SGA defeats bill for black beauty pageant

By SUSIE IRWIN
Associate Editor

A bill to provide for a major title of recognition for black females on campus was defeated by the SGA in the weekly meeting held on Monday night.

Senator Ricky Smoot authored and sponsored the resolution advocating a beauty pageant for black females which would be regarded as "one of the big three, major pageants held on campus," along with 'Miss Homecoming' and 'Miss Mimosa'.

According to Smoot, the pageant would be open only to black females and the winner would be featured on color pages of the yearbook.

Black organizations on campus (BOC) would form a committee to sponsor the pageant whose winner would be given the title 'Miss Essence.'

Reasoning that the bill had nothing to do with prejudice, Sen. Smoot said that black females on campus have a slim chance of gaining one of the major titles on campus and that a pageant of this type would allow black females that chance.

The possibility of the pageant not being a success in years to come was noted by Senator Dody Coleman who said that the compilation of a yearbook was a complicated process and that pages reserved for the pageant could be wasted in the future should the pageant be eliminated.

Sen. Coleman added that all JSU pageants have "been as fair as possible" to all females on campus.

Representing a black female's opinion, Sen. Sandra Rutledge said she agreed with Sen. Coleman and added that if black students wanted a black female title holder, they should vote together for that goal. She also stated that a pageant of this type would not be fair to all females on campus.

Another senator, Steve Martin, stated that the reason a resolution concerning the dormitory visiting hours was passed was to eliminate discrimination on campus and that a pageant of this type would be discrimination.

After a close vote of previous questions, meaning a vote on whether to end discussion, the 'Miss Essence' pageant bill was defeated by a wide margin of the senate.

The seven members of the 'ad hoc' committee to investigate the class elections of favorites and beauties was announced by Marc Angel. Those senators are Prentice Saterfield, Dody Coleman, Tara Southerland, Michelle Hefferly, Susan Head, Amy Wallace and Ray Hudson. Sen. Rutledge was added to the committee near the close of the meeting.

Williams arrested on assault charge

By LYNN LePINE
Associate Editor

JSU student Kenneth Avery Williams was arrested on a charge of first degree assault Tuesday afternoon at around 5 p.m.

Williams is accused of assaulting Terry Cunningham, another student and a JSU football player, with a knife during a fight involving the two men last Wednesday night outside Luttrell Hall.

According to Cunningham, the incident was sparked by an argument the two had earlier in the evening. Witnesses say the skirmish began as a fist fight and continued as such until Williams produced a knife.

"I didn't know I was cut until it was over," said Cunningham, "I thought it was just a couple of real hard punches."

Luttrell dorm director Tom Norton said he phoned the police when he saw a crowd gathered around what appeared to be a fight. When the police arrived, Williams had fled the scene. Cunningham was taken to Jacksonville Hospital and then transferred to Regional Medical Center.

Cunningham sustained injuries to his left thigh and right ear which resulted in a total of 35 stitches.

Williams was arrested on a warrant put out by Cunningham and was taken to the Jacksonville city jail. Williams was released on a $1,000 bond Wednesday. A court date is set for Dec. 3.

Goodwin speaks to law class

Dean Kenneth L. Goodwin, Dean of Admissions of the University of Alabama Law School, will be on the JSU campus on Monday, November 22, 1982. He will address the Constitutional Law class at 10:00 (Room 331 Martin) which will be open to interested students, as well as members of the class. He will also be available to counsel pre-law students in the conference room, 236 Martin Hall, from 11:00 - 12:00 and 1:30 - 2:30. All students interested in attending law school next year are invited to talk with Dean Goodwin while he is on campus.

Herron presented Ballerina Scholarship

Debbie Culbert, incoming president of the Ballerina Alumnus Association, presents the annual scholarship to Leisa Herron, head ballerina.

Manners displays art

Lee Manners explains the components of a collage to Margaret Mann. Manners' exhibit, "A Quarter of a Century Retrospective," features examples of his work during his 25 years at JSU. The exhibit includes the first painting Manners' did when he began work here and also his latest work, a quilt called Will's Quilt: Geese Flying. The Lee Manners exhibit will run at Hammond Hall until November 24th.

Students are thankful for. . .

By SUSAN MARTIN

With Thanksgiving right around the corner, we thought it would be a good opportunity to ask: "Since coming to JSU, what are you most thankful for?" Here are some replies:

"An opportunity to come to this college."
 "Teachers that let you out of class early."
 "I graduate next semester."
 "Weekends."
 "Holidays."
 "New exit for commuters in TMB parking lot."
 "My job." (from Dr. Attinger)
 "Graduation."
 "The two-way street behind the stadium."
 "Opportunity to sit on benches in Mason Hall."
 "The friends I've met."
 "Chris." (from Richard)
 "Finishing a political science course under Dr. Selman."
 "Surveys."
 "Roast Beef Combo."
 "Georgia Bulldogs."
 "The great educational facilities provided by JSU."

"The Chanticleer."
 "The recreation room."
 "Kelly R." (from Brad)
 "That JSU is a co-ed college."
 "That Dr. Cochis gave me my one point."
 "Vending machines."
 "Creative people like Lisa Blevins and Tami Lambert." (by Lisa B. and Tami L.)
 "Home."

"That there is an end to school." (or is there?)
 "A chance to meet new people, especially the hospitable southern types."
 "Home cooking."
 "My new girlfriend."

"The opportunity to associate with students, the chance to help them." (Gary Smith, Bookstore Manager)
 "Good looking boys and men."

On Friday 12th, most people were thankful for umbrellas. Remember the rain?

The writers of this survey are thankful for the people who took time out of their lunch break to answer our questions!

HAPPY THANKSGIVING!

Pertelote needs greater student input

By LYNN LePINE

The Pertelote, established in 1979, is a magazine designed to be a vehicle for the creative efforts of JSU students. The tabloid is edited by Lori Tate and features a combination of poetry, prose and artwork.

Tate views the publication as 'an outlet for student work' but according to Dr. Clyde Cox, faculty advisor for the Pertelote, the magazine remains in an infant stage due to a lack of input. "We've been actively publishing for three years, now," Cox says, "We've always had money left over because we've never had enough material submitted to get together more than one or two issues."

Says Tate of the problem, "I don't know whether people are too humble, or whether they just don't think their stuff is good enough. The only way they can find out is to submit their work and see."

Both Tate and Cox feel that there is talent abounding on this campus, in writing and in other forms of art. Tate encourages writers to submit poetry and prose for consideration and possible publication. "A good Pertelote could help establish a greater interest in writing on this campus, and wide support could establish a basis for a writing major or minor at J.S.U."

Cox feels there will be an improvement in the number of submissions made following a mini-mester course in creative poetry. The course will be taught by nationally-published faculty member, Dr. George Richards.

Original poetry and prose may be submitted to Dr. Cox in the Stone Center. Poetry is rated on the basis of freshness, vividness of imagery, and uniqueness in subject matter or technique. Essays on interesting topics are also considered for publication. Short stories are screened for believable plots and characterization, smooth, realistic dialogue, and good endings.

Art coordinator for the Pertelote is faculty member Dr. Emilie Burn. "We try to publish photographs of a variety of different types of works," says Burn. Featured art includes actual photography, along with pictures of other mediums such as sculpture, drawing, painting, ceramics, and crafts.

Art submitted is judged on its originality, organization, and composition. Says Burn, "The artist must display an understanding of the principles of design." Another facet of the artwork examined is the 'extent of involvement'. According to Dr. Burn, the extent of involvement is not how much time a person actually spent on a project, but the amount of time he or she spent making aesthetic decisions. For example, does the piece show that thought went into the selection of color, shape, central focus, etc.?

Pertelote editor Lori Tate hopes to see improvements in submissions of both writing and artwork. Tate expects to see the next issue of the magazine reach the presses by the end of November.

