Mail center to open this January

By SUSIE IRWIN
Associate Editor

The Mail Center, now under construction on the fourth floor of the Theron Montgomery Building, will soon be added to the list of physical changes and relocations on campus during this school year.

By late January, 1983, the center should be in operation providing students with a private mail box and quick mail delivery of all first class and campus mail.

According to Claude Gaddy, director of special services, students will also be able to obtain data sheets and schedule books for future registration from the center.

Gaddy is now in the process of meeting with various departments on campus to discuss ways those departments can benefit from the mail center, such as financial aid, the International House and the personnel office.

Between Nov. 1 and Dec. 15, students are advised to obtain their new box number from the present mail center on the first floor of Bibb Graves. All students are requested to begin using the new box number on all correspondence to provide for easier processing when the new center opens in January.

On Aug. 25, the Campus Bookstore relocated in the Montgomery Building. According to Gary Smith, manager of the bookstore, "we feel that the new location is a much more convenient one."

Hardee's also moved into the Montgomery Building this semester, creating what many consider a center for student activity. The well-known restaurant now serves the JSU public the same food Hardee's regulars are accustomed to.

As a result of increased traffic in the Montgomery Building, a new parking area will soon be completed in front of the building. The entire general area will be reorganized for more convenient parking and better access to the building.

The pool tables and ping-pong tables which were on the first floor of the Montgomery Building have been moved into Anders Hall (the Roundhouse). A big screen television and video games were also placed in the building.

By Dec. 18, the Computer Science Center will move into the building recently vacated by the Campus Bookstore. All equipment now located in Merrill Hall will be moved into the building and should be ready for operation in the spring semester. Jim Green, the director of the center, said that students, as well as the University, will benefit by the move because of the faster processing and easier access it will provide.

The Alumni Office will soon be moving into a newly purchased building located on Pelham Road across from the tennis courts.

Miss Black & Gold is Shelly Wilson

Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc., presented their 3rd Annual Miss Black & Gold Pageant, Wednesday night, Oct. 13.

SHELLY WILSON

Shelly Wilson, a native of Anniston, was crowned Miss Black & Gold '82 by last year's queen Caroline Allen. First alternate was Stephine Turner, of Birmingham, Alabama, and 2nd alternate was Dottie Remspy, of Anniston. There were 7 young ladies in all competing for the title 3 events: Talent, Evening Wear and Swim Suit. Shelly Wilson will be competing in the state pageant in February at the State Convention in Birmingham, Alabama.

Daily chosen Miss AAA

By GILBERT SANDERS

The Second Annual Miss Afro American Association pageant was held Thursday Oct. 7 at Leone Cole Auditorium.

The event, which commenced at 7 p.m., seemed to be well enjoyed by a very receptive audience. The only individuals, however, who were placed in somewhat of a precarious position were the judges, Mrs. Pearl Williams, Dr. Don Des Roches and Dean Roberta Watts. They had the dubious distinction of having to choose one winner from a field of eight young ladies, all of whom this writer considered to be winners. But alas, after all the entertainment festivities, all the modeling of sports, casual and evening wear by the contestants, and after all the appropriate questions had been answered by the young ladies, the Queen did rise to the top.

She is Miss Carol Dailey, a freshman from Birmingham. Miss Dailey seems to be a very warm and friendly person and who is, for want of a better word, very statuete. She's 5 feet 11½ inches tall in her stocking feet. When asked if her future plans included modeling, she responded by saying that they really didn't. She says she feels that she can contribute more to society by continuing in her chosen field of study, which is Engineering and Computer Science. Her hobbies are meeting people, skating, and dancing. When asked how she felt about winning this honor, she said, "It's one of the greatest feelings I've ever had," Miss Dailey said of winning the pageant.

Byron Benham, president of Triple A, his staff and all the individuals involved in the production are to be commended for the professional quality of the pageant.

Edwards and Abel to perform

The Second Annual J.S.U. Jesus Music Festival is returning to campus this fall. The musicians who will be participating this year are "Shalom", a Christian contemporary band from Annist., Dail Smalley from Lincoln, Alabama and Terri Edwards and Tim Abel of Broken Stone

Alpha Xi Delta 'adopts' grandparents

By SUSIE IRWIN
Associate Editor

The Alpha Xi Delta sorority has been visiting the Jacksonville Nursing Home a good deal lately to visit their "adoptive" grandparents.

"They really enjoy the visits and gifts very much," said Frances Byron, who plans daily activities at the nursing home.

On birthdays and special holidays, the Alpha Xi's visit with their "adoptive grandparents," bring them gifts and shower them with attention.

The "adopt-a-grandparent" program was initiated this year by Alpha Xi under the direction of Deborah Samples, philanthropy chairman. More than 10 residents have been adopted by the sorority.

The Alpha Xi Deltas also sponsor seven-year-old Desiree Bayross from India as part of their philanthropy program. By contributing to the Christians Childrens Fund, the sorority enables Desiree to attend school and also helps in paying her familys medical bills and food costs.

Desiree writes letters to the Alpha Xi Deltas and has sent them a picture of herself, while she receives little presents and letters from the sorority.

Among the Alpha Xi Deltas who are involved in the "adopt-a-grandparent" program are: Kathy Owen, Kim Stephson, Angela Strickland, Debbie Pougeas, Nancy Turner, Stacy Boozer, Teresa Tidmore, Leah Bumpous, Lisa Monday, Nicky Yow, Nancy Smith, Allison Brasher, Robin Medley, Janet Edwards, Kelly Kerby and Diane Windsor.

Points Of View

Free press - a long standing tradition at Jax State

Does JSU have a 'free press' tradition? This question was put to a few individuals who have played key roles in the campus newspaper through the years.

Larry Smith, Financial Aid Director for the University, edited the school paper in 1968-69 when it was still the Collegian. Having been a JSU employee for 12 years, Smith

Rick Bragg, a well-known local sportswriter who edited the Chanticleer in 1979-80, was given the same free hand with the publication.

"We never experienced censorship by the administration," said Bragg. "During the time frame I was editor there were some mildly controversial issues on campus. The administration, if they had wanted to, could have censored us, but they didn't. You've got to respect that," he remarked.

As editor, I have found the aforementioned statements to hold true today. Chanticleer advisors and other faculty and administrators at JSU occasionally express their opinions about what should or should not be printed in the Chanticleer, but the final decisions rest squarely on the shoulders of the student editorial staff.

Dr. Theron Montgomery, in a recent meeting, made the unprompted remark that he is a firm believer in a free press. His actions have held true to his words. Although he might not agree with everything we print, Dr. Montgomery has remained supportive of the Chanticleer.

It is extremely important that the current administration (as well as future administrations) of this university realize the underlying importance of the campus media. An attempt to stifle any segment of it would be against the very freedoms this country is based on. Sadly enough, this very perversion has occurred at institutions of higher learning right here in Alabama. The old "we've got the purse strings so you'll dance to our tune or else" ploy can be a strong blackmail tool. Fortunately, however, it has never been one used at Jacksonville. In fact, the trend seems to have been to hold steady or increase the financial support of the newspaper from year to year.

While Smith and Bragg were pleased with the "hands-off" policy, both expressed strong cautions regarding student journalists' responsibility and liability.

"While the courts have established the precedent, basically, that freedom of the press extends to college newspapers, they also recognize that students face the same legal consequences for libel as do the editors of the New York Times," said Smith. "It is, therefore, important for student reporters and editors to realize that, along with their freedom of the press, comes the tremendous duty of responsible journalism."

Bragg expressed much the same caution. "A lot of college papers don't understand the laws of libel so they stumble into these situations," he remarked. "Once a paper gets the reputation of being a scandal sheet, they've blown it."

To those who read this in future years, I leave these few words of advice:

+Student journalists, take your task seriously and hold firmly to your basic right to a free press because, should you ever let it slip away, it might never be regained.

