Band misunderstandings aired

By SUSIE IRWIN
Associate Editor

"It was not their (the Southerners) fault. They wanted to be there very much, we wanted them to be there very much. There was a problem. Hopefully, it's straightened out and we certainly look forward to having them with us Saturday night," said Coach Jim Fuller addressing the pep rally crowd last Thursday night before the Mississippi College game.

The 'problem' involved the Southerners, the SGA, the administration and a band festival. Instead of accompanying the JSU Gamecocks to Livingston, the band performed in exhibition at a band competition in Rockdale, Ga.

"It was not an administrative decision," said Dr. Theron Montgomery, "The word we got through the music department was that the band wanted to go to the Dalton Marching Festival. But that festival was cancelled and when this opening came up to go to Rockdale, they chose to go there."

The SGA, in response to the band's absence at the Livingston game, passed a resolution which stated that the Southerners should attend all games within a 300 mile radius of Jacksonville.

According to Ricky Walker, drum major for the band, "it was the SGA's understanding that it was the band's decision not to go to Livingston and that is totally false."

Steve Dunn, also a drum major for the Southerners, said that "the band feels they should have gone to support the team."

The Southerners perform in exhibition at the band competitions to serve as "a model band" for the high school students," said Walker.

"The band does more for us than play at football games," said Jack Hopper, director of public relations. The Southerners are a major recruiting tool for the University, he said, and the response from the high schools attending the Rockdale festival was very favorable.

Dr. David Walters, of the music department, said that when the department received the "negative decision" on the Livingston trip, plans were made for attending the Rockdale Festival.

"We didn't want to rest over the weekend because it's not good for a band to rest that long," said Walters.

Drum major, Walker said when the paper work to attend the Livingston game was rejected, the band had only two alternatives. "We could go to Rockdale county or sit here and get stale," he said.

"Coach Fuller and Jerry Cole both know we'd like to support the team, but it's purely an administrative decision," said Walters.

According to the music department, the paper work is submitted with an itinerary and a list of options. This paper work goes through many channels and many offices before being finalized.

While this is football season, it is also marching season for the bands and, therefore, the Southerners are invited to many festivals. These festivals are attended for recruiting purposes Hoppersaid.

The administration, according to Hopper, is discussing plans to sponsor a small 15 to 20 piece pep band to travel with the team to away games that the Southerners would be unable to play for. The pep band would travel on a bus with the cheerleaders.

No decision made on noise ordinance

By SUSIE IRWIN

"We're not anti-university, in fact most of us have lived here in Jacksonville all our lives," said city councilman Ed Jordan at Monday night's city council meeting.

In order to "dispel rumors" about the noise ordinance, Jordan said open communication was necessary.

Councilman Theodore Fox, chairman of the Police and Fire Committee informed the group that the ordinance could not be presented for discussion at this time due to incomplete research by the committee.

Grant Paris, legal counselor for the city council, said that the "laws were on the books" and that the ordinance would provide guidelines for violations.

Representatives from Huntsville will be asked to come to Jacksonville to demonstrate that city's noise measuring device, Paris revealed.

Marc Angle, SGA president at JSU, said he appreciates the "open communication" with the council and that he looks forward to working with the city.

Dean Bishop to talk with pre-law students

Dean Brad Bishop, Dean of Admissions of Cumberland Law School, Samford University, will be on the JSU campus on Wednesday, October 20. He will address the Constitutional Law class at 10:00 (Room 331 Martin) which will be open to interested students as well as members of the class. He will also be available to counsel pre-law students in the conference room, 236 Martin Hall, from 11:00 - 12:00 and 1:30 - 2:30. All students interested in attending law school next year are invited to talk with Dean Bishop while he is on campus.

Jim Leib to lecture on impact of stress

Jim Leib, Regional Medical Center psychologist, will speak on stress at Jacksonville State University at noon on Monday, October 18 at the College of Nursing auditorium.

The discussion, open to the general public, will include information on physiological signs of stress, the impact of stress in patient care, and how to handle stress.

The lecture, sponsored by the Student Nurses Association, is free. A College of Nursing spokesman said a background in nursing is not necessary to understand the discussion.

Leib is the program coordinator of Path Ways, the psychiatric program at Regional Medical Center in Anniston. He also serves as a clinical specialist.

Leib, a native of Maryland, came to Anniston in 1981. He received a master's degree in counseling from Boston University after a military tour of Germany where he worked as a counselor in the mental hygiene unit of Fifth General Hospital.

He has worked as a psychologist at community health center in Virginia. He is widely known in northeast Alabama as a public speaker on stress management.

Fuller expresses sincere thanks

Dear Student Body:

I would like to express a belated and heartfelt thanks to several students who came to my aid this past August. I was a volunteer worker for the United Cerebral Palsy Telethon, in charge of road blocks in Jacksonville. At the time I agreed to do this, I thought our football team would be on campus and therefore we would have no problem securing enough help.

As it happened, the Telethon was scheduled before our players were to arrive for Fall practice and, after a mad scramble, Marc Angle came to my rescue. Students Rex Angle, Scott Mattix, Jamie Oyler, Kim Smith, and Marc himself, came to pitch in for two days and helped this coach win a big game. We reached our goal and had it not been for their efforts, this might not have been accomplished.

I am very proud to be a part of this University, working with the fine young men and women of Jacksonville State. Many times we overlook the valuable contributions made by the student body of this institution . . . which I consider to be the best student body in the nation!

I would like to say "thank you" to these, and all our students for allowing me the opportunity to work for them.

Sincerely,
Jacksonville State Gamecocks

Burns directs ODK province

By DENNIS SHEARS

Cathy Burns, a 1982 graduate from JSU, was chosen to serve as Student Director for Province 7 (Alabama and Mississippi), and she was selected to serve on the National level Commission of Standards, in Omicron Delta Kappa.

Burns, the first-ever female to serve as a student director, was elected to that position in March of this year, in Lexington, Kentucky.

Omicron Delta Kappa is a prestigious organization that rewards outstanding leadership characteristics and honor roll standing in scholastic achievements. ODK is organized on the "circle" level, and Miss Burns is a member of the Jacksonville Circle. Each circle is organized into a regional division called a Province. There are 12 Provinces in the United States. One student director, and one faculty member is chosen to represent each Province.

BURNS

The duties and responsibilities of a student director include guiding all the Circles in a Province toward what National-level officials consider the "Ideal Circle."