Thirteen outstanding sociology graduates selected

While Jacksonville State University begins her 100th year, the Department of Sociology is celebrating her 12th birthday! Jacksonville State University has offered a major in sociology since the academic year 1971-72. Since that year six hundred and eighteen students have graduated with a major in sociology.

With JSU honoring "100 Famous Athletes," the sociology faculty would like to recognize thirteen outstanding sociology graduates. In addition to being undergraduate scholars, these students have continued their development and made significant contributions to their field.

After graduation from JSU in Fall, 1972, Rebecca (Inmon) Ryan entered graduate work at Florida State University. For several years she did research with University Research Inc. and Richard Katon Associates in Washington D.C. Becky, now in Savannah, Georgia, is the wife of Howard Kaplan and mother of Elisha (17 months). She is teaching at Savannah State University.

Jerre Brimer received his sociology degree in 1974. He graduated with distinction and honors. Since leaving JSU, Jerre has earned a master's from Western Maryland College in deaf education, as well as a master's from Morehead State University where he received a graduate assistantship. Currently he is working with the multiple handicapped and special education students in the Baltimore school system.

The year following her 1975 graduation, Cheryl Dianne Clark became a social worker at Calhoun County Department of Pensions and Security. Cheryl is married to Tay Clark, an environmental engineer at Ft. McClellan and they have a daughter.

Marcus Reid is a 1975 sociology honor graduate who later earned a Master of Arts degree in Personnel Counseling from JSU. During 1977-1979 Marcus served as a probation officer in Calhoun County. In 1982 he graduated from Cumberland Law School where he was elected "Who's Who Among American Law Students." He is currently practicing law in Birmingham.

Wai-Man Siu graduated in 1976 with distinction in sociology. He was awarded graduate assistantship to the University of Hawaii and received his master's in sociology. Wai-Man worked with the Social Security Administration and presently is married and living in France.

With majors in both biology and sociology, Julia Womack McCombs graduated with honors in 1978. Since graduation Julia has earned a master's degree in gerontology from the University of South Florida. She has taught as an adjunct professor with the CUUP program for JSU, as well as Jefferson State Junior College and Gadsden State Junior College.

Steve Haynes finished at Jacksonville State University in August 1979 with honors in sociology. He was awarded a graduate assistantship in rural sociology at Auburn University where he earned a Master of Arts degree in 1980. He is now teaching sociology courses at CUUP in Gadsden and at Ft. McClellan.

Virginia Ruth Pearson graduated with honors from JSU in 1979. While a student here, she was a member of Alpha Kappa Delta, the editor of the Mimosa, and involved in numerous campus activities. At present, Virginia is employed at the Farmers and Merchants Bank in Cedar Bluff, Alabama.

As a 1981 honor graduate of JSU, Karen Nicks received her Bachelor of Science degree in sociology and corrections. Currently, Karen is pursuing a master's degree in counseling and guidance and criminal justice at JSU and is working as a graduate assistant in the Department of Sociology.

Arlene Benefield graduated in August 1982 with a double major in sociology and psychology. Her emphasis was in social gerontology. During the summer 1982 she began working as a tutor and coordinator in the Advanced Basic Learning Skills program in the Department of Psychology at JSU. Married to JSU anthropologist, Dr. Harry Holstein, Arlene has co-authored two academic papers with JSU professors. Her future plans include pursuing a master's degree in psychology.

Another 1982 graduate, Douglas Neil Fears, was elected to Who's Who Among American Colleges and Universities. Recognized as one of the top three scholars in the College of Humanities and Social Sciences during his senior year, Neil was a member of Alpha Kappa Delta and worked with Elderhostel on campus. Neil has recently received an assistantship and is currently enrolled in the graduate program in sociology and gerontology at the University of Alabama at Birmingham.

With a GPA of 2.969, Diane Patricia Pejza graduated with honors in 1982. While on campus, she was a member of both Alpha Kappa Delta and Kappa Delta Epsilon. Diane was selected to participate in the seniors honors recitals in the Music Department and was a member of Phi Mu Alpha. Currently, Diane is enrolled in Vanderbilt University, where she has been awarded a teaching assistantship in the doctoral program in sociology.

As an exchange student from Finland, Sinikka Makela Smothers lived in the International House on campus and chose sociology as her major field of study. Sinikka graduated with honors from JSU in 1982 and was selected for "Who's Who Among Colleges and Universities". At the present time Sinikka is living in Talladega with her husband and daughter. Her future plans include pursuing a graduate degree in social work.

Each of these thirteen graduates will receive a Certificate of Recognition and will have his-her name engraved on a plaque to be placed in the Department of Sociology at JSU. The Department of Sociology is pleased to honor these outstanding graduates during this centennial year.

Announcements

FOP asks for movie contributions

Students and faculty can make Christmas a little merrier this year for 1,000 underprivileged and handicapped children in Calhoun County.

The Fraternal Order of Police, Anniston Lodge No. 4, asks the JSU community to contribute money for theater tickets so the children can have a day at the movies on Dec. 20.

There will be two showings of a double-feature presentation, "The New Adventures of Pinocchio" and "Seven Alone", at the Calhoun Theater on Noble Street.

Each child's ticket will cost $2.50. The FOP asks that checks or money orders be sent to Jack Cooper, c-o F.O.P., P. O. Box 1124, Anniston, Al, 36202.

Cooper said the deadline for contributions is Dec. 2.

For more information, call Cooper at 236-4434.

Rich to address computer science club

Mr. Paul Rich from UAB will speak to the Computer Science Club about UAB's computing facilities, program, and job opportunities on Thursday, Nov. 18, at 4:30 in Room 302 3rd Floor Bibb Graves.

Mr. Stephen Kirkemier from South Central Bell will speak to the Computer Science Club Tuesday, Nov. 23, at 4:30 p.m., Room 302 Third Floor of Bibb Graves. Mr. Kirkemier will discuss Computer Science relating to SCB, the divestiture of SCB, telecommunications, and what SCB looks for in computer science majors.

Accounting Banquet to follow UNA game

The Student Accounting Awards Banquet will be held at Jacksonville State University on November 20 following the JSU vs. University of North Alabama game.

The annual Accounting Achievement Award, based on a selection by JSU accounting department faculty, will be presented.

Dr. O. Ronald Gray, accounting professor at the University of West Florida and an alumnus of JSU, will be guest speaker. Dr. Gray was recipient of the Achievement Award in 1971, his senior year at Jax State.

Gray is a certified public accountant, certified management accountant, and a certified internal auditor.

All JSU accounting department alumni are invited to attend. Those who do not receive invitations should contact Dr. Parker Granger, chairman of the accounting department, for more information.

A hospitality area will be set up in the lobby of Theron Montgomery Building auditorium before the game and alumni may purchase football tickets in that area.

A social hour will begin at 5:30 p.m. in the lobby of Theron Montgomery auditorium. The banquet, which will be held in Theron Montgomery auditorium, begins at 6:30 p.m.

Miss Mimosa application deadline is Dec. 15

Contestants for Miss Mimosa 1983 must file applications and pay the $25 entry fee on or before the last day of finals, Dec. 15, 1982.

To qualify, contestants must be single women who are enrolled as full time students at JSU.

Applications may be picked up in the Mimosa office, Room 103, basement floor TMB from 1:15 to 4:00 p.m., Monday - Friday.

ODK, Phi Mu directors visit

By DENNIS SHEARS

Through the joint efforts of Jacksonville State University's Omicron Delta Kappa Circle, and Phi Mu Alpha Charter, the national director for each, Dr. Dan Beeman, visited JSU's campus last week.

Dr. Beeman is a native of the midwest, who moved to Florida as a child. He received a degree in music at the University of South Florida, and his PhD in administration at Florida State University.

Dr. Beeman became associated with ODK, when he was inducted into the selective organization at the University of Southern Florida, in 1968. He has been active in ODK ever since, and is now serving his fifth two-year term as the national director.

