is directed to everyone who eats in the JAX (sic) HOPPER dining hall. There are signs posted on the poles which say "Pleas (sic) Bus Your Own Tables." Either JSU is made up of a bunch of illiterates (sic) or people are to (sic) lazy to walk the few extra steps to put their tray up. I realize that by dinner time most people are tired and really don't fill (sic) like putting your tray up, but the workers have been working since 4 and it's not our job to pick up after 19 and 20 year olds. Maybe you think it won't hurt to leave one tray or glass, but when everyone does the place is a pig pen. Last night when we started to pick up the tables there was a glass or some form of dish on every table. One day I wish we could leave all those dishes and let everyone see the mess and have to eat around it. My second complaint relates to the first, if you start to leave your tray and someone asks you to pick it up, please don't get smart with them, just take your tray. Maybe a lot of you figure since the workers have to pick up the tray why not leave them. Well all of the student workers put in a full day of classes and then come in to work and last thing we want to do is pick-up after messy people. I realize that I've cataorgized (sic) everyone who eats at the JAX (sic) HOPPER so in closing I'd like to thank everyone who does pick up their trays.

International Thanksgiving House breaks down barriers

By MICHAEL PALMER

Several of our international students spent the Thanksgiving holidays in Shocco Springs, just outside Talladega. They were part of a group of about 70 international students and a handful of Americans from all over Alabama who shared their holidays learning about each other.

Dr. Tommy Starks, from New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary was the main speaker. Dr. Starks holds a Doctor of Theology degree in World Religions from Iowa State University and was therefore well qualified to lead this conference involving Moslems, Buddhists, Shintoists, Christians, and Atheists.

Religion was one of the main topics of discussion, some others being world hunger, peace, and prejudice. Dr. Starks made the point that no matter what religion you profess, it should work toward worldwide peace and a solution to the problem of hunger. He stressed that your faith should help you help other people.

During the four day conference the students learned from each other and some came to realize that people all over the world are basically the same. They have the same needs for friendship, acceptance, understanding, and love.

The weekend also provided time for recreation. Hiking, jogging, volleyball, and tennis were among the outdoor sports, while a variety of indoor games was also available: among them—ping-pong and foosball.

Many of the American students present realized the great contribution that international students make to our campuses. They enrich our culture by showing us different ways of acting and speaking. They bring ideas which challenge our ways of thinking.

The topics discussed at International Thanksgiving House can also be applied here at Jax State. We could all stand a little less prejudice and a little more concern for our fellow man.

BCM owes much to Tad

Maria Palmer
Living Editor

There may be some people in JSU who have not heard of the Baptist Campus Ministry (BCM). But then, I ran across a sophomore in one of my classes who didn't know we have a campus newspaper.

The BCM is the largest extra-curricular organization on campus. Last year it involved 1,800 students, that is 38 percent of the student body. The BCM is everywhere (because the BCM is people); but its headquarters is located in the middle of campus (between Martin and Brewer Halls) and is regarded by many weary students as an oasis where one can recover from the trauma of flunking a test, being hollered at, or taking 20 pages of notes in 50 minutes. You may think this is an exaggeration, but I assure you, I'm not far from describing a case history.

As a campus minister, John Tadlock is a central figure at the BCM. Although his "congregation" has changed every year since he arrived in 1968, Tad has remained basically the same: a counselor, a problem-solver, a listener, a dreamer, and a friend.

Tad had spent the last 13 1/2 years of his life trying to provide an effective ministry for JSU. He has tried to reach out to students to help them discover their worth and their potential (using everything from conversations at the cafeteria to planned seminars at the Student Center).

Tad has helped many girls to realize that being a Christian doesn't mean accepting a second-rate position in life. Women have experienced an atmosphere of equality at the BCM that few co-ed organizations offer. They have learned that the words "there is no difference" (Galatians 3:28) are part of the Bible too and that tradition does not make discrimination right.

Tad has helped many young and ambitious students to apply Christianity to their basically "lay" careers. He has helped us realize that one's philosophy of life or faith has to be reflected by one's actions and attitudes, if it is anything more than a front.

More than anything else, Tad has caused many students who have passed through his office to re-examine themselves and confront their own beliefs.

Tad believes in being present where students go. "I want to know more than the students who are active in our program," he explains. He doesn't sit in his office waiting for people to come to him; he is at the cafeteria, at the coliseum, at the football games.

In 1976 Tad was invited to become the honorary chaplain of the football team (at the time Clarky Mayfield was coach). Tadlock says this has opened many doors and the biggest payoff has been the opportunity to "build Almost heaven. . .

(This is the last of a three-part series.)

By RANDY HARTLEY, Editor

Summer missions, like much of life, is a series of ups and downs. The ups occurred more frequently than usual, and the downs were few, far between, and easily overcome in the environment.

Russ (the summer missionary from Florida), a friend and I went to the First Baptist Church of Cenedo, West Virginia, one Wednesday night where Russ was to lead the youth group in a Bible study. The "group" consisted of one other person. But Russ told me that night he felt his summer mission was complete because he'd been a friend to a couple of local youth.

July 16 the Holts picked me up on their way back to South Charleston from a two-week vacation. I was glad to be back "home." I had originally been told I would spend my entire summer in Kenova, West Virginia, and after only two weeks there I could see where the Lord had decided I'd be better off in South Charleston, for Him and me. I loved my work there. And the time I had to myself with the Lord. I related better to the youth I worked with, and the groups that came from churches in other states. And the outgoing personality of the Highland Avenue Baptist pastor, Jim Holt, was rather complementary to my not so outgoing personality.

PROVERBS 20:28.