Miss Burns explains, "I do a great deal of traveling as a student director; I visit circles and set goals for them during the year. I also make sure that the circles are active on campus, and I check to see if their by-laws coincide with the National by-laws. The initiation procedures are also reviewed, to determine if they are fair.

"ODK Circles should be well-rounded, and the Jacksonville circle is. Circle leaders should try to emphasize recruiting new members from various areas of campus life," added Burns.

The qualifications for being selected into a circle are 1) a student must be a junior or senior in rank, 2) must have grades in the upper 35 percent of his-her class, and 3) must be active in at least one of the following: Scholarship Honors; athletics; social service; religious activities or campus government; journalism; speech; or mass media; or creative-performing arts.

Cathy Burns also serves on the Commission of Standards, which reviews all universities that apply to charter an ODK circle. She is the only student director serving on this National Council.

Miss Burns graduated from JSU last April with a BS in biology and a concentration in pre-medical studies. She is now enrolled at JSU as a part-time student taking a computer science course.

A former JSU Ballerina, Burns' hobbies include playing the piano, reading, "learning to play tennis," cross stitch, and jogging.

At the present time Miss Burns works full-time at Anniston Family Practice Center in Anniston as a medical assistant. "I assist the doctor in setting up patients for examinations, and interview patients about their illnesses. I also take some x-rays and do some lab work," said Burns.

"I really enjoy my job and my position as student director for Province 7 in ODK. I feel that it is an honor to have been chosen the first female to serve as a student director," declared Burns.

Miss Burns' future plans focus primarily on entering into med-school and serving as student director until March, unless she is re-elected.

"My fondness for the South, especially Alabama, will always keep me in the South," Cathy Burns pointed out,

Drama department announces second season auditions

A new tradition in the drama department begins this fall with the first production of the "second season". Second season presentations will give students a chance to produce, and design, and perform in major theatrical works. William Inge's "Bus Stop" is the choice for the experimental theatre's first offering. Department costumer Douglas Stetz will direct and design the three act play with roles for five men and three women.

Auditions will be held Oct.

19 and 20, (with call-backs on Oct. 21), in the acting lab on the third floor of Stone Center from 5:00-7:30.

Production dates have been set for Dec. 2, 3, and 4.

Second season is designed to be a learning experience for everyone involved, so anyone interested in any aspect of the theatre is encouraged to be a part of this production which is being produced through the cooperation of Alpha Psi Omega (the drama honor society), Masque and Wig, and the JSU Drama Department.

Accelerated high school students attend Jax State

By LYNN LePINE

Since the mid-sixties JSU has offered an accelerated program for high school students who wish to begin earning college credits before graduation. The program is announced during the registration period at several area high schools, and Assistant to the Vice-President for Academic Affairs Bill Meehan, who coordinates the program for JSU, is on hand to assist those students who want to participate.

To qualify for the accelerated program, a student must have maintained a 'B' average through the ninth and tenth grades. A student may register for college courses beginning in the eleventh grade. Says Jacksonville High School guidance counselor, Tom Malone, "The students who sign up for the program are generally the ones who are motivated and want to get ahead". Malone gave the example of the student who finishes his or her high school math requirements early. "Such a student may want to go ahead and take more advanced courses in the field, such as calculus. The accelerated program allows the student to continue his study of mathematics while earning college credit".

Along with the advice of his or her parents, a student must follow the guidelines set up by the Alabama State Department, a student may register for any course for which he or she has completed the high school requirements. For example, a high school junior may not take History 201 because the state requires that students in the eleventh grade take American history as a part of their regular curriculum." The only course an accelerated high student may not take is English 101, since the D.O.E. requires students to have four full years of high school English.

Tom Malone feels that one disadvantage of the program is that sometimes a student must give up an elective offered in the high school curriculum in order to take the college course he or she wants. Says Malone "It often happens that the two classes will be offered only once during the day and at the same hour. In these cases, a student may choose to give up a high school elective which would otherwise be very helpful to him. At the same time, however, the student picks up college credit and we know that this, too, will be beneficial to him in the long run."

"One advantage of the program," says Meehan, "is that it gives the students a preview of what college is like." All accelerated students are issued regular JSU I.D. cards. If they wish, they may choose to live in one of the dormitories during the summer sessions. Other than the help they receive during registration, accelerated students are treated no differently than full-time Jax State students.

Malone feels that the high school students taking courses at the college level develop a sense of independence. "They are not under the same rules and restrictions as they are here," Malone said. "Accelerated students must learn how to function in the less structured environment. This can be very helpful in developing a more mature attitude, although some students may have trouble adjusting."

A discipline problem that was common in the early days of the program resulted from students having too much free time during the regular school day. Students who registered for the eight week Instructional Media course found themselves with nothing to do during the last half of the semester. The problem was rectified by limiting the courses offered to accelerated students to classes that meet for a full semester.

Jacksonville High School students Kathy King and Scott Green, both seniors, and Rich Harrell, a junior, are just three of the JHS students currently enrolled at Jax State. The three seem to appreciate the increased independence they enjoy by taking classes at JSU. Says King, "Since we get to eat lunch where we want to and our college classes don't meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays, we seem to have more free time." King is presently taking Psychology 201, a class she takes during the regular school day. JHS students taking courses at the University are not required to return to the high school if they have no further afternoon classes there.

Rich Harrell, who is also taking Psychology 201, feels that the classes at the University are more interesting than the ones he takes at JHS. "The classes at the college are less structured," remarked Harrell. "This seems to make them less boring and easier to handle."

Scott Green takes A Cappella Choir in the afternoons three days a week, so his regular school schedule is not affected. Although he feels the class may not be as difficult as the academic subjects some students are taking, he says he is enjoying the experience. "A Cappella is a lot of fun," Green commented. "Right now we're working on our Christmas program."

Although it is not required that the students participating in the accelerated program attend JSU after high school, both King and Green plan to do so. Harrell prefers to go away to college, perhaps to Florida. At any rate, all three hope that their experience at JSU will help to prepare them to be full-time college students in the coming years.

Points Of View

A question of student rights . . .

