International

The decline in alcohol-tax receipts is a major factor contributing to the increase in the Soviet Union's budget deficit, according to Harvard specialists on the Soviet economy.

The country announced last week it expects to have a deficit of $58 billion next year.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's campaign against excessive drinking may have reduced government receipts by the equivalent of $32-$48 billion.

National

An estimated 1,000 demonstrators were arrested in 17 cities last Saturday as they tried to close abortion clinics and stop employees and pregnant women from entering.

The protests, organized by the New York-based Operation Rescue, were generally peaceful despite the arrests.

State

The Scottsboro Board of Education passed a mandatory drug-testing policy for high school athletes, cheerleaders and any student suspected of drug or alcohol abuse.

The policy requires athletes and cheerleaders be tested at the beginning of the season and at unscheduled times thereafter. It also mandates drug testing of students if school officials have "sufficient evidence to warrant a reasonable individual suspicion" of drug use. In such a case, a student's parent would be asked to sign a consent form for the testing.

School superintendent John Balentine said "education alone is not enough. Just say no is not enough. The only thing that a child who is involved in drugs fears is being caught."

J-Day events begin at 4 p.m.

From Staff Reports

For the next three days JSU will get into the "WHUP TROY" spirit, with several different events scheduled. The second annual J-Day celebration will kick off at 4 p.m. today. Big Wheel, a band from Chattanooga, Tenn., will be headlining the event on the quad. There will also be photo buttons, a recording studio, concessions, booths run by organizations and a tug-of-war between organizations. The Three positions on the JSU Board of Trustees have been vacant since January of this year.

The board is the governing body of the university. It has one member from each of the eight congressional districts in the state who serves for a term of eight years.

The terms of board members Dwain G. Luce, Tyrone C. Means and C.W. Daugelette expired in 1987.

According to JSU President Harold J. McGee, Gov. Guy Hunt will fill the positions by appointment. McGee said when Hunt makes his decisions on who to appoint, it has to be approved by the Senate. The legislature convenes in Winter one of first in scholars program

By DENISE KEEFER
Staff Writer

What do a killer whale, the Colorado River, a soprano saxophone and a group of Russian singers have in common? They have all been featured on albums by the Paul Winter Consort.

An internationally acclaimed musician and record producer and the founder of Living Music Records, Inc., Winter and his music combine elements of classical, jazz, international folk and themes drawn from the environment to create a strand of music with an almost cult-like following.

Winter and his Consort will appear at JSU Nov. 17, as part of the Eminent Scholars program, sponsored by the music department. At 1 p.m., Winter will present an open workshop. At 8 p.m., the Paul Winter Consort will perform some of its best-known works. Both events will be in Mason Hall.

Admission to both the workshop and the performance are free and open to the public. However, because seating in the performance center is limited to about 350 persons, the music department will issue tickets to the performance. These free passes are available through the office of the College of Communication and Fine Arts in Self Hall. Or they may be obtained by calling the office at 231-5588.

Tickets will be issued on a first come, first served basis.

"Through music," Winter says, "the diverse cultures of the world can find common ground; "Living Music," as the name implies, is a vital medium through which the cultural and natural environment unite."

He adds he believes it is this world view that gives his music its international appeal.

Active in environmental causes, the Paul Winter Consort was featured in Sierra magazine in April 1986 following the early success of its album Canyon, which was recorded in part during three rafting excursions down the Colorado River.

Earlier albums, Common Ground, and Callings, featured other sounds of nature, including the underwater calls of the whales that swim off the coast of Baja, Calif.

In 1984, Winter traveled to Russia for the first time and fell in love with the country's peaceful, natural beauty and its centuries-old folk musicians.

In 1986, he returned to the Soviet Union to record and later tour with the Dimitri Pokrovsky Singers. Their joint album Earthbeat was released worldwide on the Living Music label and in the Eastern European countries on Melodiya recordings.

The Paul Winter Consort and the Dimitri Pokrovsky Singers are scheduled to appear together several times in 1988 in both the United States and the Soviet Union.

Announcements

•Cumberland Law School is having its fall pre-law day Nov. 18. Any student interested in attending Cumberland Law School would benefit from attending. To sign up, go by the political science department in 315 Martin Hall. For more information contact H.P. Davis, pre-law advisor, ext. 5650 or 5651.

•The 25th Annual Holiday Bazaar sponsored by the Annie Forney Daugette Garden Club to maintain and beautify the park in the Jacksonville Square will be 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. Saturday at the Jacksonville Recreation Center (one block east of the square) on Ladiga Street.

There will be a bake table with homemade cakes and breads, gift boutique, Christmas ornament tree, green thumb table (plants, to include kitchen garden herbs), "white elephant" and used book table, silent auction and a sit-down snack bar.

•An Adult Learners' Forum is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Monday seminar room B on the 10th floor of the library.

This will be a meeting to organize and begin the process of becoming a chartered organization.

ALF is for those who feel they are older than most students in their classes, who are trying to balance a family and-or career with study, who feel they have forgotten how to study or take tests, and who feel they have more to do than time permits.

For additional information contact Alice Mayes at 231-5020.

•Undergraduate college women between the ages of 19-23, never married and of good moral character, are being sought to audition for the title of Miss Alabama Coed 1989. The winner will receive a cash award, a scholarship and will make personal appearances during the period of her reign. For an application or for additional information, send name and college mailing address to Wendy Veczko, Campus Director, Miss Coed American Program, 4200 Baymeadows Road, Jacksonville, Fla. 32257 or call (904) 448-6927.

•Omicron Delta Kappa, the national leadership honor society, is accepting applications for membership. The deadline for turning in applications is Monday. Applications may be picked up from Vivian Wilkerson in the office of the vice president for business affairs in Bibb Graves, from the office of Bill Meehan, from Christopher Horsfield in the math department or from any officer. Please return all applications to Wilkerson. Applicants must have earned 64 semester hours and must have a 3.0 GPA.

Four receive honors

From News Bureau Reports

Several members of the university community have recently received honors and awards.

•Martha G. Lavender, assistant professor of nursing, received the doctor of science in nursing from the University of Alabama in Birmingham.

A native of Gadsden, Lavender received an associate degree in nursing from Gadsden State Junior College in 1975 with honors. In 1979, she received a bachelor of science in nursing from the JSU College of Nursing, graduating with distinction. Lavender received a master of science in pediatric nursing in 1984 from UAB. She received the doctor of science in maternal-child nursing from the UAB School of Nursing in August.

Lavender has been an assistant professor here since Sept. 1, 1984, teaching many of the professional nursing courses.

•Kimberly Culberson-White of Centre was given the department of criminal justice's Charles Sullenger Award for being the distinguished graduate of the department for 1988. White graduated in Dec. 1987 with a major in corrections and a minor in sociology.

Sullenger is a retired assistant professor of criminal justice.

•William Tracy Ervin of Heflin became the first recipient of the newly established A.W. Bolt scholarship. Ervin, a freshman, was nominated through the Education Par Excellence program in Anniston.

Bolt, an Anniston attorney, established the program with a $10,000 contribution. The program will assist local high school students who have demonstrated outstanding academic ability. Interest from the money will provide tuition assistance.

JSU-Troy game 'far-reaching'

I would like to welcome new senators Michelle Horton, Patricia Harris and Phillip Attinger into the SGA. I am certain they will provide positive input into the organization.

Due to this week's activities, I will save the Senator of the Week column on Michelle Watson until next week.

I hope everyone enjoyed the "We Can Make You Laugh" comedy troupe on Monday and Tuesday's movie Rambo III.

Today is J-Day on the Quad from 4 p.m. until 7:30 p.m. There will be photo buttons, a recording studio, organizational booths, concessions, a tug-of-war contest between organizations and a live band, Big Wheel. The pep rally will follow at 7:40 p.m. at the stadium.

Following the pep rally, the Bucks will perform a free concert at 8:30 p.m. in Montgomery Auditorium.

Tomorrow, the Rocky Horror Picture Show will return for three shows at 5 p.m., 8 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. in Montgomery Auditorium. The 5 p.m. show will be non-participation (don't throw toast) for those who wish to see the movie. There will be a costume contest in between the last two shows with cash prizes for the winners.

Dwight Burton

Saturday there will be a "Whup Troy Bar-B-Que" from 5 p.m. until 6:30 p.m. It is sponsored by the SGA, alumni and the Gamecock Club and will be in Montgomery Auditorium.

At 7 p.m., the game will commence.

This game is the best rivalry in the Gulf South Conference and possible in Division II football. I believe it deserves more media attention than it actually gets.

This game is far-reaching. At an Alabama football game earlier this year I sat by a Troy graduate who swore he hadn't missed a JSU-Troy game in nine years. He lives in Greenville, S.C. I would encourage fans to be loud and to make life tough for them. The eighth-ranked Gamecocks will be ready for the Trojans; so should we.

pendent presidential candidate will speak here Monday in Montgomery Auditorium. He will be doing a pre-election analysis on the individual candidates to determine how we (and America) will be affected.

We do not have the opportunity to talk to presidential candidates every day. This week we do. Come and ask questions.

Speaking of the elections -- I read recently that fewer people are expected to vote in this election than any in recent years. I also read who they determined to be the most guilty -- 18 to 25-year-olds. Why? This election is the picture of contrast. It would appear one candidate would have positions to stimulate us to vote. No one can deny this election will be crucial to those of us entering the job market during the next four years. This is America. It's why our grandparents fought to keep us free.

The big losers in this race will not be the Republicans or the Democrats. They will be the millions of potential voters who, because of apathy, do not vote. GO VOTE!!

