Board drops land issue

By JAN DICKINSON

In their regular meeting this past Monday, the Board of Trustees decided, among other issues, to drop all land condemnation proceedings against the Wellsley-Edwards family.

At their April 27 meeting last year, the Board instructed the university to begin court condemnation proceedings after the Wellsley-Edwards family declined the school's offer to buy the 160 acres. Most of the property in question is located across from Pete Mathews Coliseum on Highway 204. The use that the University had planned for the land was for the relocation of the College of Occupational Technology, as well as a possible site for a larger auditorium.

According to Jack Hopper, administrative assistant to the president, the reason given by the Board for dropping the court case is that it would be in the school's best interest. "It's a dead issue, he added.

Also on the agenda:

★ Discussion concerning bids for the school's new telephone system - a project that's estimated to cost near $1.5 million

- ★ Discussion of a fundraiser for the College of Education
- ★ News of the two committees appointed in the search process for a new Dean of the College of Humanities and Director of the International House
- ★ The appointment of a committee to list priorities for renovation and new construction of facilities on campus
- ★ Formal introduction of new football head coach Burgess to the board and commendation of the basketball team's achievements
- ★ Update of the school budget now awaiting legislative action

Also discussed was the refinancing of a loan the University made 18 months ago when WJSU-TV was purchased. According to Hopper, the initial loan was for three years, and now a long-term refinancing of that loan is needed.

The next regular meeting of the trustees will be late in June.

Author featured at dedication

JACKSONVILLE-Nationally known psychologist Jim McConnell, author of the best-selling textbook "Understanding Human Behavior," will speak at Jacksonville State University April 11 at 10 a.m. in the auditorium of the new psychology wing at Ayers Hall.

McConnell's address, on the challenges of teaching freshmen, will highlight the dedication of the new psychology wing.

The public is invited.

McConnell, who has been profiled in People, Omni, American Psychologist and other national publications, is known for his unique, sometimes controversial approach to teaching.

He originated the famous experiment in which plankton were taught to swim a maze. The worms which succeeded were ground up and fed to other plankton which were then also able to swim the maze. He later published "Worn Runners Digest," a satirical magazine on science, for 20 years.

McConnell, professor of psychology at the University of Michigan, believes in making learning fun. He asks his own students to call him Jim (saying "that 'Doctor' stuff is bull), urges them to phone him at home as late as 3 a.m., and provides his textbook free of charge. The flamboyant McConnell guarantees his students As if they do the required work and Incompletes if they don't.

Outstanding students honored by Sociology Department

Each year, to encourage scholarship and academic excellence, the Department of Sociology recognizes its best students through an awards program. Those judged the Outstanding Student in their field for the academic year 1984-1985 are Richard Smoot, Candy Riddle, Aubrey Gillis, and Mary Vandagriff.

Students chosen for this honor are nominated and voted on by the faculty and are selected on the basis of scholarship, (the minimum requirement being an overall GPA of 2.0 and 2.5 within the field), service and character. One student is recognized from each of the four components of the Department of Sociology--anthropology, gerontology, social work, and sociology. Awards are given yearly, unless no distinguished candidates are forthcoming.

Named as Outstanding Student in Anthropology for 1984-1985 is Richard Smoot. Richard's interest in classical archaeology began several years ago while he was living in Turkey. With an overall GPA of 2.36 and a 2.80 in anthropology, he plans to enroll at Auburn University this fall to pursue a program that will enable him to become an architect.

Candy Riddle is the Outstanding

Student in Gerontology for 1984-1985. Candy has compiled an overall GPA of 2.16 at JSU, with a 2.66 in the department. Her interest in working with the elderly can be traced to her strong family ties. In a sense, her college career is shared with her great grandmother, who was herself

MORE SCHOLARS SNUB TEACHING

A sharp drop in the number of Rhodes Scholars and Phi Beta Kappa members who are choosing to teach could be big trouble for colleges by 1990.

As more faculty members reach retirement age, fewer scholars to take their places will mean a shrinking talent pool to fill faculty vacancies, say researchers Jack H. Schuster and Howard R. Bowen of California's Claremont Graduate School.

MICHIGAN STATE STUDENT EMPLOYEES MUST PROVE IT OR LOSE IT

Some MSU student employees got letters instead of paychecks last week as the university tried to tighten controls over pay procedures.

Randomly selected students had to appear at the university administration office in person with identification to get their paychecks.

"We have no proof anything is going on but the internal controls over student paychecks are weak," explains audit director Robert Wenner.

Auditors hope the controls eliminate "student payoffs" and payment to students doing little or no work.

Deadline given

By GREG SPOON

The deadline for submitting applications for the editorships of the campus publications and the directorship of the radio station is approaching. Those persons wishing to apply for the editorship of THE CHANTICLEER, MIMOSA, and PERTELOTE and for the directorship of WLJS should submit their credentials to the respective advisors by 4:00 pm, April 4, 1985. Applicants must have at least a 1.0 grade point average.

The following information, quoted from the Communications Board Constitution, should be noted by those applying: "The Communications Board will screen, examine, and appoint the editors of student publications which includes THE CHANTICLEER, MIMOSA, PERTELOTE, and the director of the radio station...Faculty advisors for all four publications will examine all applicants for editorships and the directorship.

Students applying must be enrolled for at least twelve hours to be eligible to be considered. Candidates must list their name, class standing, GPA, and related experiences on the application.

The advisors are responsible for narrowing the number of applicants to two for each position. The Communications Board will vote for the editors and director from the two finalists, following the interviews.

All candidates must have at least one full academic year prior to graduation to be eligible for consideration. It is recommended that the candidates for the editor of THE CHANTICLEER complete JN303 preceding his or her appointment. The editor of the MIMOSA must have successfully completed JN304 before assuming office. The station manager must have successfully completed Radio Broadcasting 453.

Candidates will be tested and interviewed by the respective advisors after the April 4, 1985 application deadline and will go before the Communications Board on a date not yet scheduled.

'Dress For Success' Molloy 'dresses down' audience

By GREG SPOON

Dress For Success author John T. Molloy spoke to a small but enthusiastic audience Monday night at the Theron Montgomery Auditorium.

Molloy presented slides along with his speech to visually illustrate to the audience his concepts for success. He stressed that limitations are set by one's environment and that everything is meaningless unless one believes change is a positive action.

The presentation was not limited to clothing, but incorporated the importance of body language and thinking for oneself. Molloy said that most people grow up believing that what one does is more important than what one wears. The contrary, however, is true. According to Molloy, we are judged by our appearance and the garments we choose have a great deal to do with our success.

He cited an example using overcoats. Research shows that men and women who wear beige overcoats are thought to be of the upper middle class, while a blue or black coat are thought to be of the blue collar class.

Clothing sends messages to those around us. Studies show men who run America wear rich, dark suits with white shirts and conservative ties.

Women in corporate America are wearing skirted suits which project a more positive image, professionalism, dedication, and career orientation. A survey of bosses shows that the bosses want women who are effective, authoritative, and who are able to give orders which will be followed.

Further research indicates that corporate heads think skirted suits for women work because the suit projects a positive image and assertiveness. According to Molloy, Southern women who are taught to be reserved and easily intimidated have trouble dealing with the 'corporate America' image because they are not "tough" like the women of lower classes and those in larger cities.

Olympics is special for youngsters

By JAN DICKINSON

The Special Olympics Sports Festival, held March 22 through 25 at Fort McClellan, was not only a well-attended success, but also a first of sorts.

This year is the first that the Sports Festival combined bowling, gymnastics, and basketball. In years before, the events were arranged differently. In 1982, for instance, the Special Olympics was held at JSU and combined track and field with basketball in the Northeast State Basketball Tournament and Track and Field Meet. The next year, the events were divided into separately-held events, to increase participation. Last year, JSU hosted the basketball tournament while Fort McClellan held the track and field events.

Probably the most moving ceremony associated with any Olympic - the lighting of the torch and the swearing-in of the athletes - began around 7:30 on Friday night at Miller Gym. After the Fort McClellan Army band played the national anthem, they broke into a rousing version of the theme to "Rocky. The Olympic torch was paraded around the gym to the clapping of the two hundred or more excited participants. "This is what it's all about", shouted a proud parent from the bleachers. (She had to shout to be heard above the happy bedlam.)

All the athletes emerged winners, whether they beat the clock or another opponent or not. The goal of any Special Olympics is to allow the mentally retarded the opportunity to develop their skills and compete in sports - an opportunity not afforded until Eunice Kennedy Shriver came up with the idea for the games. That dream was made a reality in 1968, when only 1,000 participated. Seventeen years later, over one million athletes participate nationwide.

Trip to France planned for this summer

By MARTHA RITCH

This summer, study at the University of Nice on the French Riviera. The trip is provided by International Educational Travel in co-operation with the foreign language department at the University of North Alabama.

Dr. Max Gartman, head of the department of foreign languages at UNA, along with C.L. Simpson, foreign language instructor here, will accompany the students on the trip which will last from July 25 through August 25. Course credits are available through UNA but tuition costs are not included in the $2600 fee.

