Improvements to occur in fiscal year 1983

Three million dollars will be spent to renovate and expand campus buildings and a number of improvements will occur in academic programs and employee benefits according to President Theron Montgomery.

During his annual address to faculty and staff Montgomery said major developments will include inception of an applied Technology Degree, better insurance benefits for faculty, continued improvements in the area of the computer science department, and 5 percent raises for faculty and staff.

In the use of three million dollar capital outlay from the Public School Building Commission plans include expansion of Merrill Hall, renovation of Ayers Hall, and necessary roof repairs of buildings campus wide.

Efforts are being made between technical colleges in this area and Jacksonville State University in an "upward swing of hands toward specific technological development demanded by current trends." The University has applied for permission to offer a Bachelor's Degree in Applied Technology.

In the new contract, insurance benefits for the faculty have doubled. The president has also recommended to the Board of Trustees that an across the board raise of 5 percent be budgeted for faculty and staff.

Additional points of improvement noted include:

Theron Montgomery Building along with the new Hardee's store has made the building a center of campus life.

Bookstore makes changes

By SUSAN MARTIN

The Campus Bookstore, now located in the Theron Montgomery Building, had its re-opening ceremony on Wednesday, August 25.

"We feel that the new location is a much more convenient one," said Gary Smith, manager of the Campus Bookstore. "We have a bigger parking lot, plus Hardee's is now next door. This floor has become a hub of activity for the students." Also, for the convenience of the customers, there are now three regular check-out registers, and a special check-out for grant and scholarship programs. This will make buying easier for everyone.

Presently, the bookstore carries a wide range of general school, reading and office supplies, campus wear, gift items and art material. For the Centennial Celebration, there are buttons, bumper stickers, mugs and car tags. After October 1, expanded stock will include such items as Centennial Sports Shirts and other items which will be especially for the benefit of the students.

The employees of the bookstore include three full-time workers and ten student

SGA schedules concerts

By GREG FOSTER

In recent years Jax State's concert program has not been up to the expectations of the students. This year, however, aggressive S.G.A. Vice-President Tony Lundy has introduced a fall schedule of free concerts and attractions utilizing the previously inactive J.S.U. amphitheater.

The amphitheater, an open-air stage settled among an array of pine trees near the Merrill Bldg., was constructed for student events in 1979. After P.A.B. was opened the following year, the amphitheater was not used again until this year. Students this fall can expect to see such attractions as well-known hypnotist, Gill Eagles and Mel Blanc (Bugs Bunny fame), as well as selected area bands.

The first concert on this year's schedule opened with a bang Tuesday as J.S.U. students, armed with a variety of ice coolers, exploded with the excitement of PooNanny & The Hurricanes. Displaying not only a diversity of fine music, PooNanny created an incredible energy that carried the audience well into the night.

With a history of over fifteen years, the Birmingham group will soon be completing work on their first album, along with two singles which should be released shortly. Original PooNanny Joe Burns now manages the six member band which includes vocalists Climmie D., Ann LaVelle, Nick Shepherd, C. C. Jones (keyboards), Early Times (drums), and Lenny Shallworth (bass).

Judging from the outcome at Tuesday night's preview performance Jax State can look forward to many more S.G.A. sponsored attractions at the amphitheater.

A message from Dr. Stone . . .

By SUSIE IRWIN

"A college education is the best calling card in the world," said President Emeritus Dr. Ernest Stone.

According to Dr. Stone, unemployment among high school graduates is more than five times that of college graduates. With a college degree, a person is more capable of competing in the job market, Dr. Stone said.

Although college enrollment has been decreasing in the 1980's, Dr. Stone said that by the early 1990's colleges all over the country will experience a steady climb in enrollment.

A major concern of both present and future college students is financial aid. Dr. Stone stated that he does not believe lack of financial aid will be a problem at JSU. He commended the capable handling of scholarship and loan funds by the University and said that JSU will continue to provide adequate financial aid to students who need help in order to complete their college education.

"JSU is no longer considered a teacher's college," Dr. Stone said, "the college of education is only one of the nine colleges we have on campus."

The faculty of today, Dr. Stone said, has a "much broader base" than the teachers he was instructed by when he was a student in the 1930's. In his college days, the teachers were "academically able" but in today's colleges and universities, the teachers are more "culturally able" and can provide not only academic instruction but experience and knowledge.

