Club holds hot debate

By JAN DICKINSON

Since 1973, in the Rowe vs. Wade case (U. S. Supreme Court), abortion has been legal across the nation. Eleven years later, that landmark decision is still hotly debated by young and old, liberals and conservatives alike.

Thursday, November 1, the Sociology Club sponsored a debate on abortion. Dr. Hugh McCain, club sponsor and member of the Sociology Department, said that the two speakers were not associated with Jacksonville State. "Getting two outside speakers to come in and debate gives us different views of the subject." One of the two guest speakers was Ms. Joni Phillips, a Pro-Choice advocate and Community Outreach Director of Birmingham's Summit Medical Center. The other guest speaker was Ms. Susan Blaha, who, although not affiliated with any particular organization, spoke on behalf of the Pro - Life faction.

After a brief introduction by Sociology Club President Robin Snyder, each speaker was allowed twelve minutes to present her facts. An additional five minutes was given to each for rebuttals, then a question and answer period closed the debate.

No specific topic was given for the speakers to address. Therefore, some confusion was evident as the debate progressed. Ms. Blaha's speech squarely attacked abortion, while Ms. Phillips' speech defended the freedom of choice; she was not simply defending abortion.

Blaha opened with a startling statement, "Please understand that it's legal in America to take the life of the unborn child at any time; from conception to the moment of birth, the baby can be killed." She then went into a detailed account of each of three methods of abortion used in the United States today: suction, saline injection, and hysterotomy or 'c-section', as it is usually called.

According to Blaha, the rights of the unborn are more important than those of the mother. She said that "abortion should be outlawed, period." When questions arose from the audience on forced motherhood or pregnancies occurring from incest or rape, she said, "Something like rape is a hard case to decide on. But studies have shown that most rapists are sterile, anyway." She added, "Even so, would an abortion make it any better for the woman? How can taking the life of that innocent child help heal those emotional scars that the victim has from the attack?"

More factual evidence was given in Ms. Phillips' speech. She began, in fact, by agreeing with Ms. Blaha that abortion is not the answer for everyone. "I am not pro - abortion," she stated, "but I am pro - choice." She also said that even though some states in the U. S. allow abortions up to the twenty-fourth week (the first week of the third tri-semester), that the twentieth week is the cut-off date for legal abortions in Alabama. In addressing Ms. Blaha's comments on the danger of abortion to the mother, Phillips stated that 91 percent of all abortions performed in the U. S. today are during the first 12 weeks of pregnancy, and that an abortion is seven to nine times safer than a full-term pregnancy. She added that the chances of sterility arising from an abortion are almost non-existent during the first tri-semester. "The question is not whether we're going to end abortions. Abortions will always be with us. The question is, will our children and grandchildren have the same options as we are entitled to, or will they be forced into unwanted pregnancies?" She added that one third of all children born to teenager mothers are abused. As for Ms. Blaha's claim that since its legalization, the number of abortions have increased, Phillips stated, "The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta reported that the number of abortions increased. This is not because the number of abortions in America have risen, but because of an increase in the number of abortions reported. Before, illegal abortions weren't reported to the center."

After the speakers fielded questions from the audience, a movie about abortion was shown in another room by Ms. Blaha.

ROTC welcomes Borstorff

By CLIFF CRAWFORD

On October 19, 1984, the Department of Military Science bid farewell to Colonel Archie Rider and welcomed its new Professor of Military Science, Colonel Allan Borstorff. Colonel Borstorff, a 1959 graduate of Indiana State University, comes to Jacksonville State from Heidelberg, West Germany, where he was assigned to the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations at Headquarters, U.S. Army Europe.

Colonel Borstorff, a native of Corry, Pennsylvania, was commissioned through ROTC as a Field Artillery Officer in 1959 and has had a variety of assignments including tours of duty with the 82nd Airborne Division, Special Forces, and the 1st Cavalry Division in Vietnam. High level assignments include duty on the Army staff in the Pentagon and at the Military Personnel Center. He is also a graduate of the Command and General Staff College, the Army War College, and the NATO Defense College in Rome, Italy.

Some of the awards Colonel Borstorff has received during his career include the Silver Star, the Bronze Star with two oak leaf clusters, the Meritorious Service Medal with one oak leaf cluster, the Air Medal, the Purple Heart, Vietnam Cross of Gallantry, and the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

When asked about his expectations of his new assignment, Colonel Borstorff said, "I am looking forward to becoming a part of this university and the community.

Colonel Borstorff's wife Patricia, and daughters Kimber, a sophomore at Jacksonville High School, and Julie, a fourth grader, reside in Jacksonville.

Colonel Borstorff commented on the future direction of Army ROTC at Jacksonville State University. He said, "I feel ROTC is producing a first-rate young lieutenant. The ROTC graduate today is better prepared to meet the challenge of today's highly technical Army than I was in 1959. JSU enjoys a reputation for producing capable and motivated young officers, a trend I would like to see continued.

When asked what he thought made an Army career attractive to young men and women, he mentioned advancement opportunities, the challenge of complex and diverse job assignments, and particularly the opportunity to assume real leadership and management positions immediately after graduation.

In reflecting upon his own career, Colonel Borstorff said, "The opportunity to assume responsibility and to work with and monitor the progress and growth of young soldiers has been my greatest reward."

He added, "While military service in the Officer Corps is not for everyone, those individuals who are ambitious and dedicated can find innumerable rewards in the military."

JEWISH, CATHOLIC STUDENTS MORE LIKELY TO SMOKE MARIJUANA

Univ. of Florida Prof. Brian du Toit's study of 9th and 12th graders found Jewish and Catholic kids are the most likely smokers, with Episcopalians the least likely.

NORTHERN ILLINOIS ADMINISTRATORS TAKE OVER STUDENT PAPER

Staff hostility led to a walkout to protest Northern Star Editor Mark Bonne's reign. When advisor Jerry Thompson refused to hire more students to replace the strikers, Bonne published a nearly-blank edition to protest Thompson's control.

NIU President John LaTourette then intervened, giving the journalism school control over hiring at the paper.

ALL-MALE HARVARD CLUBS KEEP WOMEN OUT, AND MAY LOSE THEIR STATUS

Harvard says it may soon disassociate itself from the nine social clubs that recently voted to continue barring women.

"The issue is whether the university should be connected with groups that practice discrimination," explained Jake Stevens, a student on the College Life Committee.

The U. Miami kicked its all male Iron Arrow Honor Society off campus in 1983 after the society voted to keep barring women.

I.R.S. EASES OFF SPORTS BOOSTER RULE FOR 90 DAYS

Pressured by well-heeled campus sports contributors, athletic departments and Sen. Robert Dole, the Internal Revenue Service has agreed to junk its new rule eliminating tax deductions for donations to college sports programs.

The IRS will hold an administrative hearing within 90 days to decide whether to keep the rule or drop it.

COURT SAYS TEXAS A AND M MUST RECOGNIZE STUDENT GAY GROUP

The New Orleans federal court ruled the university was violating the gays' first amendment rights by refusing to grant them official student group status for the last eight years.

The university says it may appeal the decision.

Reagan wins poll

By JAN DICKINSON

Results of the SGA straw poll conducted Thursday, November 1, were released the following Friday. According to SGA Senators Greg Spoon and Andy Goggans, even though the voter turnout was light (less than five percent), the results indicate that students here vote for the person, not the party.

Out of 329 votes cast for the presidency, 65 percent were for Republican incumbent Ronald Reagan while Walter Mondale garnered only 35 percent. "Even though there has been a lot of talk about how Reagan has hurt higher education with his budget cuts, it looks like students voted for him anyway, said Spoon. Goggans added, "Many students have seen how Reagan helped the nation's economy and voted to continue his policies."

If the race for the U.S. Senate seat was decided by JSU students, Howell Heflin would keep his seat by a margin of 89 votes. His Republican challenger, Albert Lee Smith, received 35 percent of the votes to Heflin's 65 percent. Goggans theorized on the mixed Democratic-Republican vote, "I think the reason Heflin won is because Smith comes on as too conservative."

SGA-ICC blood drive

Fall blood drive a success

By JAN DICKINSON

The Fall Blood Drive, held in the Montgomery Building on October 30 through 31, topped the goal set by the sponsors, the SGA and the Inter-club Council.