+Administrators, realize that there will be years that please you and years that do not. Also realize that the university experience should prepare students to become a part of a free society by encouraging them to think for themselves.

Tim Strickland

has had the opportunity to observe the many changes the newspaper has undergone. But he doesn't recall any instances in which the students' right to an uncensored publication was ever challenged.

"To my knowledge there has never been any censorship in the school newspaper," Smith commented. "When I was editor, Jack Hopper was the advisor. Mr. Hopper simply told me he did not care what we printed so long as it was the truth and we could substantiate it. I always kept that in mind," he recalled.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

For several years now I have been impressed with the finesse and professionalism of the Drama Department's productions. Being a theatre enthusiast, I was thrilled to see the Drama Department would present a second season production. A recent article in The Chanticleer stated the second season production would offer students an additional opportunity to perform and assist in the technical work of theatrical productions.

Although I was elated about the second season production of "Bus Stop", I was upset when I saw its cast list. Two of the people fortunate enough to receive roles are not students here at Jacksonville. One of the

Dear Editor,

This is my third year here at Jacksonville State University, and I have seen two different presidents of the United States in action, and two different presidents of this university in action, during those three years.

I want to take this opportunity to express my feelings of the now-president of this university:

Dr. Theron Montgomery, in my opinion, is a caring and intelligent leader. He actively supports the performing arts, athletic departments, music-related organizations, and Greek organizations, as well as Independents. He stresses the importance of furthering one's education toward career goals and interests.

He is aware of the economic crisis that exists today, and students here are fortunate in that our tuitions weren't increased this year, as was the case at many other colleges and universities.

I remember talking with Dr. Montgomery one day, in front of Bibb Graves Hall, before he became president. We were discussing my favorite personality, and one of his (at that time, anyway) - Dolly Parton.

Although I was one of several thousand students, whom he didn't even know, we conversed freely, and with ease, and I could tell then that Dr. Montgomery was, and still is, sincerely interested in students' opinions and ideas.

With this letter, I would like to publically say, "thank you," to Dr. Montgomery for performing his duties well. I hope that the now-president of the United States, and the future presidents of this country are as open-minded and responsive to the needs of the United States as Dr. Theron Montgomery is to Jacksonville State University.

Sincerely,
Dennis Shears

men is an adult resident of Jacksonville, the other is a faculty member at JSU. While I am sure both of these men are very deserving and will present a believable performance of their individual roles, the fact that they were awarded these parts was very unfair. If the second season program were indeed created to give students additional opportunities to perform, then selecting non-students as cast members is defeating a major reason for its establishment.

One could possibly argue that older actors will add to the believability of a performance. I must disagree with this statement on the basis that acting is portraying someone you are not, that may be a person with a different personality or in this case, a different age. Also, a young person can appear older with the aid of costumes and theatrical make-up.

There are only a few specialized cases which I feel would warrant the casting of non-students in JSU productions. Of course, when child actors are called for community children should then be allowed to audition. Only when an insufficient number of students audition, should faculty or community members be allowed to audition. This was not the case with "Bus Stop" auditions. I personally know several talented students capable of presenting a believable performance who auditioned but were not cast.

In the future, I feel that the Drama Department should hold auditions which are for students only. Those faculty members and community residents with an interest in acting should be reminded that the Anniston Community Theatre presents many good plays throughout the year.

Until the auditions for JSU Drama Productions are reserved for JSU students many drama majors as well as students with an interest in the theatre will be deprived of the experience and education which they are pursuing. So, I am pleading my case to the drama faculty requesting that all auditions be held for students only, thereby not depriving students of the education and experience which all drama department productions were designed to provide.

New fund honors over 100 retirees

Jacksonville State University will be a century old this academic year and, as part of the celebration, academic scholarships are being named in honor of over 100 retired faculty and staff.

It is now possible for all alumni to honor favorite retirees with contributions to the JSU Development Fund. Contributions can be designated in honor of any retiree.

Each retiree designated by a contributor will learn of the special gesture, but the amount contributed will not be disclosed (unless disclosure is requested by a contributor).

No amount is too small and each contribution is tax-deductible. Contributions can be made for any number of retirees.

To contribute, fill out the coupon on this page after selecting the person or persons you want to honor. A list of retirees is provided for your convenience.

Compiled from University records and from the State Teacher Retirement System, the list represents an effort to identify all retirees. However, the list may not be complete. If you would like to contribute, simply fill out the coupon below and mail it along with your check or money order to: JSU Development Fund, Jacksonville State University, Jacksonville, AL 36265.

All checks or money orders should be made out to the JSU Development Fund.

The scholarship is being established to help potential students realize their ambition to follow in the footsteps of JSU's 20,000 alumni at "the friendliest campus in the South."

According to JSU President Theron Montgomery, "announced federal cutbacks, as well as the limited state resources, is making it very difficult for some of our brighter youngsters to attend college."

In a letter to retirees, he continued, "You gave many years of dedicated service to Jacksonville State University and we will forever be grateful for your loyalty and hard work. The scholarship is a perpetual program and we feel very meritorious."

NOTE: Every effort has been made to identify and list all retirees. However, the list shown below may not be complete. If you know of someone who should be added, please enter the name and other information here:

A cloaked figure. . . hiding in shame

By LIZ HOWLE

A cloaked, hooded, female figure darts from the dorm to her car making sure no one sees her as she slides into the front seat. She cranks the car and weaves her way through the many couples crossing the road to reach Paul Snow Stadium. As she crouches in the front seat to hide herself from any friends who may recognize her a tear slips down her face and splashes on the seat. Another homecoming is here and once again she has no date.

This does sound a bit ridiculous. Yet, year after year girls hide in shame of not having a date to that all important game.

These same young ladies may have gone to every other game with 'the girls', having no thoughts of shame or embarrassment due to not having a date. But as the week of homecoming approaches they panic trying desperately to get a date. It seems to be of little or no importance who they finagle into this role. The important thing is having someone as an escort.

The mystery of this disease, Homecomingtoma, is just that to many: a mystery. The cancer spreads silently at first with no outward symptoms. By homecoming week, the cancerous growth has begun to take its toll on outward appearance. Faces are marked with tight, nervous lines, bags appear under the eyes due to late night scheming and palms sweat from anxiety.

Many may ask, "Why is a date to homecoming of such great importance?"

There are few logical answers.

The string of tradition weights heavily as a cause of Homecomingtoma. It's simply a tradition that homecoming is the big game of the year for dates and dressing up.

The 'everybody else has one' syndrome comes into play also. Those who don't have dates for homecoming feel out-of-place when they sit down among all the couples at the game. This is particularly true if a girl's best friend is part of one of the couples.

Yet another etiology of this mysterious disease stems from a sense of worthlessness. Acquiring a date to such an important game lets a girl know she is acceptable. It's a type of reassurance. Seeing this side, it is easy to imagine how girls not asked to the game may feel a sense of rejection.

There are two more very questionable causes of Homecomingtoma. The first is the desire to receive a fragrant corsage. Not just any flower will do for this corsage. It can't be picked from a yard, but must be commercially grown. A deeply, deeply hidden cause deals with the desire to buy new clothes. A date to homecoming is a very good excuse for buying new clothes. No date, no new outfit.

These reasons may seem very absurd to many and indeed they may be. But to those girls who hold the reasons valid, they are not in the least absurd. These girls will continue donning their hooded capes and fleeing campus the day of homecoming.

It's spreading. . . homecomingtoma

Pat and Bert announce. . .

'Creative Financial Aid Made Easy'

BERT

Here we are once again. It's time for Homecoming, and neither of us has enough in our checking accounts to spring for a burger at Hardee's, much less take a date to a nice restaurant. (As if either of us could manage to get a date anyway.)