For the past four years I have attended football games at Paul Snow Stadium. Not once during this period of time have I ever sat on the fifty-yard line. Nor the forty. Nor the thirty. The reason? Campus fraternities rope off the best seats for their members, little sisters, and guests. Pledges tell me I can't sit here nor there, but the endzone is always open. It's strange but I could find no rule or statute anywhere on campus that says these organizations have the right to be so arrogant and obnoxious about what belongs to all students, not just a "chosen" few. What these organizations have done is not just presumptuous, it is totally rude and inconsiderate. Who gets the best seats should be a result of whoever is there first, and physically occupies that seat. It shouldn't be that four people can reserve a space big enough for 200 by using ropes instead of bodies.

My solution to the problem is as follows. Let the Greeks have from one fifty-yard line to the endzone, and everybody else have the remainder. That way, everybody has the same chance of getting a good seat. If the frats can't work out a seating system for their half, the SGA could work up one. Each frat could be given the 50 yard line block of seats for one home game on a rotating basis. I believe this is a fair and adequate solution.

The administration has looked the other way for too long. I know I speak for others when I say something had better be done or else. Consider this: Greeks make up less than 20 percent of the students here. They shouldn't have 100 percent of the best seats at the game. If the independent block ever solidifies at this campus, everywhere between the 20 yard lines could be roped off by - you guessed it - the independents. I'm not above doing it to prove a point, and I know others aren't either. SGA, administration, and Greeks, the ball is in your court. Don't think this issue is going to disappear - it won't. Action needs to be taken - let's make sure it's positive and beneficial. Otherwise, you might start hearing the old baseball maxim - still plenty of cheap seats left folks.

Dear Editor:

It has been brought to my attention that there has been a great deal of misunderstanding concerning the resolution passed by the S.G.A. on Oct. 4. Contrary to many rumors circulating the campus, the resolution was passed in support of—not against—the "Marching Southerners." The Student Government Association recognized the fact that the students wanted the band at the Livingston game, and that the band did indeed want to be there.

The resolution which, "requests that the band attend all conference football games within a 300 mile radius of Jacksonville," was intended to show support of the band by the S.G.A. as a representative body of J.S.U. students. This show of support was aimed at the administrative community here at J.S.U. and it is hoped that such a resolution will help make it easier for the band to be at the games that both students and band members alike want them to attend.

I, personally, and on behalf of the Student Senate apologize for any problems caused by the apparent lack of clarity on the part of the resolution. However, I cannot apologize for the genuine intent of the resolution—showing student support for the fantastic band that we have here at Jacksonville State. I trust that we can all work together in the future to keep spirit and unity among us strong, and dissension and strife among us weak.

Let's all be at the game Saturday and show our support for the Gamecocks and for our "Marching Southerners"—the greatest band in the South!

Sincerely yours,
Sen. Brad Page
Chaplain, S.G.A.

Drum major Steve Dunn explains Southerners' purpose

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to a letter carried in last week's edition of the Chanticleer. In that letter the author expressed disappointment in the Marching Southerners' performance at the Alabama A&M game - both on the field and in the stands. His frustration stemmed from the fact that he saw the half-time show from the back, and that for most of the game, the band was "virtually silent". As with most complaints and suggestions, this letter deserves a response.

The purpose of the band at ball games is twofold: to entertain the crowd at half-time and to help support the team. We feel that in the first instance it is important to entertain as many people as possible, so we normally do our shows to the front-side stands. This normally applies to home games, as well as away games, especially since a large group of students is usually present on Thursdays in time to see us do our show at least once before a pep rally. Away games also carry with them a piece of accepted etiquette: the visiting band always plays to the home crowd. This is why the half-time show at Alabama A&M was viewed by JSU fans from the rear.

With regards to our virtual silence in the stands, we are not allowed to play as often as one might like. Because the Southerners tend to have a rather loud sound, referees and football teams occasionally find us distracting. Full band playing is therefore limited to quarter breaks, scores, and time-outs.

Teel advocates equal rights for end zone football fans

Dear Editor:

I attended last week's Miss. College game. Even though Jax State won, I must say I was very disappointed in the football team. I was sitting with my family from home. Before the game, all they talked about was how

We do, of course, wish to accommodate as many at games as possible. Because of this we fully intend to continue such practices as playing a short number to the student section before the half-time show whenever time permits us to do so. We have also planned - prior to last week's letter - to do at least one show this year to the student side. This will permit anyone unable to come to pep rallies or walk to the front of the stadium to see the band from the front.

All of the Southerners put a great deal of time and effort into making this the best band we can. It's our band, and we're proud of the results. It's also your band. We hope you will also be proud of the results.

Sincerely,
Steve Dunn

good they have heard Jacksonville's Gamecocks are! As we took our seats in the end zone where the Southerners sit, we were very surprised to see the football team play the entire game back and forth from end zone to end zone! Well,

Flood counters complaint

Dear Editor,

I am writing in reference to Miss Brown's letter on the unfairness of the University's resident assistants. I am an RA in New Dorm. She was rather vague in her accusations and over-generalized. If she has a specific gripe, then she should go directly to that RA, the dorm director, or Dean Higginbotham. If her accusations are legitimate, then she has the right to complain and should so that something will be done about it.

RA's follow rules just like every other dorm resident. The rules we work by are handed down by Dean Higginbotham and our dorm directors. If a student feels that we are being unfair in some rule, she should make sure that it is a legitimate rule and not just made up. Then she has the right to complain. I believe that most residents complain about the RA's when in fact, it is the rules we work by that they believe are unfair.

As for favoritism and blackmailing, someone should be told. This, I agree, is quite unfair. The importance is that students should go to someone in authority about these matters in order to get something done. Not all RA's do these things. In fact it is probably a very small percentage. I would like to see it stopped just as much as the other residents.

In honor of Alexandria High School's decision to foster narrow mindedness and perpetuate the ignorance of the human race, we offer our vision of a world in which this particular brand of stupidity -i.e. the practice of banning books - has been allowed to run rampant.

Rm. 222 Lincoln Hall

Sept. 8, 1984

Dear Mom and Dad:

Hi, how are you? I'm fine. I've been at school for a week now, and I'm not sure I'm going to like it. There's something odd about my classes. It's not my professors; they seem really interesting. My classmates are okay too. The strange thing is that we're not allowed to have textbooks in any of my courses!

Monday morning I walked into my biology class, and my teacher told us that all material would be given to us in handouts. Apparently all the biology texts on the market have been banned because they dare to describe bodily functions and show photographs of actual human organs. I've known about sex since I was eleven, but someone has decided I don't need to know any more about it. Why bother spreading actual scientific facts when locker room myths and rumors are doing such a good job already? (By the way, I was sorry to hear about Lisa back home having to drop out of high school and get married because she got pregnant.)