The highest quality of service will be furnished by IET. The fee covers roundtrip air fare from Atlanta, hotel accommodations, three meals a day while at the University of Nice, a free Eurail pass for one month, tours of Amsterdam, Paris, Barcelona, Rome, and Geneva, museum entry fees, private dorm at the university, trips to Cannes, Monte Carlo, and Grasse, and assistance in pre-trip planning.

For one month, students will attend courses ranging from Intermediate French to Civilization and Culture to Advanced Business French. With classes held in the mornings, there will be plenty of free time for travel and excursions during the afternoons and weekends.

A deposit of $200 must accompany the application form in order for IET to make final plans. The other $2400 must be paid by May 1. Only four places are available, so interested students should enroll now.

For more information contact C.L. Simpson in the foreign language department or at home at 435-7572.

Writing is way of life for Richards

By VICKY WALLACE

For some of us poetry is difficult enough to interpret much less write. Dr. George Richards, professor of English at Jacksonville State University, is talented in both areas and has been rewarded for his efforts. He recently had two of his poems, "Kinglets" and "Squatting in a City Parking Lot on John Muir's Birthday," and a short story entitled "Porcupine" published.

the day with her, the people realize that their very own relationships are in the same shape.

DR. GEORGE RICHARDS

Dr. Richards conceived the idea of "Squatting in a City Parking Lot on John Muir's Birthday" two years ago when he just happened to be in a parking lot and a moth caught his eye. After seeing this, he began sketching the moth on a piece of paper. Then he transferred what he had sketched into words on paper in poetry form. "...but for a moment a dirty sky, acres of tarred fields go wild."

"Kinglets" was the product of a winter time experience a year ago. He had built a fire outside and was going for a walk when he saw a trail of dead kinglets. "I stopped and looked very closely and I made a discovery ... 'ah, the subtlety of the gods: on each crown, tiny red and yellow flames.'"

His short story, "Porcupine," tells the story of a group of people gathered to help a friend whose lover has just left her. By spending

Dr. Richards sent both of his poems to Arachne, a poetry magazine published in New York, while a fellow writer sent in Dr. Richard's short story to a Memphis, Tennessee, literary magazine called Outlaw. Since literary and poetry magazines can't be found in the library or stores, you must write to them for a subscription. To write to Arachne, the address is Arachne, 162 Sturgens Street, Jamestown, New York 14701. Poems of Richards have also been published in The Beloit Poetry Journal, The Boston Review, The Greenfield Review, Salmagundi, Negative Capacity, Poem and The Laurel Review.

Dr. Richards lives here in Jacksonville with his sixteen-year-old son, Stephen, who goes to Jacksonville High School. As for his education, Dr. Richards attended Hamelles College in New York, Standord University in California, and Duke University in North Carolina where he received his Ph.D in English. He taught for two years at Skidmore College prior to his eleven years here at Jacksonville. In his spare time, he enjoys outdoor sports such as hiking, canoeing, and camping.

Dr. Richards teaches three advanced creative writing courses, along with his regular English courses. His advice to anyone who wishes to publish a book, poem, short story, or any other writing project is "find a magazine that sounds right and send it off."

He also emphasized taking courses to help discover strengths and weaknesses and what audience they appeal to the most.

Dr. Richards said that he has been writing poetry since junior high school. "I'm more interested in it now than I was in junior high school," Dr. Richards stated enthusiastically. Dr. Richards said he definitely plans to write and publish more poems and put them in a book starting minimester.

The deadline for applying for the William Calvert Scholarship has been set for April 15, 1985.

The Calvert scholarship, given in honor of Dr. William Calvert, former English Department Chairman, is awarded to a student (at least junior level) who meets the following qualifications: (1) must be an English major; (2) must have at least a 2.0 grade point average and a 2.0 in English courses.

Students who are interested and qualified should apply to Dr. Clyde Cox in Stone Center. A selection committee will choose the most qualified applicant for the Calvert scholarship and choose a runner-up to receive the English Department Memorial Scholarship.

Sponsor Corps announces pledges

The JSU Military Science Department recently announced the new Sponsor Corps pledges for the Spring Semester.

The new sponsor pledges are Lori Blakenship, Bridget Bray, Karen Caldwell, Annie Buchene, Cathy Edwards, Debbie Ellenburg, Tammy Harris, Carla Merrill, and Cathi Sigmon. As pledges, these young ladies will be very busy learning about their duties and will help with various sponsor activities.

The pledges were selected after activities which began with a reception held at Rowe Hall in February. The reception was open to all young ladies interested in becoming sponsors. The young ladies talked with present sponsors, ROTC cadets and Cadre about the sponsor program. During the week after the reception, the applicants went before an interview board comprised of the Professor of Military Science, the Cadet Brigade Commander, the Sponsor Commander, and the University's Dean of Women. Final selection was made after all board results were tabulated.

Health Fair planned

JACKSONVILLE-- Jacksonville State University's senior community health class will sponsor a health fair at the College of Nursing on Thursday, April 11, from 9 a.m. - 4 p.m.

The fair will include a number of informational displays, free tests, speakers, refreshments, and a complete blood work for $11.

Participants will include representatives from Parents Anonymous, March of Dimes, and local health care agencies and practitioners.

Speakers will include Tom Wright of Anniston, who will speak on the Crime Stoppers program, and Dr. Ellen N. Spemulli who will show a film and deliver an address on cancer.

For more information, contact the College of Nursing at 435-9820, Ext. 425.

Writing contest scheduled

Sigma Tau Delta will have its spring writing contest. The two categories are poetry and short story. A twenty dollar prize will be awarded for the best work in each category. Original works should be submitted to Dr. Gene Blanton, Room 213, Stone Center, or placed in his box in Room 228. Works must be received not later than 12 April 1985.

Social Work Day set for March 29

JACKSONVILLE - Jacksonville State University's sociology department and the Coosa Valley Unit of the National Association of Social Workers will sponsor the annual Social Work Day at JSU on Friday, March 29 on the 11th Floor of the Houston Cole Library beginning at 9 a.m.

March is recognized annually as National Social Work Month.

Kathy Sawyer, president of the Alabama Chapter of NASW, will be the featured speaker. Recruiters from graduate schools of social work at the University of Alabama, Florida State University, University of Georgia, and the University of Tennessee will share information about their programs.

The meeting will feature a workshop on current issues faced by professional social workers. Another workshop will present information about the JSU social work program.

There is no charge and the public is invited.

For more information, call JSU at 435-9820, Ext. 343.

Omega Week successful

On Monday March 18th the Brothers of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity Inc., Theta Eta Chapter held the opening of their annual Omega Week. The week opened with a semi-formal Greek mixer which was held in Leone Cole auditorium. All the fraternities and sororities on campus were invited, along with their little sisters. On Tuesday a pool party was held at the coliseum and on Wednesday. The brothers held a unique Greek show free of charge on the rock. The Ladies of Omega held their own foxy Greek show in Leone Cole auditorium on Thursday night. To cap off the week, the brothers held their annual Omega picnic at Germania Springs on Saturday afternoon. Omega week was another great success thanks to all of those who supported us.

campuses (including JSU) and has sold nearly a million copies, making it one to the top five best-selling college texts. PBS has made the book a part of one of its telecourses.

McConnell said he drew upon more than 2,000 other books to write his own, then asked his students for feedback while revising.

"Their feedback taught me that writing for introductory students is quite different from writing for one's peers. A textbook shouldn't be judged on how difficult it is to interpret. It should cater to the student. That's what teaching is all about," he said.

McConnell says he will "cajole, trick, force, coax—anything to get students to learn.

"I walked into a video game arcade recently and the kids were paying money to learn memory, hand-eye coordination and perceptual skills, and having one hell of a time. Next I walked into the library and the students looked bored and apathetic. Why does education have to be dull?"

McConnell, who holds a Ph.D. in psychology from the University of Texas, will reveal to educators how not to be boring.

unable to attend college, but who has inspired Candy to "finish college for myself and for her."

The Outstanding Student in Social Work for 1984-1985 is Aubrey Gillis. A transfer to JSU from Auburn, Aubrey has an overall GPA of 2.06, while acquiring a perfect 3.00 in his social work courses. Aubrey has been very active in work with exceptional children, both as member of the Jacksonville chapter of the Student Council for Exceptional Children and as the state Secretary for the Alabama Federation of Student Councils for Exceptional Children.

Mary Vandagriff is the Outstanding Student in Sociology for 1984-1985. A native Kansan, Mary is a wife (husband Don), mother of four (all grown), and scholar (overall GPA—2.75, in sociology—3.00). Mary is the recipient of the Sociology Scholarship, a member of Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities, a certified Montessori pre-school teacher, and an avid gardener and musician.

In addition to receiving a letter of congratulations from the Department of Sociology and an Award Certificate, each recipient is honored by having his / her name engraved on a plaque that is on permanent display on the third floor of Brewer Hall. Honorees will also be the guests of honor at the annual Sociology Awards Banquet, scheduled for April 4, 1985, at 6:30 p.m., at the Baptist Campus Ministries. The featured speaker will be Joy Turner, a former recipient of the Outstanding Student in Sociology Award and presently a graduate student in sociology at Emory University.