Dr. Stone said that Dr. Montgomery's expansion of the computer science area was "wisely done." In the next few years, he believes the colleges of music and fine arts, education, as well as math and science, will be growing and expanding due to more interest in those areas.

In deciding an area to study, Dr. Stone advises students to consult the Career Development Center on campus. The center has information concerning the number and types of jobs available in all areas. According to Dr. Stone, the student should decide in which area he or she is most interested and try to correlate that area to the area in which the most jobs in the job market are available.

Whatever field or profession a student decides to pursue, Dr. Stone said that the student should "strive to do his very best possible" in that area.

Looking ahead to JSU's 200th celebration, Dr. Stone said the University will be offering most of the post high school vocational needs in northeast Alabama and estimates there will be some 30,000 to 40,000 students attending.

Dr. Stone finds life after being president of JSU for ten years "a rewarding experience" and said he has a "deep and abiding love for this campus and for all of the students who have ever graduated from JSU." In Dr. Stone's words, "a special bond" exists between himself and the students because he was once a student at JSU himself.

As the first college graduate in his hometown of Kilpatrick, Alabama, Dr. Stone became principal of the elementary school at the age of 20, after having graduated from Jacksonville Teachers College.

In junior high school, Dr. Stone dreamed of being a railway mail clerk but was later influenced by the principal of his high school and decided to go into education.

Having been on the Jacksonville campus for over 50 years, Dr. Stone is a type of "resource person" for those who are researching information about the University for the centennial celebration. He now holds the position of President Emeritus and does a great deal of public relations work for JSU including visiting high schools all over Alabama and Georgia.

Jerry Cole and Dr. Stone are presently compiling a list of the University's 100 outstanding athletes to commemorate the University's centennial.

In Dr. Stone's opinion, Dr. Montgomery has been doing an "excellent job as president" and has great admiration for the staff and faculty which he considers to be "the best in Alabama."

Make homecoming plans early this year

The JSU Alumni Association is giving dormitories, fraternities, and all organizations an opportunity to plan ahead for a prizewinning homecoming display.

The Board of Governors voted at a recent meeting to offer prize money to organizations and dorms for yard displays and floats.

The prize money is allocated as follows: Dorm and yard displays—first prize $500, second prize $300, third prize $200; Parade Floats—first prize $500, second prize $300, third prize $200.

All dorms and all organizations recognized by SGA are eligible to compete for the prize money.

Poetry contest to award $1,000 prize

A $1,000 grand prize will be awarded in the upcoming poetry competition sponsored by World of Poetry, a quarterly newsletter for poets.

Poems of all styles and on any subject are eligible to compete for the grand prize or for 99 other cash or merchandise awards, totaling over $10,000.

Says Contest Chairman, Joseph Mellon, "We are encouraging poetic talent of every kind, and expect our contest to produce exciting discoveries."

Rules and official entry forms are available from the World of Poetry, 2431 Stockton Blvd., Dept. D, Sacramento, California, 95817.

Campus police enforce parking regulations

By JEANENE GIBBS

The campus police have made it known that they will not hesitate to issue parking citations to vehicles parked in unauthorized zones.

In spite of the abundant parking areas marked red or green for student use, we sometimes find that, because of necessity or laziness, we must park in other places. Oftentimes, when we return, we find that we have been gifted with a small slip of paper known as a parking ticket. Most of the time it is true that the offender deserved the citation, but if a student feels he has been ticketed unjustly he does have a means of recourse.

The Jacksonville State Traffic Court is available for all students to appeal traffic citations received on campus. Appeal hearings will be held on the last Thursday of each month.

There is a ten day deadline to appeal a ticket.

Court hearings are held by a staff of three student body members appointed by the SGA, with a campus officer present to verify information concerning tickets. The chairman of the traffic court will make the final decision on all appeals. There will be a $1.00 administrative fee for all tickets appealed.

Improvements

—Recent housing of Computer Science Department on 3rd floor of Bibb Graves which allowed expansion and space for additional necessary equipment and student access.

—Upgrading of Chemistry Department through an expenditure of $195,000 on lab equipment ready for use this fall.

—Considerable improvement of dormitories campus wide, include new and more comfortable furnishings and carpeted halls, along with one nonvisitation dorm each for men and women students who will make the final decision on all appeals. There will be a $1.00 administrative fee for all tickets appealed.

—Additional lighting on campus for safety of all students and faculty.

—An increase in faculty research grants from $10,000 to $15,000.