Counselor's advice offered

From CDCS

For many people, making any decision is difficult. Choosing a career is an involved process, if one wishes to make the best selection to satisfy all needs and interests. The essential element in career development is decision.

A decision is a choice of one from two or more alternatives. Each choice is made at a particular point in time based on available knowledge of opportunities and awareness of personal interests and abilities.

Drivers make twenty decisions per mile, according to traffic researchers. Most decisions in life do not come that fast or become so habitual. Career decisions relate significantly to future success and happiness.

While types of decisions differ in detail, the basic process of decision-making can be outlined:

1. Select the goal -- the most famous recipe for rabbit stew begins "Catch the rabbit." Sometimes the wrong animal is put in the pot. Study the facts carefully and ask key questions.
2. Explore alternatives -- this requires research into all feasible courses of action.

3. Deepen knowledge -- occupational information is found in many forms. Check out the Career Development and Counseling Services.

4. Evaluate all possibilities -- project immediate and long-range outcomes. List advantages versus disadvantages. Check motivations for each option.

5. "Sleep on it" -- cliché describing a mental process [See ADVICE, Page 4]

Special discounts for play

From Drama Department

The first performance of the drama department's production of "Noises Off" will feature special discounts for selected groups.

On opening night, Nov. 17, the department will recognize all students in the area, including university, public and private school students. Student admission on this night will be $1. The regular student ticket price is $3. College students are required to show a validated, picture identification card from the college or university they attend.

On the same night, the department will pay tribute to the military personnel in the area, including all branches of the service, both active duty and reserve and guardsmen. The military admission on this night will also be $1. The regular military ticket price is $3.

Military personnel, including dependents, are eligible and are asked to bring their valid military identification card.

Advance reservations for this special discount performance are strongly encouraged and can be made by calling the theatre box office weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., at 231-5648.

Part-time job market booming

From CPS and Staff Reports

The part-time job market nationwide for college students is booming this fall, placement specialists have reported in recent weeks.

Nationwide, "college students should be able to find plenty of part-time and entry-level full-time jobs," said Vicky Bohman of Manpower, Inc., the New-York based temporary employment agency which released a survey of such jobs the last week of September.

But Anne Goddard, who works with CDCS and helps students find part-time jobs, said locally the part-time job market is competitive. "If they (students looking for a part-time job) are persistent and patient, they can find a job...But this is a small town."

Goddard said several businesses in Anniston, Oxford and Gadsden contact her to help them find workers. She added that people with means of transportation have a better chance of locating a part-time job.

Bohman and others thank several trends for the nationwide boom.

She cited a decline in the number of young people nationwide--creating a labor shortage of firms that have always hired college-aged workers--and even some corporate uncertainty as causes of the job market boom.

"As the (economic) outlook improves," Bohman said, "the employer may be unwilling to add permanent employees, but may be able to hire workers on a temporary basis to see if a job is really needed."

Jane Miller, a jobs administrator at Michigan State University, agreed some companies like to "test drive" a job by filling it with a student.

Other firms are wooing students more for demographic reasons.

In Long Beach, Calif., "nobody was applying for jobs (and) I turned to the schools to locate applicants," explained J.C. Penny's Jo Maxwell, who added she did so reluctantly because students generally aren't available during her peak Christmas season.

Maxwell's not the only one. "There are increases every year" in the number of part-time job offers to students, said California State University-Long Beach placement official Tony Hodge.

"In New York," Bohman added, "the student population declined 21 percent between 1970 and 1980. There are just fewer college-age workers."

The competition for them has helped push up wages and, in some places, left campuses themselves unable to find enough students to fill their own part-time positions.

The result has been long lines at cafeterias at the University of Maryland, where food service director Matthew Sheriff complained last week he still had 100 student jobs he could not fill.

To win student workers back from higher-paying off-campus employers, Arizona State University raised minimum pay for some jobs to $4.02 per hour, from $3.61, and to $9.22 for some other jobs, said student aid official Richard Cons.

"The changes are working," Cons reported.

They haven't worked everywhere. Just three weeks into the year, Iowa State University ran out of work-study funds because it had tried to cure an on-campus labor shortage by raising work-study pay by 20 percent, ISU administrator Janie Barnett said.

The University of New Mexico, moreover, had to cut 200 on-campus work-study jobs because it had to pay students more to compete with off-campus job offers.

Kent State University work-study officials, meanwhile, did not raise wages, and reported they can't fill their on-campus work-study positions because students are opting to take off-campus jobs that pay more.

All of that, of course, tends to be great news for the 4.6 million-some students who, according to a 1984 Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching survey, work part-time.

Other, more recent surveys hint that as many as seven out of every 10 collegians--or about 8.4 million people--work during the school year, said Anne-Marie McCartan of the [See PART-TIME, Page 4]

SGA sponsors Anderson Monday

From News Bureau Reports

Former presidential candidate John Anderson -- who originally ran as a Republican and then revived George Wallace's American Independent Party eight years ago -- will speak at 7 p.m. Monday in the Montgomery Auditorium.

Anderson

His address is entitled "Countdown 1988: A Last Minute Look At Presidential Politics and The Issues." Admission is free, and sign language will be provided if the hearing impaired. Anderson is sponsored by the SGA.

Anderson says little has changed since his failed bid for the White House eight years ago. Calling the presidential nominating process "a floating four-year crap game" and "an almost irrational way of going about the business of choosing a national leader," Anderson challenges voters to scrutinize the fundamentals of the democratic process.

In 1980, Anderson ran as an independent candidate for the presidency and received approximately seven percent of the popular vote or around six million votes. Anderson has spent the last seven years as a visiting professor of political science at universities including Stanford, University of Illinois, Brandeis University and Bryn Mawr College.

CED receives Network's A-Team award

From News Bureau Reports

The Center for Economic Development was recognized by Gov. Guy Hunt as the recipient of the 1988 Alabama Leadership Network A-Team Award in a special ceremony Oct. 28.

Pat W. Shaddix, CED director, and conference coordinator Mark Fagan of the department of sociology, represented JSU and accepted the award on behalf of the CED. The ceremony was held at the Montgomery

Second Annual Alabama Leadership Network A-Team Conference.

The Alabama Association of Realtors, Inc., selected the Center based on the Center's special project "Attracting Civic Center as part of the Retirees to Alabama."

The project included an Oct. 24-25 conference at the Oxford Holiday Inn which brought together speakers from banking, real estate, the retirement industry and presenters who have helped develop programs to attract retirees to other regions of the South.

"We feel it is a great honor to be receiving this award," Shaddix said. "Our 'Attracting Retirees' conference is the first of its kind in Alabama. As far as we know, only one other has been held in the country that addresses the importance of economic development potential as a result of attracting retirees to relocate."

"There has been a tremendous response both in Alabama and other states concerning this conference. Fagan has done a remarkable job in developing the monograph and is fast becoming an authority on retirees and their economic impact," Shaddix said.

Council of Higher Education in Richmond, Va.

The percentage may be even higher. At the University of Missouri-Columbia, student work assignment coordinator Judy Whitted estimates as many as 80 percent of the students there work.

The jobs they do, of course, range from those like babysitting to retail sales to general labor to auto mechanics to telemarketing.

Others are more substantial. "Many of the country's major employers-- Anheuser-Busch, Monsanto, McDonnell Douglas--are located in the St. Louis area," Whitted said. "Employment opportunities with these companies are increasing."

"Major employers trolling the Michigan State campus for students to hire also sometimes bring on students full-time after graduation, MSU's Miller added.

Whatever the job, however, everyone seems to want to hire a student this fall.

Even Ann Thompson, herself a Cal State-Long Beach senior who recently started a secretarial service, wants to hire a college student to work with her.

"College students," she said, "are glad for a job that accomodates their schedule. They may take less pay (for a flexible job) than another worker."

Expense of whales' rescue not wasted

Recent editorials in newspapers across the nation questioned the time and effort put into freeing three whales trapped in an ice floe off the coast of Alaska.

"Couldn't that money be used to save human beings instead of animals?"

In a sense the money (by one estimate $1 million of U.S. government money alone) was used to save human beings. It worked to improve relations between diverse groups. Improved relationships can only mean things will be better for human lives.

The situation last week in which two whales were saved from certain death found several opposing groups working together: Greenpeace and the oil-drilling industry, the U.S. and Soviet governments, and the Eskimos and the U.S. government and the Soviet government and the oil-drilling industry and Greenpeace.

Environmentalists said the California gray whales' entrapment was nature's way of decreasing the whales' numbers. They said the situation was not a catastrophic event.

Maybe the two whales saved from a natural death will help to make up for the immeasurable number that died from unnatural deaths.

An editorial cartoon a week ago in the Chanticleer is probably right on the mark. It insinuates that after the whales are helped out of the ice by men, other men will be there to kill them.

The situation of the rescue soon turned from an environmental one to a political one. When Greenpeace arrived on the scene, the oil industry, a big adversary of the environmental group, saw its chance and seized it. It donated large equipment to remove the ice around the whales' breathing hole.

The industry, usually admonished for destroying animal life, found itself being praised for aiding this rescue.

The U.S. government, always looking for ways to improve its image, was one of the first to offer assistance. National Guard helicopters moved equipment and rescuers to the area.

It was eventually the Soviet Union that came away from the situation looking the proudest. Two Soviet ice-breakers bashed through a heavy ice floe, the only obstacle standing between the whales and a trip south.

The entire operation showed it is possible for these extremely different groups to work together, successfully, for a cause.

Perhaps in the future these groups can remember they succeeded in this endeavor and work to succeed in others, whether for the environment or for human rights.