Molloy

Molloy went on to say that sales women who wear skirted suits average 40 to 60 percent more sales than non-skirted suit women. He suggests women wear wool, wool-look, or pinstripe suits, and silk and silk-look blouses. He also suggests that women do not wear velvet or corduroy suits.

General suggestions for men and women include not wearing garments of two patterns; men should not wear light blue suits and women should avoid purples and reds. Each of the above colors draws attention to the wearer and sends negative signals to his or her associates. Women should never wear a skirt and jacket because they present the same negative image that a man wearing slacks and a sportcoat presents.

Before concluding, John Molloy gave suggestions for what to wear when interviewing for a job. Women should wear a skirted suit and pumps. Men should wear simple striped and conservative colors in their suits as well as a simple belt. The shirt should be tapered.

People should remember that power is passed on, and leadership attracts talented people. According to Molloy, the rule of the game is to "follow the leader" and the main mistake during the first year on the job is attitude.

Molloy left the audience with a parting thought, "I (audience member) deserve a chance at the best and I will try."

Molloy's speech was sponsored by the SGA Lyceum Committee in conjunction with a career fair with the Career Development and Counseling Service.

Call for openness in search for prexy

By GREG SPOON

It would seem that the Board of Trustees, the governing body of this institution, would learn from past experiences that the public needs and demands to be kept abreast of vital decisions. At last Monday's presidential search committee meeting the press was prohibited from being present.

Much has been said about the search for the president's being an open selection process. Well, if the first substantial meeting is any indication of the "openness" we can expect, we are in serious trouble.

Even though the committee has only begun its work, the press should have been allowed to be present. To the knowledge of almost everyone, the committee did not discuss the personal character of anyone, but began laying groundwork for its selection-recommendation process. So what was the big issue about not allowing press coverage? Who knows?

Another issue which remains, or should remain, a concern is that of the lack of adequate student representation on the committee. We students will have only one bona fide student representative, in-coming SGA president Michael French, because out-going SGA president Phil Sisk will no longer be a student when he graduates in May.

Some see Sisk as a second student representative, but in actuality he will be an alumnus after spring graduation. How can a person who will leave this institution represent the student body effectively (or at all for that matter)? The number of persons on the committee is relatively set. Another student member, however, is a must. Students should express a concern for more representation in the search process because no one student can adequately represent over six thousand students. The faculty representation ratio is much lower with three members. If the student body is to have the opportunity for input in the selection process, several representatives in proportion to the enrollment and in proportion to the representation by the faculty, staff and administration should be allowed.

Before the search process proceeds much further, some serious consideration needs to be given to these concerns.

Analysis of Vietnam saddens and shames

By JAN DICKINSON

Big Brother is watching you. Or at least that's what many people say about the United States' foreign policy. Gone is the watchdog attitude toward the 'little guys' that Uncle Sam once took. Intervention in the political machinations of countries seems to be the order of the day. It seems that we would learn from our mistakes - otherwise known as the Bay of Pigs fiasco and the Vietnam conflict (remember when no one dared to call it a War?). With the ten-year anniversary of the fall of Saigon looming over us, more and more literature about Vietnam is appearing on bookshelves across the nation. So we read about "another generation's" mistakes...while Central America threatens to become another embarrassment to our new-found national pride.

Vietnam is a bitter pill, especially to those friends and relatives of the 58,022 Americans who died there between '61 and '75. It is bitter because those people can see that the policy-makers of our nation have turned a blind eye to the lessons that Vietnam teaches us. In an article in the April edition of Vanity Fair, Pete Hamill, a former columnist for the New York Daily News writes of the many lessons. "Vietnam should have taught us that mindless anti-Communism is not a cause worth killing or dying for, in a world in which Communism is hardly a monolithic force. We should have learned that in a democracy such as ours, lying is fatal, whether to the press or to the people or to ourselves. We should have learned that we can't ever talk in the flowery pieties of democracy and freedom while supporting a right-wing military dictatorship." Does this last sentence seem to apply to Nicaragua? It should.

Even if Reagan justifies our nosing into another country's problems, he should pause for a moment to consider the long-term history and background of that country, not just events that have taken place in the last decade. Once again, Hamill succinctly states, "Americans should have learned that before they go barging into some remote place in the world, they must study its history. In Vietnam, the Americans were deep into the swamp before they started reading Joseph Buttinger, Bernard Fall, the accounts of the French defeat at Dien Bien Phu, the thousand-year story of the tenacious Vietnamese struggle for independence from China. Yet in Lebanon and Central America, less than ten years after Vietnam, the old

Greek system offers benefits

By STEVE WOLLSTEIN

An extremely important system which is grossly misunderstood is that of the fraternities. Fraternities have been under close scrutiny by the public at large, because a few unfortunate events have occurred in fraternities. True these incidents should not be swept under the carpet, but they should not be the sole factors the public considers in the evaluation of Greek fraternities. The vast majority of citizens have never been involved with the fraternal process, thus they are ignorant of the benefits a fraternity provides. The fraternal system supplements a college student's career by developing social graces in addition to academic training.

Every fraternity chapter is unique in personality and character. However, there are certain underlying principles that govern them all. The most important principle of any social organization is the composition of its members. The brothers are a group of young men who are bound together by a common goal, which is to strive for excellence in their endeavors. To insure that a member will understand the principles and ideals of a chapter, he must go through a training process. This is commonly referred to as pledgship.

Pledging a fraternity is one of the biggest decisions a student will ever make in college. Pledgship is a probationary period in which prospective members generally learn about the individual chapter. From the outside looking in, the public views this as a time when pledges are subjected to mental and physical abuse. Nothing could be further from the truth. If the brotherhood respected a young man enough to accept him then why would they want to subject the young man to undue harassment? Furthermore, if a rushee is sharp enough to draw the attention of the brotherhood, why would he allow himself to be put through any type of hazing? Pledgship is a time when the prospective member grows to learn and love the fraternity. After successfully completing this probationary period, the pledge is initiated as a brother in the fraternity.

The most important activity the brothers perform is the weekly meeting. The meeting is run by the executive council, which is the elected officers of the fraternity. An executive council usually consists of the following: President, Vice - President, Treasurer, Secretary, Pledge Trainer, and Historian. These individuals pool together in a think tank to establish the direction and goals of the meeting. This is not to imply that the executive council is a dictatorial power, but rather an organizational group.

The actual meeting too follows a democratic process in which every member has a right to express their ideas and cast an equally weighted vote. The purpose of the weekly meeting is to inform the brothers of upcoming events that week as well as future activities. At times the meetings get out of hand due to joking, however the basic goals established by the executive council are always accomplished. Each officer is individually responsible for a particular duty and he is required to report his progress for that week. The president does not technically give a report, but realistically the meeting is his report. The vice - president is in charge of recruitment, and he relays pertinent information such as rush techniques. Another important job is that of the secretary. It is his responsibility to check attendance and to record the meeting in his minutes. The pledge trainer also reports on the state of events for the pledges and he is the mediator between the brothers and pledges. Finally, the treasurer gives his report on the financial status of the chapter. It is important to have a competent and respected treasurer, because he is responsible for the collection and allocation of monthly dues. There is no organization that can properly function without a steady source of income, therefore it is essential to have a strong leader in this position. These weekly meetings give the brothers good experience, because they resemble the basic structure of a business meeting.

Frats develop leadership

A fraternity is a vehicle that develops leadership skills through involvement in a wide range of campus activities. The inter-fraternity council is a good example. The inter-fraternity council is a body of representatives from every Greek organization. It serves as an administrative and legislative body for all Greek organizations. The delegates learn to work with members of different organizations on various projects. The representatives learn to properly voice their opinions in a manner conducive for a professional meeting. Interaction with members of different organizations is excellent hands on training for communication skills.

A Greek organization provides the opportunity to engage in athletic events, which requires teamwork. This is a good way for students, who are not gifted enough to play varsity sports, to remain active and healthy via intramural games. Each fraternity organizes teams to compete against one another. The major intramural sports are football, volleyball, basketball and softball. The competition is fierce and the rivalries are exciting. These sports provide the members with an opportunity to get away from the books and humdrum schedule of college life.

Greek fraternities are also involved in a host of projects throughout the year. National philanthropy projects are a typical way in which fraternities benefit the community. Vast sums of money are collected by every fraternity to help worthy causes such as cancer research, multiple sclerosis and Red Cross,

Low grade averages curtail participation in many activities

By MARTHA RITCH

If they can't make the grade, they are getting booted out of extracurricular activities. In many high school districts across the nation, students are being denied the right to participate in sports, drama, band, and other non-academic programs because they can not maintain a "C" average.

The logic behind the rule is reasonable enough. Allow only upper grade students to play ball, lay out the newspaper, march in the band, and act in the play. In theory, the outcome will produce more competitive students in both extra activities and in education.

However, in practice, the theory falls short. Insisting on a "C" average forces the student to choose between either education or the extra programs which often fill the gaps academics fail to do. It's possible that the requirement would create motivation in some individuals. On the other hand, it could discourage those striving students who never quite make the good grade, no matter how hard they try. A "C" average is harder for some students to achieve than it is for others.