I started reading the 23rd Psalm, after returning to South Charleston, five times a day for seven days, as prescribed in a book I was reading. The prescription called for a careful study of each line in the Psalm, taking time to discuss its real meaning and pertinence to the individual's life. It was to be read prayerfully before and after breakfast, after lunch, after the evening meal, and before bedtime. Worked wonders for me. And I incorporated the idea into a Bible study and shared the prescription with one of the senior citizens who visited Highland Avenue from Mississippi my last week here, to help with a phone survey.

Saturday night, July 18, I went with Carl, friend from Highland Ave., to a youth rally at a nearby state forest. The devotion at the youth rally was led by a good friend of mine, Jeff Price, another summer missionary, from Tennessee. He talked about following the crowd—even the Christian crowd—and how it can cost and affect a person's individuality.

Afterwards seven of us went to see the Charleston Charlies in action. The Charlies represented this summer's major league baseball, the triple A ranks. And they won both games of a doubleheader.

July 26 marked the beginning of one of the highlights of the summer, a statewide youth camp near Cowen, West Virginia. I worked with children in the fourth through the sixth grades, as counselor for six, in the Front-view Cabin. There were two other counselors (one being Jeff Price) and 11 other kids in our cabin.

It turned cold in West Virginia at night, even in the summer, as Jeff and I found out at 1 a.m. when, wearing our gym shorts, we took one of our kids to see the camp nurse.

Summer missionaries are told during what little training they receive to "be flexible," and it's a good watchword to remember. Joel Thrasher, another representative of Jax State who travelled all over the country this summer working with the Brotherhood Commission, was stretched to the limit in West Virginia, experiencing organization mountain state-style. But then I went through such organization a few times myself, at camp for instance.

I was put in charge of a drawing class for the entire camp. I'd had two drawing classes at junior college, years ago. And with that experience I "taught" 38 kids how to draw. I had two separate classes, and by the second one on the first day I could honestly say I had taught drawing before.

One of the biggest thrills for me at camp was seeing kids receive Jesus, particularly Bro. Jim Holt's daughter, Marcie, and a youth nicknamed "Chewels" that I had worked with while in Kenova. The time we (Russ, Bro. Sheriff and I, etc.) spent praying for him had not been in vain.

1 JOHN 4:16.

August 1, back "home" again, I started chauffeuring ladies from the Hazelhurst, Miss. group around. They were in town to conduct a phone survey for the church, and I (See HEAVEN, page 8)

Seniors exhibit art works

By MARIA PALMER

In December, 1981, the Art Department will proudly graduate three art majors. During the reception which officially opened the Senior Art Exhibit (in Hammond Hall), the Chanticleer had the opportunity to interview these students and discuss their artwork and their careers.

Jim Beene, from Birmingham, had an impressive collection on display. He has specialized in commercial art (advertisement in particular) and his artwork has an effective photographic realism. Beene stated that two people have had a great influence on his artistic development: Phill Carpenter and Marvin Shaw, who presently teaches commercial art. Beene admires Rockwell and Frazetta, but he is also trying to learn and train himself in other styles. He had some beautiful impressionistic pieces which, he explained, he had done for his own personal enjoyment.

Teresa Farrow has also specialized in commercial art. She explained that through commercial art she is better able to combine her artistic abilities with her marketing training (Teresa has a minor in Marketing). Ms. Farrow is specially thankful to Dr. Holmes and Mr. Shaw from the Art Department, because, she said "They made me believe I could do it." Of course, it takes more than thinking you can do it. Teresa has discovered that the main ingredient is hard work and dedication to go along with "a little bit of talent."

Karen Hollis is interested in commercial art, but not as a career. "I'm interested in all of it," she explained. Karen plans to teach secondary school, so she will have the opportunity to experiment with different styles and artforms.

Karen was the only senior displaying pottery pieces. They are not for sale, she explained, because they have all been given away already. It is easy to understand why her pottery is in great demand.

Karen expressed her gratitude towards Mr. Osterbind, her drawing teacher and a person who has influenced her in her artistic development.

All three graduating seniors donated one of their works to the JSU permanent collection, which is housed in offices, and public areas all over campus. These works are still on display and were marked by Dr. Burns so that visitors can recognize them.

We congratulate Jim, Teresa and Karen, and wish them the best for the future.

Activities at the International House

Henry Willett, left, folk art coordinator for the Alabama Council on Arts and Humanities, was dinner forum speaker at JSU's International House recently.

Students visiting with him are Sian Parry of Wales, Parham Perry of Weaver, Loreta Ballas of Chile and Umo Mba of Nigeria.

By Jon Hughes

When a pop song is recorded and released, either of two things may happen: the record will get played or it will not. If it is played, it is because someone likes it, or is told to play it, or is paid to play it. If it is not played, it is because it is bad, ignored, or censored. Here I discuss the latter case in so far as such music is broadcast over public air waves. (What you take into your home is your own responsibility.)

A record may be censored by various individuals and chief among them (in order of prevalence) are radio station managers, religious or community leaders, and government officials. Reasons for such action run the gamut from profanity to volatile political statement. The number one "Another Brick in the Wall" by Pink Floyd was banned in politically unstable South Africa. The poignant 1969 "Give A Damn" from Spanky and Our Gang was refused air-play all over America. Even Olivia Newton-John can't get "Physical" in Salt Lake City—banned under a Mormon code declared unconstitutional last week in the U. S. Supreme Court. John Lennon's "Woman Is The Nigger of the World" and "Some Girls" by the rolling Stones were censored for perceived racial slurs. The BBC in London is Notorious for its Victorian moral attitude; one example is "Hi Hi Hi" by Wings, banded for obscure reference to "body gum". Often a song is released in two versions, as in 1959 when Lloyd Price released "Stagger Lee". The song was scheduled for performance on Dick Clark's American Bandstand. But Clark would not allow a song about gambling and murder on his "upstanding" program. So Price rewrote the song so that Stagger Lee and Billy argue instead of gamble and no one dies. ABC liked this change and Price recorded this "clean" version for the number one single.