Tamela Houston, president of the ICC, said that the goal of 500 pints was topped on Wednesday, October 31. "We had 577 pints promised, although only 525 pints were received." She explained that fifty-two people were deferred, "Because of their weight or because of the medication that they were taking." She added, "Even though 525 pints were received, the Red Cross official tally was 577, since that many people at least tried to donate."

According to Houston, the top three organizations were as follows: First Place, Alpha Tau Omega and the ROTC tied with 82 pints; Second Place, Alpha Phi Omega Service Fraternity donated 35 pints; Third Place, Phi Mu Alpha Music Fraternity donated 19 pints.

Houston commented on the success of the drive, "I feel that the blood drive was a huge success. The Anniston Red Cross Volunteers were a great help, as well as the advertising given to us by WLJS and The Chanticleer."

Organizations that helped run the Fall Blood Drive are Alpha Phi Omega, Alpha Tau Omega, Alpha Xi Delta Sorority, Art Guid, Beta Beta Beta, Computer Science Club, Delta Chi Fraternity, Delta Sigma Theta, Delta Zeta Sorority, Geography Club, ICC, International House, JSU Student Nurses, Kappa Alpha Fraternity, Nursing 100 Class, Phi Mu Sorority, ROTC, SGA Senators, Sigma Nu Fraternity, Wesley House Foundation.

Houston said that she hoped that the next blood drive, probably to be scheduled in the spring, will be an even bigger success.

"Participation by the students was great," she added.

Series announced

By GREG SPOON

Who says there cannot be a "cultural" movie series in this area? Well, until recently, that has been the case, but the situation is changing.

Of course, hundreds of movies are playing, but they are all run-of-the-mill seen everywhere.

Anniston and Jacksonville movie-goers and Litchfield Theater manager, Ken Potochi have booked five films that will begin showing and run through March 1985.

According to Steve Whitton, one of the organizers, subscriptions are being sold for $20 which includes admission to the five films plus one first-run film of the subscriber's choice with the cancelled subscription card as the ticket.

Whitton said that each film will be shown three times for the subscribers' choice. Saturday and Sunday at 4 p.m. and Tuesday night (TBA) are the times listed to date.

At least 100 subscriptions must be sold for the series to be a success. If this series is a success, then another will probably be scheduled.

The line-up for this maiden series is as follows:

—"Careful, He Might Hear You" is an Australian film about a child custody battle. The story focuses on a pre-teen boy who lives with an aunt; a bitter family struggle erupts when his biological parents attempt to reclaim him. "Careful, He Might Hear You" will be shown Nov. 10, 11, and 13.

—"After The Rehearsal," stars Erland Josephson, Ingrid Thulin and Lena Olin. Directed by Ingmar Bergman, "Rehearsal" explores the relationship between an aging actor and his daughter, with much of the dialogue centering on the deceased wife - mother. Bergman's most recent — and possibly last — work as the Academy Award-winning "Fanny and Alexander." "After The Rehearsal" is scheduled for Dec. 8, 9, and 11.

"And The Ship Sails On" is a film by Italian director Federico Fellini that tells of a voyage to bury a famous opera singer at sea. Billed as Fellini's "comment on war and humanity," the film is set during World War II. It is planned for Jan. 19, 20 and 22.

"The Return of Martin Guerre" is a highly regarded French film about a returning war hero. It is scheduled for Feb. 23, 24, and 26.

"The Bostonians," the most recently released film of the series, is the film adaptation from what is generally considered to be Henry James' liveliest novel. The movie stars Christopher Reeve, Vanessa Redgrave, Madeleine Potter and Linda Hunt, who won an Oscar for her supporting performance in "The Year of Living Dangerously." The story revolves around a 19th Century triangle involving two young women and a man and their involvement in the women's suffrage movement. "The Bostonians" is scheduled for March 23, 24 and 26.

The film selection was determined by suggestions made by those who attended the "Greystoke" presentation and by availability of movies. Whitton said future selections, if any, will be determined by suggestions made to the organizers and by requests that can be submitted in writing at the theater box offices.

Gerald Stern

Poet Gerald Stern, author of four books, will be on campus November 12 at 7 p.m.

Stern visits JSU

By JAN DICKINSON

The internationally-known poet Gerald Stern will be on campus Monday night, November 12, to present some of his poetry. The reading will be at 7 p.m. in Room 23, Ayers Hall, in the basement of the new addition.

Stern teaches at the Writer's Workshop at the University of Iowa, probably the top creative writing school in the nation. He is currently serving as the Writer-in-Residence at the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa.

The author of several books of poetry, Stern's Lucky Life won the amount Poetry Prize in 1977 and was a National Book Critics Circle nominee. In 1981, another of his books, The Red Coal won the Melville Award from the Poetry Society of America.

His newest book, Paradise Poems, is available at the JSU Bookstore. According to Dr. George Richards of the English Department, Stern will be available for an autograph session for those who bring a copy of the book after the reading.

"We know that the 12th is a school holiday," stated Richards, "but there are no conflicts with night classes." He added, "Hopefully, more people will come." Richards stated that the reading is free and open to all interested people. "I'm sure that the faculty and students will want to come, since it's not often that someone as well-known as Stern comes our way." Any further questions should be directed to Dr. Richards, Room 209, one Center.

Bob Kelly to hold workshop

By WILLADEAN MCMURRY

Bob Kelly, makeup designer from New York will be here as part of the Alabama Theatre Festival, Friday, November 9.

Kelly is one of the two most important makeup designers in the country. He is a manufacturer of theatrical makeup and wigs.

Kelly has designed the wigs used in the movies "Godfather" and the play "1776." His perfect blending of 40 gradations of makeups led to the color change from white to black of Godfrey Cambridge in "Cotton Comes to Harlem." The wigs used in "The Doctor in Spite of Himself" are Kelly's wigs.

Kelly was makeup designer for NBC during the critical days of pioneer color television. He bridges the theatre, television and movies. The makeup required for the three areas of entertainment are all different.

Kelly will do a makeup demonstration using someone from the audience. The different techniques involved in making someone look old, look beautiful, or attractive will be a part of the demonstration. The program will be in the Studio Theatre, Room 338 at 1:30. It is free to the public and anyone may attend.

BCM recognized

The Baptist Campus Ministry at Jacksonville State has earned national recognition for being the number 10 school in the nation in the number of Summer Missionaries serving last summer. The top nine schools were all Baptist-related schools, which made the JSU group the number 1 group at a non-Baptist college.

Summer Missionaries are students who give ten weeks of their summer to serve Christ in various places around the world. They conduct Vacation Bible Schools and Backyard Bible Clubs, survey to find unchurched people, help establish new churches, carry on a Christian witness in resort areas, and do inner-city mission work, to name only a few areas of involvement. Students from JSU served in Bangladesh, Alabama, California, Delaware, Florida, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, New Mexico, New York, South Carolina, Texas and Wyoming.

Students have already begun signing up for Summer Mission service for the summer of 1985. Persons interested in more information in this program can get it at the Baptist Campus Center.

'A nation that is afraid to let its people judge truth and falsehood in an open market is a nation that is afraid of its people.'

---John F. Kennedy

Personally Speaking

Mondale said it

The time is eleven p.m., November 6. Walter Mondale, defeated presidential candidate, has just made his concession speech. He touched our hearts at times, but an outstanding element remained evident. That element was that we are a democracy and the people have spoken. Mondale was not elected and no matter whether we do or do not like the fact, we must now begin to work toward prospering for another four years.

Both candidates, Mondale and Ferraro, worked hard to try to win the nation's highest offices. So did Reagan and Bush, but they were re-elected and did not have to go before the nation and concede.

Mondale graciously and tactfully accepted his loss Tuesday evening. His running mate Geraldine Ferraro did likewise. She too spoke of the need to work together rather than apart.

The rooms were filled with emotion as the defeated candidates made their remarks. All of the mud slinging over issues and accusations about character were buried, at least for the time being, Tuesday night. The thought, work together for a common good, nevertheless, prevailed.

THAT CONCEPT is important on the national level, but it is just as important on the local and state levels. Several candidates for various offices were on the ballot along with the Presidential hopefuls. Those judges, board members, and others elected must now be ready to assume their offices and work for the betterment of their state and communities.

SO MANY AREAS which need solutions exist in our society today. Problems as large as deficit spending to problems as small as a garbage pick-up are all important. Our elected representatives have the responsibility to represent our views and work to resolve the problems we see. They too must cooperate with each other in order to get results. As the old saying goes, "You scratch my back and I'll scratch yours." goes a long way—sometimes too far.