—Hardee's occupancy of the food service area opposite the newly installed Bookstore on the main floor of TMB.

Montgomery expressed the desire to continue the improvement of the quality of student life and to continue recruiting a quality faculty.

helpers. Most or all of these have worked there at least three semesters and are well acquainted with the work. They help to keep all supplies in a good order so it is easy to find what you're looking for according to Smith.

"Even though the bookstore is a nice place to shop, there are still some wrong ideas. A lot of times people feel that we, at the Campus Bookstore, don't appreciate the student business. This isn't true. We are always striving to keep the prices competitive, so the students will come to shop here first," said Smith.

The bookstore's regular hours are 7 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Thursday and 7 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Fridays, and during the month of September only, it will be open 7 a.m.-7 p.m. Monday-Thursday.

Giant cake marks JSU's 100 years

By MIKE OLIVER
News Correspondent

Hundreds of Jacksonville State University faculty members lined up Friday to take a bite of Bibb Graves Hall in celebration of JSU's centennial.

The 15-foot long cake, formed in a likeness of the main building on campus, suffered extensive damage and was delicious, too, reported a man chewing on a portion of the roof.

JSU president Dr. Theron Montgomery took the first bite from a piece sliced by his wife Ada.

"It is nice to celebrate the first 100 years, especially knowing that the next 100 years will be even better," said the JSU president.

A JSU alumna, Mari Cook of Anniston, is the builder and baker of the five-foot-tall cake.

"It's definitely the most challenging cake I've ever attempted," she said. "The largest cake I've ever baked served only 500 persons."

How does she feel about people eating her masterpiece?

"Well, I guess relieved," said the cake maker. "I have been so worried the past few days that something is going to happen to it."

A minor disaster occurred Friday morning after the plastic sheet which was covering the cake was removed and took part of the icing with it. Emergency reroofing solved the problem.

Working from a detailed sketch of the building and photographs, Mrs. Cook built the cake to scale. Actually, it consisted of 45 individual cakes.

A plywood frame supported the building, which contained 90 eggs, 50 pounds of sugar, 50 pounds of cake mix and icing and 75 pounds of graham crackers.

Mrs. Cook, who received her master's degree from JSU in guidance counseling in 1976, took up cake decorating because of the scarcity of jobs in her field, she said. She now operates a cake-decorating business in Anniston.

She spent more than 200 hours on this project. Another "big" project Mrs. Cook is working on is creating a cake-sculpture of an elephant for the Anniston Museum of Natural History, she said.

Although the Bibb Graves cake was billed as the largest in Alabama, it will not set any world records. The Guinness Book of World Records lists the largest birthday cake as a 1936 World's Fair monstrosity weighing 26,000 pounds.

Before it was time to let them eat cake, spectators enjoyed a softball game between the university police and the JSU maintenance staff and were entertained by local musicians.

The picnic Friday was the first of several events planned for this centennial year. A special centennial Homecoming and gala has been planned for Oct. 30. JSU Centennial Week Feb. 21-25, as declared by the Legislature, will include a number of activities highlighted by an internationally known speaker, according to Jerry Harris, assistant to the director of public relations. The all-time 100 greatest JSU athletes will be selected and honored this year.

JSU traces its beginnings to 1883 with the inception of the State Normal School, although a male academy had been at the site since 1836. The institution did not get its present name until 1966.

Students began trickling into Jacksonville this week for fall semester classes, which begin Monday.

The actual Bibb Graves Hall is the administration building for JSU and one of the oldest buildings on campus. (Used with permission of The Birmingham News.)

Points Of View

Take it off, take it all off

Tim Strickland
Editor-In-Chief

By TIM STRICKLAND

Each semester as we return to school we find that another building on campus has changed its name. The latest of these name changes is quite obvious. It sprawls halfway across the windows of the building!

The building in reference was originally known as the Student Commons. Later the name was changed to the Theron Montgomery Building. Although it took a while for us to get used to the new name, slowly and surely we accepted it. But now it seems that we'll be learning yet another name for it—The Hardee's Building.

Regular Jax Staters will know that only a small part of the building is actually Hardee's. But visitors to campus will probably think it's Hardee's Regional Headquarters. This is not an attack on Hardee's (their food is as good as ever), only their sign. Try to imagine how the building would look if the other organizations located in it were to follow suit. There are the Bookstore, the Mimosa, the Chanticleer, the SGA, Special Services, and the Alumni Association. Wouldn't that be a sight!