There have certainly been songs that slipped by the censor. Here is a partial list:

- "Love To Love You, Baby"—Donna Summer (1976).
- "Pictures of Lily"—The Who (1967).
- "Lola"—The Kinks (1970).
- "Good Girls Don't"—The Knack (1980).
- "Walk On the Wild Side"—Lou Reed (1973).
- "Come and Get It"—Badfinger (1970).
- "Don't Stand So Close to Me"—The Police (1981).
- "I Gotcha"—Joe Tex (1972).
- "Good Golly Miss Molly"—Little Richard (1953).

To censor, or not to censor . . .

This is not the question. More important is what to censor, and this is determined by the society in which we are immersed. Also, the arguments abound as to why we censor at all. Limited as I am here, I can not resolve the argument, merely add to it. This I gladly do, at your service.

relationships with the finest student-athletes." Tad confessed that as an athlete himself he was reliving his past through the Gamecocks.

When asked to identify the biggest lesson learned in J'ville, Tad was quick to answer, "I've learned that my worth is not dependent on my achievements, but that anybody is a person of worth through the very act of creation . . . that I can't earn brownie points with God." That is the lesson Tad has tried to teach everyone of the students that he has come in contact with: that he-she has infinite worth. Tad's biggest reward from working in JSU? The relationships with a variety of students, which have helped him in his own personal growth, he says.

Maybe the hardest thing for Tadlock to explain is why he is leaving Jacksonville. He said, "I don't know how to explain it in non-religious terms," and simply added that he felt God was leading him, that it is God's will that he and his family go at this time. He confessed it was a painful experience to pull out deep roots, but that at the same time he is excited. Tad feels that he has gotten too comfortable in J'ville. "When a person gets this way, one is tempted to relax and let things happen—one ceases to grow," he explained. He said he feels excited about the challenges and newness of the work at Clemson. "It would be easy for me to stay here because I feel secure at almost every point. And yet I feel almost a compulsion to be true to the spirit of adventure. My family is taking it in much the same way," Tad finished.

Although we are saddened by the prospect of not having Tad around, we have to say a sincere THANK YOU for the years of hard work and dedication he has invested in us. May God bless you, Tad.

Japanese bomb Pearl Harbor

By RANDY HARTLEY
Editor

December 7, 1941, at 7:55 a.m. (Hawaiian time) Japanese air forces bombed the U. S. Navy to pieces at what was then our territory of Hawaii.

Members of the JSU staff and faculty were asked to remember what they were doing on that day of infamy 40 years ago and to relate to us how they reacted.

Dean Boozer of the College of Science and Mathematics "was playing basketball in the backyard at home on Sunday afternoon" when he heard the news. He had just "got back from church." One of his parents, who had been listening to the radio, came out and told the boys. He said he was so conditioned with faith and confidence in the U.S. he was sure it would be just "a short time before we'd teach them a few lessons."

Jerry Cole, Athletic Director, said, "Are you assuming I'm old enough to remember that?" He was at his Mama and Papa Norton's in Heflin at a family get together. He does remember his parents and other discussing it, but he was only six-years-old at the time and doesn't recall much more than that.

Dr. Clyde Cox, head of the English department, remembers listening to his father and local people talk about the bombing. He was in the barn at the time he heard about it. He says people were "unanimous in thinking the war would last only eight weeks."

Carolyn Hand, Dr. Montgomery's secretary, said, "I was a student here at Daugette Hall." Her reaction was one of disbelief. She remembers "listening to the radio," and "everyone getting frantic and upset." Some of the military people were in the dorm at the time, and they started leaving the building.

Opal A. Lovett, assistant professor of English, remembers boarding the "school bus to go to school the next day.

Some kids knew it. All the teachers knew it. Everyone was appalled." By the time she graduated, classmates she knew were in the war. Mrs. Lovett remembers a step-up of manufacturing and productivity in farming and the textile industries.

Opal R. Lovett, school photographer, remembers, "Everybody had radios on listening to Roosevelt. I thought we had lost everything and didn't think we could come back. Everybody became suspicious of anybody that was Oriental."

Dr. Theron Montgomery, University president, remembers being at home that Sunday afternoon, "Our radio was on." The program was interrupted to announce the bombing; the phone rang, and people began to debate where Pearl Harbor was. He was a senior in high school and "horrified, totally." His reaction was "of complete hostility. I realized my world was being turned around." Before the war was over, he was in Patton's Army.

Howard Prichard, assistant professor of economics, recalls, "I was taking a damn nap. The radio woke me up." He was a student at Howard College in Birmingham (now Samford University). "It was a shocking world event, but it didn't surprise me. We had had the invasion from Mars. I thought it was another Orson Welles event."

Dr. Ernest Stone, president emeritus, was "at a Sunday School meeting on Sunday afternoon in Geraldine, Alabama." He was president of the DeKalb County Sunday School Association and principal of Crossville High School. "I got in my car at four, turned on the radio, and heard the bombs falling. Didn't anybody go to church that night." He remembers the rationing of food, clothes, shoes and gas. "Everything was done with deliberate speed."

Pearl Harbor was bombed 40 years ago yesterday. But it doesn't hurt to remember shocking events can happen.

Mrs. Joyce Shaw befriends students

The normal greeting for one stepping into the office of the College of Humanities and Social Sciences is the combination of a cheerful hello and soft cascade of laughter that comes from the secretary to Dean T. Allen Smith, Mrs. Joyce Shaw.

Originally from Illinois, Mrs. Shaw took up her University position three years ago after she and her family moved to Alabama in 1977.