What do you do when you're in this situation? Easy. You get Pat & Bert's latest best seller, "Creative Financial Aid Made Easy" (Rick Mondo, publisher, 1982, Birmingham), a real steal at only $7.95. Or, if you're too poor to buy the book, you read these excerpts we've kindly provided at no cost:

-What every student needs is a high-paying job with good hours and benefits, right? Ever thought about stealing cars? The money can be tremendous since the used car market is booming. The hours are good too. You can go to class during the day and work a few hours at night. Even if you're caught, you're guaranteed housing, food, clothing, and weekly visits from friends. You'll probably even qualify for a student loan upon your parole from prison, since you don't get paid much money for making license plates.

-Think that stealing whole cars is too risky? Then try stealing parts from cars. Fabulous prices can be had for items like hubcaps, tires, stereos, and gas caps. Don't worry about the owners either. They'll just lie to the insurance company and make money on the job you did. Lazy Stiffs!

-Everyone's heard the old expression that you can't get blood from a turnip. But you can get blood from a student, and a student can get money for blood. Try not to do this more than twice a week, regardless of how badly you want that new Trans-am. Otherwise, you'll be so pale someone will use you as a window and the people at the blood bank will think you're a wino, especially when they see you staggering in again, weak from loss of blood.

Those are the easy ways to earn money. Here are the hard unpleasant jobs.

-Having people ask you intimate questions about your sex life, suicidal tendencies, or your obsessive attachments to inanimate objects like your teddy bear can become old very quickly, but being paid to be a guinea pig in psychological experiments can be a way to make ends meet. This works especially well if you're the multiple personality type, since your union will force your employers to pay double, triple, or more, depending on the number of people you are or can become.

-Become a terrorist. With the cost of materials, labor, and insurance today, most universities find it much easier and cheaper to pay off demented bombers than to go to the expense of building an entirely new campus. This job is probably easiest for you chemistry majors, since you've probably already blown up several labs already. Just think, if the school does pay off, you can even afford grad school.

-Start a church. This can be profitable, even tax-free. Claim to be able to heal microwave ovens and ailing T.V. sets by touch. Since almost anything can be fixed by a sharp blow to a crucial spot, you'll probably succeed often enough to make tons of green stuff. If your ministrations should fail, mumble something about Three-Mile Island and communist infiltrators and you'll probably get off the hook.

-Write a book about how to make extra money. Advertise it heavily and watch the bucks roll in.

Dr. Rock

R. Stacy McCain

As I sat in the Chanticleer office last Friday, compiling the "Radioactivity" portion of this column, it occurred to me that radio programmers have an incredible amount of power. After all, most people buy records on the basis of having heard them on the radio. Yet radio play lists are based on charts which reflect records sales. Thus, record companies (and their artists) find themselves caught in a vicious circle: to sell records, they must get radio airplay, and to get radio airplay, they must sell records.

Perhaps the only factor which can break this cycle is requests. The telephone is a powerful weapon in determining which records are played and which are not. An example of this can be currently seen in the progress of the Gap Band's "You Dropped A Bomb On Me."

Five weeks ago, the second single from the Gap Band IV LP was at number 30 on the 92-J playlist - - - very low rotation, heard no more than three or four times a day. Listeners, however, began phoning in requests and the song began to move quickly toward the top. The next week, it jumped ten slots, to number 20. Then it moved up eleven notches, placing it squarely in the top ten. Twenty-one places in two weeks clearly earmarked "You Dropped A Bomb On Me" as a contender for the top slot. Within two weeks, it fulfilled its promise - this week, the Gap Band made it to number one. Other records sold more copies. Other acts (the Who, for example) toured more. But, in five weeks, the Gap Band jumped twenty-nine slots on WLJS's playlist, while the Who's "Athena" (number twenty-nine, five weeks ago) has moved up only twelve places.

The reason? People picked up their telephones and dialed 435-5463. The next time you criticize 92-J for not playing your favorite song, think. The solution is only as far away as the nearest telephone.

A review - 'The Music Man'

By SUSIE IRWIN

Delightful music, light comedy and superb acting provided the key elements for a well-rounded opening night presentation of "The Music Man" by the JSU Drama Department, Tuesday night.

Under the professional direction of Wayne Claeron, the cast carried the story smoothly through colorful and imaginative sets.

Lighting was the play's only flaw. At times the faces of the players were sometimes too dim and over-shadowed. This occurred often when the players stood near the exits.

The orchestra supporting "Music Man" keep the show flowing well-in-tune by delivering each number with ease.

Exceptional describes the DOUGLAS John stetz costume designs, the versatility of which is apparent in the beautiful, yellow gown of Marian Paroo to the grapes adorning the "greek" dancers.

Professor Harold Hill and Marian Paroo were professionally portrayed by familiar JSU players, Shelton Brown and Angelle

Marie Landaiche. Brown displayed wonderful comedic presence and Landaiche's voice was flawless.

A definite highlight of the show occurred in the "Till There Was You" number when Brown and Landaiche combined their fine vocal talents.

The "barbershop" quartet of Jimmy F. Tompkins, Kevin D. Smith, Joe Williams and R. Scott Boozer were enjoyable throughout the play but most of all when performing "Goodnight Ladies" while at the same time the River City "ladies" offered the hilarious "Pickalittle."

The "River City ladies," led by Susan Faust as Eulalie MacKecknie Shinn, the Mayor's wife were obvious crowd pleasers.

But it was the "River City kids" that stole the hearts of many, especially Justin L. Johnson with his rendition of "Gary, Indiana."

Others turning in solid character portrayals were Michelle Gibson, Stephanie Griffith, Bert Spence and Scott Whorton.

Theatrical make-up creates characters for plays

By JEFF MCKERLEY

Theatrical make-up, although frequently combined with costume, belongs in a class of its own. It has evolved from the use of masks, by the Greeks, to what else - the use of nothing.

Let me explain. In realistic theatre (depicting everyday life), the actors and actresses may choose to wear no makeup at all. On the other hand, the actor might have to use a great deal of makeup to translate the character to the audience.

Now, if you have not seen "The Music Man," see it to get the total effect of the makeup, costumes, and scenery. And if you have a chance, congratulate Scott Whorton on his fantastic makeup plans for the show.

Michelle Gibson . . . as Mrs. Paroo

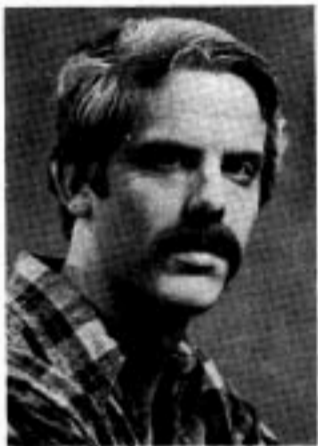

These pictures show the more drastic changes an actor or actress must go through to arrive at his or her special character. For the more subtle changes of the other actors, the makeup is used mainly to distinguish parts of the face that would fade or otherwise look pasty or plain under the bright lights.

For instance, Alison Andrews is portraying a part that is similar in looks to Grant Wood's painting "American Gothic." She must shadow more (to hollow out her face) and use the dull shades of color to achieve this look. On the other hand, Michelle Gibson portrays Mrs. Paroo and must use brighter shades of color to bring out the cheerful, quick-wittedness of her character.

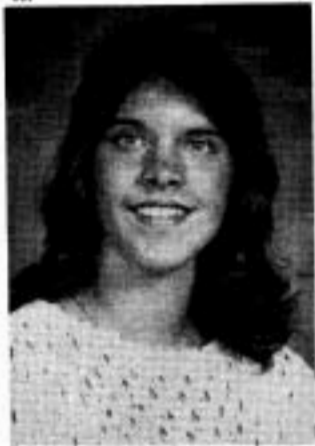

Of course, the excessive use of bright colors is permitted, also. Susan Faust, portraying Eulalie M. Shinn, uses this method. Her character is a pompous, arrogant, ostentatious person; therefore, her makeup has to coincide with it.