Solution? A single, attractive sign that lists all of the TMB organizations.

Put Hardee's right at the top in the Hardee's logo and follow with the others in uniform print.

There are those who may like the idea of the present Hardee's sign, but we don't believe they constitute a majority.

Bottom line? Keep on cooking the burgers and fries, but scrap the sign.

Girls, get involved in intramural sports

By LYNN LEPINE

Girls, girls, girls! What is the problem? All around I see young athletic-looking women but only a handful participate in J.S.U.'s Intramural Sports program. The men seem to have successful independent I.M. leagues, so why can't the women? Most of the guys are in it for the spirit of competition and just to have some fun. Aren't those same things important to the women on this campus?

The women's independent intramural football league is a dying animal, but five dependable teams this year could save it. Last year there were only three teams in the league, and only two of them could be depended on to show up at game time. If we could form a really solid league this year, maybe there would be some stiff competition in the play-offs at the end of the season.

The games aren't professional, of course, but they're fun and you don't have to know everything about football to play in them. I've played for the Weatherly Wonders for the past two years. I'm a joke on the offensive line and even funnier at safety, but I have a good time and you can, too.

Team sports are important to this school. It's even easier to appreciate that when you play in the intramural leagues and know what it's like to be out there on the field. So get 12 or 15 dependable girls, put their names on a roster, and hand it in to Coach Bell by September 16. Get yourselves a good coach and you're in business. And if you're going to turn in a roster and put in the hours at practice, then it's only right to show up for the games—for the other team's sake, at least.

What is rape?

By JOHN W. DAVIS, JR., M.D.
Psychiatrist, Anniston, Alabama

"If she didn't want to be raped, she wouldn't have been in such a skimpy outfit. And why else would she be in a place like that by herself? Besides, if she was raped she would have put up a fight and there wasn't a scratch on her."

Statements and questions like these are commonly heard. They reflect popular distorted ideas about rape. For example, many people believe that rape is sexually motivated, when in fact rape is an act of violence performed in a sexual fashion. The goal of rape behavior is the aggressive domination of another person. The rapist then experiences a sense of power, control and strength. Feelings of inadequacy and frustrated, impotent rage are relieved.

Another popular distorted idea suggests that rapists are over-sexed or sexually frustrated. Most rapists have ongoing sexual relationships when they commit rape. Rapists will frequently try to minimize their responsibility for a criminal rape by implying that they were "seduced", "lost control" and were overwhelmed by sexual desire. Blame is shifted to the rape victim who is accused of being provocative and leading the rapist into a sexual encounter. False logic hides the hostile, sadistic, humiliating nature of the rape, often leading people to blame and attack the victim, while the rapist enjoys sympathy. The victim often even blames and viciously questions her own behavior.

Rape prevention concepts suggest that rape is preventable. Certain behaviors will stop certain rapists in certain situations. However, the same behaviors with a different rapist, in a different situation could result in severe, violent attacks upon the victim, even death.

Unfortunately, many popular distorted ideas cause rape victims to blame themselves and undergo depression, anxiety, sexual problems, even long term humiliation in their families, communities and in their minds.

(Many of the ideas in this article were presented in a Seminar on "Sexual Assault" by Nickolos Groth, Ph.D., in Montgomery on April 23, 1982.)

Overcutting is a serious business

By R. STACY MCCAIN

Overcutting. As Lynn LePine has said, it can be spelled with a capital F. According to the 1982-1983 Bulletin, "A student may not receive credit for a course in which he/she fails to be present 75 percent of the time..." Sounds reasonable, huh?

What it works out to, in the end, is that one could cut a MWF class ten times, or a TT class seven times, and still receive credit if, and only if, one can achieve a passing grade.

It is not, however, in a student's best interest to push his cuts to the limit. Ideally, one should never cut. Each absence represents that much less information one receives from a course. Of course, absenteeism is also reflected in another way—grades.

Take, for example, general science. As Mr. Angelette points out to his classes, each lab which a student skips has a direct effect on his final grade. (In general science, each of the fourteen labs counts 10 points, with a score of less than 8 being a near-impossibility). A student who attends every lab, with an average score of 9, needs only a "C" average on his exams to achieve an "A" in the course, while a student who cuts four labs needs an "A" average on exams to make a "C"!

While chronic absenteeism may not have such a profound effect in every course, one finds that those students who make the best grades are almost always those who attend class regularly.