Describing herself as "a transplanted Northerner," she said of the South, "It's true that Southerners are very friendly. I appreciate that so much and don't think that we'll ever care to leave here."

Mrs. Shaw said that, since she came to the University, she has been amazed at "the willingness of everyone to help" and has come to enjoy all the "tremendous" people she works with.

Herself possessing quite a friendly and welcoming personality, Mrs. Shaw finds delight in sharing of the experiences she has had, especially during the transition of the College to its new building. She fondly recalls the time when she began her job in a small office in Ayers Hall and had her "first set of files stacked up against the wall with a box of Kleenex."

Her husband, W. Earl Shaw, is the minister of Indian Oaks Christian Church in Saks and she finds herself busy with many activities outside her job. She says that she has "developed a green thumb in the past ten years" and can't find enough room for all her plants, while reading and lessons in painting also share her time. She hopes to continue her college education in the future.

The mother of four children, two of whom are college students, Mrs. Shaw finds that "making things go easier for those students who need help" is an important part of her job.

Continually relating amusing stories of her time at the University, Joyce Shaw's presence on the second floor of the Stone Center is a delight to all who meet her.

The idea of writing a book about the people she works for and with arises in her conversation often and there are no doubts many who wish she would.

Dr. Fagan elected to office

Dr. Mark Fagan of the social work program was recently elected co-chairman of the Alabama-Mississippi Social Work

Educators for 1981-82. The educators association has been in operation for ten years and is made up of faculty members in social work from all the universities and colleges that have social work programs in Mississippi and Alabama. Some of the universities include: University of Alabama, U.A.B., University of North Alabama, Troy State University, Auburn University, University of Montevallo, Tuskegee Institute, Delta State University, University of Southern Mississippi, Mississippi State University, Mississippi University for Women, and Mississippi State College. The main function of the co-chairman, one chairman from each state, is to plan an annual conference for 1982. It is good to see that our faculty members are getting recognition from other social work educators in the area.

Dr. Whitesel, a multi-talented librarian

By BRENDA DEES

When your feet land on the 6th floor of the Houston Cole Library, you are greeted by a cordial and helpful librarian. He wears glasses, he explains a lot and smiles a lot, he's George E. Whitesel.

Mr. Whitesel enjoys working at the library because he likes problem solving and people. He says that he gets, "tremendous pleasure out of putting things in people's hands that they need."

He taught English for 15 years. He received a Master's degree in English. Following the degree achievement, he taught English Composition at Penn State and Michigan State. After teaching, he pursued and received a doctorate's degree of English. After which he added a master's degree of Library Science to his credit. In reference to his work at the library, Dr. Whitesel adds, "I still consider myself teaching when I give these long elaborate explanations."

During his college life he enjoyed handball, swimming, and amateur acting. Of these activities, amateur acting is his favorite. He started as an amateur actor at age 8. He was one of the first three males to appear on the stage of Western College for women. His first leading role was that of a motherless boy in the ghost mystery, "The Lady Who Came To Stay." He played a court wizard in Thurbles' "Fable."

In Anniston theater he's appeared in approximately nine plays. His biggest role was that of George's neighbor in "Send Me No Flowers." He also played a butler who was secretly the undercover agent in "Sherlock Holmes." In reference to acting Mr. Whitesel said, "I enjoy character parts because of the effort involved to make yourself something other than what you are." He also added, "I love to do accents, but I've been told that they're lousy."

Since his arrival here at JSU, he has seen changes in the students and countryside. Dr. Whitesel explained that when he first came to JSU he was surprised at the number of students who were born in Jacksonville, raised in Jacksonville, went to school in Jacksonville and who expected to get a job and marry here. Now, however, there seems to be a lessening of this trend along with more out-of-state students. Dr. Whitesel mourns the passing of the rural South. He adds that there is a high quality of a lifestyle in that the unspoiled countryside is as well known as the Shakespeare Festival. Dr. Whitesel also notes that the students here at JSU have a high level of personal character, well behaved for the most part, and respectful. He says, "Many positive experiences are largely due to students."

Since he works at the library one might assume that he has tired of books, but reading and collecting books are his hobbies. He cites Dr. Samuel Johnson's philosophy of spot reading as a guide to his own reading habits. He said, "I'm understanding more and more what he talks about."

With everything that he does he also participates in outdoor hiking and camping, canoeing, gardening, and probably lots more. No wonder he knows the Houston Cole Library from top to bottom.

drove them to the houses we had acquired for the use of telephones.

The Hazelhurst group left to go home one day before I did, and before they left, two of the grandmotherly - types each put five dollars in my back pocket. I tried to refuse it, but I was glad the next day I hadn't.

I had flown to West Virginia from Atlanta, but decided to fly back to Birmingham, a little closer to home. I'd had 35 dollars the day before until I picked up the other ten, and the plane flight from Charleston to Atlanta and then Birmingham cost me an extra forty-two dollars. I had three left over. Coincidence? I don't think so.

My flight didn't take off the next morning because of fog. But I was on the 2:45 that afternoon and back in Alabama before sundown. I found out while in West Virginia John Denver's song, "Country Roads," is about the western part of the state of Virginia.

Thru baseball strikes, air controllers, and threatening mailmen, my summer was over. But I never quite had the feeling my mission was complete.

The state missions director in West Virginia, Floyd Tidsworth, said the Home Mission Board has reporters, and I told him if I apply again that's what I want to do. He said there's enough happening in West Virginia alone to keep me busy. Maybe next summer.

We'll see.

Thanks Tad, for 13½ years of service

By KIM WHITEHEAD

On May 20, 1968, the Rev. John Tadlock came to the city of Jacksonville to start what many have described as "an outstanding career of service."

After 13 years, the man affectionately known by students and colleagues alike as "Tad" is now leaving his positions as Baptist Campus Minister and chaplain of the football team at JSU.