My psychology class will probably be a little tougher without a textbook, too. The teacher was very apologetic, but she isn't allowed to use any book that has objectionable terms in it. It's tough to find a psych text that doesn't mention sex drives, oral and anal stages of development, orgasm, pre-marital sex, masturbation, etc. I wonder what Freud would say about people with obsessive-compulsive behavior toward censoring anything they don't understand? Looks like I won't find out here.

I had to go to the library and draw up a floor plan for my Instructional Media course. It was incredible. Who would believe a 12-story library full of nothing but chairs and back issues of "Sports Illustrated" and "Field and Stream"? Actually, there are a few books left on the shelves. You can still read "Mein Kampf" or "The Communist Manifesto," (they contain no "dirty" words) but I couldn't find a copy of George Orwell's "1984" anywhere. I asked for something by Steinbeck and the student worker said all the pianos were in the music building.

Remember how excited I was when I was selected for the honors program in English? I was really looking forward to my Biblical Literature course. You know how much I've always admired the beauty of the writing in the Bible. Well, I'm not going to learn much about it here. They've gone and banned the Bible. I asked why and was told that a book that mentions harlots, thieves, and adulterers has no place in the classroom.

Mom, would you please mail me all my old high school texts? Please mail them in a plain brown wrapper and include a flashlight so I can read them under the covers at night as I used to do with "Playboy".

What's your favorite music?

As part of a student-faculty involvement project, the Chanticleer wants to find out what your favorite type of music is.

Music touches the lives of almost everyone, be it by advertisers on the radio, band members, recording artists, DJ's, or just general "Listening to your favorite radio stations."

To cast your ballot, just check your first (1), and second (2) favorite categories listed below, and send them to The Chanticleer box office in Bibb Graves Hall, or The Chanticleer office, Room 102 TMB (where the new Hardee's is located), in care of Dennis Shears. 'Well, it got 'em clean didn't it?' asks Janet Prater

Lucille Ball, move over !

By LEZ HOWLE

As the hot iron and fragile dress met, horror spread over the face of Janet. A hole had been burned in her Revised Edition dress and the next concert was that night. "I'll call Liz. She'll know what to do," she decided. When Liz answered the phone, she heard Janet's frantic voice, "Liz, are you at home?" Janet dashed out of her room in Sparkman, heading for the elevator with dress and sash in hand. As the elevator doors closed and began moving, Janet felt a tug at her arm. She gasped, grabbing wildly at her sash which was disappearing between the slats in the door. After snatching up a clothes hanger, she dashed to the basement, poking the hanger down the elevator shaft in a useless effort to recover the sash. With a hole in her dress, no sash and one hour left before R.E. pulled out for their concert, Janet jumped into her car, wondering what might happen next.

Sound unbelievable? This was just another day in the life of Janet Prater.

Janet, a home economics major at JSU, is the local and state president of the Alabama Home Economics Association. This position has brought her such honors as a trip to the national convention held in Cincinnati and several speaking engagements.

Honesty is a value held high by Janet. "I've learned you really have to be honest in order to help people," she says. Helping and caring about people holds an important place in Janet's life. She tries to reach out and be friendly toward all whom she meets.

"I try to be as friendly toward one person as I am with others. I view people as of equal worth and importance. It irritates me to see people who think they are worth more than others," commented Janet.

Janet's witty, crazy, funloving spirit enables everyone to feel comfortable around her. She shows no qualms about joining or initiating zany, harmless antics. "I love to act crazy and think of crazy things to do," grinned Janet.

Janet has many interests, most of which are related to her home economics major. Cooking is on her list of favorites. "I like to try out new things on people," said Janet with a glint of evil in her eye. When asked what her favorite type of food to fix, she commented lightly, "I like to fix desserts. . . and meats and vegetables and . . ."

Playing the piano for her home church in Bowden, Ga. has been part of Janet's schedule since she was in seventh grade. Janet feels she can express herself fully through playing the piano. It is also a way of taking care of frustrations. "When I'm fed up and mad, I play the piano because I can hit it as hard as I want to," Janet said laughingly.

Through Janet's funloving spirit is seen her caring, empathy, and honest love for people. This mixture of qualities make up bubbling, loving, kooky Janet Prater.

On her way to Dothan

By LIZ HOWLE

Donna Fennell, Miss Cottonwood, is busy preparing for a trip to the Peanut Festival in Dothan, Alabama. There she will be competing in a week long pageant starting Sunday which will involve interviewing, swimsuit and formal competitions. Donna is excited about the prospect of meeting new people yet nervous about the competition.

Donna is a freshman working on a nursing major. She is attending Jax State on a scholarship she received with her Miss Cottonwood title.

"I became interested in nursing while in high school. I was working at a hospital in Dothan," she says. Donna chose to come to JSU because of its excellent nursing program. "I know the program is tough, but it's top notch", says Donna.

Explained Donna, "My grades are the most important thing to me now. I want to keep them up and am aiming for Dean's List."

"I've considered changing my major to psychology," she explained. Psychology is

Donna Fennell and Cocky

Donna's favorite subject. When asked why, she commented, "It's like the pageant; you get to know the girls, their backgrounds, hometowns, and how they are different. In psychology you get to learn about people."

Face in the crowd reveals excited dejection

By LAURA ALBRIGHT

Picture this: a young boy walks into Paul Snow Stadium proudly carrying two of JSU's "100 and Growing" balloons and wearing a JSU t-shirt. This same little boy proudly wears an Atlanta Braves cap and tells everyone he sees he wants to grow up to be either Phil Niekro or Ed Lett.

Since the Gamecocks were well ahead of Mississippi College Saturday, you would think this young man would have been ecstatic, right? Wrong! His other favorite team, the Braves, were losing to the St. Louis Cardinals 4-3. His face said it all - excitement for the Gamecocks, but utter disappointment every time the announcer said the Braves were behind.

How could it happen? One favorite team win by such a large margin and the other lose by such a small one.

"Can't the 'Cocks give the Braves some of their points, Dad?," the little boy said. "No, son, that's not the way it works," his father replied.

Ever heard of excited dejection? That's what this face in the crowd revealed.