"I very seldom have the chance to meet with individual circles of ODK and chapters of Phi Mu Alpha; however, because both groups are truly outstanding here at Jacksonville, they sort of combined their interests, and enticed me to come down, and they did so at some considerable expense to themselves," said Dr. Beeman.

"I'm here at Jacksonville to participate in the ODK initiation ceremonies, provide whatever assistance that I can to each organization, and to 're-charge my battery' with enthusiasm," he added.

"Both groups have asked how they rank with other groups, and where they stand, and I can honestly say that I don't know when I have been as impressed with the two organizations, as I have here. They're both absolutely superb! And I think they are superb because the students are excellent students, and the faculty and administration here are truly exceptional," declared Dr. Beeman.

Dr. Beeman went on to say that Cathy Burns, a member of the JSU ODK circle, is an excellent member and a superb leader, who should be given special recognition. He also had nothing but positive statements to say about Dr. David Walters, director of the Marching Southerners.

"Dr. Walters is the greatest! Any other school with a program like the Marching Southerners would have to have a full-time staff of at least three people to do what he does by himself," exclaims Dr. Beeman. "Dr. Walters is the best example of academic leadership that I've seen," he added.

Dr. Beeman is the National Executive Director of Phi Mu Alpha, where in he administers all of the activities in the national organization, coordinates the National Phi Mu Alpha staff, coordinates conventions and workshops, maintains standards of the organization, and is responsible for all the publications of the Phi Mu Alpha organization. There are seven full-time staff members, and 260 chapters of Phi Mu Alpha in the United States.

Dr. Beeman is also the National Vice President of ODK, which is an elected position. He commented on the four critical elements associated with ODK: "The members of ODK must be active in the organization by utilizing their talents toward leadership roles: an ODK circle must be a student - faculty group that has both parties participating fully; students inducted into ODK must be in the upper 35 percent of their class, just to be considered; and a member must be a leader in at least one of the following areas: scholarship, athletics, social service - religious group - or campus government, journalism - speech - or mass media, or the creative - performing arts."

"ODK rewards excellent leadership qualities in student and faculty ranks and uses its resources to mold the community and promote excellence in all areas," said Dr. Beeman.

Dr. Beeman was on the JSU campus four years ago to install the ODK circle, and he said, "It is especially rewarding to me, to get to come back to Jacksonville, to see the kind of growth that this circle has accomplished."

In his closing remarks, Dr. Beeman said: "Both Phi Mu Alpha, and Omicron Delta Kappa are very dear to my heart, and it has been a true pleasure spending time with such outstanding groups, as these two organizations here."

Montgomery considers student needs important

By ANDY JONES

Chanticleer: When do students see the president of this school?

Montgomery: Any student of this school has "ready access" to my office. All freshmen were seen during the step-up program before starting their first semester.

Chanticleer: When are you available?

Montgomery: Monday thru Friday, 8:00-4:30. I do get involved in a lot of meetings, but my secretary will be happy to schedule a student to see me.

Chanticleer: What problems have you seen with the freshman class this year?

Montgomery: I have not noticed any marked difference from previous years. I think we are fortunate to have the "fine quality" of entering freshmen that we have.

Chanticleer: Have you seen any problems with the entire student body?

Montgomery: I think we have the best student body anywhere. There are some problems because we have not been able to meet all the student needs. Some of these are recreation, housing and parking. We are trying to meet all needs that can be afforded.

Chanticleer: Have you seen any change in the faculty throughout the years?

Montgomery: Obviously it has grown and we have more diversity. This is a fully calculated intent from seeking teachers from a variety of institutions.

Chanticleer: Whom should a student see first for problems with a teacher?

Montgomery: First, you should talk with the teacher involved. Then the Department Head, the Dean of that Division and then if necessary the Vice President of Academic Affairs, Dr. James A. Reaves. I am here to help out in this area or will tell you who can.

Chanticleer: Have you seen a change in the typical student since your school days?

Montgomery: I was a graduate in World War II. At that time you were called out of college to go to war and fight. So things were a lot more serious then. My generation was different because of the times, but I see similarities. College age students have a lot of youth and enthusiasm with the capabilities to learn but certain distractions affect them.

Chanticleer: What improvements do you see necessary in the following areas: faculty, maintenance, school property and students?

Montgomery: Our faculty is full of able people, but some need to further their education. I know funds are needed to assist them. I think we have an excellent maintenance staff here. The school property needs land for expansion. In the area of our students I think they need to improve some of their "basic skills." As mentioned before, the school is trying to meet some needs like parking. The ROTC students and Performing Arts students need a better parking facility. Also we need to assist the fraternities and sororities.

Chanticleer: Have you seen any racial problems here?

Montgomery: Very few. We integrated here before a court order was necessary.

Chanticleer: How do you feel about the food services at the Jack Hopper Dining Hall?

Montgomery: I am willing to hear suggestions. I do not think we have problems there with quality of food. We used to hear a lot more complaints when it was mandatory that you ate there if you lived in the dorms. People are going to complain about food anywhere they eat. We do have control over the contract with Saga and influence over their meals.

Chanticleer: Are there any resources or facilities on campus which you feel students are not using properly or at all?

Montgomery: The Student Commons building (student center) is not being used fully. We have the new larger book store, Hardee's, a large study area, SGA offices and are finishing up the student mail center. Participation at our concerts and plays is low. The library could be used more by students since it is open 80 hours a week - also the Coliseum with all its recreational activities.

Chanticleer: Whom does the President answer to or report to?

Montgomery: There is a Board of Trustees composed of eleven representatives of the state.

Chanticleer: What is your opinion of our fraternities and sororities?

Montgomery: I do get calls at night at my home from people complaining about noise. Usually it is around 11:30. Overall there is no great problem. I think they are an important part of the campus. I would like to see more cohesion between the different groups for a better development of brotherhood.

Chanticleer: If you could give only one piece of advice to students this year, what would it be?

Montgomery: Figure out what it is that you want to do or be. Happiness comes from achievement.

Points Of View

A question of desire

To strive to complete a college education is to dedicate a portion of a life to a search for new and fresh answers to age old questions. It is to challenge and explore, refine and revise, excite and chasten, all for the betterment of a mind and soul. Why then, do we, as students in the process of acquiring knowledge, fail to challenge and demand more of ourselves, our peers, and our teachers? What is it that compels us to keep our mouths clamped shut and our heads nodding dumbly when an instructor makes a statement that amazes, amuses, dumbfounds, distresses, or repulses us? Why do we have the dulled eyes and glazed countenances of those who have heard all we want to hear?

Pat Forrester

Staff Writer

Perhaps it is the fear of failure, of giving the wrong answer, or of sounding "foolish." Nothing cuts to the quick like listening to the amused snickers of our peers when we restate the obvious. But it is my experience that the price paid is small in comparison to the rewards reaped: Knowledge is indeed a priceless commodity and a person who never tries to fill himself to overflowing with it is a vessel devoid of worth or value.

I know that all too often it is lack of preparation that locks our lips and stifles the learning process. But this is a fault easily enough cured. To argue, explore, and analyze is to become a human being, an instrument of compassion, caring, and above all, hoping. The process of asking and listening is a step along the way to becoming a multifaceted, "body and soul" person, not merely another cardboard image stamped out with a college cookie cutter.

Stone cold - a touch of Fla. please

By LAURA ALBRIGHT

Most of us believe a comfortable atmosphere is conducive to learning. Apparently, whoever controls the thermometer in Stone Center never heard of this precept.

Day after day, even when it is cold outside, it is cold in Stone Center. First of all, the walls are solid concrete blocks which don't preserve warmth well at all. Secondly, the air coming out of the vents is cool or no heat is on at all, thus the cold seeps in from outside. Lastly, the furniture is all modernistic and doesn't even suggest warmth.

If we were warmer, and not shivering constantly, we would be able to pay more attention to the lectures and take better notes; thus learn more.