He will leave in December to take up a similar post in Baptist work at Clemson University.

At a formal reception held in his honor on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 22, Tadlock said of leaving the city of Jacksonville, "I'm sad about the departure, primarily because we consider this home. Our roots tend to be deeply embedded in this community after 13 years."

His family includes wife Lacey, daughter Kristen, and son Kelly, who was born in Jacksonville.

Of leaving the students he has worked for so long, Tadlock stated, "That's the worst part. I love the students here at the University."

Under his guidance, the Baptist Campus Ministry has consistently maintained one of the largest student groups in the state and South and in the summer of this year sent out the second largest number of summer missionaries of any college in the nation.

Having served as chaplain of the JSU football team since 1976, Tadlock said, "The 'payback' to me from my work as team chaplain has been tremendous. I have had the opportunity to work with what I consider to be some of the finest student athletes anywhere. I'm grateful to my close friend, Jim Fuller, and the other members of the coaching staff for making me feel a real part of their program."

Originally from Harrisville, Miss., Tadlock attended Mississippi College and received his Master of Divinity from New Orleans Seminary, also doing graduate work at Southern Seminary and JSU. His first campus ministry position lasted four years as he worked at Copiah-Lincoln Junior College in Wesson, Miss.

Tadlock credits his wife Lacey, a teacher in the Calhoun County School System, for the success of his ministry. "Any success in my career can be attributed to the sacrifices she has made," he said.

Accepting the position with Clemson is the fulfillment of a goal for Tadlock.

"Though I never thought it would come true, I always had in the back of my mind the idea of going to a major college like the University of Clemson.

"The college and city are similar to Jacksonville in size and the very close-knit family atmosphere found in this city also exists there," he continued.

Tadlock will assume his post at Clemson on Dec. 21.

At a reception held in his honor Sunday, Nov. 22, the Reverend John Tadlock was presented a plaque by Dr. Harold Chandler, Director of Missions in the Calhoun Baptist Association, in appreciation of his years of service

Tadlock received a pencil drawing of the student center at Thursday night's Council Installation Banquet.

A simple thank you...

By LIZ HOWLE

Thank you

For the times you took to talk when you didn't have time to.

For seeing my potential and prying it out of me.

For encouraging me to "get at it"

When I didn't think I had the needed talents.

For encouraging and lifting up when the world was pushing down.

For seeking to understand when others just said, "You're wrong."

For bringing to mind what Christ said

instead of telling me what others said,

For loving, giving, sharing, sacrificing.

Thank you

ATO

By GARY SHAMBLIN

ATO congratulates the Gamecocks and the entire coaching staff for another great season. We also would like to extend our appreciation to the marching Southerners, ballerinas, cheerleaders, and our mascot for their brilliant performances.

The Taus lost a close one in our championship game by a narrow margin of 12-10. We congratulate Kappa Sigma for winning the football championship. It was a tremendous effort by both teams. Our scores came on a 85 yard run by Randy Pauley and a 40 yard field goal by Bobby Lane. We are proud of our second place finish for the football season, because we feel that the race for the all sports trophy will be very close. We are also very proud of the support of our little sisters.

Pledge of the week honors go to Lance Gullledge and Mack Davis. The brothers elected Susan Davis as little sister of the week.

From all of ATO—good luck on your exams and don't do anything we wouldn't do over the holiday break.

ATO—the only way to go.

KAPPA SIGMA REPORT

By KENT BAGWELL

The Kappa Sigma Fraternity wishes to thank the Jacksonville State Gamecocks for a supreme season of football. It was some of the best football this university has ever seen. We are all looking forward to another successful season next year, and as far as we are concerned you are definitely winners.

The final pledge of the week for this semester is Bull Kay. He has done very well all semester and no one deserves this honor more. Congratulations on a job well done.

The Kappa Sig Christmas party is scheduled for Saturday night, Dec. 12. I'm sure this year's party will compare with the exciting Christmas parties of former times, and we all are looking forward to celebrating the happiness which accompanies this season. More importantly this party is a perfect farewell for the holidays and a chance to express the wonderful sentiments each of us have for one another.

We wish everyone the best of luck during finals and please have a safe trip home. Enjoy the holiday break to the fullest, we each deserve a rest from school. We hope the time spent with your families is happy and come back safely to Jax State in January ready to start a new semester.

The Sigs will be ready for another major sport to begin next year. Our basketball team is showing a great deal of enthusiasm for the upcoming season, and they are ready to begin playing for more points toward the coveted "All Sports Trophy." (Now that the volleyball nets are off the courts and out of the way) Merry Christmas and have a happy new year and be careful.

Being Greek doesn't mean being drunk

Instead of drinking each other under the table, Greeks have been clearing drinks off the table at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. The occasion is the third annual "Week on the Wagon," during which Alpha Tau Omega fraternity brothers stop drinking for an entire week.

"We want to help demonstrate to students that there are alternatives to drinking, and you don't have to go to bars to have fun," said organizer Tom Hupp. "It's a time to re-evaluate your own drinking habits."

The idea began three years ago, in response to the bonfires and destruction left in the wake of drunken revelry, associated with the Nebraska-Oklahoma football game. "The campus was getting a bad name by the community," Hupp says. "They probably thought that all we did was drink and run wild like that."

To show that Greeks are more than drinkers, the ATOs initiated Week on the Wagon, joined this year by two sororities. That brings the total number of participants to about 250 or 300, Hupp estimates. "I would like to see this go campuswide among all Greeks soon," he adds.

Meanwhile, the spirit is being spread through a Saturday night "Dry Dance," open to the public.