The survey continues —

Teachers aren't all bad

By LYNN LePINE

In last week's issue of the Chanticleer, students voiced their gripes about teachers and teaching practices. This week over one hundred students were asked the question, "What qualities do you like to find in teachers and in their classes?" The results of the poll show that students have as many positive feelings about their teachers and classes as they do negative ones. Following are the nine most common replies to the survey question.

1) The words of one student seem to sum up the conviction of many: "A sense of humor is everything." Students feel that laughter is the spice of classroom life, and they say an occasional joke helps to break the monotony of note-taking.

2) Students prefer a teacher who speaks clearly, modulating his or her voice to avoid a soporific monotone. Students say they appreciate a teacher who goes over the material and then re-emphasizes the main points more slowly so that students can get them down in their notes.

3) Students enjoy instructors who are able to motivate their classes to participate freely in discussion. Students say that besides breaking the monotony of the lectures, it allows them to gain different viewpoints on the subject matter.

4) Although students realize that it is difficult for teachers to recognize individual faces from classes of up to 50, they do appreciate it when a teacher tries to get to know them outside the classroom setting. Even a casual and friendly greeting in the hall helps a student feel that the teacher sees them as a person instead of just another body that occupies a desk.

5) Students say that in a problems course, it helps them when a teacher goes over the material slowly. They also feel that many of their frustrations in such courses are alleviated when a teacher assigns problems in class and then goes around and helps those who need individual attention.

6) Students say that it is a tremendous help when a teacher dismisses classes three or four minutes early. They say that just these few spare moments can often help them beat the traffic and ease the rush of a hectic day.

7) Students enjoy teachers who tell personal stories and anecdotes to illustrate or elaborate on points made during lectures from becoming a flat and uninteresting jumble of textbook facts and figures.

8) Students respect instructors who show a thorough knowledge of their fields and who do not simply parrot the courses' textbooks. They like to feel they can learn something from their teachers that they could not have learned just by reading the books themselves.

9) Students say they are motivated by teachers who show genuine concern for students. Troublesome courses become less frustrating for students when they know a teacher is empathetic and available for outside help.

Damien Odoh masters hamburgers at Hardee's

Clemson grad persuades master's

By SUSIE IRWIN

Why would Damien Odoh, native of Nigeria, North Africa and former graduate of Clemson, come to the University of Jacksonville to flip hamburgers at the local Hardees? For the same reasons any other student would — financial ones, of course.

Odoh, who maintains a 2.9 GPA, came to the southern campus only two falls ago and will receive his master's degree in public administration in December from JSU. Although accepted at many other schools, Odoh decided to continue his studies here because of the "cheaper fee."

After receiving the master's degree, Odoh might begin work toward a doctorate, but he stresses that the decision is basically up to his parents in Nigeria because they are his "sponsors".

Being the oldest of his three brothers and one sister, Odoh will someday take over his father's transportation business in Nigeria. He explains that it would be advantageous for his father as well as himself to earn degrees in business.

Before coming to the United States in 1976, Odoh graduated from high school and also attended a college preparatory school in Nigeria.

While at Clemson, where he received a degree in business, Odoh played soccer and accompanied his team to the division finals in the 1978-79 season.

Although he has not returned to his native country since 1976, Odoh corresponds with his family often at home in North Africa and hopes to return some day soon.

However, right now Damien Odoh is content to attend classes at JSU and cook hamburgers at Hardees.

Smart comments on South

By LYNN LePINE

Although William Shakespeare did not attend JSU, he and Jax State junior Clive Smart have quite a bit in common. For one thing, they were both born in the same English town, Stratford-upon-Avon. Shakespeare was baptised in Clive's parish church, the Holy Trinity, which was built in 845 A.D.. Clive even shared in the great playwright's homes after a fashion. He worked as a tour guide at Hall's Croft, the home of Shakespeare's daughter, at New Place, his retirement home, and at the often-pictured cottage of Shakespeare's wife, Anne Hathaway.

Clive Smart came to Jacksonville, Alabama as a direct result of Dr. Mary McMillan's mini-mester theater tour in England. Some of the students from JSU visited with Clive and his family and were treated to sight-seeing trips about Stratford by their very knowledgeable host.

"The students who come to Stratford are a great credit to JSU," Clive said, "My friends enjoy meeting them and listening to them talk. Their Southern drawl reminds them of Gone with the Wind."

But what his friends joke about, many Europeans take for the truth. They believe that the American South is still rolling with huge plantations and inhabited mostly by the barefooted Huck Finn type. Clive feels that this is largely the South's own fault. He believes that Alabama and other Southern states undersell themselves.

"The state Alabama should advertise what it has to offer," says Clive.

One of the things Clive thinks would be attractive to Europeans is Alabama's warm climate. "England is much farther north than you realize when you look at a map. The climate is very much colder," he said. "Last year, we had four months of thick snow and ice. If I were in England now, I'd be gettin' out me sweaters."

When asked to name the one thing that shocked him most about America, Clive replied without hesitating: the violence. "The violence in America is deplorable," he said. "The murder rate in Anniston alone is unbelievable." Clive, who worked as a policeman in England, had a hard time getting used to seeing American policemen with revolvers on their hips. English bobbies carry only night sticks.

But in spite of all that, Clive is enjoying America and Jax State in particular. "It's a beautiful campus, but I hope to see better planning in the future," he said, referring to the library which he feels is too large and difficult to use.

Clive is a special education major and a member of the JSU Council for Exceptional Children, an organization he very much enjoys. He is also active in the church and last year became president of the Episcopal College Community.

When asked if he felt he were being "Americanized," Clive said that absorbing parts of the American culture came with living here. Since meeting a fellow countryman here on campus, however, Clive said that he has resumed drinking his daily quota of hot tea.

"I have picked up some American pronunciations, though," he laughed. "When I go home now, they joke and tell me to stop speaking American and speak English."

Pageant applications available

Applications are now being accepted from all over the State of Alabama for the annual Miss Alabama USA Pageant to be staged at the Sheraton Motor Inn, Huntsville, Feb. 19, 1983. The Miss Alabama USA Pageant is the official state preliminary to the Miss USA-Miss Universe Contest. There is "no talent" requirement. All judging is on the basis of poise, personality, swimsuit, and evening gown competition. Applicants must be between 18 and 25 years of age by May 1, 1983, never married and at least a six month resident of Alabama, thus college dorm students are eligible. All girls interested in competing for the title must apply to Mrs. Billie McLarty, State Director, 121 Boxwood Drive, Franklin, Tenn. 37064, or call (615) 373-8456.