One solution is that we wear our coats or jackets and gloves to class. A better one is that someone turn the thermostat up some - not enough so that it's reminiscent of sunny Florida in August, but just enough to turn blue fingers pink again and warm frozen toes so they aren't numb any longer.

Mind you, we realize the high cost of heating, but let's consider the high cost of learning. We are here to learn. How can we learn well and retain our knowledge if all we can concentrate on is whether or not we'll ever be warm again?

Put a rush on your test grading

By DONNA HENDRIX

It's frustrating to think of all the time spent studying for an exam and then the teacher waits two weeks or a month before the tests are back.

Teachers give the exam; students take it; then the students have to wait in suspense before they know what their grade is.

Most students are concerned about the grades they make because they are here for an education.

Students should not have to wait in suspense to see what they have made on their tests. Many students worry about their grades, and they should be able to have their exams back as soon as possible.

Teachers should have more respect for the students and put themselves in the students' shoes; therefore, they would see how the students feel and try to give back their tests promptly.

If the students can take the time and study for the exam, the teacher can take the time and grade the exams and have them back in the hands of the students within a week.

Student considers Chanticleer tacky, depressing

To the Editor:

Although the Chanticleer, in my opinion, has improved in its content this fall semester, one past Chanticleer (Nov. 4, 1982) was rather out of sync with the time.

It was Homecoming, but not just any Homecoming. It was JSU's Centennial Homecoming. One would think that this special event would be celebrated to the utmost, including a dedication of the Chanticleer to JSU's birthday.

Instead, one gets, as front-page news, an article on Mel Blanc and a "noise gun" with one small, displaced picture of the crowning of the Homecoming Queen. The paper also included an editorial of Homecoming vandalism, and various tragedies that had struck Jacksonville. At any other time, fine. But the week after Homecoming? I would think not!

Although the mid-section showed some of the cheerfulness of Homecoming, the fact that the writer didn't even have the decency to name the classification or the activities Deborah Wilson, the Homecoming Queen, participated in (whereas he did with the runners-up) was totally thoughtless.

I, for one, found it to be depressing, as well as just plain tacky.

Perhaps the Chanticleer staff of '83-'84 will take these viewpoints into consideration in order to provide a more cheerful outlook of the celebration of Homecoming.

Sincerely,
Vicky A. Thomas

The rise & fall of Troy

BERT

Once upon a time in the Gulf South Conference there were two kingdoms. One was in the land of the legendary invincible Gamecock. This kingdom was located amongst gently rolling hills and lush green forests, and it was called Jacksonville.

The other was situated in the netherworld of southern Alabama amid rocks, red clay, and sandpines. This was the infamous kingdom of Troy.

The people of Jacksonville were a fair and graceful race, and the girls all had tanned legs, at least the ones that marched at halftime in the football games.

The people of Troy were a stunted race. Their IQ's were equivalent to their ages until they reached twenty years of age, after which they increased no more.

The people of Troy believed that the sun never set on Troy. Actually, the sun never rose on Troy, but with a collective IQ of 200 the Trojans easily mistook Hellfire for sunlight.

Although the Trojans were mentally deficient, they did have a certain amount of heart and courage, and were fierce warriors. They often sent marauding bands to other kingdoms in search of their lost ceremonial goat and virgins.

The year of this tale had not been a good one for the Trojans. Numerous defeats had been inflicted upon them at the hands of lesser kingdoms, and virgins were becoming scarcer all the time.

The president of the Trojan kingdom called before him all his loyal followers and dressed them in pads and helmets, the armor of the day.

"You have all failed miserably!" he thundered. "If you do not make a success of the final campaigns of the marauding season you will be forced to attend long boring classes and to take tests to earn grades. No more playing on the rocks and red clay all day!" And the Trojan multitude heard him and quaked with fear.

Screwing up their courage, the Trojans proceeded to wreak havoc on the kingdoms of Livingston and UTM. They were merciless, and took no prisoners. With each triumph their warlust increased until, in a berserk rage, they deemed themselves fit to take on the mighty Gamecocks of Jacksonville.

Amidst their preparations to invade the fair kingdom a solitary cry was heard above the din. It was the voice of Mike Scruggs, freelance blind oracle, currently calling games on TV.

"Beware of Gamecocks bearing footballs. The fact that JSU may be buying my station has nothing to do with this prophecy." But Mike was shouted down, and the preparations continued.

Word of the impending combat reached J'ville, but the masses trembled not, for amongst them dwelt Jim Fuller, architect of a battle plan that had seen many seasons of success, and seemed certain to win him the olive branch laurels of another GSC title. Fuller was aided by a hardy band of warriors, among them Ed Lett, whose golden arm had slain many opponents, and Reginald Goodloe, whose fleet-footedness had won many a contest.

On the appointed day, the Southerners, the sound of the South, announced the arrival of the enemy with a blast from 1000 trumpets (and assorted woodwinds, rifles, flags, and ballerinas. The drum line speaks for itself). The walls of the arena trembled at the sound, and thousands of voices screamed support for the Gamecocks.

The battle was fierce, and bodies piled high. JSU recorded early triumphs.

By halftime the outcome of the contest was no longer in doubt. Even so, the blood letting continued as the very bands themselves clashed in battle at midfield. The Southerners were arrayed in the finest helms and plumes (newly purchased). The Trojan band was forced to wear the only headgear they could afford, cheap straw cowboy hats. It was not a pretty sight. The crimson and grey of the Southerners sparkled under the stadium lights, and their sound grew until it reached a towering crescendo, which left the Trojan band cowering fearfully in the far corner of the endzone.

The halftime spectacle completed, the warriors clashed in furious battle once more. The final minutes seemed an eternity, but at last the Gamecocks emerged victorious, freeing several thousand thirsty spectators to pursue their revels at local taverns and mead halls.

Being a merciful nation, the Gamecocks spared the lives of their victims, demanding only that they leave and never return, at least until next year.

The Gamecocks savored their victory, but heeded the warnings of the prudent voices that spoke of lions from the North. The Voices said, "The Lions. Two o'clock. Saturday the 20th. Paul Snow Stadium. Be there. Aloha."

.38 Special packs 'em in

By R. STACY McCAIN

A packed house at Pete Matthews Coliseum Tuesday night enjoyed the sounds and showmanship of Donnie VanZandt and the rest of the popular rock 'n' roll band .38 Special. The concert, which was sponsored by the JSU Student Government Association, drew a crowd estimated at upwards of 5,000 people, all of whom rose to their feet at the end of the show to give the group a ten-minute standing ovation, bringing them back onstage for a rousing, rocking encore.

The audience was a mixture of college students, high school children, and local rock fans, including two Playboy bunnies (from a local singing telegram service) and one young lady in a tuxedo and cape. They all seemed to share an equal amount of enthusiasm for the show, which also featured the Artimus Pyle Band. The concert opened with the Pyle group, which began with a number called "World Upside Down" and ended with the guitarist playing a rock version of "Frere Jacques". Thirty minutes later, at 9:34 p.m., .38 Special took the stage to the recorded sound of the fanfare theme of "Rocky III". What followed was an exercise in rock showmanship on a par with any group one might name.

VanZandt, lead vocalist and rhythm guitarist, worked the crowd into an uproar with his stage antics, at one point riding the microphone stand around the stage like a bucking bronco. The group's two drummers also provided an interesting spectacle, playing in close synchronization, as if mirror images of each other. The packed house responded in a frenzied manner, clapping their hands and singing along with such hits as "So Caught Up In You" and "Hold On Loosely". The group was called back for an encore, which included Chuck Berry's "The Joint Was Rocking" and ended with John Fogerty's "It Ain't Me, Babe".

The concert was a success in every sense of the word. SGA president Tony Lundy reported Wednesday that of 5,000 available tickets for the show, 4,258 were sold, saying, "It was fantastic, possibly our best ever, in terms of sales, profits, and entertainment." At an SGA meeting Monday evening, Lundy had reported that acts such as Ronnie Milsap and The Gap Band were being looked at for concerts early next year.