TERRY STEPHENS—CB

HARRIS MONTGOMERY—RB

A. W. CLARK—RB

Thanks for the memories

By ALISON ANDREWS

"Any team must rely on senior leadership . . ." These are the words of head football coach Jim Fuller. This year the Gamecocks lost seven fine men—seniors, leaders.

Five of these men—A. W. Clark, Harris Montgomery, Frankie O'Dell, Lowell Preskitt, and Terry Stephens—played four years here at Jacksonville. The remaining two, Calvin Rackley and Marshall Riley, transferred from other colleges. Each will tell you it wasn't easy. A lot of sacrifices have to be made to make a team. But all agree that it has been rewarding—a vital part of their development.

Coach Fuller does not hesitate to admit that the team did rely a lot on these few. "They all did everything they could do, and accomplished a lot, even though they sometimes fell short of their goals, and these accomplishments have not always been on the football field. It has been a real experience for me to work with these guys."

A. W. Clark, one of the four-year veterans, particularly enjoyed traveling with the team. A. W. is a P. E. major. After graduation, he hopes to coach football at his alma mater, Saks High School in Anniston. A. W. was the Gamecock running back and also returned the kick-offs.

Terry Stephens, who played strong safety is also a P. E. major. Terry is from Jacksonville. Rather than leaving home, Terry wanted to play for his hometown—"I'd rather help them than anybody."

Frankie O'Dell, defense tackle, lived in Bynum and attended Wellborn High School, but he and his wife, Martha, claim now that their home is Jacksonville. Frankie's major is Special Education, and he would like to teach and coach for a few years, then get an insurance license.

Marshall Riley, also a defensive tackle, is from Swansea, S. C. He transferred from Auburn University where he started for three years. Claims Riley, "I came to Jacksonville because it was my last chance to play. I wanted to play my last year on a winning team."

Calvin Rackley transferred from Marion Institute. He majors in recreation and minors in English. Last year he played defensive tackle, and played offensive tackle this year until he broke his ankle during the UT-Martin game. Calvin has sustained many injuries throughout his career, but in spite of two broken ankles and many torn ligaments, he assures me that he thoroughly enjoyed playing.

Lett is All-American

Quarterback Ed Lett, who broke every Gulf South Conference career passing record in leading Jacksonville State University to the Gulf South Conference title this past year, has been named to the Kodak Coaches All-America team.

The talented junior from Glencoe, who has led the Gamecocks to two straight NCAA playoff berths, passed for 20 touchdowns this year and 20 more in 1980. Lett's 649 attempts, 362 completions, 4661 yards and 40 touchdowns are new GSC career marks. Lett broke or tied 15 game, season and career records in 1980-81.

He broke the four-year records despite missing two games with a broken hand and another with broken ribs.

"Lett is very deserving of All-America honors," head coach Jim Fuller said here today after being informed of the good news. "He is the heart of our offense."

Lett is the second Gamecock player to be named to the Kodak team. Jesse Baker, now with the Houston Oilers, was named in 1977 and 1978.

Season ends early for Gamecocks

(Editor's note: The following story was taken from The Anniston Star.)

By RICK BRAGG

SAN MARCOS, Texas—Jim Fuller is tired of the long trips, long games, and long faces.

All the effort and emotion of a big game just isn't worth the trouble, he says, unless you get something in return.

"One of these days, we're going to be good enough to play in front of our own fans," said Fuller, after watching Southwest Texas State shove Jacksonville State University from the NCAA Division II playoffs. "We're either going to have to be ranked high enough in the polls, or beat somebody who is. We haven't done that, and our fans have been cheated."

"They deserve the right to see us play in the playoffs, and we haven't been good enough to give them a chance."

Jacksonville has been to the playoffs four of the past five years, but only one game, a 1977 win over North Dakota State in Anniston, was played close to home. The Gamecocks lost to Lehigh in the national championship game in 1977, followed by first-round losses to Delaware ('78) and Cal Poly-SLO ('80).

Delaware and Cal Poly both went on to win the national championship, and Fuller says it's likely that Southwest Texas State is too.

Luck, fate, or whatever has thrown

Jacksonville into battles with the best, cutting short the Gamecocks' season before they could bring the fight to Paul Snow Memorial Stadium.

But Fuller says there's no consolation in that for players, fans, or coaches.

"We've played great teams," said Fuller. "We've only had good teams—some great individuals, but only good teams. We're not going to win a national championship until we put together one, and if we have a great team, we'll earn the right to play at home."

Southwest Texas State has that kind of great team, Fuller says. The Bobcats manhandled Jacksonville, whipping the Gamecocks easily in the second half.

"I'd say that we've got a good chance to say we lost to the national championship again this year," said Fuller. "Southwest Texas State can win. There's no doubt about that."

The Bobcats beat Jacksonville with a tricky, option offense directed by quarterback Mike Miller, and a strong defensive pass rush.

While Miller was doing just about anything he wanted to the Jax defense, Gamecock quarterback Ed Lett was running for his life from an awesome pass blitz.

"There the best team we've played this year," says Fuller. "It would be hard for anybody to score against a blitz like that."

Most of this year's Jacksonville team will be back next year, including Lett and a big part of the offense.

What happened at Jax this fall?

Gamecock football rules the campus in the fall. This year was no exception as Jax State fulfilled Sports Illustrated's

Tim Strickland

Sports Editor

prediction that it would be in the playoffs. Heck, we're experts at making the playoffs. We've just got to figure out how to win the first round. Of all the men on the team, the seniors wanted to win the most. But they've got a lot to be proud of. A GSC title is nothing to scoff at.

Speaking of football, have you heard of West Georgia College? If so, have you heard they started playing football again this year after nearly two decades without it? That's not all. The team made the Division III playoffs. Why would a college start playing football at a time when many schools are talking about dropping theirs?