For what it's worth

Campaign issues summarized

This week's Chanticleer is dedicated to two very important issues: "Whup Troy Week" and the presidential elections.

For the first, we have a special center spread dedicated to the long-standing rivalry between the two schools. The special spread was put together by our outstanding sports department, and I can only add WHUP TROY!

As for the second issue, the editorial and op-ed pages are dedicated to the task of trying to convince students to get out and vote.

One of the things hindering a strong turn-out on election day is the lack of clarity on just exactly where each candidate stands on the issues facing us in the future.

The National Student Campaign for Voter Registration prepared a chart outlining each candidate's stand on several key items of the race. The sources of these come from the candidates' position papers from each party's national platform and from reports in The New York Times and The Washington Post.

The following is a summary of this chart.

Cyndi Owens

Editor In Chief

•Defense and Foreign Policy - Michael Dukakis favors ending nuclear weapons testing and enforcing tougher economic sanctions against South Africa, while George Bush favors increased funding for the Strategic Defense Initiative (Star Wars), the MX missile, production of chemical weapons, and military aid to the Nicaraguan contras.

•The Environment - Both plan to deal with acid rain by reducing annual sulfur dioxide emissions, and both want to ban ocean dumping by 1991. They also agree on offshore oil drilling for non-sensitive area and increasing safety standards in nuclear reactors. Their disagreement comes in the Clean Water Act, which Dukakis supported renewal of while Bush agreed with President Ronald Reagan's veto.

•The Economy - Dukakis' plan to reduce the deficit begins with improving tax enforcement, while Bush plans to place a flexible freeze on spending. Both say they will not increase taxes, although Dukakis has said he would as a last resort. Dukakis favors a minimum wage increase to $4.55, while Bush does not.

•Civil Rights - Dukakis favors the Equal Rights Amendment and a universal voter registration act. Bush is in favor of a constitutional amendment to prohibit abortion.

•The Family - Dukakis favors federally assisted child care, while Bush supports a tax credit for working parents. Both say they support increasing federal student loans, and Dukakis wants to see guaranteed basic health insurance for this country.

The NSCVR is a non-partisan group dedicated to getting students registered.

It is extremely important that everyone who is registered turn out to vote Tuesday. Do yourself a favor and cast a ballot.

Letters to the Editor

Marriott staff praised

Many students around campus are always complaining about the food at Marriott. I, however, believe if one looks at the situation in the proper perspective, he will enjoy the luxury of dining there.

Weigh all the other alternatives such as: having to cook (or as I do, burn) one's own food, waiting in line at McDonald's to pay an inflated price for a meal, or simply starving, and one realizes that even on bad days when the meals are slightly on the bland side, Marriott produces a nice meal in a good atmosphere.

Wendy Willingham

I am writing to give praise to the Marriott cafeteria staff. The students are very fortunate. We are offered a large variety of selections at each of our daily meals. Not only is there a variety offered, the food is very tasty. If someone does not prefer one of the major selections, he can always go to the grill and get a hamburger. I am very proud of our cafeteria staff. They deserve a note of praise.

Sincerely,
Dianna King

Student likes treatment

I was elated when I found out how Jacksonville's administration dealt with me so cooperatively when I began my late registration.

It started first in the administration office when I asked the secretary where would I go to register. She politely directed me to the Communication Building. She also went so far as to show me on a campus map where it was. When I arrived there, I was told that I had come to the wrong building and that I must see my counselor first to make my schedule.

So I thought "wow!" I'm going in circles to get to the right place and everyone is still considerate.

Finally I got my schedule worked out and it was placed in the computer. Then I started back for the dorm thinking about how worse registering could have been. Now, with a smile on my face I said to myself this must be the Friendliest Campus in the South.

Editorial opinion

Voting important right to exercise

This country was based on the idea of freedom. Our constitution gives us many freedoms. A very important freedom is the right to vote.

For years all types of people fought for the right to vote. Today we do not face such problems. Every U.S. citizen over the age of 18 has the privilege to make the personal decision of whom to vote for.

Millions of people do not exercise their rights. Young and old alike come up with hundreds of excuses each year for not voting. Why do we give up our rights we fought so hard to obtain?

According to statistics released by the National Student Campaign for Voter Registration, there are 27 million eligible college-age persons in this country, yet only a little more than half this number is actually registered to vote. And fewer than that actually take the time to register.

In fact, less than 41 percent of all 18- to 24-year-olds voted in the 1984 elections.

How many JSU students actually vote in the presidential elections every four years? Although no exact figures can be tabulated, it stands to reason the national trend would hold up here.

We are the leaders of tomorrow. Eventually, young people of today, maybe even someone we have gone to school with will be running the country.

Each person has his or her own reliable excuse for not voting to fall back on. Some of these include "I do not have time," or maybe, "I do not really care who is elected; my one vote will not make a difference anyway."

Most students do not believe their vote will make an impact in the elections. If every American thought this way, no one would show up at the voting booths in November.

Most young people do not think their votes are being solicited by politicians, but this should not hinder them from exercising their rights.

Most students asked about the political issues of today did show an interest in the platforms each candidate is running on. Many, however, were unsure of exactly where each stands on issues such as budget deficits, minimum wage hikes, foreign policy, student aid and a whole range of other questions.

This is partly due to the nature of the campaign, with all the negative rhetoric being slung by both sides. But it is also partly due to the lack of initiative and unwillingness to make the effort to become better informed.

Students did voice concern about the credentials of the candidates and were concerned about who would be running our country for the next four years. But if previous voter figures are any indication, there will not be enough concern to create an increase in turn-out.

We should realize that whoever is chosen to be the president will be making the decisions for our country when we are just beginning our careers. The next four years will be crucial to our lives and futures, yet we seem to be less interested in this election than ever.

The really sad part of the whole situation is analysts are now saying the youth vote could swing this election any direction we wanted it to if we would only turn out to vote. All we have to do is go to the polls, and whether we voted for the same candidate or not, we could determine the outcome of the election.

It is by now too late for anyone to register for this election. The important thing now is for those who are registered to go to the polls. Patriotic duty aside, it is our future we are deciding. We should each take the part offered us in the decision.

Psst! Who ya gonna vote for?

Did you like any in the primaries?

Shakespeare Festival's new home 'finest in the land'

By ELISE TILLMAN
Entertainment Editor

"We have built a theater second to none to provide the finest Shakespeare in this land and beyond," said Winton M. Blount, the fine arts patron who contributed $21.5 million to build the Carolyn Blount Theater, home of the Alabama Shakespeare Festival.

Blount is a corporate business man with an interest in raising cultural awareness of the arts. "The presence of cultural activities is a potent force in helping to make the city attractive to a new breed of college graduates and younger people who have a strong social and cultural awareness," he said. "It is a matter of making our community a better place to live for those of us who take great pride in calling it home."

The ASF is a 17-year-old, nationally acclaimed professional repertory theater company founded in Anniston in 1972 by Martin L. Platt. It was moved to Montgomery in 1985 when the Carolyn Blount Theater was ready for partial occupancy. It is one of the largest regional theaters in the U.S. and, thanks to its new home, is one of a very few year-round Shakespeare festivals in the U.S.

The theater complex is a modern interpretation of the work of Italian architect Andrea Palladio, a contemporary of Shakespeare. The site is a 250-acre private estate called the Wynton M. Blount Cultural Park. The estate is designed to resemble an English country park and features a lake with swans.

The complex is home to two theaters, each of which is specially designed to be intimate and to provide for easy accessibility to all areas of the auditorium for the handicapped. There is even an infrared sound enhancement system for the hearing impaired.

The Festival Stage seats 750, is a modified thrust stage, and is adaptable for proscenium theater use. The Octagon theater may be used as an arena, thrust, or proscenium, and seats 225.

Ten different masterpieces, both classics and contemporary, are to be performed during this 17th season for the ASF.

Located in the lobby of the theater complex is a replica of John Quincy Adam Ward's 19th-century statue of William Shakespeare which is located in New York's Central Park. The 8-foot-tall bronze replica took five months to complete and was dedicated in May 1987 as a personal gift from Winton and Carolyn Blount.

Charles Dickens' A Christmas

New theater lights the way for year-round drama season for ASF

Carol opens the season Dec. 2 on the Festival stage. Beginning Dec. 7 at the Octagon is Steel Magnolias.

Romeo and Juliet plays on the Festival stage beginning Feb. 16 while Bernard Shaw's Candida, the story of a young poet's love for a clergyman's wife, begins in the Octagon Feb 15.

Shakespeare's Much Ado About Nothing takes the Festival Stage beginning March 2. Christopher Hampton's Les Liaisons Dangereuses begins March 1 in the Octagon. Set in pre-Revolutionary France, Hampton's drama relates the power games of bored aristocrats.

Edmond Rostand's Cyrano de Bergerac takes the Festival Stage April 20. The Octagon features Eric Overmyer's On the Verge or The Geography of Yearning beginning April 19.

The season ends with Shakespeare's Pericles, Prince of Lyre beginning July 8 on the Festival Stage, and Athol Fugard's new drama The Road to Mecca beginning July 7 in the Octagon.

Tickets are available through the ASF box office (277-BARD) and FASTIX outlets (1-800-637-FAST) located in Parisian and Belk Hudson stores. For more information call 277-BARD.

Tickets range in price from $10 to $25 with special discounts for groups, senior citizens, students and military personnel.