Susan Faust . . . as Eulalie M. Shinn

Kevin Smith . . . as Oliver Hix

Alison Andrews . . . as the farmer's wife

Bert Spence . . . as Mayor Shinn

Homecoming from a black perspective

By GIL SANDERS

Homecoming at Jax State conjures up many different sights, sounds, and colors. One visualizes the sights of Southern Belles in the Homecoming parade, the great mass of suitcase college students who have stayed up for what is probably their only weekend on campus, and the sight of pictures being taken on fraternity house lawns of the guys in their respective fraternities who pose with the same southern Belle featured in the parade who's now dressed in antebellum garb.

The sounds that come to mind are the sounds of music flowing from every dorm, of students laughing and partying and finally, the sound of the southern belle as she proudly introduces her parents to her sorority sisters.

The colors one thinks of are the red and white uniforms of the Gamecocks, the red and white outfits of the alumni, the golden hue of the beer being consumed by just about everyone, and the green grass of the football field that has been separated into yard markers by white lime.

One color one doesn't normally think of is the color Black. Think about it. This color seems to have no place in our array of sights, sounds and colors. For the purpose of this article a number of Black students were asked, "What does homecoming mean to you?" I was shocked by some of the answers given, but they are worthy of print because they seem to represent a large percentage of the Black students polled. The answer that bothers me most is, as one student said, "Homecoming means nothing to me, absolutely nothing!" His reason for saying this was, "Homecoming at Jax State is a long standing tradition. It has its roots going back to when the school was first conceived and with Jax State being one of the most segregated schools in the south, I don't see where I, as a black student, can identify with the school spirit being

Another student said homecoming doesn't mean very much to her either, because she feels that blacks are not properly represented in the homecoming festivities.

Other answers were not so dismal, however. Most Black fraternity members polled feel homecoming is a time for partying! "We have a lot of fun!" one said. He went on to say however, "It's fun if the police don't give us a hassle for 'stepping' on the Rock." See Omega Psi Phi members for decoding of last paragraph. Some of the black sorority members see homecoming in much the same fashion as their white counterparts. Like the southern belle, they like to dress up, take pictures, and introduce their parents to their sorority sisters.

Former student remembers ice cream socials, spelling bees

By SUSIE IRWIN
Associate Editor

"We're very proud of her," said Elene Sparks Chastain of her mother, 84-year-old Manilla Sparks, a former student of the State Normal School at Jacksonville who recently visited the JSU campus.

Earlier this year, Dr. Shelt Chastain and his wife, Elene Sparks Chastain, both former students of the Jacksonville State Teachers College, wrote, directed and produced a film which depicts this University's past 100 years and presented it to the University. The Chastains now live and teach in DeKalb, Illinois.

On their visit to present the centennial film, the Chastains were accompanied by Mrs. Chastain's mother, Manilla Sparks.

In the summer of 1922, Sparks was attending the State School to receive her teaching certification. Ice cream socials and spelling bees were forms of entertainment she remembered.

"We'd open our windows in the dorm and listen to the Sacred Harp singings held outside on the lawn," said Mrs. Sparks.

After leaving the School, Mrs. Sparks taught in public schools, then stopped teaching to raise her two children, Elene and Sarah.

Mrs. Sparks later returned to the life of a student, attending nursing school in Gadsden at Baptist Memorial Hospital. After graduation, she worked there as an LPN for 12 years.

"We had to replace professional nurses because there were so few," she said.

At the same time Mrs. Sparks was attending nursing school, her daughter, Elene, was attending Jacksonville State Teachers College.

"To keep active and not to give up," stated Mrs. Sparks describing her philosophy for life.

Cambridge Diet ideal for some

By DONNA HENDRIX

Is the Cambridge Diet really good for your health? The Cambridge Diet is just one of the fad diets that people are relying on to lose fast and easy pounds.

"The basic thing I see wrong with the Cambridge Diet is a reliance on a liquid food to bring about a quick weight loss rather than a change in behavior toward food habits, that would result in a more permanent weight loss," stated Dr. Virginia Yocum, an associate professor of home economics and a registered dietitian.

Three times a day the dieter drinks a flavored powder mixed with water called the Cambridge formula. The diet provides only 330 calories a day which is not enough to maintain basal metabolism. The average person needs at least 900 calories per day.

The diet consists of 31 grams of protein from milk solids, 44 grams of carbohydrates from sugars and two grams of fat, as well as the recommended intakes for vitamins and minerals.

"The Cambridge Diet has really worked for me. Since going on the Cambridge Diet, I have felt better and have had more energy.

Cambridge has all the vitamins and minerals that I need, as well as giving me a balanced diet," stated a Cambridge Dieter.

The Cambridge Diet originated in Cambridge, England and it has gained its popularity in the United States. Dieters have lost six pounds in forty eight hours and fifteen pounds in one week.

Before starting the diet, one must consult a doctor and must have medical supervision with diets under 800 calories per day.

This diet is not recommended for mild obesity, for pregnant women, for those suffering from chronic illnesses such as diabetes and hypertension nor for children.

When those people who are on a liquid diet return to their normal eating habits, they again gain weight," explained Dr. Yocum.

Reba Key stated, "The Cambridge Diet helped me lose weight but I'm afraid to continue using it because some of the canisters have been found to be contaminated with salmonella."

Those who are trying to lose weight must try to cut down their eating habits and not eat between meals except a piece of fruit.

"Research has shown that the more permanent weight loss is obtained by those who eat a balanced diet, but reduce their total calorie intake," stated Dr. Yocum.

Stars fell on Alabama . . .

They're called the Marching South

One of the fabulous trumpet solos heard in the band's rendition of "Pictures of Spain" is played by this man, Tom Moore.

By LYNN LePINE

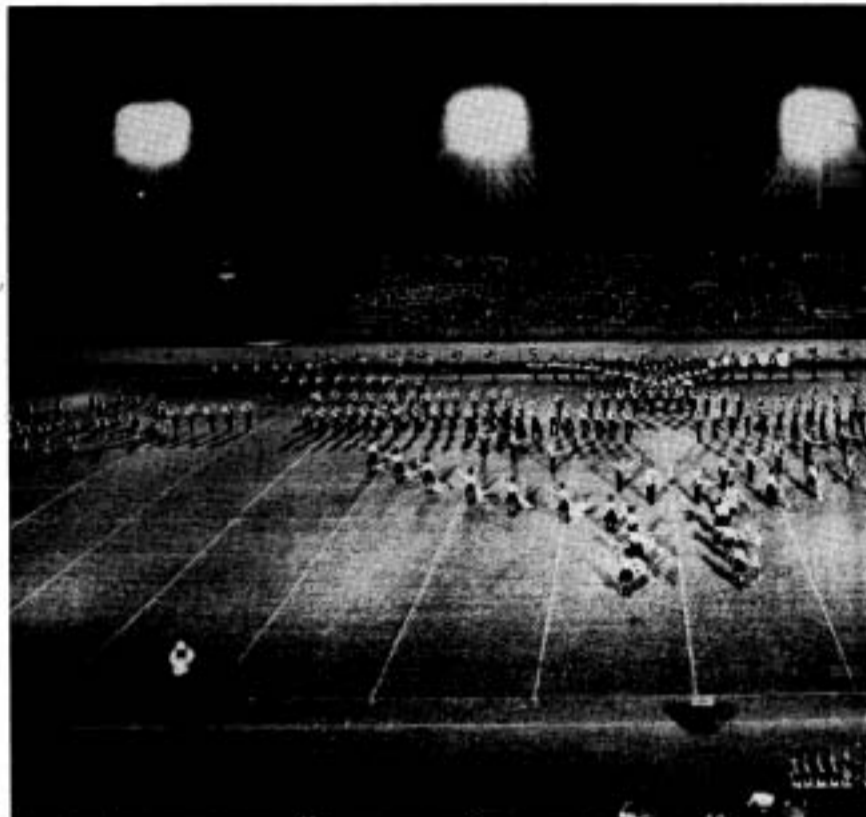

Who is it that brings the entire crowd to their feet at football games? And who is it that takes their sparkle and flash to the field at halftime? And who is it that plays 'Stars Fell On Alabama' even better than Willie Nelson? Need it be written? Our Marching Southerners, of course.