The concept of cooperation can be narrowed even further to this campus. Generally, students work together but the cooperation is not as cohesive as it could be.

Every week, several organizations on campus present worthwhile programs and seminars which are open to the public. They are not usually well attended. Nothing is more distressing than presenting a program and having only a small handful in attendance. We should support each other's efforts to better enlighten students and make a conscious effort to attend important functions sponsored for all students.

ANOTHER AREA is that of IM sports. We need participation by all groups of students. The new IM director, Mark Jones, is doing an excellent job with the program and those who participate need to cooperate by having rosters in on time, participating in a sportsmanlike fashion, and above all, encouraging others to attend the games. When was the last time you went to watch women's volleyball or men's basketball?

So, students and faculty, let us now move forward. We have a "new" president who will try to do his best for us. With the cooperation of Congress, he will try to get legislation through which will benefit us all. We have a new senator, a new circuit court judge, new school board members, and the list goes on. These people wanted their respective offices and now they have them. The ball is in their court to prove we voters made accurate choices.

REGARDLESS OF YOUR own personal view and preference, join the rest of us who want a better America for all to be proud to call home. Let's get together and stay together—four years is not an eternity, even for those who were "defeated."

Commercialism takes over our fair community

By JANET PARNELL

Progress is the natural outgrowth of a society on the move. The progression of a society brings its inhabitants knowledge, technology and, supposedly, a better life. As in all things, however, there is a negative side which, if not kept in check, could possibly destroy all the good.

Commercialism is the case in point here and Jacksonville, like most other small progressive towns, is becoming over run with it. Fast food has a place in this world, but why does it seem that all their chains are based on Pelham Road? Whatever happened to the wide open spaces and the quaint little town of Jacksonville that first drew some of us here? Well, at least the square is intact enough to give the old-timers and the newcomers a taste of the past.

The condominiums being built behind the Pete Mathews Coliseum also seem to be out of place in this small quiet college town. Condos belong on ocean front property and on mountains overlooking rolling landscapes—but here? This is commercialism at its best—managing on a business basis strictly for profit.

Granted, there is not much one can do to stop the growth of a town and one probably does not want to - money talks. Something has to be said, though, for the towns of yester year that sustained themselves without the gaudiness of being money hungry. Of course, a town is not meant to remain stagnant, just be a little more judicious in its progression.

Commercialism has also taken control of stores, naturally. Veteran's Day, Columbus Day, Christmas, etc., are all free game, but that is not the issue so much as the "Absolutely Positively Last Sale" sales. Advertisers must think all consumers have vegetables for brains. Remember such sales as "our manager has broken his foot, all merchandise must go "or, my favorite, "Our brokers have declared us bankrupt and everything has to be sold this week." But, of course, their week lasts on into the next year. Going bankrupt must pay off.

Holidays, as a result of pre-holiday sales, are being taken over by commercialism. The prime example of this type of commercialism is Christmas—the day we rejoice and celebrate the birth of Christ and the day retailers sit back and count their money. Somewhere in between the act of giving and the act of receiving, the latter seems to have won out. There is nothing like the anticipation of waiting to see someone's face when he opens your special gift. The past few Christmas seasons, however, I have observed the sheer commercialism of the season; how important it is to have the biggest and best tree, the best wrapped presents, the most expensive gifts for the lowest price—but this comes with the territory. What about seeing Christmas decorations in October?

How can one even begin to get into the Christmas mood when the temperature is 80 degrees, the ghosts have yet to haunt and the turkey is in frozen slumber. There is something to be said for early shopping—but come on....

As Rev. Jesse Jackson said on Saturday Night Live, "the point is moot." Progress breeds commercialism and commercialism is here to stay for better or worse. Let us hope that the town will grow as others do but not so much as to hinder its beauty—the beauty of each day and the beauty of the past. Perhaps even advertisers will one day give due credit to consumers—now... Growth can be positive; we just hope the negative side of commercialism does not destroy the good.

Vote

Age, education are factors

By ANDY GOGGANS

Two of the major factors in voter turnout are education and age. Statistics have shown that in general, of all major categories of voters, the lowest percentage of voter turnout is among the eighteen to twenty year olds. And in addition, the less schooling an individual has the less likely he is to vote.

Perhaps the most important factor of the voter age ratio is that the older you are, the more likely you are to vote. People under thirty-five and especially under twenty-five have a poorer turnout record.

This in effect, means that the older people of this country are controlling the policies that the younger people will have to live with. It is not just a four or an eight year term, but rather the decisions of that administration which will carry over for many years to come.

Apathy among these groups must be curtailed. A major function of government is to redistribute wealth, yet those with a large stake in the government do not vote.

There have been several attempts to encourage voter awareness, yet none have seemed to work to a satisfactory degree. Tuesday's election was probably one of the better turnouts to date among voters of all categories, so maybe the trend is reversing and people are becoming aware of what the role of government in their lives is.

Library survey represents some 63 classes

By RENEE SWAN

Recently, a survey was taken by The Chanticleer from the business and education colleges and home economics and music departments to determine the amount of use that the faculty makes of the library for assignment and personal use. Ninety-six surveys were distributed. Fifty-one members responded, representing at least 63 classes. Mrs. Sylvia Malone, of the English department, also gave an interview. The percentage of response by the colleges were as follows: 18 percent of the business college faculty, 30 percent of the college of education and 5 percent of the home economics and music department.

According to the survey almost all of the business courses require extensive library use, sometimes up to twenty reading assignments and possibly one research paper per semester. The college of education was found to make extensive use of the library by requiring research for lesson plans, literature reviews, summaries of professional articles, term papers, research reviews and evaluations, and reading cards on professional journals. The types of assignments naturally depend upon the class in which a student decides to enroll.

Mrs. Malone said, "I have my students use the library occasionally in my advanced speech classes. My debate classes use the library for research on their subjects. In my English 102 class, there is a research paper which requires a great deal of use of the library."

The home economics department reported that students were expected to turn in reading cards once each semester on assigned topics, and the music department requires numerous essays and listening assignments.

In some areas of business, especially in the periodical line, the library was thought to be inadequate. The college of education would like to see more material relating to special education, more medical journals, and more graduate level materials.

In the survey, the home economics department expresses a desire to have more material available in the library because their field is so widely distributed in subject matter that it is thought to be inadequate in many areas.

When questioned on the shortage of materials in all of the areas surveyed, Dr. Thomas Freeman, Director of Print Media, and Dr. George Whitesel, Assistant Librarian, seemed surprised at the criticism expressed by the faculty. Dr. Whitesel said, "This is the fourth largest academic library in the state. I wasn't aware of the shortage of material, since, the faculty did not express their need. I am always delighted to serve our faculty." In fact, Dr. Whitesel explained that he uses standard guides and lists to order for his department and he welcomes faculty members to come in and select from those lists the selections desired if they would only take the time. He further stated that whatever the faculty orders they usually get unless it is so outrageously expensive that it becomes unobtainable to the library because of the limited budget.

Mrs. Miriam Franklin, the acquisitions librarian, revealed figures on books ordered by the faculty and the books ordered for the library by the librarians. A summation of the four departments surveyed are as follows: the business college requested $3,423.95 of new material but the library ordered for that department $29,122.14. The college of education requested $1,393.77 and the library ordered $15,091.67. The music department requested $1,830.00, and the library ordered $3,740.03. Likewise the home economics department ordered $90.00 and the library ordered $1,657.08. Mrs. Franklin feels that in some cases the colleges order so little that it is difficult to know what they need to fill the gap. "They send over so few requests," she said. "We get 'junk' mail which actually are advertisements from publishers for books. We send it to each department approximately once every two weeks for them to make their selections. All they have to do is initial the advertisement. When they make a request we try to honor every one we get. We also regularly send cards which have reviews on them for the faculty to select from. Each department has a box on the wall in which to place their selected orders. In many cases cards are sent back because they have been ordered by someone else in the department or they are already in stock at the library.

"In the special education field much of the material is listed under the R's (9th floor) medicine, and under the B's (2nd floor) psychology," stated Mrs. Franklin. Perhaps the faculty is looking for the material in the wrong place. It seems, all in all, that books are not the problem in the library for students to get their assignments from, but there is a definite lack in the periodical line.