Who's that dummy?

Ever know someone who could make you laugh without saying a word? Mack is just such a person.

Mack is a tall, good-looking fellow who spends his time in the JSU bookstore, which is located on the second floor of the Theron E. Montgomery Building. He has been the object of much amusement to the workers of the store and to some of the students of JSU.

Girls notice the handsomeness of this brown-haired, muscular youth. The day the elections for homecoming queen were being held, a crowd had gathered near Mack. A group of girls standing in the lobby in front of the store noticed him anyhow. One of them said in reference to him, "Look at that hunk in the bookstore." Mack, who is very modest, would never attest to this, but Gary Smith, the manager of the store, witnessed it.

The JSU police have also noticed Mack. One evening when they were patrolling, they passed the bookstore and saw the lone figure, Mack, standing inside with a sweater in his hand. They thought he was a burglar. They were, however, mistaken.

Besides being very good-looking, Mack is very quiet. He would never argue with anyone. In fact, he never says a word.

He also does not move much, not because he is lazy, but because his occupation calls for him to stand very still for long periods of time.

Mack is good at his job because he unconsciously attracts attention to himself. This is another important aspect of his occupation. People often take second looks at this handsome fellow in order to determine whether this life-like youth is a real person. He is not; in fact, he is a mannequin.

He was dubbed the name "Mack" by the workers of the store because of the many times he has been mistaken for a real person. Upon entering the store, some students often confuse Mack with David Snider, a salesman who resembles the mannequin.

Some students have gone so far as to ask Gary Smith if they could purchase the mannequin to place in their rooms. He has provided many with a good laugh.

Next time you happen by the bookstore, be sure to drop in and say "hello" to Mack. Don't be surprised, however, if he doesn't answer back.

"Hey, man, let's JAM!"

The voice on the telephone says the words so dear to every musician's heart. The opportunity to improvise, to create, to suffer? Yes, friends and neighbors, the jam can inspire fear in even the most courageous rocker. Why? Well, a number of reasons, but first and foremost, most jams are distressingly similar.

The first similarity (almost a certainty) is that the musicians will have an incredible range of musical tastes. So the jam repertoire invariably consists of a few simple songs which everyone knows by heart and, subsequently is sick of. "Sweet Home Alabama" is typical of this genre—don't get me wrong, I like the song, but I've heard it played by enough fourteen year-old wunderkinds to be able to do without it for a while. Ditto "Smoke on the Water", ditto "Johnny B. Goode", ditto ANYTHING by Bad Co.

Of course, the guitars have to be tuned to such perfection as to make any symphony conductor happy. And nobody can afford an electro-tuner. "Gimme an 'E'." Plang! This can produce states of altered consciousness, especially since the entire procedure must be repeated after every tune. "Check your 'D', man." Plaaang. "You're a little flat." Plaiennngg. "Now you're sharp." If this sounds boring, try the real thing sometime. This gave rise to that famous saying "close enough for rock 'n' roll".

Okay, so your guitars are tuned fairly well, and you've chosen your first selection. Now what? Well, it's time to play the musical equivalent of "it's-my-ball-and-if-we-can't-play-by-my-rules-I-quit": "Hey, man, why don't we ever play any GOOD music?" Never mind that our little Paganini's idea of good music merely entails playing "Radar Love" instead of "Alright Now", just observe how he seeks to enforce his will. . . "Look, dude, this is my basement, and my amp and my band, so if you don't like it, you can just LEAVE!"

So once you've got rid of two or three musicians this way, you've got your classic garage-rock ensemble: two guitarists (the one with the most expensive equipment is the lead guitarist, natch), a bass guitar (if you're lucky—a good one is hard to find) and a drummer, who is usually wrecked on whatever drugs are cheap that week. Hopefully, you're included somewhere in that list, because, if you aren't you must be a singer, right? This is very bad news for you.

Consider, O poor singer, what your fellow bandmembers expect of you. First, you must know all the words to any song which any of the other players knows the music to. Sound fair? Consider that the average rock song has 5.68 chords and about 125 words, not counting 'repeat chorus'. Also you must be able to exactly duplicate the range and style of any singer who ever sang rock—Ronnie Van Zandt to Ronnie Montrose, from Paul McCartney to Paul Rodgers. Never mind what YOUR range or style is like, just sing and hope you don't blow your pipes out. Also it helps to look like a blend of Mick Jagger and Jimmy Page, if you're a guy, or Pat Benatar and Deborah Harry, if you're a chick. Otherwise, the lead guitarist can always do your job. He'll try to tell you how anyway.

So you just finished your set of garage classics and you're sweating like a pig. . . what now? Breaktime! Hopefully, you're jamming at the home of someone whose parents either approve of rock or are out of town. As you munch out on your sandwich, however, you become aware of a strange cacaphony emerging from the basement-garage; something which sounds like Mr. Bill strangling Spot in a Mr. Microphone commercial. Guess what? That's right, your little brother and twelve of his friends have decided to play Pete Townsend with your axes. Storming into the room, you discover that an eight year-old has attempted to play your $600 Les Paul with a Nutty Buddy for a pick, while another urchin is playing "Horsey" with the bass guitar, and another is using a Shure microphone to test the limits of human endurance to feedback.

Having rescued the remnants of your instruments from this band of hoodlums, you play four or five more numbers and decide to call it a day. As you lug your stuff back to the car, the host of this session calls out, "Comin' back next week?"

"Sure," you answer, "see you then!" You know that next week, it'll be the same old grind, yet somehow, you find yourself looking forward to it. Why? The answer is obvious, really: you love rock 'n' roll!

Gymnasts make fine show

By LYNN LePINE
Associate Editor

The gymnastics team made a fine first showing last Friday night in the annual intrasquad meet at Stephenson Gym.

From the style and drama of nationally ranked all-arounder Marilyn Hansler to the finesse of freshman Dave Oak, J.S.U.'s team literally abounds with talent.

For Friday night's competition, the team was divided into two squads, the Twisters and the Spinners. Each squad consisted of four women and six men. The two teams were closely matched, but after the scores were totaled, the Spinners had pulled away to take first place with a score of 224.40 to 205.70.

Both the men and women excelled in most of the events, with the men falling down slightly in the pommel horse, but the most exciting part of the show for the audience was the floor exercise. Sharp and graceful dance along with cleanly executed tumbling characterized the women's floor routines. The fast-paced somersaulting style of the men was also punctuated with form and balance. Both Steve Lee and Mark Petentler threw double back somersaults during their routines.

According to men's coach Tom Cockley, the men's scores in floor exercise compared with intrasquad scores around the country should rank J.S.U.'s men number one.

The judges for the women were elite national judge Mary Lou Dillard of Jacksonville and class one judge Donna Bryant of Anniston. Rating the men were two national judges, Mike Griffin of Atlanta and former J.S.U. gymnast Ken Day of Montgomery. Some of the criteria for scoring events were degrees of difficulty, combinations and series of moves, dismounts, and the amplitude and execution of moves.

J.S.U.'s gymnasts were scored by the same standards as gymnasts across the nation. According to women's coach Robert Dillard, the intrasquad scores give the team an idea of where they stand in relation to teams from other schools. "The intrasquad gives the gymnasts a chance to be put under pressure, to compete in front of a crowd and judges," says Dillard, "Now we've got a month to work out the bugs before the first meet."

The intrasquad meet did include one negative note. Sophomore Kenny Moore, who underwent a knee operation last June, re-injured the knee on the vault Friday night. Moore may be out for the year but he said he would be working hard to return to competition this season.

Well, the Rebels made it to the playoffs. The season began with two losses, and even though the spirit still remained high, the doubt quickly reached a peak for our team.

Jim Ackley's 45 yard field goal in our first playoff game against the Sigs got the Rebels rolling. Our next big play was initiated by a beautiful pass from Kirk Patterson to Sherman Conrad to seal our victory over the Kappa Sigma frat, 9-7.