Uncle Green's album reminiscent of Beatles' harmony, U2's guitar

By C. A. ABERNATHY
Music Writer

The members of the Atlanta-based Uncle Green have been together for eight years, "since high school," they say. 15 Dryden is their second album. Its all-original, progressive up-tempo songs, reminiscent of the Beatles' harmony, evoke mental images much like R.E.M., but retain an urgency through guitars very similar to U2's more popular songs.

Earlier this semester, 1,300 people saw their show at the Sigma Nu house, where they played a few cover songs. They said Uncle Green "only plays cover songs at (frat) parties."

"Make Something Happen" is very light with what it tries to say, as the title implies. "Complicated" sounds much like Crowded House, with its use of acoustic guitars and melodic vocals. "That Must Be The Way" deals with confusion, that must be the way with everyone/ 'cause that's the way it is with me.

"Bad Dream No. 4" explains itself. "Red Tape" is the most pop-style song of the album, and would fit comfortably with music on most FM stations. These tracks are also very danceable.

Side two begins with "Another

Disappointment," a ballad accenting Bill Becker's solo on bass and spotlighting the harmony of Becker, Matt Brown (guitar, vocals) and Jeff Jenson (guitar, vocals). Pete McDade is superb on drums as songs progress from fragile ballads to bouncy tunes like, "It's All Coming Back," "Looking For The Words To Say" and "Washday." Closing the record is "Bruteforce," which says you can't just complain/ that nobody cares/ you can't go saying that/ they are going to get their's...or the whole world goes down on you.

What makes this rivalry so special? Some people offer their views

By JEFFREY ROBINSON
Sports Editor

It really would not matter if both JSU and Troy State entered their annual clash with perfect records or both without a win on the season. It would still be a big game, and both teams would fight tooth and nail to claim the bragging rights for the next year.

So what is it that makes this games so big? Some JSU players, coaches, and athletic officials gave some insight on what makes JSU vs. Troy State such a big game.

JSU assistant coach and defensive coordinator Eddie Garfinkle said along with JSU and TSU being natural rivals, this year's game has even more importance because of its effect on the Gulf South Conference race.

"The big significance is we've got to beat Troy to reach our goals this year," said Garfinkle, who played his collegiate football here at JSU.

"It's always a hard-hitting game, and it's played with a lot of emotion," said Garfinkle. "There's not one thing that really stands out that makes this such a big game. It's all the little things. I think that's what makes it such a great rivalry. The natural rivalry really fires up the players."

All-American offensive guard Joe Billingsley said that the rivalry makes this one game something special to the players.

"It shows a great tradition between two schools," said Billingsley. "Recently, we started playing for the Old School Bell, which is passed along to whoever wins from year to year. That gives us a little extra drive."

"It's something we look forward to because it's our biggest rivalry. We know what we are capable of, and we know what they're capable of even though their season may not have been what they had hoped for."

Center Keith Henderson agreed that the rivalry is very intense, and that helps make a victory much sweeter.

"The Troy game is our most important game of the season," said Henderson. "We've got to win this game this year to have a chance to make it to the playoffs. It's like the Alabama - Auburn game; it's for all the bragging rights."

Defensive end Randy Beck also commented on the significance this year's game has on the playoffs.

"When you play this game you can throw the records and all the stats out," said Beck. "It's a hard-fought football game every year, but it's a different type game for us this year because we've got to beat Troy to go on and win the conference and get in the playoffs.

"We know it's going to be a war, and so do they. It's always big. They've got a good team, and it's going to be tough. This game is the biggest game to us every year," said Beck.

Football secretary Debby Bishop commented that a win in this game would add to an already successful 1988 season.

"I'm just looking forward to it," said Bishop. "This has been a good season, and by beating Troy, it's just puts us one step closer to the playoffs. We also get a lot of good publicity out of it."

"I wish the student body would get excited about all the games and support the team in all the games they way the do against Troy," Bishop said.

Athletic Director Jerry Cole also talked about the rivalry that exists. But he added that this rivalry goes farther than just the two teams.

"In addition to the natural rivalry of team verses team and school verses school, their athletic director is a good friend of mine," said Cole. "It's a case of where you would rather beat your friends."

"(Troy State Athletic Director) Robert Stewart is a good friend of mine, and I would like to see us victorious. I guess you want to bask in the glory of a win, and maybe for one brief moment it makes it seem like maybe you are a little better athletic director than he is," Cole said with a laugh.

Athletic secretary Anne Hill said that a good football game is not the only thing she thinks about when the Troy game rolls around. "When I think of the game, I think of the battle of the bands in addition to a great game," said Hill, whose two daughters have been Balerinas in the Marching Southerners.

Hill also talked about the rivalry, and told how when Charley Pell was head coach at JSU in the late 1960s and early '70s, he would make persons in the athletic department answer the phone by saying "Whup Troy" during the week of the Troy game.

"It would drive the long distance operators crazy," said Hill. "Local people would like it, but people from other parts of the country would know what we were talking about."

JSU fans know what they were talking about, and the significance of "Whup Troy" sounds out loud and clear.

Former Troy players take new roles

By RUTH HUGHES

Grass grows greener where blood flows.

If that old adage holds true, the field in Paul Snow Stadium should not need any fertilizer for a couple of years after Saturday's game between JSU and Troy State.

No one knows about the long, messy rivalry between the Gamecocks and the Trojans better than alumni. Two of JSU's football coaches can certainly attest to that.

Jack Peavey, Troy State Class of '85, and Joey Denison, Troy

State Class of '87, are currently serving their first year as graduate assistants at JSU. Both Peavey and Denison were members of the Trojans' 1984 National Championship team.

But both men say Saturday's matchup is nothing more than another step in JSU's bid for a playoff berth.

"I want Jacksonville to do well," said Peavey. "We're concerned about getting into the playoffs. If we have to beat Troy to do it, that's what I want to do."

Denison also views the game as important for JSU.

"It's just another game," he said. "We're taking a step. Troy is important because it's the next step to the playoffs."

Peavey, as an offensive lineman, was twice named to the All-Gulf South Conference teams for the Trojans. In 1986, he played half a season with the New England Patriots and, in 1987, he played for the Denver Broncos for another half season. Peavey also helped his high-school alma mater, Foxboro (Mass.) High School, to a third-place finish in state of Massachusetts in 1986 and a state

“Whup Troy” has interesting origin

By JEFFREY ROBINSON
Sports Editor

“WHUP TROY!”

Undoubtedly, this has become the most common and well-known slogan associated with the JSU athletic program. It is a war cry sounded not only the week before the game between the Gamecocks and arch-rival Troy State, but throughout the year as a phrase synonymous with JSU athletics. It has become a tradition.

But how did this phrase get started? There is a very interesting story about how the phrase came about. Its origin goes back to when Charley Pell, a stand-out during his playing years under Paul “Bear” Bryant at Alabama and later head coach of the Florida Gators, was head coach at JSU in the late 1960s.

Athletic Director Jerry Cole recounted last week the history of “Whup Troy.”

During the 1969 season, which was Pell’s first year as head coach, the Gamecocks played Troy State in Troy. JSU lost the game 37-6. The loss dropped their record to 2-3 and obviously hurt because it was to their biggest rival.

During the bus ride from Troy back to Jacksonville, Pell rode on the bus with the team. Sometime during that ride, he stood at the front of the bus and gave the players a pep talk, reminding them Troy had to play them in Jacksonville the next year. Pell told them they would do better in the next year’s game, and that Troy State would “go home with a whupped ass.”

The remark went unnoticed for about a year. But at the pep rally before the 1970 game against Troy State, one of the game captains spoke and told the crowd about Pell’s pep talk. And just as Pell had done, the player promised that Troy State “would go home with a whupped ass.”

The team lived up to that promise. JSU hosted Troy at Paul Snow Stadium and defeated TSU 55-10, indeed giving them a “whupping.”

Thus, the phrase “Whup Troy” has stuck and has become immensely popular. Cole said the story about Pell was true and even though Troy State has countered with a “Whup Jax State” cry, JSU started the slogan, and Troy State copied us so as to not be outdone by its biggest rival

Campuses’ similarities add to rivalry

From Staff Reports

JSU versus Troy State no doubt is the biggest rivalry for each school. But why this game?

JSU has two other Gulf South Conference opponents here in the state—Livingston and North Alabama. West Georgia is less than 50 miles from the JSU campus. But annual clashes with those three schools cannot match the rivalry between JSU and Troy State.

Perhaps the rivalry stems from the similarities that exist between the two schools. And they do indeed exist. Of all the universities in Alabama that are not the size of Alabama, Auburn, or Alabama-Birmingham, JSU and Troy State are the most similar.

The two schools are almost the same age. JSU was established in 1883, making it 105 years old. Troy State was established four years later in 1887.

JSU has a larger student population than Troy State, although both are in a similar range. JSU’s approximate enrollment is 7,600. Troy State has an enrollment of approximately 4,000 students. JSU has an Upper Division extension at Gadsden, while Troy State has satellite campuses in Montgomery and Dothan - Fort Rucker.

The campuses of the two schools have some interesting similarities. Both are roughly the same size, and the administration buildings of both schools is named Bibb Graves Hall. Both administration buildings are the centerpieces of the campuses. In contrast to each other, the JSU campus is surrounded by nearby hills and mountains, whereas Troy State sits on the flat, wire-grass country of the southeastern Alabama coastal plain.

The athletic programs of the two universities also have a rich tradition. Both universities consistently turn out winning teams in all sports and are pace-setters in the GSC. JSU won the Division II National Championship in basketball in 1985, while Troy State won the football title in 1984 and 1987.