The 1983 Miss Alabama USA will be awarded a host of prizes including a round trip flight and 12 exciting days at the Miss USA Pageant. Other prizes include a scholarship, $500 cash, crown, banner, trophy, color portrait, and other gifts.

'Don't need none of that stuff down here, boy'

Dr. Howard Johnson believes geography students should learn by doing.

As a result, his students at Jax State have performed professional contract work totaling over $10,000 during the past five years. And they are currently engaged in a $5,000 project producing base maps of all roads in Calhoun County.

"The real world is a harsher environment than college. We want our students to learn not to fool around, to become reliable in attitude as well as quality of work.

"We try to develop a concept of the responsibilities required of them in the real world where they won't be able to cut 25 percent of their classes or come in late."

The current project - contracted through the Calhoun County Commission - is a major two-year effort requiring students to use a variety of mapping skills. Johnson says the work is supervised by Ph. D.'s in the department and is "just as good or better" than work produced by full-time professionals.

The base maps, when completed next summer, will enable county engineers to produce transparent overlays showing such detailed information as the location of county road signs and other features.

"For them, it becomes much easier to follow up on something by looking on a map rather than trying to find it on a piece of paper in a file somewhere.

"The students begin to realize how applicable the techniques are that are being taught in their courses."

The department recently completed a major project for the U. S. Forest Service that entailed mapping all drainage basins on all forest property in Alabama - some 880,000 acres.

"It's a chance for them to make a contribution more significant than if we had just assigned them a drawing to do in class. It motivates people in class because they know I won't select them unless they demonstrate their ability first.

"Plus, the students earn money doing professional work. Most of the money brought in goes to the students. The contracts give them something to put on a resume."

But the practical side of geography doesn't end there for Johnson's students. The 39-year-old Geography Department chairman believes in teaching survival skills - how to live in the real world without being gypped.

"For instance, there's more to buying a house than seeing how many bathrooms it has and whether the kitchen is okay.

"Many people don't fully appreciate how important it might be to have the house facing the right direction on the lot. Or maybe they don't know that all contractors aren't going to build houses with septic tanks that work," he said.

"A lot of people ask the realtor good questions, but there are a number of things that they may fail to ask that could have an impact on them all the while they live in that house."

Consequently, Johnson's students don't just learn about plate tectonics, minerals, and soil. They also learn something about the practical side of home ownership: how to do a soil perc test, what they should know about septic tanks.

"Something on the order of 60 percent of the land in Calhoun County is unsuitable for septic tanks. It's buyer beware. It takes a very particular type of soil texture in order for a septic tank to work properly, otherwise you'll either have sewage forming one of those odoriferous, slimy pools in what used to be your back yard, or you'll have sewage going straight down and contaminating the groundwater supply."

So Johnson tries to convince the 18- and 19-year olds that they are future familymen and prospective home and septic tank owners who will need to know how to test their own soil.

Johnson finds it easier to interest students in his lectures on energy conservation "since everyone will pay a power bill."

Johnson often gives the students a bag of tricks for saving money on energy. He tells them how to use trees to funnel a cooling breeze toward a house in the summer, how to make air turn a corner of a house, and how to make wind streams flow over shrubbery and right into a bedroom window.

"Buying a house with a roof that slopes so that it faces the south and that has a lot of window glass in that direction allows you to take advantage of sunlight in the winter to help heat the home.

"Houses that are set up with these things in mind use maybe only 30 or 40 percent as much electricity as another type of house."

The point of all this, Johnson says, is to show students that geographic literacy is desirable for everyday living.

Johnson, who joined JSU in 1973, is a native of South Milwaukee, Wis. He earned his Ph.D. in geography at Michigan State in 1972 and taught three years at the University of Wisconsin at Oshkosh before joining Jax State.

It was out of his own experiences adapting to the southern climate that he drew ideas for certain lectures. He often tells students about his own struggle to apply geographic know-how to life in order to maintain his home at Alexandria.

When he moved to Alabama a decade ago, he was determined to make his home more energy efficient. He walked into a local hardware store one sunny afternoon and asked to see storm windows.

"'You don't need none of that stuff down here in Alabama, boy,' they said. They were laughing at me because I was one of those crazy yankee people who thought you needed storm windows, see."

Johnson custom ordered the then-inexpensive windows and had the last laugh.

"That was three months before the oil embargo hit. I find it kind of hilarious now. The people who were calling me dumb now run full page ads about their energy conservation materials: storm windows, weather stripping, insulation.

"This is what I try to tell my students. Geography is very practical, and it can save you money."

Acne poses problems for many

By Andy Jones

Once you have blackheads, you have acne. It affects 75 to 90 percent of our American youths.

First, what is it? The medical name is "acne vulgaris". It is a condition in which the ducts of the oil glands of the skin, called sebaceous glands, are plugged. It may range from a few blackheads and pimples to a face covered with red papules, yellow pustules, dried crust and deep pitted scars.

Enough scientific terminology. What can you do for it? Drying agents, exfoliating agents, ultraviolet lamps, antibiotics and carbon dioxide are common treatments. The first three can be bought without a prescription at drug stores. Drying agents do exactly that to help pimples and blemishes come to the surface. Exfoliating means to flake or peel away. Both of these treatments are found effective. These medications should be applied every morning before going out and at night, just before bed. Benzoyl Peroxide is an effective chemical in these preparations, usually in a 5 percent or 10 percent strength.

Antibiotics are prescribed by doctors to take orally. First it was sulfur drugs, then penicillin, but tetracycline is the overall favorite among dermatologists. Tetracycline is the generic name and is found under several brand names like achromycin and sumycin. The reason some students do not get good results from tetracycline is they do not take it correctly. It should always be taken on an empty stomach with a lot of water. (No food or drinks 45 minutes before or after taking it.) This is so it can be fully absorbed high in the intestinal tract. The purpose of tetracycline is to kill bacteria, but it also kills the good bacteria too.

Caution should be used when taking tetracycline. It can be dangerous to people with stomach ulcers. This is because it has an irritating effect on the stomach lining. Also it can lower the white blood count, so after taking it for a year, you should have a blood count test done in your doctor's office.

Some antibiotics can be put directly on the face. This will kill bacteria and prevent some redness that occurs. Cleocin-T is a new popular choice here.