We would also like to extend a hand to our Pledge class this semester for the great spirit and involvement they have shown. "Great job, guys!"

Congratulations to Pledge Brother Mike Bogan for making basketball cheerleader. Two of our little sisters also made basketball cheerleaders. These two ladies are Anne Berry and Stacy Boozer.

Burt Grisham was recently selected as a Budweiser representative here on campus.

We'd like to say that our spirit is high, and our confidence is even higher. Watch out! We're on a roll! The remainder of the semester is ours!

It's that time of the year again! Time to elect our 1983 executive officers. It is also time to praise the hard work and dedication of those sisters leaving office. Congratulations on a job well done, ladies, and congrats to the newly-elected officers! Know you're going to be terrific!!

Our Thanksgiving dinner was held last night at the Village Inn. This annual event was special to all of us because we're so thankful for each other!

Alpha Xi would like to thank Delta Zeta for being our guests Monday night. We all had a great time and hope you did, too!

Congratulations to Stacy Boozer and Anne Berry for being selected as basketball cheerleaders. You're both terrific!

The Great American Smokeout was a big success thanks to sister, Deborah Samples. Alpha Xi Delta is proud to sponsor such events. Deborah is doing an excellent job as philanthropy chairman. She has arranged for us to visit the nursing home for Thanksgiving. Keep up the good work, Deborah!

Alpha Xi wishes everyone a safe and happy Thanksgiving!

Scabbard and Blade

By CADET CLARENCE J. GOODBEER

The assault on the studio of WLJS was a success. There was one D.J. taken prisoner.

He was immediately removed from the area and transported to the Theron Montgomery confinement facility. Shortly after in-processing the prisoner was ordered to give blood. Due to his refusal, he was beaten into submission by Rangers and Blade members. After nurses removed a pint of his blood, he was turned over to the proper authorities.

We would like to extend a warm welcome to our new advisor Captain Richard Sackett.

Captain Sackett was an active member of M-Company of the Eighth Regiment (The Scabbard and Blade Company at Kent State University).

Thank-you to the beautiful Miss Brenda Smith for representing us during the Homecoming.

The last party at Chap's was a great success! The next open party will be November 23, 1982 at 7:30 p.m. Everyone come out!!!

Over fifty young ladies were present at the Alpha Kappa Alpha 1982 Fall Rush. A great time was had by all as the sisters entertained the independents by serenading them with several songs and steps. At first everyone was a little shy until the ice was broken by a "roll" OF WORDS AS EACH YOUNG LADY HAD TO STAND UP AND TELL SOMETHING ABOUT THEMSELVES. A green, rush T-shirt was given away as the door prize, and the lucky winner was Miss Sandra Rutledge. After Soror House gave a brief introduction of the sorors, the ladies were informed of the qualifications and everyone was treated to the delicious refreshments. Moments were captured by photographer Clarence Goodbeer as everyone was mingling. A special thank you goes out to Soror Pamela White for the super job she did in preparing for the rush and the refreshments.

Congratulations go out to Soror Winifred Wilson upon her induction into the Phi Mu Alpha (little sisters) Sinfonian Fraternity.

What a weekend! The Zetas got into the "Whup Troy" mood Thursday and didn't stop until after the big victory Saturday night. Congratulations Gamecocks! Watch out for UNA!

The Ballerina Alumni held their annual tea Saturday afternoon before the Troy game. They presented sister Leisa Herron, head ballerina, with the Ballerina Scholarship. Congrats, Leisa!

The Zetas will be going skating this Tuesday evening! This will be a night of fun and meeting new friends! We are looking forward to this great night before the Thanksgiving break.

The Zetas would like to thank the 1982 officers for a job well done! Our chapter received many awards at National Convention this summer due to the hard work of our executive officers. The outgoing officers are Susan Head, Leigh Estes, Stacie Sams, Dawn Lummus, Gina Talley, Tracy Hyde, Lyn Jett, Nan Jones and Wendy Fead. We wish the 1983 officers luck!

Congratulations to Stacie Sams for being named member of the week and Pledge of the week, Sharon Terry.

The Zetas wish everyone a safe and happy Thanksgiving!

Christian Student Fellowship

The regular meetings of the University Christian Student Fellowship are held in the Student Center, and visitors are always welcome. President of the UCSF is Kevin Smith, from Jacksonville. For more information about the Christian Student Center, you may call Bob Prichard, campus minister, at 435-9356. Or better yet, why not just drop in at the Student Center, which is open daily, or visit one of the regular weekly devotionals on Tuesday at 7 p.m.

Christian Student Fellowship receives new sign

The University Christian Student Fellowship is proud to announce that a new sign has been erected in front of the Christian Student Center.

As the new sign indicates, the Christian Student Center is sponsored by area churches of Christ, although all students are welcome at activities in the Student Center.

One of the major emphases of the Student Center is Biblical Study. Each Tuesday a devotional is conducted at 7:00 p.m. and on Thursdays, Bible classes are offered for credit by extension from the Alabama Christian School of Religion, a graduate school of religion, located in Montgomery, Alabama.

Other activities, such as social activities, movies, and game nights are often conducted in the Student Center.

The Student Center offers recreation areas, TV area, study areas, and a library.

ATO

The brothers of Alpha Tau Omega wish to thank all those who participated in the annual Red Cross blood drive. ATO was pleased to help the Red Cross, and donated one hundred and eleven pints. Special thanks to Mark Weaver W.B.O. (Worthy Blood Drive Officer) for his time and effort.

Last Saturday we held our first annual ATO Whup Troy Steak and Ale Party. We had a great time, and extend a huge thank-you to Mr. Nowlin for his accommodations. Our pledge of the week is Doug Thompson, and our little sister of the week is Wendy Gibbons. Thanks to both of you for your outstanding support.

Those too meek to give blood include John Battles, Fain Casey, Doug Thompson, Alan Fletcher, Jeff Suggs, Mickey Ray Statham, and several other half beeks too small to mention.

ATO, the only way to go!

Sigma Nu

By JOHN VALDES JR.

The brothers of Sigma Nu would like to thank the Zetas for taking "Sigmund" on his first walk around the House in public last Tuesday at the Sigma Nu-Zeta "TOGA" Party. How 'bout Bob Pitts and his "Blue Juice". It was the first time any of us had seen blue liquid. But then again who ever saw a bunch of grown up people walking around in sheets in 30 degree weather? Thanks, Zeta, for a great time!

Once again the "Mighty Red Machine" rolled over another ill fated opponent with the nickname of Trojan(?). Who cares how it's spelled they'll never know. Hopefully the JSU Fighting Gamecocks will host the first playoffs here at Jax State with UNA losing a game also this past weekend. We've still got one more big game left in the season so let's all go support the Gamecocks this Saturday afternoon.

Brother of the week last week was Rando "Chaps" Fair for some reason nobody knows. They say it was just because he was there or something to that effect. Pledge of the week last week was Ron "E.T." (??) Pufford; way to go, Ron, in like, "you know" calling home for that new stereo system we now have in our new stereo room. . .

So until next week walk in the way of honor: follow a Sigma Nu!

Howell Scholarship taking applications

By SUSAN MARTIN

The JSU Computer Science Department is sponsoring the Rebecca Suzanne Howell Memorial Scholarship for four hundred dollars a year (or two hundred dollars a semester). It is available to any junior or senior with a B average, who is majoring in computer science.

Rebecca Ingle was the first recipient of this scholarship after it began in the spring of 1982. Others wishing to apply may do so through the Financial Aid Office.

Among the fund raising projects for the scholarship is the drawing for a Mattel Intellivision and four cartridges (valued at $300), which is to be given away on December 2, 1982. Time and place will be announced at a later date. Anyone wishing to buy a $1 donation can see any member of the Computer Science Club, or Mrs. Dorothy Lovelidge in the Bibb Graves faculty office on 3rd floor.