The JSU Marching Southerners and the Troy State Sound of the South Marching Bands are both well-known marching units. These two bands have a rivalry of their own, and they battle at each year’s game for musical supremacy. These are the two largest bands in the GSC. No other school has a marching unit that comes close to matching these two in size as both have over 200 marching members. This helps add to the rivalry between the bands.

Both JSU and Troy State are well-known for the Colleges of Education. Each institution has a tradition of turning out educators for both public schools and universities. In honor of the universities’ education schools, the winner of the game gets to keep the Old School Bell. The award was started a few years ago, and the winning school will get to keep the bell on its campus for a year.

Thus, the likenesses between Jacksonville State University and Troy State University are numerous. But although there are a large number of similarities that exist, each university has its own personality. All this helps add to the rivalry that is JSU versus Troy State.

If Walt Disney had envisioned his Magic Kingdom to be in rural Southern Alabama, the campus of Troy State may have been just what he was looking for. Imagine...

Mickey Mouse would have to be replaced. The tune of his familiar theme song could remain the same, only the letters would change. Imagine...T•R•O•J•A•N - H•O•R•S•E. Cinderella’s Castle would no longer be appropriate. Besides, the architectural structure most resembling that regal manor is a San Ann station just off campus. Imagine...Chancellor Ralph Wyatt Adams’ Palace.

Somehow, I do not think Troy State’s band could fill the shoes of Disney’s orchestra. Those who attended the ’87 JSU-TSU game might remember Troy’s immortal imitation of “The King.” Imagine...Poor Little Bambi in the Ghetto

Transportation across campus would not be as rapid as it is in the Kingdom. The farmland around the university is not exactly conducive to tram rails. Imagine...“High speed crop duster shuttle now boarding.”

I have all the confidence in the world in TSU’s ability to find replacements for Huey, Dewey, and Louie. After all, they have around 50 possible candidates on their football team alone. Imagine...“Look Uncle Maddox, I can kick the ball with no hands.”

Sorry Troy. Better luck next time. I hear Conway is looking to expand Twitty City.

We have been very busy this year. We ushered for the drama department's production of "A Flea in Her Ear" and worked for the blood drive last week.

Oct. 8, 14 members left to spend two days at Tuskegee National Forest. While there, they rebuilt a rifle range, repaired a bridge and seeded a field. This was a giant service project in cooperation with chapters at Auburn and Tuskegee. The work was hard, but everyone had a great time.

Zeta Tau Alpha

Thanks to the Delta Chis for a wonderful mixer this week. We are all looking forward to our busy weekend. We have Sisterhood Retreat Friday night at the BCM and Parent's Day is Sunday at Montgomery Building. These are two of our favorite events of the year.

We are getting fired up for our ATO mixer next week and we hope they are, too.

Good luck to the Gamecocks this week in the Troy vs. Jacksonville game.

This week's Zeta Lady is Gina West; Social Bunny is Marnie Swiss; Member of the Week is Robin Eoff; Pledge of the Week is Bobbie Summerville. Congratulations to each of you.

Pi Sigma Chi

Thanks to Alpha Xi Delta for a fantastic mixer. The theme was "Trading Places" and it was really off the wall. All the guys dressed up as girls and vice versa.

Volleyball and soccer seasons are coming up and we are very optimistic about our teams. Our sports program is really looking Halloween has come and gone and it was a good one. Our costume party was a blast. There were some really original costumes and everyone had a great time.

Our national representative, Bob Quackenboss, came to stay with us this week and was very optimistic about our progress. Bob was very friendly and we are glad he was able to spend time with us and help us in our quest for chapterhood.

The upcoming social calendar consists of a New Orleans road trip Nov. 11 and a party with Sigma Nu Nov. 5.

Thanks to the sisters of Chi Omega from UAH for coming down to party with us last weekend.

On the public service agenda, we have a car wash coming up on Nov. 3. Proceeds go to help fund a Special Olympics trip. All help is appreciated.

We are also involved with the Jacksonville Jaycees' Haunted Forest. We are also collecting can goods for the United Pledges of the week are Rusty Reeves, Greg Hendricks and Ashley Wilbanks. Congratulations to all of you.

Good luck to our Lil Sigs who are forming a volleyball team.

Kappa Alpha

We are looking forward to the KA-Pi Kapp party Friday. This is going to be a super get together. Last Thursday night was the KA-Delta Zeta mixer. We always have a great time with Delta Zee and this one was no exception.

Marty Granger was elected senator in SGA. We wish you the best of luck. Congratulations to brother Chip Merrit for being appointed our new rush chairman. Chip has an enormous amount of energy and we are all counting on him to do a wonderful job.

Our biannual pledge retreat is coming up this weekend. Brothers and pledges alike are looking forward to this function. The retreat is an excellent building session that everyone enjoys.

Alpha Tau Omega

We would like to remind everyone we are having a canned food drive for the First Methodist Church of Jacksonville. The donated canned food will go to help the less fortunate people here in Jacksonville. Anyone interested in donating a can of food should bring it by the house as soon as possible

We had a great time last Friday with our Halloween Carnival for the Jacksonville Day Care Center. This annual event has always been a great success and this one was no different. Not only did the kids have a great time, we also had a great time.

Congratulations to our football team who had a very successful season. A special thanks goes to Greg "Buzz" Barnett for his excellent coaching during the football season. We are also looking forward to the volleyball season. We anticipate a strong team and a great season. We would like to thank everyone who supported us during the football season and hope for continued support during volleyball.

The brothers and pledges are extremely excited about tonight because of our "Are They Really Dead?" mixer with Delta Zeta. Everyone is fired up and ready to party tonight. Last semester's mixer was awesome and tonight will be even better. We are also looking forward to our mixer with ZTA which is coming up in the near future.

Congratulations to sisters of the month Becky Cardwell and Teresa Williams and to last week's pledge of the week, Kelli Lasseter.

Today is J-Day. Booths are set up on the Quad and it will be loads of fun, so everyone drop by the Quad and participate in the activities.

Tomorrow night is our Soc Hop, the best party of the year. We will be rockin' and rollin' all night to '50s music.

We would like to thank Pi Sigma Chi for the great mixer last week. We are looking forward to our mixer next Thursday with the super guys of Pi Kappa Phi.

Good luck to the outstanding football team on Saturday night as we host our big rival Troy State.

British comedy 'Noises Off' promises challenge

By DENISE KEEFER
Entertainment Writer

The British comedy "Noises Off" is now in production with drama professor Carlton Ward directing.

Ward has taken on one of the most challenging and popular modern British comedies, "Noises Off" by Michael Frayn, first produced in the United Kingdom in 1982, for his first directing attempt since he directed "The Visit" in 1975.

Auditions were Oct. 12 and 13 and the cast was announced Oct. 14.

The cast members are Kathleen Welker, Lee Pope, Scott Croley, Cynthia Burchfield, Angie Millwood, Steven Whitton, Julie Durbin, Clint Baker and Drew Reeves.

Welker, Pope, Croley and Whitton are all familiar to local theatre audiences. All have numerous appearances at JSU, An-niston Community Theatre and Community Theatre of Gadsden to their credit.

Burchfield, Durbin and Reeves have all appeared in recent productions at JSU. Burchfield's most recent appearance was in last month's "A Flea in Her Ear." Durbin co-starred in "Of Thee I Sing," here last February, and Reeves portrayed the butler-under-seige in last July's production of "The Man Who Came To Dinner."

Two of the cast members are new to the JSU stage. Angie Millwood is a freshman drama major, and Clint Baker recently transferred here.

Jeannie Carden will assist Ward as stage manager.

"It's a play about a company trying to perform a difficult piece. This show is loaded with difficult lines, difficult entrances, prop and sight gags, disappearing actors and misplaced props," said Ward. "Then we combine these problems with mistaken identities, one couple trying to elude Britain's version of the Internal Revenue Service, and, to top it all off, the house is burglarized by not one, but three burglars."

The setting is the theatre, twelve hours before a matinee opening, and the cast has never gotten all the way through the play in rehearsal.

Audiences get to see the play rehearsal, then they get a peek backstage at the "other side of the curtain."

David Keefer will design the stage, lighting and sound. He also faces many challenges, because the stage has to revolve so the audience can see it from the front, and then from "backstage."

Opening Nov. 17 and playing through Nov. 22, "Noises Off" is designed to provide "comic relief" from the late fall entertainment doldrums.

Advance reservations are suggested. Ticket prices are $5 for adults, $4 for senior citizens and JSU employees, $3 students, military and children. Reservations and additional information are available through the box office at 231-5648.

BURGER BURN OUT?

Life can be really tough when you've got a bad burger habit. You find yourself thinking about burgers all day long. You can't wait till you get another "burger fix". But it doesn't have to be that way! There is a Fresh Alternative... Subway Sub Shops. All our sandwiches and salads are made fresh before your eyes. So get rid of that burger on your back. Come to a Subway Sub Shop for a quick recovery.

Presidents important in University development

By DARRYL GRAHAM
Staff Writer

Ryals, Chappell, Gibson, Jarrett, Forney, Daugeette, Cole, Stone and Montgomery. These names are synonymous with the tradition of Jacksonville State University and its beginnings.

But what role did they play in shaping the university? How has that influence continued to flourish today? And what lasting contributions did they make to the university as well as the Calhoun County community?

The college initially opened its doors as Jacksonville Male Academy in 1836. The following year, Jacksonville Female Academy was established. According to an unpublished paper by Thomas Freeman and Martha Merrill, stock was sold in 1869 to finance the establishment of Calhoun College. The Male Academy merged with Calhoun College in 1871 and operated as Calhoun College until 1883, when the Alabama Legislature established the institution as the State Normal School.