The Southerners, formed in 1956, exist as a mark of excellence at this university. The band, comprised not only of musicians, but also of flags, rifles, the Ballerinas, and the management personnel, is a major recruiting tool for the school. Many students come to this school just so they too can march in the Southerners' proud tradition.

What makes being a Southerner so attractive? Explains John Vance, "It's a great feeling to be a part of what is considered to be one of the best bands in the country." And there are three things that go into establishing such a fine reputation: love, practice, and pride. The long, hard hours of practice produce a band that reflects well on the Southerners' director Dr. David Walters, the music department and the entire university.

But practice itself is not enough. The Southerners all feel a part of one big family. Six-year Southerner Lisa Wells explained it this way, "When you get in, you're really excited, yet you don't really know what's going on. You don't know the drills or anything, but the warmth of these people makes you feel like you fit in even if you're a freshman."

"When you practice 10 to 15 hours a week with the same people," says band manager Micki Parris, "You naturally grow closer together because you're all pulling for the same goal."

The Southerners are shown here in formation in an exhibition at Rockdale County High School in Atlanta. Exhibitions of this type serve to recruit students for the university and to attend football games.

What is it to be a Southerner

One might ask, what's it like to be a Southerner? Anything you might have guessed can't match the, uh, colorful answers given by the band members themselves.

Cindy Womack, flag: "Southerners is calluses, aching muscles, and chapped lips."

Lori Bridges, rifle: "Tiring, frustrating, and painful. We complain all the time but when we get out on the field and perform, all the negative feelings disappear. Southerners is awesome."

Male portion of the drum line: "It's great watching the Ballerinas warm up!"

Melanie Miller and Marie Manis, flags: "Southerners is coming to school a week early, practicing our butts off, and only getting one credit - but it's definitely worth it."

Pop, drum line: "It's hard to travel 300 miles and be expected to eat three times on a total of five dollars."

Susie Lamon, flag: "Southerners is the ultimate experience. The applause from the crowds cannot be equalled by ever known."

John Vance, trumpet: "I have the experience that not many people have had a chance to enjoy. We're like a family."

Pam Helton, flag: "You feel like you're part of something when you perform at a contest. The school band members give you a lot of ovation."

Dalton Smith, drum line: "It's a hip, man."

Marsha Holbrooks, drum line: "Southerners is paradise. I just want to march."

Stephanie Turner, flag: "I get from the high school kids that makes you feel good inside."

Rhonda Trammel: "I've never been proud of any organization I've been in in my life."

Steve Teel, drum line: "It's a drag, but performances make it worthwhile."

Carl Jesse, trumpet: "It's a life."

The Flag Corps accompanies the musicians with a spectacular display of color & rhythm.

The Ballerinas, chosen for the Southerners instead of majorettes, dance to the music.

Southerners

The sound of the brass is the heart of big band music.

Drum major Steve Dunn keeps time for the Southerners as Tom Moore plays a leisurely tune.

The drum line looks sharp as they wait for their signal from the drum major.

The trumpet line practices their drills daily to insure perfection during performances.

Even the instruments left unattended embody the spirit of the Marching Southerners.

The mellow tones of the saxophone offset the shriller notes of the brass.

Excerpts from campus papers of the past reprinted

Once again, the Chanticleer is turning back the years in order to take a glance at what people were like in the past. Newspapers have always been indicative of the times, so our staff has spent long hours in the university's dusty archives, digging up old issues of the campus paper.

From 1929 to 1957, when JSU was Jacksonville State Teacher's College, the school newspaper was known as the Teacola. When the school became Jacksonville State College in 1957, the paper's name was changed to the Collegian. It was not until 1966, when the college became a university, that the campus newspaper became the Chanticleer.

So, in retrospect, here are selected excerpts from the Teacola and the Collegian.

Students today would die of exhaustion at the mere thought of walking all the way to Germania Springs for a picnic, but in 1934, the two mile hike was considered 'pleasant', as shown in this article taken from a '34 issue of the Teacola:

OUTDOOR SUPPER AT GERMANIAN SPRINGS

One of the most enjoyable events of the year was an outdoor supper given by the girls of Daugette Hall. Each girl had the privilege of inviting one young man. This picturesque feature was given at the beautiful Germanian Spring, located on the Birmingham - Atlanta highway.

It was a pleasant walk from the dormitory to the spring. A tempting supper was cooked over an open fire which delighted the hungry hikers. Afterwards the approaching twilight seemed to hush the group into peaceful quietude. After it had grown dark marshmallows were toasted over the dying embers. Hearts grew heavy when time drew near to leave.

Misses Louise Bullock and Bela Fordham were gracious chaperons for the outing.

Fanny Faintheart advises

In a 1936 edition of the Teacola, our staff found Jacksonville State Teachers College's answer to Dear Abby:

Dear Miss Faintheart:

I am in deep distress! I serve at Daugette Hall, and everyone seems to hate me. I smile at them as they pass one by one; I even employ my wiles on the teachers; however, in spite of all my efforts, I hear them sniggering behind my back. Can it be that my personality is one that naturally grates on the nerves? Please ease my excruciating torment.

Yours for help,
"BLONDIE"

Dear "Blondie":

I take it for granted that you want the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. My dear, do you recollect how you weigh every gram of food you serve? Do you recollect how when someone asks for seconds you close your eyes and gracefully wave the spoon over the plate while you expect the starving beseecher to believe that the spoon that you so gracefully waved was full of food which was invisible only to such common people as the beseecher.

My dear, I suggest that you be a little more tolerant of the hunger pangs of those whom you feed, especially of Dr. Marsh, for you know "The way to a man's heart is through his stomach."

Sincerely,
FANNY FAINTHEART

Collegian looks back, too

To show that the Chanticleer's idea of 'looking back' is not a new one, here is the Collegian's idea of retrospection. This feature is taken from an issue published in 1956.

CAMPUS HUMOR

Everyone knows witches can fly, but few people realize they also wear the latest jogging shoes in order to get a good running start. Actually, this "good witch" is Kim Leeper, a Jacksonville State University cheerleader, who agreed to display her

J'ville haunted by legends

By SUSAN MARTIN

With Halloween and Homecoming back-to-back this year, it seems only fair to let the reader and the student know what he-she is up against. There are certain "conditions" that might make one nervous when he-she considers how they might affect the outcome of the game. "What are these conditions?" you may ask.

Most important is the rumor that J'ville is haunted. For many years, there have been stories of haunted houses and other spooks which plague this area.

An old house, just north of the college, used to be one of these. It was called Wellborn's Mansion until it was mysteriously burned down. People enjoyed gathering there around Halloween because it was supposed to be haunted. An old man, who had once lived there, came back, leaving scraps of bread and pieces of paper behind as a warning to those who dared to enter his house.

Another legend tells of the young Felshane couple that had a baby but couldn't afford to keep it. One night when the moon was full and the skies were clear, the couple drove to a bridge not far from Jacksonville, and dropped the baby over. Ever since then, you can stop on the old bridge and hear the baby's heartbeat, pounding loudly through the air.