Should extracurricular activities be a choice for all students, or merely an honor awarded only to those who already excel? In many cases, students involved in several programs outside the classroom setting have an overall higher grade point average than those not involved. It makes more sense to stress grades and at the same time encourage students to participate in extracurricular activities.

Some restrictions should be made so that a student does not sacrifice grades for game points. There are other ways of keeping fundamentals at the top of the priority list. Punish students in other ways rather than excluding them completely from activities. No one can disagree that students are in school to learn. But there is more to a well-rounded education than academics.

Music, sports, cheerleading, student government, and all the other high school extras offer something algebra, social studies, and geometry can't. They offer experience and allow individual creativity.

Greek

just to name a few. These projects instill a sense of caring and devotion to those less fortunate. Other projects fraternities are constantly attending are National Conventions. The Conventions allow members to meet their brothers from all over the United States to exchange ideas.

These conventions are crash courses in leadership, motivation and dedication. Students from all over the nation flock to a central location for one week. Every minute of the day is devoted to the fraternity. Through lectures, conferences and films, the delegate is exposed to new concepts and ideas that will benefit his individual chapter. This proves that the fraternal system is powerful and constantly strives to achieve a higher plane of success. The seeds of learning are planted in the minds of the delegates in hopes they will return to their chapters and bloom.

The activities mentioned above give a brief analysis of the work that Greek organizations are involved with. However, fraternal life is not all work. The fraternity hosts a wide range of events devoted especially to their alumni. There are some parties designed to honor the men responsible for the existence of their fraternity. Typically it involves a banquet that honors the alumni directly responsible for that chapter's growth and development. This is a time when the brothers learn the heritage and principles upon which they were founded. The caring and dedication shown by alumni participation proves that the fraternity is a lifetime experience. Other alumni activities involve formals, which is a weekend of fun and parties, and retreats. A retreat is a time when brothers from the same chapter get together to renew their vows and faith in the fraternity. These are inspirational times that perpetuate the love and devotion to the chapter.

These assets are all tangible ones that can be seen and touched, however they only begin to scratch the surface of the true meaning of fraternity. A fraternity instills responsibility. Responsibility is a stepping stone toward success because it provides a job challenge that results in satisfaction if carried out properly. The fraternity is an excellent place for a young man to be put in a position that requires this quality. With the help of his brothers, the young man soon learns that he can set goals and that he can accomplish them. Accomplishing goals leads to self confidence and pride, which are both essential factors for success.

Success is evident

The rate of success by fraternity men is evident. Over sixty-five percent of corporate presidents were involved in a fraternity while attending college. This may be due to the fact that fraternity men have a greater tendency to graduate from college opposed to non-fraternity students. This is not to say that every Greek member will be the president of a corporation, but it proves that a fraternity is beneficial for overall success. The fraternity member is a step ahead of the crowd when it comes to knowing the right people in the right places, because so many alumni are willing to do everything in their power to help a fellow brother. Although it is beneficial to have these connections, it is not the main benefit of fraternity life.

The most rewarding experience of a fraternity is the love and respect the brothers have for one another. A scared freshman quietly develops friends in the fraternity and he begins to grow closer every day due to common interest. A young man starts to confide in another his innermost secrets and realizes that he can be natural rather than an actor. The bond of true brotherhood soon develops and this once terrified freshman begins to broaden his horizons. He learns through interaction that he must not only care about himself, but care about others. The young man soon learns that he can give and in return he will receive fruits of friendship that have never before been tasted.

Along with this growth a young man learns to react to various situations and how to deal with his problems. He learns what makes people tick and as a result he reaches self actualization. This is the point where a young man begins to lead the newer members, because he too has been in their frightened shoes. He earns the respect of the younger member and in turn he begins to lead them. This leadership skill blossoms into a positive quality that will be beneficial to him for the rest of his life.

The bond of brotherhood is strong enough to end wars, to dry tears, to mend hearts, and to soothe fears. It is the first experience that will be the most remembered for a lifetime.

Champs—how sweet the sound

By MARTHA RITCH

We are the champions! That is the understatement of the weekend. Jacksonville has known athletic success before, but never in the history of the university has the basketball team brought home a national title. That is, not until last Sunday.

After winning the NCAA Division II championship in Springfield, Mass. on Saturday night, and setting their small, and usually low keyed hometown on fire, the JSU basketball team pulled up to an overflowing, highly emotional crowd the following afternoon.

It all started somewhere around 10:30 Saturday night when, by way of radio, those fans unable to travel to Springfield (but nonetheless dedicated) roared with excitement. The game was everywhere, in homes, in cars, and serving as hosts to local parties. The mere fact that the team had made it so far was big enough news.

Everyone was prepared to be proud of the players and coaches for working so hard and making it to the final four. Of course, there was always the strong hope that Jacksonville would win it all. But no matter the outcome, the fans were going to be loyal.

When the buzzer sounded, luckily disappointment didn't follow. It was a time of celebration for all of Jacksonville.

Then, through late ESPN coverage of the game, the celebrating continued. The game was well worth missing bedtime. Even already knowing the final score didn't stop the nail biting anticipation. It was a great game, as spoken by a biased reporter.

The party started up one more time when the bus, complete with police escort, pulled around the corner of London Ave. to find a cheering crowd formed at the front of Salls Hall. Around 2:00 p.m. the University began to look like an ant hill as cars and people wandered around waiting their arrival.

By word of mouth, a small but spirited band gathered together to welcome in the champs with the fight song. Joining in with chants of "We are Jax State" and "We're number one" were students, fraternities, merchants, and faculty — literally every type of fan.

Coach Bill Jones proudly held up the trophy wrapped in the net, and before the players could think about getting their luggage off the bus, there were autographs to sign, hugs to give, and speeches to make. As tired as the guys had to be, they stuck around and ate up every ounce of attention. After all, that's what they had been playing for all along.

The street party lasted a good thirty minutes. The fans wanted to hear from everybody, and wanted to cheer and holler for each individual player and coach. It was a touching scene to witness, one that has never been witnessed in this town.

A lot of the excitement has died down, but the pride will carry on through many years.

Hastings praises team

Dear Editor:

I've only have a few things to say, and the first is "Way to go Gamecocks." Winning a National Championship for JSU will mean a lot of the University and the State.

It has been a great season and the students who supported the team really enjoyed it. (The rest of the students who didn't, well...)

Good luck to the four seniors, Bret,

R. G., Melvin and Gus. It was a great 4 years.

To the rest of the players who remain, lets go back to Springfield in '86. I'm sure Coach Jones and Hobbs have already made reservations.

And the final thing is, good luck to the Mens and Womens Gymnastics during the playoffs. Go Gamecocks. Allen Hastings mistakes are general once more; ignorance is apparently invincible, the American capacity for folly without limit.

Even without flags snapping in the breeze, without a rumbling rendition of the National Anthem that sends shivers up the spine, America still has the capacity for greatness. But the strength of a nation lies not in military force alone, but in the questioning voices of our past. It lies in the ability of leaders to read and learn of the fallacies of America's past and apply them to her future — without fear of being called un-American or pro-Communist. America must learn that the 'little guys' have feelings, too.

'Porky's Revenge' exposes classics

By MICHAEL FRENCH

Those crazy kids from the wildly misnamed Angel Beach High are back for more fun and excitement in Porky's Revenge. Returning to comprise the famed "Dirty Half-Dozen," are Dan Monahan as the chronically frustrated Pee Wee Morris, Wyatt Knight as prankster Tommy Turner, Mark Herrier as the laconic but fun-loving Billy McCarty, Tony Ganos as the amazing Anthony "Meat" Tupperello, Kaki Hunter as the playful Wendy Williams and Scott Colomby as the resourceful Brian Schwartz.

Also returning are those consummate "heavies"—Nancy Parsons as Beulah Balbucker and the mountainous Chuck Mitchell as Porky Wallace, the Angle Beach Sik's ultimate remesis. Newcomers include Wendy Feign as Porky's reavenous daughter, Blossom and Kimberly Evenson, Playboy Magazine September 1984 cover girl and Playmate of the Month, as a Swedish transfer student.

Dave Edmunds' "High School Nights" will be the first single released from the all-star Columbia Records soundtrack of Twentieth Century Fox's new comedy. Porky's Revenge, is an unusual collection of early rock n' roll classics recorded by George Harrison, Jeff Beck, Carl Perkins, Willie Nelson, Clarence Clemons (of Bruce Springsteen's E Street Band), The Fabulous Thunderbirds and new mystery

Pee Wee, Billy and Tommy inspect a fascinating find — a stag film — in Twentieth Century Fox's "Porky's Revenge."

Matrimony looms for "Meat" and Blossom, if Porky has his way.

"We are the world"

By MARTHA RITCH

According to LIFE magazine, it was "the world's most serious party" when performers came together for a recording session designed to raise money for the starving people in Africa.

The hit single, "We are the World," is a collaborated effort by Michael Jackson and Lionel Richie. Quincy Jones produced and conducted the event. Record stores are having a tough time keeping the record, which debuted in Billboard at number 21, in stock.