Every 10 years every college and university has to go through an institutional self study for accreditation purposes with the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. J.S.U.'s was completed in December of 1982. In that study, information was published on holdings of books and periodicals in the library. J.S.U.'s library has many indexes that students use to try to find information on their subjects, but it was found that they become frustrated when periodical literature is not to be had in this library.

"In the Business Periodicals Index, there are 305 magazines listed, and the library takes 119, only 39 percent of these magazines. The Business Index, a machine with a tape that is updated every month indexes 788 periodicals of which the library takes only 171—a mere 22 percent of them listed. These are strictly business publications," quoted Dr. Martha Merrill.

Of the Music Index, approximately 14 percent is subscribed to and the Education Index 70 percent. More magazines have been added to the business indexes in the past few years on the rapidly expanding fields of computer science, management, marketing and communication, but J.S.U.'s library has not added to the periodical collections as it should have. This gives the college of business a legitimate reason to complain about the periodical department.

Granted, budget must be taken into consideration but according to the results from a faculty questionnaire, it showed only 53 percent of the faculty approved how the amount of money was allocated for the purchase of periodicals, and when questioned 87 percent of them really did not understand how the funds are allocated, and for that matter, neither did the library staff.

According to some library sources, the average-subscription price is $54.97, a 9.4 percent increase over last year. Although this seems high in some cases, it is not much more than the average price of a book. Periodicals can be purchased in other ways, such as in microfilm or microfiche, but students have trouble with equipment. This was another point made on the survey, and also in the University self-study report of 1980-1981 which was completed for the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, a regional accrediting agency. The standard that was used to measure the Berries, The Hobbit, In Search of the Snow, In Search of Excellence, As A Man Thinketh, One Little Boy, and A Walk Across America. In addition to these selected few mentioned, self-help books, mysteries, and how to improve your reading skill books were high on the lists.

"Ways in which I use the library in my survey courses, in order for students to read a variety of works by an author, I assign selections of works to groups of students who read them and then report on those works," stated Mrs. Malone.

The way our faculty stimulates reading interests among students, according to the survey, is by the

"According to ACRL standards, the best way to assure library quantity is to control it at the point of input."

the library is a standard that was published by the Association of College and Research Libraries (A.C.R.L.), a division of the American Library Association.

"According to A.C.R.L. standards, the best way to assure library quality is to control it at the point of input through vigorous discrimination in the selection of materials added to the collections. Faculty and library staff attempt to insure quality by discriminating in their selection of materials." This quote is taken from the Self-Study but as it stands now, the "major priority is on purchasing books." So, if you're looking for the more current information which can only be found in periodicals—look elsewhere. This is a problem even though we are the fourth largest academic library in the state.

Another problem approached by the faculty is that a copy machine is needed on each floor for the convenience of everyone. Change should not be too much of a problem since a change machine is centrally located on the fourth floor, along with the only two copy machines. Students expecting to make copies generally have change with them or could stop off on that floor to get change before proceeding to their work. It is generally felt among faculty and students that prices could be lower per copy since at other universities, such as Auburn, copies are known to be only .05 each. When questioned on this matter, Dr. Freeman seemed to think that it may be possible to put in more copy machines, but a change in price would be questionable since the machines are leased and not purchased by the library.

The faculty revealed that their reading habits vary in interest. Some read on an average of 75 to 100 books per year, but the average among them is 3 or 4.

Some of the books highly recommended by our faculty for students to read are The Bible, The Feminine Mystique, Jonathan Livingston Seagull, The Nuts Among reading-reporting method, discussing, referring students to interesting material pertinent to classwork, quizzing, quoting, quoting book reports and referring to current developments so students will search for knowledge in order to make up their own minds about issues instead of being programmed on how to think.

Mrs. Malone said, "Although I would have to say that I use the library only occasionally, I think it's a valuable source and one which the students should use."

Almost all the faculty and librarians feel that our library is not used enough. One faculty member eloquently expressed his feelings on this matter in this way, "I don't think the library is used enough in most cases, but generally the classwork is so demanding that there is really not enough time to do so. I find that most students look on the library as a place to 'Xerox' an article...and results, I think, in graduating students who are awfully narrow, (the term) specialized-technicians more to the point. Unfortunately, that is what society values in occupation (narrow, specified jobs that are fragmented) and what employers are willing to pay for. Increased specialization more and more of less and less seems to characterize most fields of study. This is true of all fields...The net result is that most students who use the library use it primarily for their field and this doesn't enhance any sort of well roundedness. Perhaps more interdisciplinary approaches to some courses structured around many types of readings could overcome the trend toward educational specialization. The library, as is, certainly has the resources for such approaches."

The faculty unanimously feels that a good working relationship with the librarians is essential and they feel, for the most part, that they share this comradeship. According to the faculty, most librarians are extremely helpful and friendly when called upon to assist them.

Letter to the editors

Carnes appeals to students for support

Dear Students,

I am writing this letter in response to the poor crowd support that has been shown at our ball games over the past year.

Let's look at the facts, our football team is 4-3-1 but still has a chance to win a share of the conference championship and a 6-3-1 season.

Our basketball team missed by only a few points making the final four our gymnastics team won the women's national championship and the men came in third. The baseball team had their usual outstanding season.

Fact is, nobody is asking you to support a losing athletic program. Other schools would lie, cheat, and steal to have our program.

When I was a freshman at J.S.U. in 1980 I did not go to anything except the football games. I was just there.

Sooner or later I just drifted to the side and didn't enjoy many of the assets of College life, maybe I thought it was below me to be part of the rah-rah part of college life. I missed out on a lot of fun.

The fact that I still live in Jacksonville, as I always have, has allowed me to have a second chance.

I participate anytime I get a chance. I'm just wondering how many of you will go back to your hometown and have the second chance to be involved in this part of college life? Not many I'm sure.

So don't miss out on this fun and regret it later. Jax State athletes need and want your support, and they deserve it also.

Sincerely, David F. Carnes

Split the Dark in Leone Cole tonight

By WENDY EDEN

"We stuck to a smaller concert because of the money and time involved," said Student Government Vice-President Renee Lupa.

SPLIT THE DARK and special guests FAIRWEATHER SAILOR will appear tonight at 8:00 pm in Leone Cole Auditorium. The bands, which are described by Lupa as "pop-rock copy bands," are Birmingham based and well known on the local bar circuit. SPLIT THE DARK, who already has a loyal following, is made up of members of HOTEL and features Lolli Lee, exMORTALS singer.

Come join the fun at Leone Cole tonight 8:30.

"We don't have the market for these kinds of bands (top name)," said Lupa.

This concert is the second of the three planned by the SGA in conjunction with the Miller High Life Rock Network. Lupa added that the Senate had voted against securing SURVIVOR due to the sizable amount of money involved, but moved to begin negotiations with JOHN CAFERTY AND THE BEAVER BROWN BAND. Cafferty declined the offer to schedule a Birmingham club date on Friday.

"We don't have the market for these kinds of bands (top name)," said Lupa, who has been working with a promoter out of Birmingham on the December concert. Lupa added that bands such as the KINKS and CHAKA KAUN can cost up to $15,000, which is 323 dollars more than the SGA has been allotted for entertainment this year.

Lupa said she would still like to take a shot at getting a headliner band for December's concert, although, many bands are unavailable due to recording or taking holiday breaks. SAM HARRIS, of "Sugar Don't Bite" fame, and winner of best male vocalist on "Star Search," is an example of an affordable and available performer. As for the survey taken earlier in the semester, Lupa said that those bands are just not around.

The concert tonight will be $2.00 with student ID and $3.00 for general admission.

Auburn's "Rashomon" presented at ACTF

By MARILYN POWEL

AUBURN—Rashomon, a play based on the stories of Japanese writer Ryunosuke Akutagawa, will be Auburn's entry in the 1984 American College Theatre Festival, Friday the 9 at 8:00 pm. This dramatic mixture of serious literature and comedy was written by Fay and Michael Kanin.

Adding much that is strictly original, the Kanins' play is the story of a murder and rape told in different versions by four people. The fascination of the play is in the complete plausibility of each of the stories in relationship to the known facts—and their direct contradiction with each other.

A priest, a wigmaker and woodcutter discuss a court trial that has transpired that day as they await the end of a storm under the Rashomon gate. In this trial, three stories have been told which have completely baffled their listeners. Which is to be believed?