Acne vulgaris like moisture accumulates on the face, especially during the summer months. General improvements in acne are seen as the winter temperatures approach. Since moisture is bad, avoid steam and sauna rooms at local gyms.

Some new reports this year have shown aloe gel to be effective in treating acne. In recent years aloe has been shown useful because of its healing effects, especially on burns. It is now found in herb teas that people drink for problems with their stomach, colon and even narcolepsy, a sleeping sickness. You can buy aloe gel without a prescription at drug stores and health food stores.

Girls with acne problems should avoid using make-up that is not oil free or grease free. This is just common sense, and it doesn't matter how much it costs if it aggravates the complexion.

Use our clinic here on campus for advice about your complexion problems. They have tetracycline and an antibiotic that can be put directly on your face. The nursing center clinic can do the blood count test for you, if needed.

We hope that everyone had a super time at the first home game and that everyone will come out this Saturday and cheer the cocks toward the National Championship. Go Gamecocks!

We would like to congratulate all fraternities on a successful little sister rush. We would especially like to thank everyone that came by our house and made our rush a great success. Our current little sisters played a major role in this semester's rush and really did a great job, as usual.

Many KE brothers, pledges, and little sisters received honors last week for being class favorites, class beauty, and most friendly. These winners were Charles Todd, Bull Kay, Jim Gunter, Kevin Sims, Paige Travis, Michele Hefferly, and Stephine Williams.

Receiving a high honor was our pledge of the week, Gregg Schuler. Gregg has been doing a good job so far. We are expecting many great things from him.

We would like to thank Sigma Nu for a fine football game Wednesday. It was a hard fought game and both teams showed good sportsmanship. Keith Kilgore, Gil Bruce, and Bill Cress played an excellent game, as did the entire team - three big reasons the Sigs are undefeated. Way to go team!

Pi Kappa Phi

By MIKE GIBSON

Thank you to all the ladies who came out for Little Sister Rush last week. We were very impressed and found it hard to narrow it down to an acceptable number. Congratulations to those who received and accepted bids. They will be recognized here next week.

A field goal by Bart Chandler on the first drive of the game proved to be the difference and the Pi Kapps defeated KA 3-0 last week. The defense had an outstanding performance and has yet to be scored on this year. It doesn't get any easier as ATO is up next.

Our pledge class continues to do a fine job. They have elected the following officers: President, Duane McManns; Treasurer, Mike Benson; Secretary, Steve Bone; and Chaplain, Mark Colley.

Congratulations go out to our Brother of the Month, Erv Sherer and Little Sister of the Month, Kelli Clemmons. Also, our Pledge of the Week, Mike Benson.

Good luck to the Gamecocks as they take on Valdosta State this week. Happy Birthday, R.L.

Valdosta may be tough for 3rd ranked 'Cocks

Saturday night's game is being described as "unusual" according to Coach Jim Fuller. "Some have said 'boring', but I prefer to think of it as 'unusual'. Of course, I can handle that type of boring."

Alison Andrews
Sports Editor

Unusual sounds good to me (I still don't understand the intricacies of this he-man sport), but boring? Those must have been the folks that left just before halftime when the score was 31-7. But if we had known that Mississippi College would end the game with 36 points on the board, how many Jax fans would have predicted we'd win?

The first quarter was exciting with three scores—the first two for JSU and within three minutes of each other by the official clock. The first was made by junior running back Walter Broughton, and involved a one-yard run; the second by sophomore Darryl Evans. Michael Williams put the first score on the board for Mississippi College, and the PAT was made by Turcotte.

The second quarter belonged to JSU. Hobbs was successful in making a 29-yard field goal and 14 more points were added in touchdowns by Joe Hartsfield and Reginald Goodloe.

Two more touchdowns were scored for JSU early in the third quarter bringing the score up to 45-7. The first of these was made by Anthony Bush, and the second by Fran Blanchard.

Finally with 6:42 left in the third quarter, Mississippi College scored again, but they didn't quit there. They scored again in the third quarter and twice in the fourth. The first of this series was made by quarterback Wade Pharis, and the second and third by Major Everret. All PAT's were successful by Turcotte. The final score for the night was for MC by Daryl Posey with 6:20 left in the game. Pharis was then successful in his running attempt for two points. The last score for JSU was a touchdown by Eugene Roberts with 11 seconds left in the third. Chris Hobbs' total was perfect as he booted all seven PAT's.

Two GSC records (most passes completed and most passes attempted without interception) as well as two JSU records (most yards passing-team, and most yards total offense-team) were broken Saturday night. (That says a lot for a so-called "boring" game). It's also noteworthy that Ed Lett now has 5347 total offense yards and 788 attempted passes. He surpassed the GSC and JSU record for most yards total offense in the first three games of the season.

Even as good as all this sounds, the Gamecocks aren't living up to their expectations. Something that could hurt the Gamecocks' immediate future is the number of injuries received to the linebackers. Randy Lagod and Benny Blair were both injured Saturday night and will not work this week. It is still questionable whether Simon Shephard will return this week; if not, Troy Sanders is the only one remaining.

JSU faces Valdosta State this week, the "new kid on the block" as they are just getting a football team underway.

"This doesn't mean, however," stated Fuller, "that Valdosta has a freshman team. They have as many veterans as we do." Their veterans mainly consist of transfers from schools such as Georgia Tech., Florida State, Memphis State, Auburn, Florida, Georgia, and Minnesota. Also worth considering is the fact that they are leading in passing in the GSC. Stated Fuller, "The way we're throwing, and the way they're throwing, this game might last six hours."

As if that's not enough to make for an exciting conference game, two of Valdosta's coaching staff members are former JSU players. It should be a very emotional situation for Calvin Rackley and Tommy Macon; no doubt they have helped prepare their team for the fight they expect against the Cocks.

Cross country finishes first in Division II

By MIKE LIVINGSTON

The JSU men's Cross Country team traveled to the University of South Alabama. This race was 5 miles long and was held near the USA campus. The course was flat with some slight hills. There were trouble spots, however, with some narrow foot bridges that allowed one runner at a time to cross, which slowed the runners down during the race. The meet started at 11 a.m. and the runners could feel the heat and humidity of the Gulf Coast. In fact some of the runners dropped out during the run because of the high temperature at race time.