USA for AFRICA (United Support of Artists for Africa) consists of almost 50 top stars. (Some invited guests didn't show up). Of those that did, there are big names and familiar faces from each end of the musical spectrum blended together for a touching outcome.

Perhaps it is the song that lends itself to the individual performers, or perhaps it is the performers who are able to adopt the song to their own style without taking anything from the rest of the group. Either way the song is beautiful and an inspiring tribute to the poor people of Africa and America. It is hard to sit through it and not be touched in some way. Hopefully the effect will inspire people to contribute further.

All proceeds from the record, posters, and tee-shirts go to the non-profit organization of USA for AFRICA. The funds will then go towards the food and medical supply needs of the country. A portion of the money will go to the starving people of America.

It is a great cause to bring the stars together and a smart way to gain the money that is so desperately needed. The emotion flowing from the singers, as well as the time and talent put into the recording session, expresses their concern for the problem. The high sales proves the public is also interested in the cause.

The money is not going into the pocket of some already rich recording executive or performer. Many people are buying the record strictly because there is a specific cause. It is a project all the world can get involved in. And as the record sleeve states, "By buying this record, you are playing an important part in the fight to end an on going tragedy that affects all of us—because We Are The World.

supergroup The Crawling King Snakes.

Organized by Dave Edmunds, the Porky's Revenge soundtrack brings together some of the rock world's biggest stars performing cover versions of old favorites from the 1950's and early 1960's. George Harrison, formerly of the Beatles, who has not released a new recording in five years, sings a version of Bob Dylan's previously unreleased tune I Don't Want to Do It; Jeff Beck performs Santo and Johnny's Sleep Walk, Willie Nelson plays his rendition of the Elvis Presley standard Love Me Tender; rock legend Carl Perkins (aided by ex-Stray Cats Lee Rocker and Slim Jim Phantom) redoes his classic Blue

Suede Shoes; The Fabulous Thunderbirds cover Stagger Lee; Clarence Clemons belts out the theme from "Peter Gunn;" and The Crawling King Snakes, comprised of Robert Plant, Paul Martinez, Phil Collins and Dave Edmunds, perform the version of Philadelphia Baby.

Porky's new club will be a one hundred foot long three story high paddlewheeler, built by Peter Wooley from the foundation of an eight foot barge. Until the movie is released the paddlewheeler will be known as The Ship that Dare Not Speak Its Name. The inside of the ship will be fitted with gambling tables, a bandstand underneath a neon guitar, slot machines, a very risque wheel of fortune and a full bar. Hanging above everyone's heads from the second deck is a mechanical pig shaking its snout as if it is about to leap off of its platform and onto the bandstand.

Porky's Revenge promises to be another mad-cap comedy adventure. It's all out war. Plots and counterplots inevitably lead to an epic confrontation between the Dirty Half-Dozen and their corpulent arch-enemy, with many surprises along the way.

Porky's Revenge is a Melvin Simon Productions and Astral Bellevue Pathe Inc. presentation for Twentieth Century Fox release.

It's more than a four letter word

By MARTHA RITCH

Hopefully, the common opinion of jazz has recently taken a change for the better. If the term "jazz" is still a four letter word in your vocabulary, listen again, and pay attention to what is going on.

People of all ages and backgrounds are getting into the swing of things, so to speak. It was amazing to see the mixture of the crowd at a recent concert. It has always seemed easy enough to pick out a typical "jazzier." But those times have changed.

People gathered early to line up for an evening with Al Di Meola, Airo Moreira and Phil Markowitz. Most of these folks were college age and heavy duty beer drinkers. Overheard conversations further revealed the diversity of the attracted audience. Two guys with beer in hand and jazz blaring from their pick-up truck, carried on an intellectual conversation about botany. They were not rednecks, mind you, just average college students in a somewhat different setting than usual. Then there were the long-haired guys in flipflops and faded jeans discussing the latest techniques in architecture. There were some uptown dudes arriving in Mercedes, too.

It was Al Di Meola and his articulate guitar techniques that attracted the crowd. And it was Latin percussionist Airo Moreira and his million piece collection of instruments that heightened the performance. Markowitz filled in on keyboards, making the trio derive the sound of a ten piece group.

This one concert proved the reputation of jazz has changed

Di Meola is well known and respected by more than jazz lovers. His romantic musical insight attracts listeners of all kinds. His rapid fingering talent is appreciated by players in every area of the music field.

The added treat for the night was placing Di Meola together with one of the best multi-percussionists around. Moreira gets more different sounds out of a single tambourine than many drummers get out of their drum sets. He had so many "toys" to play with and attacked them with such a fierce passion the crowd never lost enthusiasm.

At one point Di Meola commented on the excitement flowing from the audience, "You can tell they are serving alcohol here."

It was true, but that wasn't the reason for the screaming, clapping, and standing ovations.

This one concert proved the reputation of jazz has changed. It is not a form of music only musicians can enjoy. Everyday, ordinary people are discovering that even music without simple words, and without a monotonous beat, can be fun to listen to.

Al Di Meola's first solo acoustic guitar album is to be released in April. Entitled CIELO e TERRA, it will feature Airo Moreira on percussion. It should be quite different from past albums where Di Meola creates a more electric sound. If the concert was a taste of what's to come, the album will be one of his best yet.

Listen for some of Al Di Meola's works on Jazz Tracks, Sunday evenings on 92J. Then maybe you can better understand the growing fascination and new outlook on jazz.

Jenkins takes another walk

In the second volume of his autobiographical travelogue, Peter Jenkins, along with his wife Barbara, continues his captivating description of our country's people and places and the qualities of both the people and places. He writes in a realistic form that is easy reading for young and old people alike. Through his writing, he gives us the attitude which he developed about our country that we can carry with us each day. He learned that our country is not a garbage heap. He found love wherever he went.

The work is a chronological diary of the people Peter and Barbara met and the places they saw on the second half of Peter's walk. Peter left New York on October 3, 1973 to find himself and his country by walking across America. He met Barbara Jo Pennell in New Orleans. They were married in February of 1976. Peter's first volume of the journey, A Walk Across America, covered the events of his walk up to the point of their marriage. The Walk West begins at their wedding and ends when they reach the Pacific Ocean on January 18, 1979.

The only evident weaknesses are in Peter's chronological ordering. Readers may tend to become bored reading his day to day accounts. The flashback technique is not used in this work. The reader is completely lost at one point when Peter reverses order from present to two weeks past. The reader is forced to refer to preceding chapters to find out the time frame to which he is referring.

The description in this book is excellent. He uses adjectives in a series and metaphors and similes to paint what he saw. He described a Colorado Rocky Mountain winter, Winter in the heart of the Rocky Mountains had nothing to do with a clock or hours. It had everything to do with winds and snowfalls.

With dreamy, warm nights in your cabin and cold-blue days when your cheeks turn red as cranberries, Through this, the reader can comprehend the timelessness of winter. He can feel the biting, stinging cold. He describes people like "Preacher" Hebert of Westlake, Missouri, a tall, dark Cajun who pitched professionally for the St. Louis Browns, and hunted alligators in the bayous. He helps us feel the depression Barbara felt when she almost quit the walk. We feel Peter's ecstasy when he finds out that Barbara is pregnant. We feel the encouragement that Milo Franks gave to the middle of the Cascade Mountains. Finally, we are made sad, just as Peter and Barbara were, when the walk finally ends.

Peter's walk is symbolic of a journey in which everyone must participate, because every person has to come to terms with himself and his surroundings. He shows us that we can overcome the obstacles that face us, no matter how overwhelming they are.

Herman offers helpful hints

By MARTHA RITCH

If you do a lot of travelling and eating out in Alabama, you might find Hungry Moore's Eating Out in Alabama helpful.

Going by the name of Hungry Herman, Moore describes over two hundred restaurants in the state. Important information such as price range, dress code, type of food served, working hours, atmosphere, and location is all included as part of his list.

The idea of creating a restaurant guide came to him while working in North Alabama at lunchtime. The place where he chose to eat had turned into a dress shop. After that incident, he decided to travel around and anonymously eat at and observe as many restaurants in Alabama as he could.

Herman's only credentials for being a restaurant critic come from working in a butcher shop for two years during college, serving K.P. duty in the army, and owning a large cookbook collection.

Eating Out in Alabama is not a review of area restaurants, as such. It is, as it claims to be, a listing of some of the places the author has experienced and his opinion of them, along with information for potential guests. Herman does make comments on his particular tastes but does not compare one place with another or one food with another.

The book lists the restaurants alphabetically by cities. Abbreviations are used in the statistical information listings which are at times confusing, but it is valuable to know whether or not a place accepts credit cards and whether reservations are needed.

The only restaurant from Jacksonville included is The Village Inn. It is described as being a favorite of students from the nearby university and being "nestled in the foothills of the Appalachian Mountain Range." Herman ends this particular entry with "The Village Inn is home style country cooking at its best." Sure, he uses creative writing in his descriptions, but they are at least accurate.