As the three travelers talk of the testimony, the stories are acted out by the main participants. First the bandit, with bravado, tells how he raped the wife and killed her husband. Then the wife tells her story, and finally, through a medium, the murdered husband recounts his tale. The events, and the images of the participants in-involved, change with each new testimony.

The enigmatic question arises among the trio of storytellers: who is telling the truth? Is the bandit a coward, or has he killed the husband in a fair fight? Is the husband a man of courage and fortitude, or is he a spineless milksop?

There would seem to be no answer, until one of the travelers admits that he was hiding nearby and saw the true incident as it happened. His story concludes the play by exposing all three of the previous stories as fabrications created by the participants in order to idealize themselves.

Eric Ferguson, a junior theatre major from Brewton, will be seen in the role of the bandit. Melanie Klopfenstein, a freshman English major from Panama City, Fla., will play the wife. Chris Wilson, a third year architecture student from Charleston, S.C., will play the murdered husband. The play will also feature performances by Fiona Stewart of Auburn as the wigmaker, Brad Roberts of Huntsville as the woodcutter, Danny Davidson of Tallahassee as the priest, Lynne Hatcher of LaFayette as the wife's mother, and Lisa Ellenburg of Decatur, Ga., as the medium. The cast also includes Leigh Hays of Virginia Beach, Va., Beth Jones of Birmingham, Rory Powers of Auburn and Kristan Ivey of Horton. "Rashomon" is under the direction of Cleveland Harrison with costumes by Lois Garren and set designs by Jonathan Walker.

"Rashomon," will be presented by Auburn University Friday night at 8:00 p.m. in the Ernest Stone Performing Arts Center. Admission will be $2.00.

Cyndi Lauper wants fans to have fun

By RENEE SWAN

Excitement was at a high at Boutwell auditorium in Birmingham on Halloween night when Cyndi Lauper was scheduled to appear together with her warm up group the Bangles. After being entertained for a rousing forty five minutes by the Bangles, an all music female rock band, enthusiasm was brought to a halt by the dullness of more taped music as is played before any concert. Patience was not one of the crowd's virtues while waiting almost one hour, packed shoulder to shoulder-like sardines in a can. Lauper's fans began to chant, "Cyndi, Cyndi, Cyndi..." The heat was so bad in the auditorium that several of her admirers passed out on the spot while others gave up their cramped quarters for the chairs outside the stage area.

Finally, Lauper dressed in a bright pink gown made her flashy appearance, and the crowd went wild. The crowd, who came dressed in every costume imaginable, since it was Halloween night, forgot their discomfort and joined in the singing with, "She bop- he bop- we bop- I bop- you bop- a they bop, be bop-a lu she bop." This all sounds like the conjugation we've heard in an English class, but in reality it's part of one of Cyndi's earlier hits, "She Bop. Among her other hits performed were Money Changes Everything, "When You Were Mine, "Time After Time, "Yeah Yeah, and her newest release, "All Through the Night" which is doing well on the charts now.

She has her speakers arranged in block fashion enabling her to climb on top and perform her exhilarating dances. The energy she exerted was endless and was generated throughout the crowd during the whole concert.

Cyndi has made the statement, "People used to throw rocks at me because of the clothes I wore; now they ask me where I get them." Yes, she's unusual with her close-cropped, blond hair on one side of her head and long hair on the other side, sprayed bright red-orange on the top of that. Lauper's gaudy costume jewelry, unusual hair style, and obvious talent. As she made numerous efforts to shake the outstretched hands of her audience, it was clear that she had everyone in the palm of her hand. Cyndi's style may not appeal to everyone but her concern for her fans was genuine and people loved her for her warmth.

Fans cheered, danced and sang as she came back on stage to do an encore of her most famous hit "Girls Just Want To Have Fun." It was a good night for Cyndi, and many of her fans expressed their enthusiasm by hoping she would return to our area soon.

"The Doctor" dishes out dose of satire

By WENDY EDEN

Like a scene out of the THREE STOOGES JSU's drama department literally hit the stage last week with the 17th century satire The Doctor in Spite of Himself, by French playwright Moliere.

No, the line delivery of the cast could not be compared to the Moe, Curly or Larry, but the display of physical slapstick and breast pinching did seem abusive at times. Yes, this could be taken as a prudish observation, but even for most people raw sex has its limits.

The opening was centered around Le Theatre Magnifique, a group of wandering players, who were preparing for a performance in a west French village. The prologue, which showed just what kind of person wandered throughout the country side delivering entertainment, was written by Dr. Wayne Claeren, Associate Professor of Drama, in order to lengthen the original, Le Medecin Malgre lui. Claeren was not only successful in lengthening the play but also in setting the slapstick mood that would continue with full force throughout the dialogue.

Once the wagon had been draped in a background cloth and a curtain hung from two columns, the play was ready to unfold. Martine (Lisa Waugh) is a worldly wench intent on setting her gambler husband, Sganarelle (Ross Perry) straight.

This plan is activated when two travelers seeking the aid of a doctor stumble upon the home of Martine and Sganarelle. Through a specified amount of coaxing and a few impressionable lies, Martine convinces the two men to seek Sganarelle for advice, but warns them that it may take a stick to beat the drunken man into confessing his abilities.

Through threat and money Sganarelle "chooses" to become a physician.

The individual, Sganarelle has been paid to cure is nobleman Geronte's (Jeff McKerley) speechless, virginal daughter, Lucinde (Lori Bridges). Unbeknown to the elder Geronte, Lucinde has chosen to lose her speech to save her from marrying anyone but her suave Leandre (Eric Traynor). Sound familiar?

The meat of the scenes is carried out by a Mae West rendition of Lucindes' 17th century, nursemaid Jacqueline (Kim Correll) and her jealous husband, Lucas (Steve Green), who spends most of his time prying Sganarelle off his wife's body. Douglas Toman and Randy Reese also add a bit of comic relief to the monotony of the last scene as French aristocrats. Harlequin (Celeste Pincince), and Trivelino (Traci Gibson), however signified the period of time the most through their between acts demonstration of juggling and tumbling.

The set for the play was a bonus treat. The menagerie's colorful wagon, complimented the town's deep brown columns, and worn redwood tiles common to the period of time. The actresses' costumes, under the design of DOUGLAS John stetz, were wonderfully ornate and catered to the fancy of many of the male viewers.

Overall the production of The Doctor in Spite of Himself was slow, but entertaining and a break for those students who took the time out to enjoy some "home grown" entertainment. And what about Lucinde and Leandre? Why even in the 17th century France, plays have happy endings.

Food blues blown away in cookbook

By WENDY EDEN

On Campus Cook book: For the Non-Kitchen Cook; By Mollie Fitzgerald; Workman Publishing, New York; $4.95.

Let's face it. There comes a time in a dorm dweller's life when Saga or any other fast food franchise is just not going to hit home. So how do you cope?

Mollie Fitzgerald, an undergraduate at Duke University, thinks she has the answer to those cafeteria food blues. It's the On Campus Cookbook: For the Non-Kitchen Cook, a book dedicated for those people who have nerve enough to try creative hotpot cooking.

Fitzgerald basically monopolized on a problem faced by most college students. The lack or abundance of college food. The book in its own right is an alternative to walking to Jack Hopper when its raining, getting in the car for a 2:00am snack, starchy food, and not eating when you don't feel sociable. In otherwords a Godsend.

The hotpot is not the only cooking utensil dissected in the guide. Other utensils that serve well, but may be illegal in JSU dorms, are the blender and the toaster oven. We all know, however, that with a little experimenting, popcorn poppers can do wonders.

According to Fitzgerald "essentials for your dormroom kitchen" are divided into four categories. The first, utensils, includes knives, bowls, aluminum foil, plastic bags (especially good in Alabama), and paper towels to name a few. The second, food staples, covers salt, pepper, Bisquick, chicken and beef Bouillon cubes and onion powder. The third, refrigerator items, adds butter, cheese and lemon juice. Finally, the fourth, specialty items, consists of those items such as pickles, and whole wheat bread, that are not a necessity.

Another fact the twenty year old author stresses is the need to buy in

Drummers pound way into second

By MARTHA RITCH

The drumline of the Southerners took a sixteen hour bus ride to Ann Arbor, Michigan, Saturday for the sole pleasure of competition. After a rained out marching exhibition in Newnan, Georgia, the members of the drumline packed up a bus and headed to The University of Michigan for the Percussive Arts Society convention and competition.