It is also important to note that there are occasions when one must miss class: illness, car failure, etc... Too often, students take several cuts early in the semester, and then later, when they fall ill (November is flu season, after all) they have to drag themselves, sniffing and wheezing, to class—regretting all the while those days they overslept or just didn't go.

So, next time you're tempted to shut off that alarm and go back to bed, remember—you may be playing now, only to pay later.

Catholic Student Union welcomes everyone

By PAMELA HARTDEGEN

The Catholic Student Union is a gathering of Catholic Students interested in studying the Bible and furthering their spiritual growth through prayer and socialization. Father Tim Burns, pastor of Saint Charles, is the head of the C.S.U. Father Tim is originally from Birmingham and was a Vocational Director for the Diocesan.

Last fall and spring, Father Tim, gave talks on the Gospel of John and Love, Intimacy, Infatuation. A program about the mentally retarded was presented by Ms. Teresa Long during the month of March, Mentally Retarded Month.

The upcoming fall and spring semesters will present indepth studies on the book of Acts and the book of Revelations. Some other activities for the new semesters were discussed briefly: Youth retreats, helping members of the parish around the house and yard, and more. These ideas are still in the planning stages and we are open to more suggestions. Refreshments are served after the meetings and discussions take place. Much is learned at this time and new friends made.

Non-Catholics are encouraged to join the meetings. In the past, people of different denominations have joined us and contributed greatly to the discussion. Hearing the different ways people interpret the same idea adds to spiritual growth no matter what your religion is.

Everyone is invited to attend. All are welcome. Our meetings are held in the Parish Hall next door to St. Charles Catholic Church on East 7th Street at 7:30 p.m. till about 9:00 or 10:00 every Wednesday night immediately following mass at 7:00 p.m. at the Church. The first meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, 8 September. We'll see you then.

BCM Choir meets

The choir of the Baptist Campus Ministry will meet Sept. 13 at 6:45. The choir meets at the Baptist Student Center which is located next to the baseball field. Audition is not a requirement for becoming a member. Everyone is welcome, so please come join us.

CEC to meet

The Council for Exceptional Children will have a meeting September 14 at 4:00 p.m. The meeting will be held in room 218 in the Ramona Wood Building. All newcomers are welcome.

Nutshell magazine available on campus

The 14th edition of "Nutshell, the Magazine for the College Community" is hot off the press and is again available free of charge on the JSU campus.

You'll find interesting and diverse topics covered in this fall's "Nutshell", from fashions to frats to fantastic flicks and fabulous photographs.

If you've ever wondered what the opposite sex is really looking for, the cover story of this issue has some eye-opening answers. Another campus-life story, "Rugby: The Ultimate Frat" pays narrative and photographic tribute to a sport that offers captivating release from the rigors of study

Library's purpose explained

The purpose of the University Library is to serve the needs and interests of the students, faculty, and staff by providing materials to support the curriculum and personal interests of these groups.

Materials are arranged and classified according to the Library of Congress (LC) classification scheme. All books, periodicals, indexes, and other reference tools for a given subject are housed together on one floor as determined by this classification scheme.

Books are located by using the card catalog in the basement to obtain the call number. A key indicates the location of the call numbers for each floor.

Books are checked out at and returned to the circulation desk in the lobby.

Validated IDs are needed to check out a book.

Books are checked out for a two-week period and can be renewed once. A fine of 5 cents a day is charged for an overdue book. Periodicals do not circulate; however, material may be copied for 10 cents a page on the copiers on 4th floor.

ID cards will be checked by security personnel as each person enters the library. All books, briefcases, etc. will be checked by security personnel as each person exits the library.

Library hours for the Fall and Spring terms are as follows:

Monday - Thursday, 7:30 a.m.-10:30 p.m.; Friday, 7:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m.-2 p.m.; Sunday, 3 p.m.-9 p.m.

More complex issues are very much in evidence in this year's "Nutshell" with a report on the emotionally-charged subject of homosexuality and an in-depth look at how the recession is affecting the job market.

With miraculous speed and unsurpassed timing Gil Eagles will unleash his hypnotized subject's inhibitions, resulting in a laugh provoking-side splitting hilarious event. Good taste and respect for the privacy and dignity of his audience always prevails.

Mr. Eagles Self-Hypnosis and Mind Control seminar-workshops are now receiving national acclaim.