On campus many have heard mysterious noises and seen strange happenings in Bibb Graves when the halls and lecture rooms are supposed to be empty. A former teacher, now deceased, is said to roam the halls every so often, longing for her teaching days and searching for her classroom.

Sigma Nu is reported to have experienced similar incidents; however, their "ghost" is a former resident of the house, who comes around to visit the new occupants.

All of these and other tales may make this a spooky Homecoming. So before you make your plans to roll yards and steal candy from youngsters, it may be wise to consider ways to help in Homecoming. You may take such precautions as avoiding black cats and wearing garlic necklaces. Or if you want to keep it simple, just show all of your enthusiasm for the game and all the Homecoming activities. Doing this will assure a victory for the Gamecocks. Otherwise, the spirits of the past may curse this area and bring the winning record of Homecoming to a frightful end.

Ghost of Miss Emma roams Ward home

Carlton Ward doesn't joke about ghosts at Halloween anymore. Not since his eerie encounter with Miss Emma.

Ward, assistant professor of drama at Jacksonville State, said he and his wife Sharon saw Miss Emma, the ghost, on two occasions in 1972 at their home in Danville, Va.

Miss Emma was the first wife of a Virginia planter. She died of natural causes following the Civil War and her husband married a younger woman.

"Miss Emma didn't approve of the second wife, the story goes, because she thought she was too young," Ward said.

So her spirit lingered, and later occupants of the home told of seeing Miss Emma rambling in the home and on the surrounding grounds long after her death shortly before 1900.

Years later, the home was purchased by Ward's parents, Ralph and Bernice Ward. Young Carlton heard the stories, but he remained skeptical until one winter evening at about midnight.

"I was sitting on the bed and Sharon was on the other side of the room at a dresser with her back to me. I looked over and saw a woman standing beside Sharon looking at her. She turned and walked across the room and around the bed, and she glanced at me indifferently as she walked past.

"I wasn't scared, but what concerned me was that the ghost was beside my wife when I first glanced over there."

Ward said he had not been napping and could not have been mistaken.

"It was much more than just a glimpse. It was a big room, and I had time to get a good look at her. She was wearing a thin linen dress that would have been popular in her day. She was a young woman."

Ward said he composed himself and did not tell his wife about the incident. But, several nights later, Mrs. Ward had an encounter of her own.

"Sharon walked into the bedroom and saw Miss Emma at the window, just standing there sort of forlornly looking out.

"But this time Miss Emma's visit lasted about 20 minutes. Sharon just sat back and watched her to see if she would speak or do anything. Once she turned to Sharon as if she might be ready to say something, but she never did speak."

Ward said Miss Emma appeared as a three-dimensional figure, "translucent-almost transparent."

Ward remains convinced that he and Sharon saw a real ghost.

"There's no doubt about it. I do believe in ghosts."

But Ward says he has other reasons for believing in ghosts than seeing Miss Emma.

"There are cases on record of people who had amazing supernatural power. There was a man living in New York during WW II who was contacted by the Royal Air Force. He helped them locate planes that had been downed in the war. Sitting in New York, he could give them the exact longitude and latitude of the planes. This stuff is real."

He thinks ghosts may result from energy left behind by a person.

"They may appear for physical reasons or for emotional reasons," he said.

Why did Miss Emma appear?
"Perhaps she just wanted to make her presence known," he said.

Ward's parents know all the stories, but they have never seen Miss Emma personally. And they say the last reported visit by Miss Emma was that evening in 1972 when Sharon saw her at the window.

"My parents attribute the sighting to a cucumber and mayonnaise sandwich we ate before going to bed," Ward said. "But still, when we hear things bump at night, we think of Miss Emma."

ATO

By JIM STUMP

The brothers and pledges of the Eta Theta chapter are geared up for a great homecoming weekend. We extend a warm welcome to all of the alumni, parents and friends who will be visiting this weekend.

Thanks to the ZTA's, who made our chilly October mixer a real scream. Special thanks to brother Bobby Luttrell for his generous help last Thursday.

We welcome all of our new little sisters and are pleased to have you represent our fraternity. Your much needed support will be appreciated throughout the year.

Congratulations to our pledge and little sister of the week. They are Jayson Smith and Annette Cosmos. Thanks for your outstanding support.

Let's all get rowdy this weekend and pull the Gamecocks through their 37th consecutive victory. ATO THE ONLY WAY TO GO!

Pi Kappa Phi

By MIKE GIBSON

There's nothing like a college homecoming, and JSU's is no exception. With all the events, yard displays, and the parade, it certainly makes this the most colorful and busy week of the year. We're glad to be a part of Jacksonville State's Centennial Celebration.

The little sisters have been doing a great job supporting us at pep rallies, intramural football games and just by brightening up our house with their presence. Thanks for everything, ladies.

Pi Kapp's football team won their third straight last Thursday against Sigma Nu 7-0 in a game where two fine defensive squads had fine showings.

Thanks to Phi Mu for inviting us to the balloon unveiling. It was an impressive ceremony, and we were really proud to be there.

Welcome to our two new pledges, Chandler Hall and Wayne Hicks. These two guys have jumped into the middle of things and done a great job. In fact, Chan is our pledge of the week.

Best of luck to the Gamecocks this week, we're hoping for another big homecoming win this year.

The Greek Experience is the greatest thing that you can be a part of at JSU, and the best place to experience it is at Pi Kappa Phi.

Kappa Alpha

By STEVE MARTIN

On behalf of the Delta Phi Chapter, the KA's would like to congratulate the top ten finalist of the Homecoming Pageant. May the fairest of all reign over Jax State through the next year.

The Miller Tug-of-War went great for us last week. We all agreed that it feels really good to take such a competition with a clean sweep. The gents who pulled for us are: Robbie Anchors, Jim Achley, Jim Tate, Kirk Patterson, Kerry Kochler, Eddie Chandler, and Jeff Ramey. We are extremely proud of these men and wish them luck in the final "Tug-Off."

Our win over Delta Chi last week was a slim one; however, we did pull it out victoriously.

We also had a road trip taken by a few brothers last week. Our pledge schemed together and escorted Mark Puckett, Ricky Lundy, Jamie Oyler, and Scott Butler to Tuscaloosa for a night's stay at the KA establishment there. What a trip!

Speaking of trips, our Mixer with Phi Mu was a definite trip. Thanks ladies, for a memorable evening at the "Limelight."

Homecoming is here! The activities around the house are in high gear and full swing. We've had a terrific time getting it all together. Let's tear up the stands with cheer for this centennial celebration! Happy Homecoming everyone! And Happy 100th Birthday Jax State.

Zeta Tau Alpha

By WENDY FEAD

The sisters of Zeta Tau Alpha want to thank the brothers of ATO for a fantastic mixer last Thursday!

We are so proud of our wonderful pledges! Y'all did a wonderful job in the pyramid competition! A big congratulations to ATO for being the fraternity winner!

The Zeta's are getting fired up for homecoming Saturday! We wish the Gamecocks luck! We also are proud of Laura Kent who represented Zeta in the top ten of the Miss Homecoming pageant. Good Luck Laura! Congratulations to Leisa Herron for being named Miss Congeniality in the pageant.

Congratulations to Suzie Dempsey who was named sister of the week and Kristi Allan and Susie Reiner for pledges of the week!

It's only two weeks until the Champagne Ball! Sister Suzanne Hawkins has done a wonderful job of planning this big event! We are eagerly awaiting November 5th!

Phi Mu

By CYNTHIA BROWN

We have new big brothers! Last Wednesday we inducted 10 of the greatest guys on campus into the Phi Mu Big Brotherhood.

Our new guys include Jim Akley, Shannon Benton, Doug Cronkite, Ron Domian, Henry Hart, Rob Hiens, Ricky Lundy, Tony Lundy, Lane McGlaughlin, and Mike Roberts. We're proud of you guys and we love ya!