Last year the line tried their talent for the first time. PAS was held in Knoxville and they returned from Tennessee a bit disappointed after receiving seventh place out of eight entries. This year they had reason to celebrate as they achieved a score of 88.67 and came in second only to North Texas State University.

In between regular Southerners practice, the drumline sneaked in hours of rehearsal time for this competition. Their show consisted of three combined solos and a difficult drill. Glen Carter, section leader, wrote the first two solos and arranged the last one. Visuals and drill designs were added in at various stages of practice by every member of the line.

Other drumlines involved in the marching drum competition of PAS were Michigan State, Western Illinois, Miami University, and Southeast Louisiana.

Judges Jim Campbell, Tom Hannum, George Hattendorf, Ralph Har-dimon, and Bill Woods watched for effects such as coordination, performance quality, musicianship, creativity. Jacksonville's best features seemed to be musical and technical demand as they scored very high on these areas and received positive comments from almost every judge. The snares and tenors were particularly noticed and termed "aggressive" and "phenomenal. In fact, the praise was so high that it would seem as if the judges were too busy being entertained to criticize.

The long trip to Michigan was covered in just two and a half short days. That, along with the wear and tear of rugged practice, took its toll on each drummer. However, the experience gained and their near victory was well worth the struggle.

Besides the competition, there were exhibitions and clinics to see. Although it was a hurried trip, they had about two free hours to walk around and gather all sorts of percussive information.

Since The Marching Southerners never have the chance to go up against any other college marching bands, there is a special pride that goes out to the drumline, not only for representing Jacksonville State in competition but also for coming home in second place.

small quantities, save every aluminum foil pan and plastic containers, and by all means take advantage of "doggie bags." This is where as Fitzgerald puts it "the three I's-imagination, improvisation, and ingenuity" come in handy.

The book is devoted to sections concerning breakfast and brunch, appetizers and anytime snacks, soup, main courses, vegetables and salads, desserts, and drinks. Other items are quick breakfasts, open-faced sandwiches, food for picnics, baked potatoes and a grand finale dealing with "ambiance, atmosphere, and aesthetics."

With this in mind and a list of recipes that include egg cups for breakfast, egg salad and quickie cheese puffs for lunch, and every kind of chicken imaginable for dinner, the student cook is ready to begin. 'Good ole country boys': friends for years

By TERRIE CARPENTER

The setting wasn't exactly what one would picture when he thinks of a personal interview:

At the table—Grant, cramming down two ham sandwiches and hurriedly tossing out fun facts about his past, since he was late for work already; and, on the couch—his best friend, David, trying to pick out "Sweet Home Alabama" on the guitar and to remember how long the two had been friends. But, since the two subjects for this feature stay so busy, I had to catch them on the run.

Actually, this could be called a double feature. I was asked to interview someone who deviated slightly from the typical coed image, but, as one might well imagine, I couldn't find only one such individual. Instead, I found two best friends who would probably describe themselves as, "just good ole' country boys trying to get an education." The two are David Bryant and Grant Nichols, both juniors at JSU, and, if David remembered correctly, have been friends since second grade.

David and Grant grew up in a small town called Heflin, Alabama, about 24 miles southeast of Jacksonville. Together, they took advantage of all that country life had to offer them: hunting, camping, four-wheeling, fishing, country music, and riding around, to name a few favorites. David especially likes to talk about the time they dragged a 200 pound deer out of the woods. Though outdoors is their favorite place to be, the two divided their time among several other activities, which are where the most obvious differences in them can be seen.

Grant, the more serious of the duo, has concentrated most of his time on academics. This effort earned him the honor of class salutatorian his senior year in high school and a Faculty Scholarship from JSU. He also worked part-time for Spring Valley Farms, Inc., where he learned all about the chicken business, an industry he is considering as a career.

David, on the other hand, has spent a majority of his time developing his remarkable singing talent. This talent earned him the baritone part in a gospel quartet. The Oak Level Boys, as they call themselves, are well known in this area and have even sung on a cruise ship in the Bahamas. David sang with the group for two and a half years, but had to give it up this year when he began working on his major.

When the two are asked why they came to college, it quickly becomes apparent that the decision wasn't made eagerly.

Grant has concentrated most of his time on academics. David, on the other hand, has developed his singing talent.

The transition to college was a major change in lifestyle for them, but they know it was necessary in order for them to obtain the goals they've set for themselves. Their freshman year particularly was the most trying, as they commuted 48 miles each day and maintained part-time jobs as well. Since then, they have each tried campus life and found it to be easier on them, though not quite so satisfying as living at home. A good home-cooked meal is usually all it takes to lure them back home for a night.

David Bryant (left) and Grant Nichols take time to adjust the air filter on David's car. The two have been friends since the second grade.

By now the boys are well on their way to earning their degrees and have adjusted quite well to a hectic routine. Grant is majoring in the area of Industrial Psychology and would like to land such a position in the poultry industry. David, who is a Computer Information System major, is considering a career in Tallahassee, Florida, programming computers.

Of course, life isn't all work and study for the boys. When the weekend comes, they can usually be found way back in the woods hunting the big buck or out on the Tallapoosa River, casting lines and discussing nothing in particular. They told me to be sure and include the fact that they are Christians, but, if one knows them at all, that fact goes without saying. The two were born and raised Baptists and are very serious about living Christian lives. This is evidenced by all the time they spend in church. Grant leads the choir each Sunday at Cedar Creek Baptist and teaches the high school Sunday school class. David, who attends New Harmony Baptist, also leads the choir and teaches a training union class.

Though the boys have grown into two separate personalities, each with his own dreams and plans for the future, the common interests that form the basis of their friendship will always be given top priority in their lives. Their uniqueness and vivacity make them two friends worth having.

Marriage and college

School puts strain on life

By DEBBIE GOGGANS

Attending college can be very stressful. This stress many times puts a strain on the marriages of many of the students. Married students face many different and unique problems than those of the single students. Students who are married not only have to worry about homework and tests for school but they also have to worry about a spouse and sometimes children also. Along with school work, they have to keep a household going. This is one factor that causes extra stress, because with one or both attending college money is usually low. This problem is compounded if there are children involved. Time can be another problem that married students have. There is not enough time to keep house, go to school, and try to work at a job to earn enough money to support the family. Also if there are children, they have busy schedules such as school, band practice, swimming, dance, etc. Someone has to drive them or see that they have a way to these functions.

Many times if only one spouse is in school, the other does not realize the amount of time that is necessary to do well or even pass in college and this causes stress and strain on both of the people. It would seem that for this reason it would be better if both of the people are attending school. This causes many problems also. Most of the time when both are in college, they do not have the time to give each other the help that each needs. There is no time allowed just to relax with their family without thinking about school work. And most of the time both are too busy in their own world to realize how hard a spouse is working. They do not have time to support each other in their efforts.

With the problems that married couples have in association with attending college and having a family, it is a wonder that any ever make it until graduation, but many in the past have managed to get a degree and stay married and many are giving it their best effort at the present. Hats off to those couples. Remember you are not alone.

Varied articles found on roads sidewalks

By ANDY GOGGANS

Walking to class can be a new experience each trip. This experience is the discovery of different articles found on the roads or sidewalks.

There are several sources for these articles. For instance, cars, pockets, notebooks, purses, and also unknown sources.

The first and most notably abundant are nuts and bolts that inhabit the gutters. There are also lead wheel balance weights, pieces of wiring, windshield wiper blades, radio antennas, and spark plugs. It is hard to imagine how a spark plug could be lost, but some have been.

Other common items which are lost are fanbelts, but this loss is probably soon evident to the owner.

With all of these things falling off, it is easy to imagine someone's car progressing a few miles up the road and disintegrating in the middle of the highway.

Still, the items that give rise to the most wonder are those that "fall off" and are not mechanical parts. For example, hats could blow out a car window, even gloves could fall off a driver's hands. But what about shoes? Did some jogger or hitch hiker "blow a shoe" and when it could not be repaired, discard it? A belt raises questions also, but what about one leg of a pair of pants, mind boggling, huh? The vision of a person with one trouser leg full length and the other ripped off just below the pocket is too much. The delicate question of where the lady's under garment came from is better left to the imagination.

While the recent repairing of the roads has put a temporary halt to the collection of articles, it should not be long before the fine art of watching "fall off" is revived.

'KWIT' helps smokers stop

By KELLY WILLIAMS

Research has found the risk of death from smoking-related diseases drops by half in ex-smokers five years after they quit and just about disappears after fifteen years.