'Cocoon' unwraps soon

After viewing a rough cut of the new Zanuck-Brown production "Cocoon," Twentieth Century Fox has repositioned the motion picture's national release date from July 19 to June 21. In making the announcement, Thomas Sherak, President, Domestic Distribution and Marketing, stated "The studio's enthusiasm for 'Cocoon' is so great that we have prevailed upon the filmmakers to accelerate their post-production schedule in order to take advantage of an earlier summer opening.

"Cocoon" is currently in post-production under the supervision of producers Richard D. Zanuck, David Brown and Lili Fini Zanuck and director Ron Howard, with extensive special effects work underway at George Lucas' Industrial Light and Magic facility in San Rafael, California. "Cocoon," which completed principal photography last summer, was shot on location in St. Petersburg, Florida and the Bahamas.

"Cocoon" is the story of visitors from a distant galaxy who return to earth to retrieve a secret hidden on the ocean floor thousands of years before. Produced by the Zanuck-Brown Company ("Jaws," "The Sting" and "The Verdict," among other notable films) and directed by Ron Howard, ("Night Shift," "Splash") "Cocoon's" producers have assembled an exceptional cast that brings together talented young performers and some of this country's most distinguished stage and screen actors.

Starring in "Cocoon" (in alphabetic order) are Don Ameche, Wilford Brimley, Hume Cronyn, Brian Dennehy, Jack Gilford, Steve Guttenberg, Maureen Stapleton, Jessica Tandy, Gwen Verdon, Herta Ware and Tahnee Welch.

Cain's cars come to life as stars

By CATHY ADAMS

Her office looks like that of any other librarian, lots of books, plenty of pens, papers and plants. One would never guess that inside lurks a woman who names her cars after people and has a passion for Woody Allen films.

Linda Louise Cain, the third floor librarian, is one of the wittiest faculty members on campus. Her low-toned humor never ceases to make for interesting conversation whether it's about reference books or foreign films.

Originally from Jefferson County, Miss Cain earned her undergraduate degree here at JSU with a major in history and an minor in Sociology. At the same time she worked as a student assistant in the history department. From here she went on to the University of Texas at Austin to attend graduate school. Linda has the kind of love for Austin that only the stoutest football fans reserve for their favorite teams. "When I die, I hope I go to Austin," she said. She fondly recalled the good times spent in Austin. She and friends went to the opera, plays and to lots of movies where she claims she, "caught up on all the films I missed in a lifetime. While working at the Texas State Library, she applied for a job at Jacksonville's Houston-Cole Library. Linda says she didn't hear a word from Jacksonville for two years. Then one day she received a call asking her to come to work here so she accepted. That was ten years ago.

Linda says she likes her job though she admits she does not have a very "exciting" floor. Over the years some interesting articles have been found in the building. "I have a blah floor. I find bubblegum and that is my life."

Linda enjoys helping students with reference work. She says it is a lot like being a detective. One has to search out little bits of information from various sources then put them all together. One student located a book needed for a term paper but the title page was missing which contains information needed for the bibliography. Having processed the book a few days before, Miss Cain happened to remember all the vital information the student needed. Linda said she really gets a kick out of seeing the astonished looks on faces when she recites authors, dates, publishers, and the like. Then

People, education, law—his life

Dr. Starling is more than the average teacher

By ROY WILLIAMS

Dr. Shelby Lamar Starling, Jr., better known as Mickey, is quite a familiar figure in the College of Criminal Justice. Having been an associate professor at Brewer Hall since September of 1977, he has dedicated much of his time and energy to conveying to others a better understanding of the criminal justice system.

A former student, Officer Pearl Williams, describes him as much more than a teacher, referring to him as "an honest and caring friend to those in need, whether it be inside or outside the classroom." Having been involved in law enforcement for many years, Dr. Starling has developed several strong opinions about certain aspects of criminal justice.

Starling is originally from Montgomery, Alabama, but presently lives in Anniston. He received his undergraduate education and law schooling at the University of Alabama in the 1960's. He received his Juris-doctorate degree in 1972; and, after taking the bar examination, he was admitted to practice law in Alabama. After a few years in the legal core of the United States Army as a prosecutor and defense attorney, he came to JSU.

When asked how he decided to become a lawyer, Starling answered, "I have always liked criminal law and enjoyed the courtroom immensely-questioning witnesses and presenting evidence, establishing strategy and tactics, making objections and determining motives. I enjoy the criminal justice side of the legal system mainly because you actually get to participate extensively in the prevention of crime." Although Starling began the law practicing aspect of criminal justice, he now enjoys researching, speaking to groups, and teaching criminal justice courses more than going to court to solve cases.

Starling teaches several undergraduate and graduate courses in criminal law, criminal procedure, and other aspects of criminal justice. However, it is his course in criminal courts that is most enjoyable to him. "I enjoy it tremendously because it not only deals with the participants in the court system, but allows the students to experience it themselves. We actually stage a mock trial in which I am the judge and they serve as the defense counsel, the prosecutors, the arresting officers, the witnesses, the defendant, and the jurors. They really seem to really get a better understanding out the class," he added.

What qualities are necessary to be successful in criminal justice? Starling explained, "I think the most important quality in law enforcement is that you have to be the kind of person who likes to help other people. You are in constant contact with the public, often at times when life is least pleasant for them. Law enforcement is a service oriented profession, providing relief, not only for crime but also for social problems. Police officers are the first line in community assistance to individuals who are in need of shelter or food, who are overcome with drug problems, and those who have alcohol problems.

Starling added that other essential qualities are sound judgement and common sense. "You have to be a reasonable person who thinks things through carefully before proceeding," he said. "You must consider all the alternative courses of action and the possible results of those action. And you have to be a person who enjoys a challenge - trying to prevent crime.

Surveys have shown that Americans are becoming more and more concerned about crime in America. In fact, many Americans feel that the rate of crime is increasing more than the rate of convictions. Starling disagrees, "Official crime statistics indicate that as a whole our major crime rate is actually decreasing over previous years. But because of the tremendous increase in crime during the '60's and '70's, we are not back at what most Americans consider to be an acceptable level. And recent statistics from the Alabama Dept of Correction indicate that we are incarcerating more people than ever before; our prisons are filled up.

Why do people feel that the crime rate is increasing so much more today? Starling remarked, "It may be that our society is more aware of crime now because the media does a much better job of presenting it. Crime is front-page news; you see it every day on television and hear it on the radio. It is a newsworthy item- when someone is raped or mugged, it causes fear in all of us and we tend to worry more about crime.

Ever since the United States adopted capital punishment, arguments have arisen stating both the pros and cons of the issue. Dr. Starling mentioned that he also has mixed feelings on the subject.

"Capital punishment is an ancient concept that has been traditionally applied in certain situations worldwide," he said. "The United States is one of the few nations that still uses the death penalty, although we are very strict in what kind of crimes we can use it for - it has to be aggravated murder.

Dr. Starling noted a few of the positive aspects of capital punishment. "It does deter some crime; however it has only on isolated effect. It keeps the person who was executed from killing again, but we don't know whether it has an effect on the general public. What law officials hope is that it will prevent the hitmen who are killing for profit. And finally, it may serve as a form of societal revenge and retribution. Its often what the people want and might be better than people taking the law into their own hands.

He then listed the negative aspects of capital punishment. "Whether unintentional or intentional it sometimes has a tendency to be discriminatory it is imposed much more on blacks than whites and on men than women; it also bothers me that having a lot of money can affect the type of justice you receive. Most

Spring is in the air

By DEBBIE GOGGANS

Spring is here and with it have come thoughts of love which seem to permeate the hearts and minds of many people.

Everywhere you turn, people are longing to feel the sunshine on their faces and it is getting harder and harder to stand being cooped up inside.

Spring brings flowers, warm temperatures and cool breezes at night which rejuvenate in people, an appreciation for beauty.

This appreciation for beauty is usually followed by a yearning to share these good feelings with someone else. These desires have been termed throughout the ages by many people as "spring fever."

"Spring fever" is a disease that can spread to epidemic proportions in almost no time at all.

This disease brings about mating in many species and homosapians are no exception. Male and female mating calls can be heard and it seems that everyone is pairing off.

Starry eyed couples can be found taking evening walks, holding hands, going on picnics and thoroughly enjoying each other's company.

Yes, spring is here so if you are not already paired with a mate, never fear. Love is in the air and "spring fever" is taking its toll.

Cain

again, familiarity with the materials is part of the job.

In recent years, Linda has enjoyed traveling to various countries such as England, France, Spain and Italy. This year she sacrificed her vacation for a new car which she has named after Ingrid Bergman. She calls it Ingrid Volvo. Her old car is Nancy Ford. Not wanting to part with an old friend, she has kept Nancy to drive back and forth to work. Naturally such high caliber automobiles have character and she takes very good care of them.

However, she did take her annual four day trip to New York just after Christmas. While there she saw Lena Horne in "The Lady and Her Music" and insists that after leaving the theatre she was a definite Lena Horne fan.

She confessed that her heart throb is Jim Dale whom she saw perform in the play "Barnum." Because of her enthusiasm a friend jokingly suggested that she be chained to her chair during the show.