James Gazzaway Ryals was appointed as the State Normal ating class, Forney died in 1902 whereas a male dormitory was named in honor of him and his wife, Mary C. Forney. It is leased to local businessmen and rented out as apartments.

Clarence William Daugeette filled Forney's absence. In 1929, the State Board of Education authorized the state's normal schools to become four-year degree-granting institutions, so Jacksonville State Normal School became Jacksonville State Teachers College - according to Freeman and Merrill's research. Daugeette concentrated on attracting teachers with Ph.Ds from prominent universities and becoming an active part of student life.

From his start with a faculty of six teachers in 1899, Daugeette's accomplishments included a faculty of fifty-two teachers, a staff of thirty people and growth of the school from a small building valued at $16,000 to a physical plant valued at several million dollars before his death in 1942.

In 1942, Houston Cole began his 29-year tenure with Jack-

Bibb Graves then . . .

Adair and Lovett met while attending Jacksonville and were married later. They chose to return to the college in 1950 and Opal Rufus Lovett was named university photographer. His wife joined the English faculty in 1958 and became faculty sponsor of the Mimosa in 1971.

Opal Rufus Lovett became very instrumental to university public relations. His photographs of campus beauties for "Gem of the Hills" appeared in student publications and sometimes in media over the state, and he also worked closely in photographing Miss Mimosas, Miss Alabamas and Marching Ballerinas.

In their research, Freeman and Merrill noted the variety of offerings at the college had grown to the extent it was no longer primarily training educators by 1957. Furthermore, the liberal arts and business administration programs were attracting more students than the original education offerings. The college began to offer a few courses at the graduate level, and the word "Teachers" was dropped from the institution's name, hence Jacksonville State College.

Through an effort led by Sen. A. C. Shelton and Rep. Hugh Merrill, Jacksonville State College became Jacksonville State University on August 31, 1966.

Many changes began to occur on the new campus: the campus publication, the Collegian, became the Chanticleer; part-time jobs for students were accelerated under the Work-Study Program and the Alabama Legislature passed an act creating a board of trustees to manage and control Jacksonville State University.

Following Cole's retirement in 1971, Ernest Stone took over as president and began a 10-year era that helped to herald Jacksonville State University. His wife, Katharine "Kitty" Stone, brought an ideal to his office as she kept very involved with the university and the Jacksonville community.

The first official appointment was Charles Rowe as business manager. In February, students began to ask for changes in curfew hours for women. Also, Ceil Jenkins of Birmingham - a major in physical education - was crowned Miss Alabama.

The computer center was rising in program popularity as well as developing programs for Gadsden State Junior College and Calhoun County government. In 1972, JSU opened an extension center in Talladega to offer university courses at night. Brewer Hall opened that same year and 24 policemen graduated from the first police academy class.

1973 continued to be a year of growth and success across the campus. Stone was inducted into the Alabama Academy of Honor while Jane Rice became the second JSU student to win the Miss Alabama title.

Pete Mathews Coliseum opened to students in 1974, offering handball and exercise facilities, an Olympic-sized swimming pool, physical education staff offices and four dressing rooms. By the beginning of that same year, the university had completed a $14 million construction program within a five-year period.

In 1977, ground was broken to carry out construction of a new field house, providing offices for campus police and athletics. Julie Houston became the third JSU student to be crowned Miss Alabama.

The following year, Teresa Cheatham won the Miss Alabama title and took first runner-up in the Miss America pageant, winning first place in swimsuit and selection for a special vocal ensemble in talent. Her involvement with the university continues while she serves as director of the Information Center and a recruiter for high schools.

With Stone's retirement in 1981, Theron E. Montgomery, Jr. was appointed as president. In the fall of 1981, the university purchased the historic Roebuck home to use as the new Alumni House. In 1982, Montgomery became the first president to be inaugurated. Tammy Little became the 1984 Miss Alabama and fifth JSU student to win the title. Montgomery resigned as university president in 1986.

The influence of each man has brought JSU closer to state-wide recognition as well as implementing new plans for continuous growth.

Exegi monumentum aere perrenius: I have reared a monument more enduring than bronze.

School's first president. He died at the age of 30 during his third year as president.

In 1885, J. Harris Chappell temporarily filled the presidential vacancy and delivered diplomas to the first graduating class that same year. The position was later filled by Mobile native Carleton Bartlett Gibson in 1886. He served until 1892. The next State Normal School president, J. B. Jarrett, fulfilled a one-year tenure.

Jacob Forney IV assumed the position in 1893 and left in 1899 to become the first appointee to the Chair of Psychology and Pedagogy in the school of education at the University of Alabama. A member of the State Normal School's first gradusonville State Teachers College. His first wife, Leone Pruett Cole, planned the president's home that was constructed in 1949, but died one year before its completion. Other on-campus construction included an auditorium (named in his first wife's honor), a cafeteria, two science buildings, seven male dormitories, five female dormitories and two female dormitory annexes, a music hall, a cottage for home management, the International House, the business administration building, the law enforcement building, the nursing school and a new library.

The Last Word

The King of Rock n' Roll -- alive and kicking

Elvis is alive. I know, I know. I didn't believe he lived either, before last weekend. But I actually met the king and chatted with him at length about his life since death.

For the past five years, Elvis has been traveling throughout the Southeast, vending hot dogs at every county and state fair imaginable. I was at the Alabama State Fair in Birmingham last weekend, where I ran into Elvis selling hot dogs near the double-decker ferris wheel.

At first I didn't recognize him because of the extensive changes in his appearance. He was down to 5'8 and 160 pounds, had sandy blonde hair with a bald patch on top, and was wearing a yellow bowling shirt with "Earl" stitched across the front pocket. If it hadn't been for the gold-plated Cadillac his wienie-wagon was attached to, I never would have noticed him.

Mustering every ounce of courage, I stepped up to the wagon, which unsurprisingly had a banner stretched across the front that read "The Hound-dog," and ordered two with everything and a Coke.

When Elvis returned with my order, he said "Thank you, sir, thank you very much. Thank you."

I saw my opportunity and grabbed it for all it was worth. "No, thank you...Elvis!" I said.

He peered out at me from behind those dark glasses and shook his head in wonderment. He knew I had caught him. After some slick negotiating, Elvis granted an interview in return for his freedom. I agreed. It's great to have an exclusive like this.

The first thing I asked him was why he had wanted to make it look like he died. Shaking his head, Elvis replied, "Well, one of my secret enemies of the time kept enrolling me in the Columbia record and tape club. After a few years, I owed them more than I was worth, and my lawyers couldn't fix the mess I was in. So I faked my death, and had an appointed caretaker use the insurance money to pay the club off. I kept what little was left to save for a rainy day. Eventually I bought this (the wienie wagon) with it."

Next, I asked him what he had been doing since his death. Elvis smiled a little crooked smile and began, "Well, up until about five years ago, I was living with John F. Kennedy on a little farm in Baldwin County he bought after his death. Every weekend, Marilyn Monroe and Judy Garland would come over and we'd have a high ol', er, let me rephrase that, a grand ol' time. We'd just sit around, drink a lot of beer, and watch every rerun of "The Beverly Hillbillies" we could find. Jack really thought Ellie May could fill a sweater, if you know what I mean."

Naturally, I wanted to know what happened to spoil his life in paradise. "Well," he started,

"everything was going great until one weekend when we had a couple of surprise visitors. Adolph Hitler showed up on Friday evening and Martin Luther King Jr. showed up the next day. It was horrible. You couldn't even hear ol' Grannie yelling at Jethro for eating the last possum pie for all the bickering that was going on between Adolph and Martin. You might say they had a slight difference of opinion. Jack tried to mediate, but it was no use. He just didn't know enough of the German language. So, I just got a belly full, upped my stake, and, well, here I am."

By this time, I was shocked. I tried to argue that all of these people surely couldn't have successfully faked their deaths, but Elvis staunchly stuck to his claim. He even went so far as to say "Ya remember Bear Bryant? Well, he's coaching pee wee football in Utah. He once told me that it just came time for him to move up in the world."

As to the future for the Pelvis, well, he just said he wanted to live out his days selling hot dogs. So who knows, next time you buy a corn dog at a fair, look closely at the vendor. It might just be the king.

Watson thankful to be Homecoming Queen

By KIM HENDON
Features Writer

"I never really expected to win," said Michelle Watson, Homecoming Queen. This blue-eyed, raven-haired beauty said being Homecoming Queen is the biggest thrill of her life.

Watson is a veteran of several beauty contests. This member of Phi Mu sorority has held two other prestigious titles beside being Homecoming Queen. Watson was Miss Northeast Alabama 1986 and Miss JSU 1987. However, she said being chosen Homecoming Queen was her "biggest honor" because she was elected by the student body rather than outside judges as in the other contests.

Watson referred to the student body as "her friends."

She said being elected Homecoming Queen made her aware of how many friends she has. She gave credit for her election as Homecoming Queen to them.

Watson said she really did not have to campaign since her friends at the Baptist Campus Ministry, International House and Phi Mu supported her in everything from hanging posters to telling people to go vote. However, Watson said she feels people did not vote for her because they heard her name the week before. She said the people who voted for her were the ones she met day-to-day on campus.

Watson feels without the support of her family and her fiancée, Patrick Kelly, she might not be as successful as she is. She is admittedly "very family-oriented." Her mom and dad supported her by paying for her posters and outfit.

She said it is also comforting to know they are simply a phone call away in Birmingham. She also feels knowing her parents and her fiancée were going to love her win or lose helped her to relax and have fun at the festivities.