University police strive for quality

By SUSIE IRWIN

"To improve programs and strive for quality" are two of the main objectives of the University Police Department, said Chief David Nichols while discussing plans for the department this fall.

The UPD intends to concentrate on public relations, working closely with the SGA and continuing programs set in motion last semester such as the female escort service. Chief Nichols also stated that the campus police will continue to be more visible on campus.

Traffic is a problem on campus as a result of "too much traffic in a small area," Chief Nichols said. He advised students who live on or near campus to walk to class because "it is not only safer, but there is also less chance for parking illegally."

Chief Nichols said that he is interested in working with the dorm directors in starting a program of crime prevention awareness.

In mini-mester, a new program for security in the female dormitories was organized by the campus police. Chief Nichols said a female patrolman stays in the dorm lobby all night and checks all doors on hourly intervals.

The University police are responsible for patrolling campus and those apartments owned by the University which include Campus Inn, College Apartments and Pennhouse. However, if the city requests assistance, the UPD will respond to other areas in Jacksonville.

Reception honors Ford

A welcome reception for the Rev. Bob Ford, Baptist Campus Minister at Jacksonville State University, is planned for Sunday, September 12, between the hours of 2:30 - 4:30 p.m., at the Baptist Student Center located at the intersection of Pelham Road and highway 204.

The Rev. Ford comes to his new position at Jacksonville from the University of Montevallo where he served similarly for nine years.

The students of the Baptist Campus Ministry and the members of the BCM Area Advisory Committee join in extending a cordial invitation to the members of the Baptist Churches of the area, Jacksonville State University faculty and student body, and all friends to attend the reception.

Moving in

For some returning to dorm life, fraternity brothers; for others, Moore and Barry Barnett, it means getting settled in for a long winter.

Patience, patience

We can all identify with the "biggest pain", paying that tuition, when we come back to school. The rapport established among those who stand in the long lines at the business office eases the pain somewhat, and the heart is always lighter when you walk away even if the pocketbook is emptier.

Fall . . .

year when multicolored leaves
renched landscapes, when af-eering a favorite football team
ger. However, the college fall tudents, who might be unaccustomed to the college fall, dangers are hidden behind a golden facade within our autumn days. No where else in the world is fall the same as on a college campus.

Here at JSU, breezy September afternoons are stress filled times spent standing in long lines or running madly from the coliseum to the Stone Center in 15 minutes or getting lost in the dusty-book maze called the library or striving to appear intelligent in an algebra class.

For entering freshmen, fall is a once-in-a-lifetime experience. No where else can a student learn the do's and don't's of studentdom as well as a crash course in survival within a few short weeks.

But, alas, it is the little things you learn which will forever emblazon in your memory the words "college fall." It's losing your dignity on a small plastic card for a decent lunch every day. It's having more drop-add slips than anyone on your hall. It's practicing what you already know how to do and learning to pretend you have learned something that you didn't already know.

For the returning college student, fall means making the same promises to yourself that you made in the last college fall. Promising to make good grades, not to over cut and to stay in the dorm every Thursday night are among those most common.

Fortunately, the college fall will not leave any permanent damage with its victims either physically or mentally but it does have a profound effect on your future. After overcoming the necessary college falls in the average college education, you will never be the same. From that day forward, with the first hint of autumn, you will long for past college days and even the hazards of the college fall.

Pat and Bert discuss freshmen

Pat: Good Lord. Look at all these freshmen! Bert, do you remember when you started college?
Bert: Who, me? I never looked or acted like that. I skipped being a freshman.

Pat: Yeah, just like you skipped puberty. I'm serious. Look at this new crop. Were we ever like that?

Bert: I never looked anything less than totally confident, self-assured, and light years away from high school.

Pat: I'm sure. Let's see your I. D. picture.

Bert: I, uh, well, I left it back in the dorm. Never mind about that. This bunch of freshmen doesn't look like they know what's going on. They look uninformed. Not like we were. Things just aren't the same for them as they were for us.

Pat: Yeah, I remember being all excited about going to my first ban the bomb rally.

Bert: But Pat, the last ban the bomb rally was in 1972, and besides, there never were any at JSU.

Pat: Oh well, tough luck, huh? I agree with you, though, that some things have changed. When I started here, Hotel still played at Brother's every now and then...

Bert: But Pat, Hotel still—

Pat: ...and can you believe politics nowadays?