Gary Jones, chairman of the Computer Science Club says, "We appreciate all the support that we receive. If our projects are successful, we hope to one day increase the amount of the scholarship, or the number of scholarships."

Everyone is encouraged to patronize this very worthy cause.

Woodard presents one woman fashion show

By LENA BOSWELL

Alma Woodard, a JSU senior gladdened the hearts of many of her elders on Saturday, Oct. 9, when she presented to the Jacksonville Nursing Home a one woman fashion show.

Alma became acquainted with the nursing home during Minimester '82 when she did her internship there for her Sociology major and Social Work minor.

Alma says she enjoys working with the elderly. "They are lonely and few have visitors," she stated. Since many in the home have little opportunity for contact with outside life she brings some of it to them through current fashions.

The occupants of the nursing home were pleased with the show and made comments such as "Now we know where to come for clothes when we are ready to go to a party," quoted Alma.

Alma reminisced about the days there at the nursing home during Minimester when the aged always complimented her on her clothes and how they loved the colors she wore. This gave her the idea of presenting the fashions to them.

This was the third fashion show that Alma has presented to the Jacksonville Nursing Home. "They just keep wanting more," stated Alma. "Many of them want to participate in the next one."

A variety of evening wear, casual wear and church wear was modeled. Alma also provided refreshments. "If I can help somebody or brighten up a life, then it helps me to know that my living is not in vain," admitted Alma.

Alma is a member of Apha Si Omega, Alpha Phi Omega, the JSU Gospel Choir, the Sociology Club and also a member of God's Temple AOH Church of Ragland, Al. Alma was assisted in the fashion shop by Patsy Jones and Pauline Herring, sophomores from JSU.

Along with some of those words which catch attention like herpes, hepatitis and Tylenol is MONONUCLEOSIS.

Mono, as it is often called, is a virus. Broken down, it means "single nucleus condition". It is an acute infectious disease that affects lymphoid tissue primarily. Lymph tissue helps to filter poisonous waste from the blood. It also picks up fluids excreted from the blood vessels into the tissues and carries it back again to the blood.

We have all heard of having "kernels" on the body at the time of an infection. These are engorged or enlarged lymph nodes. The principal ones are in the neck (cervical), the armpit (axillary), and the groin (inguinal). These nodes are often tender and can persist throughout the course of the infection.

Mono is spread via the oral-pharyngeal route, that is by kissing or drinking or eating after an infected person. Sometimes it may spread by coughing, sneezing, and receiving blood transfusions. After exposure it may take four to seven weeks to start having symptoms. Then the virus may last from a few days to several months.

Symptoms of mono include: sore throat, fever, swollen glands or kernels, loss of appetite, rash and stomach pain.

Avoid the kiss that lasts

By Andy Jones
Health Columnist

A person can have mono and be completely asymptomatic (without symptoms).

A simple blood test done on a person showing signs will detect it immediately.

Since mono is a virus, antibiotics are of no help. Your doctor or the student clinic can advise you on the secondary infections which may develop, including possible complications of the liver and spleen. Most patients do not require extended periods of bed rest or hospitalization.

Some possible complications which may develop are anemia and problems swallowing due to the swelling of the pharynx. The spleen is composed principally of lymphatic tissue so it may swell and become tender.

The way a patient takes care of himself is a key to recovery. You should get at least 10 hours of sleep each night. Your body is tired and weak and needs a little extra rest. Eat at least two balanced meals a day. High protein eggs and cheese are important. Plenty of fluids are just as important.

Avoid strenuous activities, especially anything involving straining, using alcohol and taking barbiturates until your doctor advises otherwise.

For the sore throat and aches you can take aspirin or Tylenol and gargle with warm salt water.

After symptoms have gone and you feel strong again, you should return for another mono test. If it is negative, you can usually start back to a normal routine of activities.

'Cocks leading in contention for Gulf South Conference title

Eleven weeks of football action have become history, but 60 minutes remain to be played Saturday afternoon in Jacksonville to settle the 1982 championship of the Gulf South Conference.

Jacksonville State University's defending champs will host North Alabama at 2 p.m. in Paul Snow Memorial Stadium to determine if the Gamecocks sit on the throne alone with a perfect 7-0 balance sheet or if they share the title with Mississippi College's 6-1 Choctaws.

Mississippi College ended its season last weekend by repelling North Alabama, 28-20. Meanwhile, Jacksonville was turning back Troy State, 49-14. Elsewhere, Valdosta State guaranteed its initial season would not be a losing one by stopping Livingston, 22-21, and Delta State concluded with a 47-0 thrashing of Tennessee-Martin.

Jacksonville's victory over Troy not only assured the Gamecocks of at least a tie for the league's title but the performance also produced reverberations throughout the weekly compilation of statistics. The Gamecocks lengthened their leadership in team scoring, passing and total offense. Jacksonville is averaging 37.1 points per game, 253.7 yards passing and 427.1 yards total offense.

Mississippi College assured itself of the No. 1 rushing offense spot by concluding with a 297-yard average.

Livingston University wound up its campaign with a new Conference record for rushing defense. The Tigers held 10 opponents to 738 yards on the ground, 73.8 yards per game, erasing the 88.7-yard record set by former member Southeastern Louisiana in 1978.

Livingston is the team leader in total defense, too, with a 211-yard average. North Alabama is tops in scoring defense with a 12.2-point average, and Delta State captured the passing defense lead with its 130.6-yard average.

Their point explosion against Troy State left three Gamecocks atop the individual scoring race. The leader continues to be junior running back Walter Broughton, who scored his 12th and 13th touchdowns to total 78 points and an 8.7 points per game average. Two teammates, Reginald Goodloe and placekicking specialist Chris Hobbs, are tied for second with 66 points each and 7.3 averages.

Goodloe, junior running back from Leighton, Ala., tallied four touchdowns on runs of 22, 1, 45 and 3 yards to break a 35-year-old school record and to tie GSC records for most touchdowns and most points scored in a single game. He rushed 21 times for 199 yards. That performance earned him the league's Offensive Player of the Week honor.

The defensive accolade was awarded Mississippi College linebacker Warren Conway, who registered 9 solo tackles, 4 assists and 2 sacks against North Alabama. His 9-yard sack on fourth down at the MC 19 with 4:44 remaining put an end to the final North Alabama scoring threat.

Only one other change occurred among the individual statistical leaders. Troy State's Donnie Arnold added another pass interception to his total, giving him seven for the season. He has returned them 141 yards.

Reginald Goodloe tears away from the opponent as he drives toward the end zone for a touchdown. Goodloe broke the record for scoring the most touchdowns in a game last Saturday night. The old JSU record (3) had been held since 1946.

UNA-last hurdle for Gamecocks

By BRUCE TINKER

It seems like the season always comes down to this single solitary game. Many times this confrontation has decided the conference championship and very often determines who will go to the national play-offs. The Gamecocks play their last regular season game Saturday against rival UNA. After losing to Mississippi College last week, UNA is out of the conference race; however, a win by UNA could place them in the play off series while also giving Mississippi College a share of the conference title. But the Gamecocks still control their own fate. A win over UNA clinches both the conference title and a play-off berth.

UNA is the only team in the conference that Jax State has not dominated in the past few years. The series with the Lions is split 14-14-2. Two years ago, the Gamecocks staged a thrilling comeback to tie in the fourth quarter only to lose in the final seconds when UNA stunned everyone with a long touchdown pass.

UNA, now 4-2 in the conference and 7-2 overall, was ranked 6th in the nation prior to last week's loss. During most of the season, UNA has used a strong running attack to score points and a stingy defense to keep opponents from doing the same. Their rush-oriented offense has averaged over 30 points per game while the defense usually gives up around 12.