Also in the happenings of last week was the Pep Rally! Southerner's - love your new show. The spirit was back and everyone's pyramids were really ingenious - especially ZTA's and ATO's - congrats guys and gals!

It's Ghost-and-Goblin time, and last night the Phi's threw a Halloween Party for the sisters and big brothers. Everyone dressed up and had a perfectly horror-ible time! Following the party, thanks to Linda Paradise, our chapter development chairman, we all gallavanted off to the Haunted House of Horrors in Gadsden - in our costumes, of course. It was loads of Halloween fun.

A few congratulations are in order for some Phi Mu's. Dawn Sweatman was Pledge of the Week - great going, Lil Sis! Also, Kelly Flowers and Pam Love deserve a big round of applause for their beautiful representation of Phi Mu during the Homecoming Festivities.

Homecoming is here and we're planning on having a blast at all the functions the SGA has planned. Chevy six, Mel Blanc, the Pep Rally, and the Parade are all going to be great; but the GAME is going to take it all! Let's keep up the winning tradition! Happy Birthday JSU and Go Gamecocks!

The Sigs had a good week in football with a hard fought victory over the Taus. We're looking forward to seeing them again in the playoffs. Charles Todd and the entire defense played an outstanding game, getting their second straight shut out and Franklin Self really looked good on offense.

This is homecoming week and we hope that everyone is ready to have one of the best times of your life at J.S.U. The Gamecocks are riding high and need this win to keep their playoff hopes alive. Go Cocks.

Alpha Kappa Alpha

By WINIFRED WILSON

Last weekend several Sorors from the Lambda Pi chapter went to Miles College, in Birmingham, to attend the annual Cluster. Representatives from our chapter had fun mingling with Sorors from the other chapters, although it was a learning experience, too. The Sorors of the Lambda Pi chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc., would like to congratulate those ladies who were chosen to be initiated into the Pyramid Pledge Club. Also, we would like to congratulate Miss Deborah Wilson, a representative of Kappa Alpha Psi, for being chosen as a candidate for Miss Homecoming 1982. We are sure all independents and Greeks will show their support by casting their vote for Deborah.

Now that you have partied with the rest, come party with the best! This Sunday make plans to attend our costume party.

Prizes will be given away to those who are best disguised. Look for in depth detail on your dormitory bulletin board, soon!

The Sorors have been busy rehearsing and making plans for the annual U.N.C.F. (United Negro College Fund) Step-Down. We are looking forward to this colossal event with other Greeks and the support of independents to route us all on to victory.

It is that time again, independents. Next month, the Alphas Kappa Alpha's will be having their annual Fall Rush. This is your chance to be formally introduced to the Sorors, view the new sorority room and let us know a little about yourself. For those independents interested in the ladies of Alpha Kappa Alpha, come by Curtiss Hall (basement) on Nov. 8, 1982 (T.B.A.)

Remember: If you want a friend, be a friend-If you want sisterhood, be an Alpha Kappa Alpha lady.

Alpha Xis really enjoyed the Pajama Party with the Zetas last Wednesday night! It was fun having the girls down on our hall and we hope they had a good time.

Congratulations to all of the Alpha Xis chosen in the Top Ten Homecoming Finalists. They were Kathleen Cunningham, Ann Stewart, and Charlotte Broome. Good Luck to all of you!

Alpha Xis are really fired up for the Miller Drive and everyone is really working hard. Congratulations to all of the new Fraternity Little Sisters. Alpha Xis are really proud of all of you!

Best wishes to Pam Holmes on her recent lavalier. Sister of the Week was Melanie West and Pledge of the Week was Jill Bidle.

Apologies go out to Peggy Hodnett, senior beauty, and Shelia Parker, sophomore favorite, because their names were left out of last week's article. We are proud of both of you!

Alpha Xis are very excited about our new Foster Child, Desiree. We adopted her through the Christian Children's Fund and we hope we can be an asset to her.

Alpha Xis have become involved with adopting grandparents at the Jacksonville Nursing Home. We've had so much fun with them! Deborah Samples, philanthropy chairman, has done a great job organizing it all. Thanks, Deborah!

Good luck to the Gamecocks on their Homecoming game!

Gamecocks suffer their first shutout in 140 season games

All good things must come to an end, and so it was with our record of undefeat. The Tennessee-Chattanooga Mocs shut out the Gamecocks last Saturday in what really shouldn't be called a match.

David Williams ran 20 yards in the second quarter for the third touchdown. The final touchdown was scored in the third by Byron Holmes after completion of a 32 yard pass by second string quarterback Gary Bloodsaw.

All PATS were made by Jack Teichmann, and the final score was 28-0, registering the first loss of the season for JSU, and the first shutout in 140 season games.

What happened was that UTC played a good game of football. They did not lose a fumble, or throw an interception. Their defense shut down our offense, (Ed Lett was able to complete only 22 of 45 passes attempted) and our injury-ridden defense barely slowed them down.

The Mocs took a 14-0 lead in the very first quarter. David McCrary returned a JSU punt 92 yards, but a clipping call voided the touchdown. Artis Edwards completed the touchdown with 5:02 remaining, and later in the same quarter Ralph Potter scored on a 6 yard run.

Delta Statesmen

By BRUCE TINKER

Jacksonville State, like all other universities, has many homecoming traditions. Among these are the crowning of Miss Homecoming, the homecoming parade, yard decorations and float competitions, and various alumni activities. All these happenings provide much of the excitement and electricity that make this celebration a highlight of the football season.

But let's keep in mind that it is football season. One of the biggest and longest running homecoming traditions is that the Gamecocks simply do not lose. The Centennial homecoming game is against the Statesmen of Delta State. Coach Fuller said, "Delta State has a new coach and a new outlook. They have surprised everyone in the league and we will have to bounce back ready to play if we hope to keep our homecoming record intact." That homecoming record is 34-0-2. Saturday's game against the Statesmen will be the start of a stretch run that hopefully will result in yet another GSC title and NCAA playoff berth for the Gamecocks.

With a record of 5-2, Delta State is surprisingly strong. After a loss to Livingston last week on ABC television, the Statesmen should be fired-up to try and break JSU's homecoming streak. DSU's game is weighted slightly toward the run. Ronnie Parker, their top rusher, contributes about 70 of a 187 yards per game average. The quarterback, Scott Butler, and his receivers add close to 150 yards per game through the air.

Delta State has fallen victim to the Gamecocks in five previous homecoming games, the most memorable being in 1965. Delta State posted a record of 9-1-0 for that year. Their loss to Jax State was by one point, 10-9. The Statesmen missed a short field goal in the closing moments of the game to preserve another homecoming victory for JSU.

Jax State will depend on Ed Lett and his fleet footed receivers to pick the Gamecocks up after a disappointing loss last week to UTC. Previous to that game, the Gamecocks had scored in 135 consecutive regular season games, dating back to 1968.

This game is more than just another homecoming. "Our next four games will determine our conference and playoff hopes," Fuller said this week. "Every game will be crucial, especially the one this Saturday. Delta State has the personnel to beat us and outstanding coaching."

Jacksonville State has never lost a homecoming game so you can bet the Gamecocks will be fired up and ready to keep the streak alive. Hopefully, this game will see the return of a few injured players and the continuation of a homecoming tradition. So everyone be sure to turn out Saturday to help the Cocks win number 35. Game time at Paul Snow Memorial Stadium is 2 p.m.

Ed Lett - 'A fine quarterback'

By LYNN LePINE

With a career total of 6016 yards in passing offense, quarterback Ed Lett has earned the respect not only of his teammates but of his coaches as well. Said Head Coach Jim Fuller, "In my opinion, Ed is the finest quarterback in Division II football, today." According to Coach Rudy Abbott, Lett's current career passing statistics already surpass those of any QB in GSC history by between 1000 and 2000 yards.