Bert: Yeah, everything's different now that Reagan is in office. Remember when college students used to go out in the streets and protest about things they didn't like?

Pat: You mean like the draft, and war, and civil rights?
Bert: Yeah, and Save the Whales, and Conservation, and Equality!

Pat: No, I don't remember, but I do have an uncle who has a peace sign on his microbus. The only things I protested against during my freshman year were disco music and polyester double knit.

Bert: Yeah, but at least we could make fun of our politicians. I got great mileage out of Jimmy Carter's teeth.

Pat: I know what you mean. Who wants to hear about jellybeans and James Watt.

Bert: Not me, although James Watt is a barrel of laughs at times.

Pat: Tell that to the next tree you see.

Bert: It's not just politics and attitudes. The economy has gotten ridiculous since we've been in school.

Pat: Yeah, remember when $2.50 got you in to see Hotel at Brother's?

Bert: But Pat, $2.50 will still—

Pat: Thank goodness some things never change. Traditions like Homecoming, Whopping Troy, Bibb Graves Hall at night...

Bert: Dr. Whitton's ties...

Pat: ...the pizza from Roma's at 1:00 in the morning...

Bert: ...the heart-burn from eating Roma's pizza at 1:00 in the morning...

Pat: ...that great Gamecock spirit...

Bert: You know Pat, we've come up with more things that have stayed the same than we have things that have changed. I'm beginning to think that these freshmen aren't really very different from the way we were. They appear to have potential. Who knows, someday they may have the "savoir faire," the polish, the poise, that we upperclassmen possess.

Pat: You mean they could learn to hide their dirty dishes under their desks and hide their dirty hair under baseball caps when they get up too late to wash it, just like we do?
Bert: If they're lucky. But seriously, I think these freshmen are going to turn out all right. Hey you! Yeah, you, the one buying the twelve JSU T-shirts. Come here for a minute.

Pat: Hey we've had our eye on you freshmen, and you've erased our doubts about you. We've decided you're a bunch of good eggs and we'd like to talk to you for a minute.

Fresh: What kind of egg? Hey, I don't know what your problem is, but you're gonna have to excuse me. I've gotta go. I've gotta pick up my Regal from the shop. The t-top was leaking, but I've just gotta have my car for tonight so I can make it to the Sixties party tonight. I'm taking my Procol Harum album. I'm going as Timothy Learly and my date is going as Twiggy. It's gonna be totally bitchin', I mean really awesome. Later man.

Pat: Excuse me?

Bert: Uh, Pat, you know what I just said?

Pat: Yeah, I know what you just said, but what did he just say?

Bert: I was going to ask you.

Pat: Let's go ask Alice.

Bert: Okay. I think she's at Brother's listening to Hotel.

Pat: Far out man.

Fresh from Los Angeles

By JON HUGHES

In the few weeks before I was to move to Los Angeles from my childhood home in Alabama, I had an opportunity to tell many friends and acquaintances that I was going. At first I found the words "I'm going to Hollywood" hard to get out. When I did get them out, there followed a sheepish grin from me and then, after an incredulous stare, another sort of grin from the listener. It seems that the old cliché of "Going Hollywood" is not something you expect to see in real life. That one is relegated to black and white flickering celluloid; late, late movies; top pop success stories coming in at 3:55; and a thousand, thousand unspoken dreams. But I was going "west" like the man said. I was following the dream...a personal dream. I was actually going to "tinsel town".

The anticipation of such a move I found an unparalleled experience. The heady mixture of abject fear of the unknown and delicious savour of impending reward is a liquor to be sought and tasted at least once. Must be a lot like booking passage on the starship "Enterprise".

Generally, I noted two reactions to my plans to head for the setting sun. One, there was an open-mouthed awe, silent wanderlust in the eye, drooling desire to join me. Indeed, there are a few who will do so in a few years. But it was a second reaction that I did not expect. Epitomized by the response of one gas attendant who, upon finding that I was moving, asked me where I was headed. I turned with an air of superiority and simply smirked "L.A.". His expression never changed as he replied, "Really, I used to live in Lower Alabama myself." I drove away from there with a new definition of limited vision.

Next time, "Westward Ho!"

Since the Eagles have split-up, three of the group's members have made solo records. Glenn Frey, Don Henley, and Randy Meisner have succeeded in proving an old cliché—the whole is greater than the sum of its parts. Frey's "No Fun Allowed" was a nice pop album, although fairly lightweight, and though I haven't heard Henley's latest yet, I would imagine that it is better than Randy Meisner's self-titled second LP. It has to be.