"They feel like they can draw more students from their own area instead of losing them to schools like us," explained Dr. Jerre Cole, JSU's athletic director. "They can see the value of a good program," he said.

Dr. Cole also mentioned the fact that a group from West Georgia College came to Jax State to talk about and gather information on the ins and outs of a football program. We've played the school in baseball and basketball—they're Division II in those sports. Why not a football matchup?

"Not a chance," according to Dr. Cole. "At least not in the next few years. We contacted them about the possibility of playing them since they're only 50 or 60 miles away. But they gave us a definite 'no,'" Cole said.

However, Dr. Cole hopes to make a trip to the college during the Christmas holidays to discuss matchups between the two schools in baseball and basketball.

Meanwhile, both the men's and women's gymnastic teams appear to be on their way to great and exciting seasons.

Steve Bailey's golf team had some bright spots this semester and they're keeping in swing for the spring season. And his girls basketball team won its only conference game to date bringing the girls to a present 2-4 record.

"Our schedule has been real tough so far," said Bailey.

Bailey pointed out three girls who are playing well. They are Betty Fykes, Tonya Gober, and Darlene Nolen. Nolen is currently leading the state in rebounds with a 15.3 per game average.

To get off the subject of sports, last month I wrote an editorial about the unsightly trash along the highway from Anniston. ATO (who seems to be on top of everything this semester) is reported to have cleaned up a sizeable stretch of the dump. Way to go!

Since this is the last Chanticleer until January, we're going to miss some basketball games. But we'll try to bring you up to date in our next edition.

Y'all have a Merry Christmas and a great start on the new year!

A hoppin' good time

By TIM STRICKLAND
"It's - cra-zy - but - it's - fun!" panted Emily Tierney as she jumped up and down. Just then a frisbee bounced off my head.

"See - what - I'm - talking - a-bout," she shouted above the music.

Emily was right - the Jump Rope for Heart, sponsored by the JSU Physical Education Major's Club, was fun and crazy.

The proceeds from the event will be forwarded for use by the American Heart Association.

Various campus organizations participated in the event which was held in Pete Mathews Coliseum.

What do the participants of such an event do to keep things hoppin'?

"We tied two ropes together and played school," said Rana Griffith of Zeta Tau Alpha. "Some of the KA's were playing school," said Rana Griffith of Zeta Tau Alpha. "Some of the KA's were playing school until we got tired," she said. Burt Grisham of Kappa Alpha was voted KA's jump rope star according to Miss Griffith.

"Our hearts feel so much better," said some of the other jumping Zetas.

"It was worth a Burger King Whopper. Now I can gain back the weight I lost by jumping for three hours!" exclaimed Vickie Rogers.

Scabbard and Blade members of JSU's ROTC program all agreed that they were having a good time.

"We're tearing it up!" they shouted above the WLJS music. The Scabbard and Blade organization won first place in the competition by earning more money on pledges than any other group.

Laura McSpadden of Phi Mu thought the jumpathon was a "real good way to raise money and it's different," she said. "The best part is spending time with friends."

Phi Mu sister Cynthia Brown looked a little bit tired.

"I am tired," she said. "But we're all having fun. We've jumped 15 million different ways so we haven't gotten bored. My feet hurt at first," she recalled, "but not anymore."

Janie Black and Fran Harris of the Ballerinas agreed that the rope jumping made them feel like "little kids" again.

"I get satisfaction if helping other people than otherwise wouldn't get help," remarked ATO brother Keith Angles. "I also came to watch the girls," he admitted with a laugh.

Karen Ellison of Harper's Hearts, a special education team, rubbed her aching legs. "But I'm having lots of fun," she said with a smile.

The event proved to be a huge success in only its second year. The jumpathon is state-wide and sponsored by the Alabama State Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation, and Dance. The proceeds from the event are used to benefit the American Heart Association.

Coach Ronnie Akers managed JSU's Jump Rope for Heart.

"This year we have doubled the amount of participants and tripled the amount of money," he said.

JSU raised $2,300 this year with Scabbard and Blade in first place followed by the ATO Little Sisters and WLJS.

"I was in charge of elementary and secondary schools, Junior Colleges, and Colleges in twelve counties," Akers commented. "Out of those counties, 26 schools signed up. This year we have 52 schools involved. That is more than any other district in the State."

Coach Akers feels the money is being put to good use.

"Fifty-five percent of deaths in the United States are related to cardiovascular diseases," Akers pointed out. "The two most prominent killers are heart attacks and strokes."

Jump Rope for Heart will be back next year so keep your legs in shape to jump again.

Skip it

This charity-minded girl is just one of many Jax Staters that jumped their hearts out to raise money for the American Heart Association.

In Gymnastics

Take off the red shirts

By TIM STRICKLAND

"We're going to surprise a lot of people this year," said Tom Cockley, the new men's gymnastics coach about his talented group.

The team destroyed Clemson last month with a record setting score of 204. Clemson could only muster 132 points.

"We left them in the dust!" Cockley proudly exclaimed.

Although the high score was something to gloat about, the team feels it has only just begun. They've got a lot to make up for after being redshirted last season.

"We should improve tremendously," said Cockley. "Our plan is to peak in time for the Southern Collegiate Championship in mid-March."

In the meet against Clemson, JSU swept all the events by taking first, second and third (except for two places) in all of the six events.

Mark Lee, a senior and captain of the team, took first place in the all-around competition. Steve Lee, Mark's sophomore brother, was second followed by freshman Kenny Moore.

Since Jax State has the only men's gymnastic team in Alabama, all the meets will be at home or out of state. And the Gamecocks are thinking big.

"We feel like we represent the entire state so we're going after all the big Division I schools. The University of Georgia is coming here for a meet on Jan. 15, and Georgia Tech will be here the following week," Cockley informed the Chanticleer. "Both Georgia and Georgia Tech are coming here looking for a wipe out but I think they'll be surprised," he said.