Being a devoted Woody Allen fan is hard on a person when the area in which they live offers so little in the more bizarre cinematic arts. When asked "What do you do for fun?" she replied, "I go to work." It must be. She's already ahead of the Russian of the defendants don't have the funds to hire top lawyers, private investigators and experts. The death penalty is often inconsistent in that not everyone who commits a brutal murder gets the death sentence. There have been cases where innocent men have been convicted and executed. And finally, I do not know if we are producing a better society by putting people to death because they killed someone I am not sure that teaches anyone not to use violence.

Starling also shared his views on the Bernhard Goetz case in New York. "I think the public is and important support group for law enforcement, but should leave enforcement of the law to professionals. I do not like the idea of vigilantism. The public should support, but not act as the police. On the other hand the public has a right to defend and protect themselves, their families, and their property. However, we must remember that a human life is more important than anything else in society and should be taken only as a last resort and then only if absolutely necessary. If Bernhard Goetz were defending himself, he was justified. We are not sure of the facts yet, so it is unclear what really happened. However, if he was stalking those teenagers and went out looking for them, he was unjustified. I really hope the public will not see this in terms of let's all be a Bernhard Goetz I do not believe he is an admirable figure.

Dr. Starling's future plans are to continue studying and teaching criminal justice; however, he would like to practice law a little more also. "I don't have as much time to devote to a law practice as I used to," he said. "But I enjoy teaching and don't think I will ever want to do anything else. I like students, in fact, I believe that we have some of the best students here. People will actually tell you when they are going to miss a class, who are very cooperative and extremely courteous about everything. Everyone associated with the College of Criminal Justice, from Dean Thomas Barker on down, is well-qualified and hard-working. This is just a marvelous atmosphere to work in.

Dr. Shelby Starling is quite an interesting man to talk to. He is a devoted family man who holds a tremendous amount of respect for the university, his co-workers, and his students. Dr. Starling's sincere dedication to justice is truly an admirable quality needed by all Americans.

The dream comes true!! Gamecocks' 74-73 victory gives them the title

CHRIS ROBERTS

The Roberts, Spurgeon and Guyton, hammered the boards. Spurgeon had 8 offensive rebounds.

BY STEVE CAMP

"It was a dream come true," declared a beaming Robert Spurgeon as a national television camera zoomed in on his 6'5" frame.

Could this be true?

Yes, boys and girls, you can open your eyes now. You haven't been dreaming.

The Jacksonville State Gamecocks defeated South Dakota State University, 74-73, Saturday in Springfield Mass. and are basketball's Division II National Champions.

Trailing by seven points, 71-64, with only 2:07 remaining in the game, Jax State found a way for one more bit of magic. Two minutes and five seconds later, senior Earl "Gus" Warren canned a pair of freethrows and the celebration began.

"We always find a way to make things happen at the end," said an emotional Jacksonville head coach, Bill Jones.

"Winning wouldn't have meant the same if we hadn't done it like we did," said Jones' chief assistant, James Hobbs.

But for the Gamecocks, this season was win, win, win, no matter how they did it.

The title game gave the Gamecocks their 31st consecutive victory and a 31-1 record. Barring whatever happens in the two Div. I tournaments, Jacksonville has the longest current winning streak of any college basketball team in America and will have the best record will all divisions combined.

Simply put, the Gamecocks refused to quit, ever. It was that tenacity that won the ball game and stunned the Jackrabbits of South Dakota State.

Even ESPN's sceptical commentator Dick Vital was impressed by the Gamecocks.

The Gamecocks saw a first-half lead of nine points slide down the tubes in the second half. But they regathered themselves and came roaring back when the contest hung in the balance.

Going into the title game, Jax State knew what they would first have to do if they were going to rejoice afterward - stop the Jack's 6'8" center Mark Tetzloff who had scored 32 points the night before.

They didn't stop him completely, but they did get South Dakota's top scorer into foul trouble.

When Tetzloff left the contest on foul elimination in the final two minutes, the Jackrabbits never got off another field goal attempt until Mark Schultz' meaningless dunk at the final horn.

After controlling the boards in the opening half, Jacksonville's downfall started on the glass. In the final half, SDSU controlled the rebounding and the game for most of the 20 minutes.

It is no wonder that senior guard

Melvin Allen led the Gamecocks (20 points and Vital's "All-Blur" Team). But it was the inside play of Robert Spurgeon and the freethrow shooting of Earl Warren that made the final difference.

Spurgeon pumped in 15 points. But the Cedartown Ga. junior's biggest contribution was nine rebounds, eight of which came on the offensive end.

After getting only three points the night before, "Gus" Warren came alive at the foul line on this night. Warren had 13 points, and was 9 of 10 from the charity stripe.

Pat Williams' 12 points and tough defense cannot be overlooked either.

South Dakota followed Tetzloff who totaled 21 points on the evening. Schultz added 14 and Derrick Wordlaw piled up twelve.

Jax State appeared to be in control in the first half. Robert Guyton hit a jumper to make it 5-4 in the opening two minutes and the Gamecocks never trailed again in the first half.

But Jax State could never put SDSU away, despite a nine-point cushion at 29-20 with 6:55 remaining before the break. The Jacks kept hanging around and cut the advantage down to 40-35 at the half.

Jacksonville saw their lead dissolve like ice in hot water at the beginning of the final period. South Dakota opened with four points and was banging on the door, 40-39 with 18:50 to play.

(See CHAMPS, Page 23)

Abbott's men wade through schedule

By MARK HOPPER

When it rains, it pours. If you don't believe it, just ask Coach Rudy Abbott and his Gamecock baseballers. The past week proved disappointing to the team, who lost 5 of the last 9, dropping their record to 10-11-1 on the season.

Despite the string of losses, the Gamecocks do possess several bright spots. Rightfielder Robert Duncan ignited his bat against Kalamazoo, Michigan, in a 17-2 victory for Jacksonville. Duncan hit a pair of homeruns, 2 grand slams in 3 days, and drove in 8 of his teammates to secure the win. The following day against Sanford, Duncan went 4-5 at the plate, picking up 3 RBI's to give him 25 on the season, tying freshman Stewart Lee who also has 25 for tops on the team.

Outfielder Philip Braswell has hit extremely well for the Gamecocks this season. His .430 batting average leads the team.

The Gamecocks began a 4 game series with Shorter College Tuesday, March 19, and lost the first three contests before regrouping to trounce Shorter 17-2 in the final game of the series.

Action improved for Jacksonville as they swept Kalamazoo 8-0 in the first game of a twinbill and banged out 11 hits, led by Chris Garmon with a perfect 4-4 outing, to take the nightcap 12-2 in action at University Field, Friday.

Saturday the Gamecocks traveled to Birmingham for a single game with Samford University. Senior Jay Stephens had an excellent outing for Jax State allowing 4 hits and striking out 10 to earn his second win of the year as Jacksonville rolled to an easy 8-2 victory. Hitting star Duncan was 4-5 with 3 RBI's.

Sunday Jax State played host to Big 10 Conference power house Ohio State Buckeyes for a 2-game series. Coach Abbott commented before the game "Ohio State came down last year and beat every team they played by 10 or 12 runs. They will probably have the best team we'll face this year, along with Auburn."

Ohio State used a walk, wild pitch, and 2 singles to score 2 runs in the seventh inning to take a close 6-4 victory Sunday afternoon.

Bill Lovrich gets the "high-five" after scoring a run for the Gamecocks.

From the stands Just one of those kinds of years

If you had told Bill Jones before the season started that his team was going to win 30 straight games, go 19-0 against Gulf South Conference teams, win both the outright race and the tournament in the GSC, walk into the final four, own the longest winning streak in all of America, and win the National Championship, you might have seen him laugh.

But four months after they picked up a ball for the first practice, the Gamecocks accomplished all of that. It was just one of those kinds of years.

Steve Camp
Sports Editor

"It's been an emotional and physical high. The players set a goal back when we were nine and zero that they were going to go undefeated in conference play. I thought that was a bit lofty. But hey, what do I know," asked a smiling Bill Jones back before the conference tournament.

After they lost to tiny Belmont Abbey, who would have thought Jax State was even worthy of their No. 2 national ranking.

But this team was special. They believed in themselves as individuals and as a unit, and that's where they drew their strength from.

"Losing to Belmont Abbey was an embarrassment," said Keith McKeller back when his team sported a 15-1 record. "We will be glad to play them anywhere, any place, anytime. We'd do about anything to get another crack at those guys."

But as the wins began to pile up, you could see a Big Red Machine in the making. The Gamecocks proved time and time again they could blow anyone off the floor.

Then came the conference schedule. When they went to Valdosta and Troy and won easily, you knew something was up. When they hammered UT-Martin and North Alabama, we didn't get excited - we had come to expect that from the Gamecocks.

But all this time, a monster lurked on the horizon, that being Virginia Union, the No. 1 Division II team in the land.

The talk began to travel like wildfire. "Can Jacksonville really play with a team like Virginia Union?" we asked ourselves and each other over and over again.

While Union was getting all the publicity in the U.S. Today newspaper and Sports Illustrated magazine, the Gamecocks were quietly pounding everyone who would dare step on the floor with them.