The team was led by Doug Cronkite who placed 2nd overall in a time of 25:23 for the 5 mile course. Cronkite was beaten by a runner from LSU, but he has not been beaten by any runners from NCAA division II team this season. Stan Norton was our 2nd runner placing 9th overall in a time of 26:40. Randy Hardin, Mark Carrol and Richard Guerra rounded out the team scoring. During the race Matt Holdbrooks, who has been our 4th man, twisted his ankle and was unable to finish.

JSU finished 4th overall in the invitational. What makes this finish so impressive is that JSU was beaten by NCAA division I colleges, USA, LSU, and Southern Mississippi. The running Gamecocks were the first division II school to finish at USA.

JSU brought with them two runners from the JSU women's cross country team. Sheri Williams finished first overall just ahead of JSU teammate Yvette Spillman, who finished in 2nd place overall on a three mile Cross Country Course. The men travel to Samford this week, while the women will go to Troy State next weekend.

Bush - an active part

By ALISON ANDREWS

"Any time I take the field I expect to do my best." This attitude reflects what most of us would like to be able to say about ourselves, however it is not always the truth.

Such is not the case, though, when talking about senior wide receiver Anthony Bush. Bush's objective, not only on the gridiron, but in all aspects of life, is to "improve each game". His work toward this goal is especially evident on the field, as his statistics improve with each game. He snagged seven passes last week for 50 yards good for one touchdown. His longest reception was 19 yards.

ANTHONY BUSH

Bush is a business management major from Anniston. He graduated from Anniston High School, and, having received a full scholarship to the University of Nebraska, went there for his first year of higher education. He started school at JSU in the spring of 1980 and the next fall rotated with Eugene Roberts. Fall of 81-82 was his first time as part of the starting lineup.

During football season, the pace is very hectic. Bush admits that compromises must be made when sometimes five or six hours a day is devoted to practice, meetings, and films; however, it is important to him not to compromise his schoolwork. "You soon learn there's no such thing as rest."

Concerning his future, Bush is optimistic. Like anyone else these days, he links success with happiness and living comfortably. Through his football training, he has realized the importance of consistency. "You must never give up or feel defeated - give your all and work toward accomplishing your goals."

Looking back at what has been accomplished as a team, Bush can't help but feel some sentiment. "Over the past years I've come to know and love many people and that goes to each and every member of the team. We're all a family here."

Golf team shoots low, ranks high

By DENNIS SHEARS

The JSU golf team has entered two tournaments, and has reigned victorious at each tournament. The first tournament was the "Hart Invitational Tournament," at Wallace State Junior College, in Cullman, Ala., on Sept. 16 and 17.

Of the six members on the team, Scott Smith shot 71-71, for a two day total of 142, and walked away with not only the best score for the JSU team but also for all the team members from other schools that entered as well. Nine different teams entered for the two day 36 hole tournament.

JSU's team total for the first day was 285 and 292 for the second day, making the two day total 577. JSU won first place in that tournament. Second place went to Alex City's team, which had a score of 598.

The other two-day totals for the other JSU team members, at the first tournament were Drew Campbell - 143, John McPherson - 147, Chuck Pinkard - 149, David Bright - 154, and Mickey O'Kelley - 158.

The second tournament that the JSU golf team entered was played Sept. 27-29, at the Burning Tree Country Club in Decatur, Ala., and it was hosted by Calhoun Junior College. It was a three day 54-hole tournament at which the JSU team once again gained first place. The team shot 9 under par for a three day total of 855.

The individual scores at the tournament were Drew Campbell - 211, David Bright - 213, Chuck Pinkard - 216, Scott Smith - 218, Mickey O'Kelley - 225, and John McPherson - 227.

Steve Bailey, the coach of this prospective national championship team, said, "the team as a whole is playing as well as possible, and the chances are excellent for beating the team's biggest rival - Troy State University." Last year the JSU team beat the Troy State team twice, won the state and regional championships, and placed eighth in the national championship competition.

After two tournaments the golfer's stroke averages are Drew Campbell - 70.8, Scott Smith - 72.0, Chuck Pinkard - 73.0, David Bright - 73.6, John McPherson - 74.8, and Mickey O'Kelley - 76.6.

Campbell and Pinkard are seniors; O'Kelley and McPherson are juniors, and Bright and Smith are sophomores.

The team practices Monday through Friday at 1:00 on the Ft. McClellan golf course. Steve Bailey says, "The golf team's goal is to win first place at the national tournament, scheduled to be held in Virginia next May."

Soccer club wins first match

By THOMAS MATHEWS

Jacksonville Soccer Club (JSC) sponsored by Roma's of Jacksonville, who began their season with a bad start against Tuscaloosa played their best ever on Sunday 10, 1982 against the Bamabinos of Birmingham, the supposed best team of the league. The game played at Ft. McClellan amidst slight showers of rain was the finest ever played by JSC. The final score was 5-5.

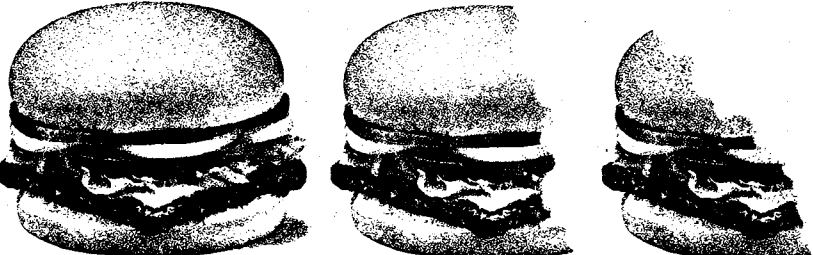

JSC broke the monotony of the game by scoring the first goal, a direct free kick by Armos Gostanian. A few minutes later a return goal was shot by the Bamabinos. At halftime the score was 3-1 with JSC leading. The second and third goals were shot by Latief Balogun. At the beginning of the second half, soon after kick-off, Thomas Matthews of JSC received a pass from Marvin, took it past the center line and kicked forward to Latief, who received and slammed it right into the net making it his third and hat-trick goal of the day, which broke the 3-3 tie. The fifth goal scored for JSC was by Tony Adelike. Out of the five goals scored by Bamabinos three were penalty kicks.

Special credit is to be given to the players of JSC. The forward line played by Goke and Yemi was fast and exciting. Mark, Armos, Marvin, and Charles were great as the defense; they acted more or less like a great wall. On the whole, both teams gave a great exhibition of a soccer game.