Even though Watson is family-oriented, she is also career-oriented. She is a firm believer in combining family and career. Watson hopes to combine her communications major with her English and music minors to perhaps write jingles or slogans for commercials.

She said she does not feel her outer beauty will help her much in her career pursuits. Watson says it is a woman's inner beauty that gives her depth.

International House helping to bridge the cultural gap

By ANTHONY WHITLEY
Features Writer

The International House Program provides for an exchange in culture between selected American students and foreign students from countries around the world.

The International House Program began in 1946 under the direction of James H. Jones. He started the program with five French students. The program was then under the direction of the Department of Foreign Languages. Later, Spanish and German students were added to the list of foreign students.

There were three homes for the program before the present one was built in 1964. Clarence W. Daugeette Jr., who was a primary instigator in the building of the present house, deserves a great deal of credit for his work. Daugeette was a very influential community leader who spent time to raise money and support the present house.

The International House is for both foreign and American students. There are 40 students in the entire house, ten American female students room with 10 foreign female students, and 10 American male students room with 10 foreign male students. The house itself is split into a male wing and a female wing.

The American students are selected through applications. There are no rigid requirements other than maintaining a 2.5 grade point average. Grindley Curren, director of the program, said, "We are looking for students of all majors." Some students think to live in the house, one has to be majoring in a foreign language or topic. The main thing the student needs to qualify is an interest in the program.

The present foreign students here at Jacksonville, who come from such places as Tanzania, Hong Kong, Honduras and New Zealand, were selected through applications and are here on a one-year scholarship. Curren, who is in charge of the selection process said, "I have to pick them from recommendations."

Some of the activities for the International students include their annual open house, dinners, seminars and a formal at the end of the year. Curren said many of these activities resemble those in which a fraternity or sorority might be involved. One weekend, the students are planning a trip to Six Flags. Most recently, at the Homecoming parade, the students won second place in the float competition. Overall, the students are well entertained.

Most of the foreign students feel the International House Program is good and the university itself is good, although some of the students find out they are not cut out for it.

As for the students who do like the program, Curren said, "Friendliness always strikes them as very positive." Another aspect favorable to the students is how social activities are blended in with academic affairs.

One thing the students find awkward about Jacksonville is the fact everyone has a car. They find it an inconvenience to be without one, and they try to make friends or have a roommate with a car. The cafeteria food is another thing the students find different from their native culture. They find the variety good, but they claim it is different.

"We are looking for students of all majors." — Curren

Troy game has playoff importance

By RUSS MEANS
Sports Writer

It is time once again for the big rivalry, and the Gamecocks are ready for a big showdown with the Troy State Trojans.

JSU's open week last week helped the Gamecocks to better prepare themselves for this classic match-up, which the Gamecocks have not won in five years. Coach Bill Burgess said the open week probably helped the Gamecocks heal the small injuries for the most part.

"We were also able to do more in-depth drills that are not possible when we have a game upcoming on Saturday," Burgess said. He added this helps to improve the play.

The 4-5 record of the Trojans really does not explain fully the type of season Troy is having. In many of their losses, the game has come down to the wire. However, Burgess said Troy, like every team JSU plays, will play the best they can play.

"They are just as excited and fired up about this game as we are," Burgess said.

The offense of Troy State will be tough to stop. Bobby Godsey, the quarterback for the Trojans, is a very experienced player and will provide a strong passing game against JSU. Also, the abilities of wide receiver Titus Dixon will cause the Gamecock defense some trouble.

"(Dixon) can win the game for Troy in one play," said Burgess.

The Gamecocks will have to stop the running game and control the passing in order to overtake the Trojan offense.

Troy State's defense likes to change its formation just before the ball is snapped to confuse the offense. The Gamecocks will need to be ready and prepared for this to happen so mistakes will not overtake the Gamecock offense.

"The Trojan defense will play four tough quarters of football," said Burgess.

According to Burgess, no turnovers, no penalties and no mistakes in the kicking game will be the keys to a Gamecock victory. Breakdown in any of these three categories will result in a second loss for JSU. Burgess also said the Gamecocks will have to out-hit the Trojans if they wish to have success in the game. This game will be big in the outcome of the GSC.

"We are not worried right now about the conference title or the national title because they will take care of themselves, but we are just concentrating on beating Troy State," Burgess said.

The Gamecocks are looking forward to this game, and emotions are running high.

Captains for the Gamecocks in this Saturdays game will be the seniors. Kickoff is at 7 p.m. at Paul Snow Memorial Stadium.

Tight GSC race continues

By RODNEY PARKS
Sports Writer

Two weeks remain in Gulf South Conference play, and three teams - JSU, Mississippi College, and UT-Martin - are still battling for the title. All three teams are virtually in a tie for first place with only one loss. Mississippi College has a half-game lead with a 6-1 conference mark, while JSU and Martin are tied at 5-1 in the league.

In conference games last weekend, Mississippi College (7-2 overall, 6-1 in the GSC) moved into first place with a 31-21 victory over Valdosta State (5-3, 3-3). UT-Martin (8-1, 5-1) moved into a tie for second by holding off a late rally at Troy State (4-5, 3-4) to win 27-23. West Georgia (3-5, 2-4) had a 33-28 victory over Delta State (4-5, 2-4), while North Alabama (2-6, 2-4) broke a four-game losing streak with a 10-7 win at Livingston (0-9, 0-6).

Valdosta State is in third place in the conference with a 3-3 record, while Troy State stands fourth at 3-4. Delta State, North Alabama and West Georgia all have 2-4 records. Livingston brings up the rear at 0-6.

In the race for the title, Mississippi College must win only its final home game against Delta State to assure itself of a share of the conference title. The Gamecocks will host Troy State and travel to Livingston. UT-Martin still must host Livingston and travel to West Georgia.

Games this week in the GSC include JSU hosting Troy State, Livingston traveling to UT-Martin, Delta State hosting Valdosta State, and West Georgia traveling to North Alabama. Mississippi College will be at Lamar in the only non-conference game.

Gamecocks and Bailey get their kicks against UAB

The Gamecocks remained on a roll last Saturday by bringing home a win against a Division I-A opponent.

JSU cremated the University of Alabama at Birmingham in the first-ever meeting between the two schools. The Gamecocks rolled to an impressive 38-3 victory against the Blazers at Birmingham's Legion Field Stadium.

The Gamecock defense was playing great as usual. The "Red Bandits" stuffed the green and gold for only four first downs and 50 yards of total offense.

The JSU offense was also on a roll. The wishbone clicked as the Gamecocks rolled up 550 yards of total offense, stymieing the hapless UAB defense.

But it was the play of punter Steve Bailey that helped the Gamecocks out scoring-wise. Bailey, who apparently likes playing in Legion Field, earlier this year did some incredible punting against Alabama A and M at that stadium.

Saturday, Bailey accounted for two Gamecock touchdowns. This set a Division II record for most touchdowns scored by a punter in a single game and helped give the Gamecocks a comfortable margin of victory.

Bailey's first score came when the Gamecocks were forced to punt facing fourth-and-five at the UAB 40 and leading 7-0 in the first quarter. UAB defender D.A. Arrington broke through and blocked the punt, which flew straight up into the air. In the resulting scramble, the ball came down into Bailey's arms. With nothing but clear astroturf in front of him, Bailey raced 45 yards untouched for the score.

As if one touchdown in a game is not odd enough for a punter, later in the third quarter Bailey got another score. With the Gamecocks facing fourth-and-two at their own 40, the coaching staff tried a fake punt. In regular punt formation, snapper Pat Tate snapped the ball to running back Steve Patrick, who was lined up almost behind him. But rather than running for the easy two yards himself, Patrick pitched the ball to Bailey in the backfield. Bailey swept around right end and raced 65 yards, breaking three tackles and leveling one 320-pound lineman, to give the Gamecocks a 35-0 lead.

"It was unusual," commented a surprised Bailey after the game.

Jeffrey
Robinson
Sports Editor

The Gamecocks got their first score when halfback Jeff Hill scored on a 20-yard touchdown run early in the game. Ashley Kay's conversion made the score 7-0.

Following Bailey's first incredible episode, the Gamecocks again got on the scoreboard. The Gamecocks had been running the ball down the Blazers' throats all day. So in a surprise move, quarterback David Gullede unleashed a 64-yard touchdown bomb to wide receiver Kevin Blue. Kay's conversion made the score 21-0.

To start the second half, the Gamecocks picked right up with an 86-yard touchdown drive. With the entire second string playing, it took only seven plays to get on the board. Fullback Brian Stevenson scored on an 8-yard run to boost the lead to 28-0.

UAB managed to put one score on the board early in the fourth. In the only drive the Blazers had during the game, quarterback Bomber Ekasilicon led UAB from its own 35 to the JSU 42. The drive stalled there, but UAB was desperate for a score. Placekicker Hertz Plank somehow connected on a miraculous 59-yard field goal to make the score 35-3, but he will not be out of his leg cast for approximately four months.

UAB's leading rusher was Wolfram Spasnola, who had only 27 yards.

"It was a tough, tough, tough, tough, tough game," said Coach Bill Burgess. "I mean really tough. I can't find enough words to say how tough this game was. I was really glad to see us win, because it was tough."

The Gamecocks will now prepare for their annual war against Troy State next Saturday at Paul Snow Stadium.

The preceding is, of course, all a farce. This game, and probably anything similar to it, never happened. UAB has no football team, as we all know, and JSU enjoyed an open date last weekend. I just wonder how many people will start reading this and not finish it and think we really played UAB Saturday.