The best thing that can be said for this album is that it makes a good case for buying singles. "Never Been in Love" is the hit single here and, disappointingly, the only truly worthwhile tune to be found. The blame must be laid to producer Mike Flicker, who seems to have a knack for picking songs which are particularly unsuited for his artist.

Case in point: "Strangers", an Elton John composition which, although a good song in its own right, exceeds the vocal range of both Meisner and Ann Wilson (with whom he performs a duet). If he had really cared whether the song sounded right (and it looks like he would) he could have simply lowered the key by a step or two.

The other songs are a bit better. "Never Been In Love" is nice, with a full range of dynamics which cannot be found elsewhere on the album. "Jealousy" features the Tower of Power horns in a strong arrangement by Greg Adams. As far as lyrics are concerned, the album's high-point is "Playin' In the Deep End", which contains the line "Caught every move of that jumped up band on the southside corner". That this is the best on the album should tell you something.

Some people might choose to purchase this album on the strength of its first single. Then again, some people would buy the Brooklyn Bridge.

RADIOACTIVITY—At 92-J, John Cougar holds the top spot, with the Go-Go's at No. 2 again...Alan Parson's "Eye in the Sky" climbs two spots to No. 3, replacing Donna Summer's "Love is in Control" which nosedives to number 17...Joan Jett has been getting a lot of "yes" answers to the question "Do you Wanna Touch Me?"

AROUND TOWN—My Brother's Bar has the hard rock sound of Pegasus tonight through Saturday; Cruise-o-Matic will party down next Tuesday, and Knightowl plays September 15-18...Buddy Causey comes to Chaps next week.

ET CETERA—Apparently, the Allman Bros. Band has broken up, because The Greg Allman Band is booked into Brother's in October...Who is Steve Patterson and why is he not talking? Answers to this question and more coming soon.

Gamecocks achieve national ranking

By CINDY MABEE

"On paper the team looks real good," according to Coach Steve Bailey. And with the golf team's previous record, the team does indeed look good.

Last spring the JSU Golfing Gamecocks won some of the most coveted titles in the Southeast Region. Among these were the Alabama Intercollegiate Tournament, the Southeast Regional Tournament, and the NCAA Division II Tournament. Their second place win in the Gulf South Conference helped push Jax State toward the All-Sports Trophy, and in the NCAA Division II Nationals, JSU ranked eighth.

Bailey believes that last year was the first time in JSU's history that the golf team has won the state and regionals and placed in the top ten in the nationals.

The 1982-83 season sees the return of two All-Americans—Drew Campbell and Chuck Pinkard—along with duffers Micky O'Kelly, Jeff Key, Craig Stephens, Shatig Kanji, Joey Groover, Mark Cantrell, and Mark Sanderson.

New recruits include John McPherson, Blake Smith, Scott Smith, David Bright and Bobby McGlathery.

Weight room facilities improve

By: MARK MORRISON

Some $2100 worth of equipment has been added to the weight room facility in the Pete Mathews Coliseum, and, according to Dr. Ron Harris, head of the JSU Physical Education department, these improvements now provide JSU students with a facility offering the equipment necessary for a "complete well-rounded weight program."

"We're proud of the equipment added," said Harris, "and we feel that we're offering the students a complete program to meet their training needs."

Several pieces of weight equipment added, as well as improvements to existing equipment, will benefit all JSU students who use the weight room facility. The University offers a separate weight room facility for JSU athletes.

Types of new equipment recently added to the facility include two Olympic weight lifting sets, safety squat rack, safety weight bench, preacher curl bench, incline bench, three different hand dumb-bell sets, boxing speed bag and a boxing punching bag, with additional equipment ordered.

Harris noted that improvements have been made on existing equipment and the weight room has expanded to twice its size since last fall.

"We've doubled the size of the weight room in order to allow students better access to the weights," Harris said.

Future plans of further improving the weight facility will be considered, but Harris feels the facility is "pretty well stocked right now." "We encourage any JSU student to take advantage of the facility," says Harris.

Harris said the facility is open to any student with free time between 1 and 8 p.m. any day of the week.

"One of the benefits in having a coliseum like we have is that students are offered a variety of programs to meet their needs," Harris said.

"We like to provide well-rounded programs in order to give the student an opportunity to do the things which he or she enjoys the most."