But enough about them; what about the Gamecocks? Reginald Goodloe ran for 199 yards against Troy. Goodloe and counterpart Walter Broughton are both averaging 5.8 yards per carry and both have scored 11 touchdown catches this season and 16 in his career. But the most satisfying facet of this season for Coach Fuller has to be the fantastic job that his reserves have done filling the gaps in the starting line-up. The ability of these players to step in and do such a fine job speaks well of the players and their coaches.

As far as UNA is concerned, the Gamecocks plan to go with a passing attack. But if this plan fails, it's nice to know that Jacksonville has a double-edged offense.

Meet the Gamecocks' assistants...

By MARY HANNAH

Ever go to a JSU football game, the score is 50-0, and you decide to read the football program? Flip to about page 15 and notice about 6 pictures on the page. I wondered who these people were and what they do. Harris Montgomery, Bob Sandlin, and Jeff Wooten are Student Assistants. Don Jacobs, Eddie Garfinkle, and Randy Ragsdale are Graduate Assistants. A Student Assistant goes to school and receives no salary, while a Graduate Assistant receives a salary and goes to school.

Harris Montgomery joined the JSU staff in Spring of '81, and is a previous Gamecock. His responsibilities include helping the running backs, and during games working with the specialty and punting teams. Harris is a senior from Talladega, majoring in Health-Rec. He credited Coach White and Dr. Harris with helping him the most.

Bob Sandlin is a July '82 addition to the JSU staff. He is a native of Hamilton, AL, a graduate of Uni. of Alabama, and is a graduate student at JSU. Bob's responsibilities include: the defensive Scout team, chart keeping during games, and "Chief Film Mover." His future plans include to earn his master's degree and to return to high school coaching, of which he has 4 years previous experience. Sandlin felt the organization and caliber of players in college ball is a big asset. Basically, he felt everything about JSU was "nice" and credited his family and Hamilton, AL coaches L. C. Fowler and Freddie Burnett with helping him the most.

Jeff Wooten is the last Student Assistant, and has been on the staff since the Fall of '81. Jeff is a Sr. P.E. major, transfer student from Birmingham Southern and is a native of Gordo, AL. Jeff's responsibilities include the offensive Scout team, and kick-off and punt return teams during the games. Wooten's plans include to be a high school head coach and to graduate. He credited the complete staff at JSU, Jquan, family, and high school coaches with helping him the most. It seems a Student Assistant is a real learning experience. The experience which could be gained while at JSU was very important to all three. It also seems like these three are doing some important groundwork for future jobs and really helping the JSU program with their efforts.

Don Jacobs is a graduate of the University of Alabama and a native of Scottsboro. He joined the staff in Aug. 1981. He is responsible for the running backs, the kickers, the recruiting, and the relaying of plays to the QB during the games. When asked to compare JSU to 'Bama (where he once was a QB) he felt the same principles of good offense, tough defense, and decreasing mistakes were stressed at both schools. Recruiting involves a lot of PR. Don meets the players wanted for the program and sells them on JSU. He feels JSU offers a good chance to play in a championship program. Jacobs plans for the future include: to gain experience, to meet a lot of people, and to move up to a full time position. (A division 2 school has less full time positions than does a division 1 school). He credits Coaches Fuller and White with helping him the most.

Eddie Garfinkle played his eligibility at JSU, and then joined the JSU staff in Jan. '80 as a Graduate Assistant. Garfinkle's responsibilities include: working with the defensive ends, recruiting, and being athletic dorm director. When asked to compare the '77 Gamecock team to the '82 team, he felt the '82 team is a bigger, stronger, faster, more athletic team. He also felt the '77 team was less injury prone. Garfinkle felt recruiting was easy for him, since he played in the program and could express his belief in Jacksonville being the place to go to play small college ball. As Athletic Dorm Director, Eddie is responsible for a dorm which has completely different rules and punishments from any other dorm on campus. His plans for the future include to be married, earn a assistant coaching job, and remain in college coaching. He felt it was hard to coach where he had once played, and credited Coach Fuller with helping him the most.

The final Graduate Assistant is Randy Ragsdale, who is also a former Gamecock. The native of Atlanta's responsibilities include working with the defensive front and helping the players with their class schedules and loads. He coached high school football before coming to JSU and felt college coaching was better because he works with one certain group instead of all aspects of the program. When asked to compare the '77 team to the '82 team, he also felt the '82 players were bigger, stronger, and faster; while the '77 team had less injuries. Randy had mixed emotions about coaching where he once played. He felt it is a great opportunity to gain experience from the JSU staff. His future plans include: to earn his master's degree, to learn all he can from the coaches, and to pursue a career. He credits coaches, parents, and teammates with helping him the most.

Lady Gamecocks lose four team mates

By MIKE LIVINGSTON

At the end of this volleyball season, JSU will be losing four outstanding Lady Gamecocks to graduation. The four are Cassie O'Hearne, Debbie Seales, Michelle Richardson and Cherylece Morris.

"I've enjoyed my years of competing and working with Coach Creel," said Cassie, when asked about her four years as a Lady Gamecock. Cassie is from Winter Park, FL, and came to JSU after she was offered a scholarship. During her tenure here Cassie has made the all-state team and also the all-tournament team at state in 1980 and 1981. Coach Creel considers her a very keen player and said that many times she has been the emotional leader of the team. Cassie said that after she graduates she plans to pursue a career in marketing and play volleyball on USUBA team in Florida.

Another outstanding player for the team is Cherylece Morris, who came to JSU to tryout for the track team. Cherylece found out that she didn't like track so she tried to walk on the volleyball team. The first time she didn't make the team, but the second time she did. Cherylece is from Anniston and went to Wellborn High School.

"Cherylece has worked very hard for three years to be able to play on the level she has achieved," said Coach Creel. When asked about future plans Cherylece said, "Get married, and coach a church volleyball team."

Debbie Seales came to JSU from Thompson High School in Saginaw. Debbie was All-State player in 1980 and 1981. Coach Creel considers Debbie a power hitter and a good all-around player.

"I want to coach in high school under a good program in Florida," said Debbie. Debbie also said that the athletes in Alabama are good but that programs for volleyball are better supported in Florida. Debbie is looking forward to GSC tournament which will be held at UNA.

Michelle Richardson transferred from Southwest Baptist College in Missouri as a sophomore. Michelle said that it was a hard decision to transfer away from home. When asked to reflect on the program during her years here, Michelle said, "The girls are so neglected. It's not that the coach doesn't try; we just do not get what we ask for." Michelle doesn't know where the problem is at Jacksonville but feels that it is the attitude of the South that puts minor sports on such a neglected level.

Michelle did enjoy her years playing for JSU. The coach praised Michelle and said, "Mitch has a lot of court sense and she reacts to the opposition as well, and is quick on our coverage. She has a lot of desire and determination."

Michelle will graduate in December, and she plans to work in a law enforcement agency. She will have a minor in P.E., but has no future plans for coaching volleyball.

Volleyball takes last home match

By MIKE LIVINGSTON

Last Tuesday night, the Lady Gamecocks went five games against the UAB Lady Blazers. JSU took the first game 15-7. In the second game, the Lady Gamecocks jumped to a 10-4 lead, but UAB rallied to tie the game at 14-all and then went on to win the bout 16-14. In game three, JSU won again, 15-7, to take a one game lead in the match. The fourth game was a tight one with the scoring see-sawing back and forth between the two colleges. The Lady Blazers pulled away to win 15-11.

In the deciding game, the Lady Gamecocks gave up a 14-7 lead as UAB battled to tie the game 14-14. JSU went on to win the game, though, with a score of 16-14.

UNA

A large contingent of seniors will be playing their last regular season game in Paul Snow Memorial Stadium. This is certainly an important game for these 18 Gamecocks and they certainly will not be satisfied with anything short of victory. But hopefully, the season does not end on Saturday. This could be just a single stop on the way to that long sought national title. Well, we can worry about that later. First, we need to defeat the UNA Lions. The weather should be a bit warmer at 2 p.m., so everybody get out and support your JSU Gamecocks.