LETT

The Gamecock quarterback has been hailed by many as the finest QB ever to play for JSU, but he denies the accusation that the Gamecocks are a one-man team. "We have a very good offensive line and our backs and receivers amaze me every time they get the ball," said Lett, "With players like these, my job is easy."

Lett feels that this year's Gamecocks have a very good shot at the 1982 Division II title. According to Lett, the team has depth and maturity. "We've all come through the ranks together," he said, "We know each other and we can depend on each other in tight situations."

A native of Glencoe, Alabama, Lett feels he has been lucky to attend school here. He feels that the size of this university provides for a type of cohesiveness that is lost at larger schools. "Here, you can walk into the president's office and just have a conversation," he says, "I don't think you could do that at a school like Alabama."

Lett, a senior, says that playing football at this school is the best thing that's ever happened to him, but he tries not to let 'stardom' affect him. "You're only a star in the eyes of the people who don't know you," he says, "I try to be the same guy now that I was when I got here."

There is speculation as to whether or not Lett will be drafted into the pros after graduation. Lett himself is philosophical about the future of a football player, "If you get drafted, that's great," he says, "If you don't, you go on and look for something else." In actuality, though, Lett prefers not to look that far into his own future. "For me, the future is this Saturday night or next Saturday night," he remarked, "You have to take it one game at a time."

At JSU homecomings are a winning tradition

By KEITH SCHER

Homecoming at Jax State is a winning tradition! Jax State has not lost a homecoming game since the first one back in 1946.

The Gamecocks first homecoming game ended in a scoreless tie. The only other blemish on the Gamecock's record is a 6-6 tie with Austin Peay back in 1951.

Jax State has dominated their opponents, outscoring them 1099-260 for over a three-touchdown-per-game margin of victory. The widest margin of victory came in last year's 64-0 rout of Liberty Baptist. The Gamecocks will be looking for another victory to add to their 34-0-2 record when they tangle with Delta State this weekend.

Women's tennis spots are still open

By ANDY JONES

Here at JSU, the tennis teams, like most of our other sports teams, have a winning reputation to live up to. People elsewhere don't like to play against us because we're tough.

This year, Aileen Finley, a former team member, is coaching the women's tennis team, and has hopes of winning the Gulf South Conference. Finley is a graduate assistant with a semester of coaching and four years of playing behind her.

The fairly "young" team trains every day, putting in about 10 hours on the court. They have won their first and only match for the season. It was against Jeff State, and consisted of 10 singles games and 4 games of doubles. The ladies won 8 and 2 respectively. Coach Finley is trying to arrange matches with Shorter College and Calhoun Junior College before the weather turns too cold for playing. Matches scheduled for this spring are against Delta State, Mississippi College, UNA, and Valdosta. Perhaps Valdosta State will be the toughest as they competed in the nationals last year.

The eight member team has three returns from last year. Members of the team are Rae Clayton, Kara Click, Cheryl Hickey, Susan Nixon, Celeste Champion, Pam Helms, Erin Claredy, and Scarlet Lusk. Two other girls will begin playing in January, and in February, final cuts will determine the seven member squad for the spring season.

It is still not too late to try out for the team which will compete through April. If interested, please contact Coach Finley through the coliseum (ext. 515). Although scholarships are not available for every team member, the university does provide uniforms and shoes. The team is a member of the NCAA Division II of the Gulf South Conference.

One of the largest groups

JSU honors senior players

By DAVID GATTIS

Eighteen senior football players will soon play their last college game. This is one of the largest groups of senior football players ever at JSU. Coach Fuller has 10 defensive men, 7 offensive men, and 1 punter, most of whom are from Alabama, in this category. Of the 18, three of these men were walk-ons, and two of the three (Jack Hall - TE, and Ronald Cooper - DL) never received scholarships. Both of these players are a big asset to the team.

Although there is a large number of them, they are extremely close to each other. They consider themselves one big family. Nearly all of the 18 players have played their entire four years of collegiate football here at JSU. Most live in Salls Hall. Being around each other so much, they have learned a great deal from one another.

The seniors are proud of what they stand for both on the field and off the field, and should be remembered not only for the games they won, but also for the accomplishments they have made for the school and themselves.

"They come to school for more than just to play football," said Coach Fuller. "Their main priority is to get an education."

JSU has some players who are going to try to play pro ball such as Greg Lowery (Punter), Ed Lett (QB), Simon Shepherd (LB), but each of them will tell you that they want their education first. This is not so at many other universities. A lot of players at major schools go to college only to play football. You can ask any of these players and Coach Fuller, and you will get the same reply: "Education comes first." If that's not enough, check with some of the players to find out what kind of grades they make. The records will speak for themselves.

The players feel they are especially fortunate in having worked with Coach Fuller. To them, he is more than just a coach. He is an advisor, leader, and friend. To sum it up, one player said, "He is more like a father to us - he listens to us and respects us just as we respect him. There have been many times that when we had personal problems, we turned to him just as we would our own father."

Coach Fuller is like all other coaches in the respect that he hopes some of his players will make it big in the NFL, or the CFL, but it makes him extremely proud knowing that if they don't make it there, they have the education to do something else with their lives.

Rifle team returns veterans

By KEITH SCHER

The Jax State Rifle Team, last year's Gulf South Conference Champion, is hoping to shoot its way to No. 1 again.

This year's team captains, Robin Scher, Bill Putman and Ted Mauzey, are all returning seasoned veterans from last season. Other shooters returning from last year's 42-1 team are treasurer Connie Howard, Anne Murray, Robbie Smith, Melinda Alvasez, Barry Stamps, Mike Walder, Mike Clincales, Randy Phillips, Todd Abercrombie and Emelyn East. The rifle team is sharpening its skills through intersquad matches. This will also determine the traveling team for this year. Sgt. Chet Godwin is the coach, and Danny Johnson is the instructor. Good luck to this year's team. May they bring home another GSC Championship.

Bon fire to highlight

Friday's pep rally

It's that time of year again. Homecoming 1982 promises to be our best yet. This year the pep rally will be held on Friday night on the IM field. Again we will be having a bon fire. Each fraternity will be responsible for one truck load of wood, to be delivered to the IM field the day of the pep rally, Oct. 29. The pep rally will begin at 6:30 p.m. and include: lighting of the fire, The Southerners, the cheerleaders, sign competition, fire works, presenting the top five, and Chevy-5 will play until 11 p.m. Homecoming 1982 will be the party of the year. Golf team finishes season undefeated

By DENNIS SHEARS

The JSU golf team finished its fall season with two tournament wins, a 13-0 record, and a ranking of 5th in the nation by Golf World Magazine.

The team's final game of this season was a fund raising tournament played at Indian Oaks Country Club, in Anniston on Oct. 18.

Coach Steve Bailey and the team members said they would like to extend a special thanks to all who participated in the tournament, which was called the Gamecock Classic.

"The tournament was highly successful and a great deal of money was raised because of the generous support and participation of many people," commented Bailey. Sixty-seven players took part in the tournament which included Jax State team members and people of the community.

"We had a great fall season and we're really looking forward to the spring season," said Bailey. "The team members will remain the same, and the tournament schedule will resume in February."

JSU will host the Gulf South Conference Championship for golf teams from this part of the United States, a tournament the players are really looking forward to.

BCM Girls

The BCM Girls Football Team began the season with a strong 16 member team, however because of injuries and class conflicts, the team now consists of nine girls.

Both offense and defense is led by Sharon Machean. On offense, she calls the plays from the huddle using various formations we have worked on in practice. In calling the defensive plays, Machean sends in an occasional blitz.

The BCM Girls coaches are Darrel Reavis, Duff Manners and Keaton Manners.