On a more serious note, the Gamecocks do have a game this weekend, and a big game at that. Troy State comes to town for the renewing of the annual clash between two long-time rivals.

This game will be an important one for JSU because of the playoff implications. A great deal has been said and writtern about the game already, so much in fact it's hard to add anything to what has already been said.

The Gamecocks are fired up, too. They know the prize of victory, and they are hungry for the Division II playoffs. I also think, after talking to some players, they have put the UT-Martin game behind them and are ready to bash the Trojans.

This is the big one, folks. Let's get behind the Gamecocks with a loud, vocal crowd Saturday.

I guess one reason I would like to see JSU smear Troy is I have relatives who live near Troy (Lord help them). I also have some friends who go to TSU, and I have really had my nose rubbed in Troy's wins over the past five years.

So on behalf of all my staff writers who have wanted to say it in their stories but could not, I'll say it for them. WHUP TROY.

Sports - Second Front

JSU-Troy not just a clash of two football teams

Jacksonville State vs. Troy State. It's the biggest football rivalry in NCAA Division II. But it's more than just a football game.

This is the day when the Marching Southerners and the Troy State Sound of the South marching bands square off for their annual halftime competition and post-game show. Every year, both bands prepare the entire fall for this one halftime show.

"You start from the first day in August preparing for the Troy game," said Roger Ried, a member of the Marching Southerners. "It really gives you something to work for the entire fall, and it helps to involve every member of the band."

"The tradition of the competition between the two bands began in the late 1960s," said David L. Walters, director of the Marching Southerners. "When Johnny Long, a graduate of JSU, was hired as the band director at Troy State, he instantly started a rivalry between the two bands."

Walters feels the two bands were very strong during the mid-'70s. With the two bands having very different styles, Walters said, "It's a matter of what style you enjoy the most. It's a competition where afterwards, both bands can feel they have won."

There are many traditions going along with the Troy game. One is for the men in the Southerners to grow a Troy beard starting a few weeks before the game. Also, on Monday or Tuesday before the game, a scout is sent up from Troy to see what music the Southerners are playing and how many members are in each section of the band. This is done so the Sound can make sure it has as many members as the Southerners.

The biggest tradition is the annual "Whup Troy Party," which is celebrated the week before the game. Many Southerners alumni, instructors and members attend this party every year.

There are also traditions observed during the game. Gary McNutt, a member of the Southerner's drumline, said, "Anytime the Troy band plays, the Southerners horn line members put their horns upside down on their heads to make fun of the Troy band."

A bit of "permanent borrowing" is also traditional.

"It's been a long-standing tradition to take things belonging to the Troy band. On Monday after the game, everyone shows off what they got from Troy's band," said Reid.

In 1985, it got so bad that Long made the Southerners give back everything they had taken.

During the second half of the game, each section has "ditties" worked up to show how well they can play.

"You have to work very hard the week before the game to prepare all the music of the year and your ditties," said Hank Humphrey, a Southerners alumni.

One of the most enjoyable parts of the competition is the post-game show. Jerryl Davis, a music instructor here, said,

"The post-game playing is very enjoyable to me because both bands really show how well they can play."

Davis and Reid agree the strongest year for both bands was the 1980 game.

As a former Southerner, one tradition that I will always remember is a fellow member of the Southerners named Brent Jennings, who was at JSU from 1981 to 1985. Jennings would always yell "Whup Troy" in a way nobody else could. Brent would yell this so loud the people in Gadsden could probably hear him.

JSU may lead the official football series with 29 wins, 21 losses and one tie, but the Southerners feel they lead the unofficial halftime series 52-0-0. So without referees or judges, you will have to decide who has the best "sound of the South."

Gamecocks will give Troy a whuppin'

College football is in the closing part of the season, but the GSC and SEC races are just beginning to heat up. Auburn pulled off a 16-0 victory over Florida to keep its title hopes alive. Alabama is in a do-or-die situation against LSU this weekend, and the Georgia Bulldogs are in the same situation against Florida. The Gamecocks are getting fired up for their most heated rivalry of the season as they prepare for their match against Troy State.

My eight-week standings come to 102-40-1. That is a .717 winning percentage, which is not too bad.

Jacksonville State vs. Troy State

The Gamecocks got a well-deserved break last week. During that break, all eyes were focused on the Troy State-UT-Martin contest.

Unfortunately for the Gamecocks, UT-Martin squeezed past Troy State 27-23. Troy State comes into this contest 4-5. This is Troy State's last game of the season, and you can bet the Trojans do not want to end the season with a losing record.

The widest margin of any game the Trojans have lost this season has been by six points. The Trojans have been in every game and even played UT-Martin a closer game than the Gamecocks did. The Gamecocks have the all-time advantage on the Trojans 29-21-2, but JSU is riding a five game losing streak against Troy dating back to 1983. Troy State narrowly won last year 14-9. Give the advantage to the Gamecocks, but beware. JACKSONVILLE STATE 35, TROY STATE 28

Alabama vs. LSU

Alabama is starting to put together some impressive victories. No one victory would be better than a win this weekend against a powerful LSU team. After suffering two bitter defeats to Ohio State and Florida, LSU has won three straight games against Auburn, Kentucky, and Ole Miss. On the other hand, after Alabama's only loss to Ole Miss, the Tide has put together three straight wins. Both teams are 4-1 in the SEC, so something has to give. LSU is 1-2 on the road, and Alabama is 2-1 at home.

Alabama has won some big games against some big teams, so give the slight advantage to the Crimson Tide. ALABAMA 17, LSU 14

Auburn vs. So. Mississippi

Southern Mississippi is not a weak team. Southern Mississippi comes into this contest 8-1, and the Golden Eagles' only loss was to Florida State 49-13. The Tigers and the Golden Eagles have both played relatively easy schedules, and this should be a battle for both teams. First-year coach Curley Hallman is eyeing the Golden Eagle's first bowl appearance since 1981. Pat Dye better watch out because the Golden Eagles have upset on its mind. But the Tigers should pull away with a victory. Auburn 38, Southern Mississippi 20

Georgia vs. Florida

The Georgia Bulldogs are in the same situation as Alabama. The Bulldogs must win. If Georgia can defeat Florida, then it could set up the SEC title matchup against Auburn next week, pending the outcome of the Alabama and LSU contest. Georgia, 6-2, lost a disappointing 16-10 contest to Kentucky for its only SEC loss. Emmitt Smith should be ready for Saturday's game, and that will put a lot of pressure on Georgia's struggling defense. Florida is also struggling from the loss of Smith, but give the slight advantage to the Bulldogs. GEORGIA 31, FLORIDA 28

Ladies finish road trip

By RODNEY PARKS
Sports Writer

The JSU women's volleyball team finished a three-week, ten-game road trip with four matches last week. The Lady Gamecocks finished the week with a 2-2 record.

Oct. 25 the Lady Gamecocks traveled to Florence to play the GSC defending champs North Alabama. JSU did not fare well, losing the match 4-15, 6-15, 15-12 and 11-15 to lose the match 3 games to 1.

Oct. 26 JSU traveled to Livingston to play the Lady Tigers. The Lady Gamecocks won 17-15, 15-13, 9-15, 12-15 and 15-8 to win this match 3 games to 2. Everyone got some very valuable playing time in this match.

Oct. 28 and 29 JSU returned to Florence to play in the pre-conference tournament. On Friday the Lady Gamecocks had a

The Schick Super Hoops 3-on-3 Basketball Championships, sponsored by Schick Razors and Blades, begins its sixth year of competition on the intramural level this year, continuing as America's largest college recreational sports activity. Each year, over 200,000 students from colleges and universities across the country compete in on-cam-match with UT-Martin. JSU lost 15-10, 9-15, 10-15 and 7-15 to lose the match 3 games to 1. On Saturday JSU played Mississippi College, and the Lady Gamecocks won this 15-10, 15-4, 9-15 and 15-11 to win the match 3 games to 1.

JSU now stands at 16-12 overall and 4-4 in GSC play.

Some of the Lady Gamecocks are compiling some good stats so far this season. Selina Carpenter leads the GSC in assists with 646 in only 23 matches. Lisa Jackiel stands in third place in the GSC in blocks with 82, and she is also in third place in aces with 46.

JSU will travel to Carrollton Georgia on Nov. 4 and 5 for the West Georgia Invitational. The Lady Gamecocks then play a conference match at Troy State on Nov. 8.

pus tournaments with the chance of winning one of 22 regional championships.

JSU is participating in this year's Super Hoops, which will be on campus Nov. 22. Our winning men's and women's teams will advance to the Schick Super Hoops Regional Festival at Atlanta, Ga., this spring.

championship in 1987 as a tight end and tackle coach.

Peavey's apparent loyalty trait still runs true. Not so fast; it runs true for JSU.

"When I played at Troy," he said, "winning the game was important. But now it's different. I want the best for Jacksonville. Of course, if we lost, I'd get a lot of harassment from the other side."

Even though the rivalry seed is buried deeper inside Denison, who grew up around Troy State, his loyalty also rests in the Gamecocks.

"I'd like to beat them," said Denison, "just because it our next game we have to win reach our goal of making the playoffs. It's the next step for us."

Denison started at offensive guard and tackle for the Trojans and graduated from Troy State with a degree in Mathematics. He also served as an offensive line coach at Woodham High School in Pensacola, Fla.

But this Saturday, both Denison and Peavey will again be on the sidelines of a JSU-TSU game, but not in the position they were accustomed to for four years. This time, these two former TSU players will trade in their cardinal-red Trojan jerseys for the true red of JSU.