In an effort to encourage and help North Alabama smokers to begin trying to quit, local chapters of the American Cancer Society are promoting several activities this month in connection with the "Great American Smokeout, November 15.

On November 14, at 9:00 p.m., Channel 25 will broadcast "Breathing Easy, a public television production aimed at teens but designed to be helpful to smokers and nonsmokers of all ages.

On Smokeout Days, branches of the Central Bank of Alabama throughout North Alabama will be designated "Crisis Centers" with "survival kits" containing quitting tips, headless matches, smokeout buttons, and information on cigarette smoking and lung cancer.

Those trying to "kwit" smoking may call the national "Kwit-Line" at 1-900-210-KWIT for a one minute message on the virtues of not smoking. Callers will be billed fifty cents.

People are encouraged to "Adopt-a-Smoker" on Smokeout Day. The object is to stay with that person and encourage them to stop smoking or reduce their nicotine intake.

For more information about lectures and events on the Great American Smokeout Day, Nov. 15, contact your local American Cancer Society.

Marketing self is important

By SANDY FORTENBERRY

Marketing is a career that demands a self-starter strong in initiative, energy, creativity, and action. These are characteristics employers seek when insisting on "experience" and here are some ways to get that experience.

Everyone has relatives and friends in business. Offer to do an appropriate consulting job for them free and work on whatever marketing problem they have.

For example, one senior offered his services to a friend who had opened a mail-order, computers-at-discount business. Without charge, the senior rewrote and redesigned the firm's ads. Then, through "role-play" he taught the friend telephone techniques.

When mail-orders drew 100 percent higher responses an phone sales jumped, the senior got his "employer" to write a recommendation letter detailing the marketing results of the consulting. That marketing "experience" later helped the senior get an excellent job.

Another way to get experience is to approach sales representatives, offering to open new sales territories solely on a commission basis.

Look at college life to locate situations where you can demonstrate marketing talent. Through your job or organization, are there opportunities for you to start, create, improve, or do anything that would demonstrate marketing ability? This is "experience" you can stress your resume and in interviews.

Typical marketing jobs include direct sales, sales management, advertising, sales promotion, market research, customer service, and telemarketing. Marketing offers good career opportunities for individuals with drive, desire, and an ability to deal with people. Use your creativity to get the experience you need.

For more information on marketing careers, come by Career Development and counseling Service, 107 Bibb Graves.

SPORTS

Can J'ville spoil it for Troy State?

BY STEVE CAMP

As the old phrase goes, the Jacksonville State Gamecocks have "all to gain and nothing to lose" in Saturday's battle with arch rival Troy State.

On the other side of the coin, the entire season for the Trojans rides on this contest.

With a victory over Jax State, Troy would lock up its first Gulf South Conference title since 1976 and its first ever NCAA Division II playoff birth.

Joe Hollis was a coach on Troy State's last championship team and the Jax State head coach would like nothing more than to spoil that treat for his old friend and coaching rival Chan Gailey.

"All you have to do is look at the stats..., says a cautious Joe Hollis, "we're in a unique situation.

"Our kids will be playing 'lights-out' against Troy. I'm worried though about us having enough ammunition to win the football game.

Troy State is a "power" football team. They simply line up and bowl over their opponents every week. Their record is 8-1, the only loss coming at the hands of North Alabama when the Trojans suffered five turnovers. The score was still close at 13-10.

Behind an offensive line which Chan Gailey terms as simply "out-standing, the running game is the nucleus of the Trojans' wishbone attack. Troy averages just under 340 yards and 26 points per game.

"Troy is the most complete football team we will have played this season," says Hollis. "They aren't very fancy on either side of the football because they don't have to be.

"Defending the wishbone is a challenge because of the dive-quarterback-pitch threat on every play. Usually you're locked into man-to-man coverage on the wide receiver making you vulnerable to the pass.

If there is a crack of any sort in the Trojan offense, it has to be in the backfield. Starting quarterback Carey Christensen went down early in the season leaving Mike Turk at the helm.

Turk was banged up last week, but third stringer Danny O'Toole tossed a pair of touchdown passes and led the team to a 31-7 victory.

Troy also lacks a people with great speed and break-away ability at running back. Says Hollis, "If they had a pair of scorpions back there, they would sure enough be hard to handle."

It was the rushing of the quarterback Christensen that did the Gamecocks in last year in Jacksonville's 42-3 thrashing down in Troy.

According to scouting reports, Troy is better on defense than on offense. They are superb against the run (less than 80 yards allowed per game). The Gamecocks' fledgling rushing game may be eaten alive.

The Trojans rattled off 31 points last week before UT-Martin made their initial first down of the game. Troy State presents a minimum of defensive sets which, according to Hollis, is the sign of a good football team.

It appears Jacksonville will be healthier for this game than they have been for any other recent contest. Offensive guard Scott Keeling will play for the first time in several weeks.

But Jax State will again be undermanned at several key positions. At linebacker, the Gamecocks are down to three players compared to the beginning of the season when they had seven at that spot.

If injuries claim any of the three, Hollis says he has no idea at this time who would be used to fill the void. The JSU offensive line corps is thin also, a situation the Gamecocks have grown accustomed to.

The bottom line: if Jacksonville is to win, it will take a minor miracle from above. But it isn't an impossibility. The fact is Troy State has a more talented football team at this point in time. But as Hollis says, "Both teams can put only eleven men on the field at the time." Hopefully the Gamecocks won't be disgraced.

Jacksonville golfers end fall season

BY JODY KERN

Jacksonville State's golf team tied for eighth place last weekend in the 3-round Dixie Intercollegiate Golf Classic held in Columbus, Georgia.

The Gamecocks shared the 8th slot with Troy State.

In individual play, Craig Stevens took the team's low-score honors as he fired a 224. Blake Smith finished with a 226, Jimmy Reist had a 228, Steve Talley a 230, and Kenny Davis shot a 236.

The tournament concluded Jacksonville's fall schedule leaving them with an impressive 65-11-1 record.

Against Division II schools, the Gamecocks were 14-1-1. In play with Div. I schools, they ended with a mark of 17-6. The remainder of their competition was NAIA and Div. III colleges.

Jacksonville will resume their golf schedule in the spring.

Livingston pounces on UNA

The troubles continued for Wayne Grubb and his North Alabama Lions last Saturday as they were upended by Livingston by the score of 35-28.

The upset victory boosted the Livingston Tigers to an even 4-4 record, and a 2-4 mark in the Gulf South Conference.

North Alabama's overall record dropped to 5-1-3, severely scarring their chances for a post season NCAA playoff birth. The contest also pushed the defending Gulf South Champions to 2-1-3 in the conference.

Tiger defensive end Mark Smith pounced on a fumble in the end zone to break a 28-28 tie. The fumble occurred when UNA quarterback Bobby Duncan was hit and forced to cough up the football.

Livingston receiver Andrew Fields caught a 10-yard touchdown pass in the first quarter. The TD catch was the 19th of the junior's career and tied him for the Gulf South Conference record for touchdown receptions.

Troy State 31
UT-Martin 7

The NCAA Division II fifth-ranked Trojans of Troy State hammered the skidding UT-Martin Pacers by a score of 31-7 Saturday afternoon in Troy, Alabama.

Quarterback Danny O'Toole hurled a pair of touchdown passes blitzing Martin early for Troy State's homecoming victory.

The win raised Troy's record to 8-1 overall and a 6-1 conference-leading mark. Martin topled to 0-6-1 in the Gulf South and 1-7-1 overall. The Trojans jumped on their visitors early. They scored four times for a 28-0 halftime cushion. The Pacers were history.

Troy added a field goal raising the count to 31-0. Martin was held scoreless until the final possession of the contest. Quarterback Trey Sikes hit Joey Morris for a 12-yard touchdown pass.

Troy comes to Jacksonville to face the Gamecocks in what could end up deciding the conference title. UT-Martin is scheduled to host the Tigers of Livingston University.

Ladies pick up two wins in weekend tournament

BY JODY KERN

The Lady Gamecocks of Jacksonville State University participated in a pre-conference tournament held last weekend in Florence at the University of North Alabama.

Hosted by UNA, the tourney was set up to make sure each team was able to play a match against every other team in the conference before the Gulf South Tournament on November 15-16 in Carrollton, Georgia.