The lack of print never bothered these guys at the little school in Alabama. They didn't need it. They had a job to do and they were happy doing it.

This team had talent.

Jax State had six players averaging in double figures and a bench that most other coaches would have loved to steal players from. While McKeller, Guyton, and Spurgeon cleaned the boards, Warren, Allen, Williams, and Bryant pushed, pressed and ran the ball all over the floor. That's what you do to average nearly 90 points per game.

This team had character.

Several times the Gamecocks had reasons to lose, but they refused to even consider defeat. They had to play with out McKeller once. They had to play in places like Carrollton, Florence, Martin, and Troy. Never did they waver.

J'ville tops Panthers in opener of Final Four

BY STEVE CAMP

It took the act of a wizard to do it, but Jacksonville Wesleyan was able to tie up the Panthers of Kentucky Wesleyan for a 72-61 victory last Friday in Springfield, Mass..

The Gamecocks' ace-in-the-hole on this night was the defense of 6'2 guard Pat Williams who shut down the Panthers' top scorer, 6'8 Dave Bennett in the final half.

By stopping Bennett - who had 20 points on the night, but only four in the second half - Jax State shut off Wesleyan's lifeline.

"He (Bennett) nearly shot us out of the building in the first half," declared Jacksonville's assistant coach, James Hobbs. "But the play of (Pat Williams) shut him down in the second half. We got a man to play up close to Bennett and it took away his shot."

The win vaulted the Gamecocks to 30-1 on the season and put them into Saturday's National Championship game against South Dakota State.

In the span of 40 minutes of regulation, two basketball games took place.

Wesleyan owned the first as they bombed from the outside the entire first half. Jacksonville was busy trying to find a way to get cranked up.

But the Gamecocks overcame a 36-29 halftime deficit with a 16-2 spurt to open the second half and take a 41-40 lead.

"They (Kentucky Wesleyan) dictated play in the first half," said Jax State's Bill Jones. "But we showed a lot of heart in the second half."

Commented Hobbs, "I truly didn't think we could catch them as quick as we did in the second half. But we told them (the JSU players) what we had to do in the first five minutes of the second half and our players went out and did it."

Jax State funneled its offensive output behind the 24 points of senior Melvin Allen. Robert Guyton followed with 18 points and 10 rebounds, his best effort in the playoffs.

Bennett and John Worth were the only Panthers in double figures. They had 20 and 13 points respectively.

While they suffered a famine in the opening half from the freethrow line (JSU missed the front end of four consecutive one-and-one chances), Jacksonville feasted in the second half. The Gamecocks sank 15 of 17 foul shots in the stretch to secure the victory.

Fouling was the name of the game for KWC as they dug themselves a grave. At one point, Wesleyan had 16 team fouls while Jacksonville had but two, both of which were on Keith McKeller.

Though the Panthers were hitting fairly consistently from the perimeter, they had very little production from their inside game.

Of their 61 points, only ten were made on shots from a low-post type position.

When the outside shooting went stale in the final twenty minutes, it was time for Wesleyan to pack their bags and head for the house.

Kentucky Wesleyan got off the bus gunning on this night. In the opening minutes of the half, they threatened to take the game away by building a 24-14 lead.

Jax State jumped back into the game at 26-25, only to see the Panthers build the margin to 36-29 by the break.

Following their 16-2 spurt that built their lead to 49-41, Jax State was guilty of letting the Panthers back into the contest. KWC tied the count at 53-all with 8:30 remaining to play.

From there the Gamecocks shifted the tempo down and Jones chose to go with his three-guard offense. Melvin Allen, Earl Warren, and Pat Williams rose to the occasion and Jax State coasted on their guards' shoulders to the final horn.

Ohio State opens season against young Jax State

BY STEVE CAMP

Just like the Union army did in the Civil War, a team from the north swept through the south Monday night and had things pretty much their way.

The Ohio State Buckeyes handed the Jax State Gamecocks an 11-5 lesson in baseball at University Field and recorded their second win of the season in as many tries.

Jacksonville's record fell to 10-11-1

as they prepared to take on Auburn on Wednesday.

Gamecocks' head coach, Rudy Abbott wasn't exactly elated at what he saw his squad do. He had his players stay after the contest for additional fielding practice following the game.

While Abbott may have felt his troubles were with the glove, the Gamecocks did little with the bat to help the cause.

Ohio State starting pitcher, Chris Jones, mowed down the Jax State order for seven innings. Jones recorded thirteen strikeouts while allowing only four hits and two walks.

"Control has been my problem in the past," said the Buckeye junior right-hander following the contest. "My goal coming into the season was to cut down on walks. I did that tonight, but there's still a lot of games left for me to pitch this season."

In all, Jacksonville could manage only five hits on the night. They only had ten baserunners on the long evening.

Strikeouts continued to be the thorn in the sides of the Gamecocks. Every man who batted for Jax State went down on strikes at least once, with the exception of Phil Braswell, D.T. Thomas, and pinch-hitter Bill Lovrich.

Leadoff man Donnie McKeever

"K'ed" four of his five trips to the plate.

But in the other dugout, it was the difference between night and day.

The Buckeyes jumped on Jacksonville pitching for 13 hits in route to their eleven runs. Leadoff hitter Jay Dolan led the way as he piled up three hits in four at-bats and scored four runs.

After surrendering two runs in the first, Jax State starting pitcher James Preston seemed to be settling down. The Gamecocks got two of their own in the bottom of the first on a double by Stewart Lee that brought Pat Ammirati home.

D.T. Thomas followed with a single that scored Lee from second.

Jax State grabbed a 3-2 lead in the second when Phil Braswell took Jones downtown for a solo homerun.

But the luxury of the advantage was short-lived as Ohio State jumped back in the third. Three hits accounted for two runs, the big one being a homer by first baseman Eric Phaff.

The Buckeyes got four more in the fourth as Preston was replaced by freshman Mark Eskins.

Jax State's Thomas drove in the Gamecocks' fourth run in the bottom of the fifth with a double. Stewart Lee came all the way around from first to score on the play.

All was silent until the eighth when Ohio State's Bill Morris rifled an Eskins fastball into the trees behind the right-field fence. That brought in three runs and ended the Buckeyes scoring for the night.

Jacksonville tried to come back in the bottom of the ninth, but it was too little and too late.

Lovrich reached first on an error to start the inning. Braswell followed with a double into the left-field corner bringing in Lovrich. But Ohio State reliever Chris Durst retired the next three Gamecocks in order to end the game.

Team

This team had guts.

Robert Spurgeon played on battered knees all year. He played with a severely damaged eye and an ankle swollen to the size of a grapefruit.

Earl Warren played when he was on the verge of the flu. Kelvin Bryant gutted it out in the South regional final after he had nearly broken his ankle less than 24 hours earlier. When the chips were down, this bunch sucked it up.

Most of all, this team had humility.

Though they ran almost every team off the floor, you never saw a Jax State player or coach disgrace the opposition. When the final horn sounded, the Gamecocks shook their opponents' hands and wished them luck.

Never did you see one of the Jacksonville bench players whine or moan about not getting to play as much as they surely would have liked. True, they could have gone to other schools and played much more, but they didn't. They were winners and wanted to associate with winners.

After a fantasy-like string of 31 wins, these men have brought Jacksonville its first ever National Championship in a major sport.

But as the old saying goes, all good things must come to an end, and this season is no exception.

It has ended as quickly as it began, and the final two minutes of the championship game was a testimony for the entire year. Whatever it took, whenever it was needed, Jax State was able to produce it.

For that reason alone, these guys are champions. Gentlemen, walk proud.

Champs

Robert Guyton was charged with his third foul at 17:02. He picked up his fourth at 8:17 and had to sit and suffer until late in the contest.

The Jackrabbits reclaimed the lead and the momentum at 14:25 on an offensive follow-up making the score 47-46.

The advantage then swung back and forth like a pendulum. Allen hit a jumper for JSU making it 50-49, Gamecocks.

Five lead changes later, Tetzloff hit at 9:29 bringing the score to 57-56, Jacks.

After six more lead changes, SDSU gained a surge and went up 65-62 at 5:10, thanks again to Tetzloff.

South Dakota built it to 69-64 at 2:26, and then upped it to 71-64 with only 2:07 remaining.

But then the Gamecocks sprang to life. Jacksonville patiently converted on their end of the floor and forced the Jacks into a succession of turnovers.

When Tetzloff made his departure, so did the offense of SDSU. Trailing by one, 72-71, with the ball and 14 seconds to play, South Dakota never got a shot up to the goal. Earl Warren came up with a steal and was fouled.

The senior calmly stepped to the line and hit both ends of his one-and-one giving the Gamecocks the crown. Schultz' final slam dunk was in vain as the time ran out.

A LOT OF CAPTAINS OF INDUSTRY STARTED OUT AS SECOND LIEUTENANTS.

How can you get the experience you need to succeed in business?

These top executives started out as Army officers. Right out of college, they were given the kind of responsibility most people in civilian life work years for.

If you begin your future as an Army officer, you could further your career plans.

How do you become an Army officer? A great way to get the training you need is in Army ROTC.