The JSU team is a young team, a factor that other schools might view as a handicap. But the hard work and talent of the men should dispel those thoughts after a few meets.

"With a talented young team like this, we're looking for a national title a few years down the road," remarked Cockley.

After the team was redshirted last season, many people might question how Cockley can have such high hopes.

"We're motivated and we're working hard," was Cockley's defense.

If long hours constitute hard work then the team is indeed working hard — very hard. They practice from 2:30 to 6:30 Monday through Friday. Saturdays are reserved for competition and Sundays are used for more workout. Individuals often head back to the gym in the evening to work out trouble spots. This extreme dedication carries over into the team's academics.

"The guys form study groups and often the upper classmen will spend time with the lower classmen helping them with schoolwork," said Cockley. "even on road trips they have study hours," he added.

Putting together such a fine team couldn't have been easy. After all, men's gymnastics is not as popular in the South as it is in other areas of the country.

"Recruiting is very difficult," agreed Cockley. "Most good prospects look toward the big schools. That's why we feel like we have to compete and do well against the big schools to develop a good program."

Coach Cockley is a real stickler on the team concept but he did talk a little about some of the standouts.

"Mark Lee has already been marked as an All-American in the NAIA. This year, he is looking to fulfill his goal as an all-arounder in the NCAA championships. He is also looking forward to attempting entrance into the Pan American games."

Steve Lee, Mark's younger brother, is following in his brother's footsteps. He's two years behind Mark in school but he's only one year behind in gymnastics. Steve has tremendous potential.

Kenny Moore is another dynamic factor. As a freshman, he is running head-to-head with Steve in the all-around score."

Robert Dillard, coach of the women's team, has already put in some pretty strong words about his girls. The way it sounds, gymnastics might be the sport to watch closely this year.

Cadet of month

John Carter, a 1981 graduate of Anniston High School, was recently awarded a four-year Army ROTC scholarship. Col. Archie Rider, Professor of Military Science, is seen here presenting Carter with the award.

Cadet of the month

By DWAYNE L. GILES
Cadet Captain

In the midst of all distinguished cadets that participated in October Cadet of the Month Board, John Kallerson Jr., emerged as the winner.

John is a native of Alexandria where he lives with his parents, John and Bernadine. John, a junior here at JSU with a three year scholarship, is a member of the Orienteering Club and Scabbard and Blade. He works with the Alexandria Paramedics Department and also teaches paramedics at Gadsden State Junior College. His activities include running and sky diving.

Maj. Blackburn, the board president, stated that "Cadet Kallerson was the clear winner. His personal appearance, knowledge of military subjects and current events was as good as any soldier who has ever appeared before me on any board in the past. Cadet Kallerson has that certain poise and demeanor about him that comes across immediately. His ability to express himself clearly and concisely readily identifies him as a first rate cadet."

Sgt. Godwin stated, "The cadets that came before us were very knowledgeable, courteous and well informed on military subjects and current events. Cadet Kallerson has shown in the past that he is the type soldier the Army needs."

"I'm real proud to represent the cadets for the month of October," Kallerson stated. "I wish all cadets would get involved."

Other cadets that participated were Bobby Lipscomb, Roy Fergurson and Ronald Gienapp, all fine cadets. Congratulations, John!

Lowell Preskitt, another vet, "enjoyed meeting a lot of great guys," and claims he "wouldn't give anything in the world for that." Lowell is listed as a General Business Administration major, and is involved in advanced ROTC. He will receive his commission this summer, but although his next four years will be spent in the military, he is still not sure about a military career.

Harris Montgomery, fullback, says about his football career, "If it's a scar, it's one I never want to get rid of." Harris is PE major and Psychology minor. After graduation in December, 1982, he would like to return to Wellborn High School and coach.

Congratulations, guys, for all your efforts. Good luck in the future, and remember, "Once a winner, always a winner!"

There are still a few openings in the 100 and 200 level Military Science courses. You can add them at the January Registration.

FTX a success

By DARRELL GREEN
Cadet Captain

On Oct. 23, the Junior Cadets from Jacksonville State University participated in a joint field training exercise with two other colleges—Alabama A&M and UNA.

Jacksonville's two battalions of MS III's and the 10th Alabama Ranger detachment departed Rowe Hall enroute to Redstone Arsenal in Huntsville where they would receive their weekend of training. This training was to help prepare the cadets for advanced camp at Fort Riley, Kan., next summer.

Upon arrival at the training area, the schools eagerly unloaded their equipment and formed into equally proportioned platoons. The MS IV cadet cadre acted as squad advisors to the MS III's.

After receiving a briefing from the host university's cadre members, the cadets set up their tents and ate chow. When everyone had finished eating, the evening classes got underway.

Later in the night, the Ranger detachments from each school played the aggressor role against the MS III's. Light and noise discipline were stressed to the juniors.

Fatigued from the night training, the cadets returned to their tent city and bedded down for the night.

During training the next day, the cadets negotiated training objectives at each of the several stations and were then given a refresher course.

The training included such subjects as light anti-tank weapons, reaction to fire—ambush and sniper, range cards, obstacles, and stream crossings.

All in all, it was a successful day of training.

Shooters begin season with win

The Jacksonville State University Varsity Rifle Team began their shooting season Nov. 14 by defeating the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa. The team led by Danny Johnson and veteran shooter Lisa Hanvey fired an 1882 to win the match. New firers Robin Scher and Ted Mauzey made an impressive start in their first match. SSG Chet Godwin, the team coach stated, "With the dedication and potential of this new team I have no doubts we can again this season be the Alabama Collegiate Riflery Conference and Gulf South Conference champions.