At this tournament, the Lady Gamecocks defeated Livingston University on Friday night, 15-1 and 15-1. On Saturday afternoon, Jax State downed the University of Tennessee at Martin in straight games, 15-9 and 15-12.

Jacksonville took on Livingston again on Monday night in Pete Mathews Coliseum. Jax State beat the Lady Tigers in three games, 15-6, 15-1, and 15-4.

The Lady Gamecocks' record currently stands at 15-13 overall with a 10-2 conference mark. Jacksonville State hosts North Alabama tonight at 7:00p.m. in Mathews Coliseum.

From the stands Win or lose, it is still a war

Over one hundred thousand fans pile into the stadium on a briskly cool afternoon to see their favorite team do battle with the school's arch rival. This is what college football was meant to be.

As long as college men have competed on the gridiron, fierce rivalries, both friendly and unfriendly, have existed.

The schools in the old Northwest were probably the first to build such a level of competition. Today, those still exist. Michigan-Ohio State is more than likely the strongest in the Big 10.

Back when Woody Hayes was the coach of the Buckeyes, he had a definite philosophy. Every game leading up to the contest against Michigan was an exhibition game. The battle with the Wolverines was all that ever counted to him.

It didn't matter if his team was 9-0. If Ohio State lost to Michigan, the season was a failure.

Steve Camp

Word has it the Buckeyes' coach hated Michigan so much that he refused to buy anything while in that state on recruiting trips.

Once, during the middle of February, Hayes and one of his assistants were on the way back from a recruiting venture in Michigan when their car ran out of gas. It was late at night and they were in the midst of a driving snow storm.

The assistant coach got out of the car, got the gas can out of the trunk, and began walking to a service station about a mile back down the road. Hayes went crazy with protest. He ordered his companion to get back behind the wheel of the car.

In a driving storm, in the middle of the night, Woody Hayes pushed the automobile almost five miles until they crossed the state line back into Ohio. Then he got the gas can and walked to the nearest gas station.

That is hatred and resentment at its finest. A rivalry here in our front yard is, of course, Alabama and Auburn. On several occasions I have seen life-long friends reach the brink of a fist fight over one of these games.

For years the few publicly acclaimed Auburn fans suffered through losing this matchup year after year. But as we all know, things have changed for the fans in blue and orange.

One interstate rivalry which will be extended this coming Saturday is that between Georgia and Florida. Each year it is played at Jacksonville, Florida, which is deemed "neutral territory."

Thousands upon thousands of fans converge on the city. Many get to the Gator Bowl as early as Thursday morning to take part in what is known as the "World's Largest Outdoor Cocktail Party."

When the game begins, look at the throngs of fans in the stadium, multiply that by two and you have the number of people who will be sitting out in the parking lot watching the contest on T.V. and having "tailgate" parties.

Though The "Dawgs" have owned this battle over the past few years, Gator fans pile in every season hoping this will be the year the drought ends.

Texas and Oklahoma make a big spectacle out their contest each year as well. The event is so large that Texas holds its state fair on the weekend of the game. It carries as much hatred as the Michigan-Ohio State game.

Rumors have it that Jacksonville State once had a stiff rivalry with a team from the southern end of Alabama, but by the looks of things around here, those rumors are that. Between the football game and the "battle of the bands, Jax State and Troy State have a lot to be fighting over.

When I came here, beating Troy State was the highpoint of this school's football season. But after the Gamecocks got trounced 42-3 last season and the lack of support thus far this year, it may be just another game in Snow Stadium come Saturday night.

What will be very embarrassing for this institution is if Troy comes up with their four or five thousand loyal fans and outnumber those at the game pulling for the home team.

Regardless of what the expected outcome of the contest is, Jax State people should show up in the name of pride. If not, the home team may be cheered and jeered right out of their own stadium.

As I said before, rivalries have been around as long as football itself. It is an aspect of the game which keeps the interest in the sport at a healthy level. By the way, does anyone have tickets to the Georgia Tech-Georgia game?

Bowen flip flops during his Jax State career

BY WENDY EDEN

Even from a distance the red Lightning Bolt flip flops and Beach appearance give away the fact that Idral "Bo" Bowen, senior center for JSU's football team, does not call Alabama home.

He, in fact, wasn't sure of what he was getting into when he accepted his full scholarship to the university in the Fall of 1980. "I had heard of it before and had seen the newly built fieldhouse and weight room," laughed Bowen, who as an offensive guard and tackle at his Florida high school, had been offered scholarships to such other schools as Western Carolina and Brown University. Those schools, however, were "too far north" to appeal to someone from Delray Beach.

That Fall Bowen, along with three other high school buddies Jim Ryan, Tom Costigan, and Tom Dawkans, made the trek inland to JSU. Upon arriving Bowen was switched to center position to help fill in vacancies. "I knew the plays and was versatile," added Bowen, who volleyed between offensive positions. 1980 was both Bowen's first year and the year JSU made it into the first round at the NCAA Playoffs against Cal Poly SLO in San Luis Obispo, California, under the coaching of Jim Fuller.

1981, however, was not a good year for Bowen when it came to football. Problems with the cut of his tuition scholarship led him to quit and try his hands at other sports and playing for the Saga Bandits. Wrestling part of his freshman and sophomore year led him to a third and fourth place position in the Midsouth conference, but it didn't take Bowen long to decide to return to football.

"I came back the next year to prove to myself I could still play. It was the following year that I decided to get serious," said Bowen. He went on to complete the two football seasons without any aid, and helped the team in 1982 make it to the second round of the NCAA Playoffs against SW Texas at San Marcos, Texas.

This year Bowen believes he is playing his best ever. "I've gotten my weight down, I'm a better person and I'm dedicated," said the twenty two year old player, who is now specialized in the center position and goes in to "win for himself and the team." Bowen does agree that it has been hard getting used to a new coach. "I might not get the new plays down at first, but I use my intelligence to get them done," commented Bowen.

Bowen also believes that the team is doing much better than some people expected. "I guess in a few years the team will be awesome," laughed Bowen, who explained it was hard teaching an old passing team how to run.

Jacksonville's game against Middle Tennessee, this year, proved to Bowen he was back in the game. Receiving an 80 percent grade, Bowen was named the Most Valuable Player offensively, which according to the senior, was the "high" of the season.

Injuries have been the one thing plaguing Bowen's game this year. His bad ankles, which in the past have been taped, require that he now play with hightops.

Despite a stint with crutches, the help of weekly treatments, knee braces and playing with extra padding under his shoulder pads, have kept him on the field.

"Coach Skidmore has been a great help in keeping me going in the last five years, since I'm injury prone," observed Bowen, who described Skidmore as remaining constant in a changing season.

With this season being Bowen's last, the senior player says most of all he will miss the camaraderie of the offensive line. "I've been pretty close to Bo Lloyd, Jim Burkhalter, Scott Keeling, Ron Domian, Howie Johnston, Jeff Schatz and Pat Money. We have a special bond and are very supportive of each other. I guess you could call us brothers," said Bowen. One point, however, Bowen was quick to add, was he is still very much Florida oriented. "They never got me to chew tobacco, or wear cowboy hats or boots," laughed Bowen, who swears to wearing flip flops in the snow.

Bowen, who anticipates graduating in December of 1985, is excited about finally becoming a "real student" after this last season; however he adds that he will be "one of those guys in the backyard and playground, playing ball." Still unsure of what he will end up concentrating in, Bowen is currently in the General Studies program.

He is glad that JSU is where he decided to play ball. "I liked the change, the mountains, the teachers and the people. It's just a big high school," said Bowen

"I liked the change, the mountains, the teachers, and the people."

"Anyone who says he's bored here just isn't looking. There's a twelve story library over there I'd like to visit, blood drives, and a Sociology club," In the past football has taken up to forty hours a week of Bowen's schedule with practice, treatments, games and Sunday night films.

It's a thirteen hour drive home for Bowen, and because of football he doesn't get to go back home. He misses the beach and scuba diving but there is something here he has been wanting to do for some time now. "You know those mountains?," asked Bowen, "I've been wanting to climb them, and I think now I'm finally going to get to

"OFF THE WALL." It's a kind of fabric that's very new, very now. To be exact, it's distressed 100% cotton canvas. It's soft and relaxed, with a kind of broken-in feeling that you won't find in regular denim. It has a neat, new look, too, that shows off lots of texture. It's ruggedly tough, yet fashionable at the same time!
