Gunfire wakes Weatherly Hall

By SHANNON COOPER
News Writer

Two arrests were made Sunday morning when gunfire broke out in front of Weatherly Hall. At 2 a.m., Sept. 30, the JSU police responded to a report that shots had been fired outside Weatherly Hall. When the police arrived, they found three men in a white Ford Escort on Trustee Circle. The men were non-students and witnesses claimed that a fight had occurred between them and some students outside the dorm.

Witnesses said that one of the men, Alden Marcellus Benton, of Lanette Ala., pulled a .25 caliber automatic Beretta pistol and fired it in the air. David Nichols, director of public safety, said that the pistol had six live rounds in it and one round was jammed in the chamber when it was recovered. He explained that the jamming the chamber had probably prevented Benton from firing again and causing worse damages.

Police arrested Benton for disorderly conduct, reckless endangerment, and carrying a concealed weapon. Another man involved was Vincent E. Pritchard. He was charged with disorderly conduct. Both men were taken to the Jacksonville City Jail by university police and the Escort was towed.

A JSU student recovered the pistol that Benton threw down as police arrived on the scene. Nichols said that had it not been for the cooperation of the students making statements that they had witnessed the trouble, arrests could not have been made.

Drinking a problem

Campus police made eight alcohol-related arrests this weekend, six of them involving minors. Friday night, police arrested three students in front of Weatherly Hall. Two of them were minors in the possession of alcohol and the third had provided the contraband.

At Saturday’s football game, police arrested Doyle Thomas Lewis for disorderly conduct and public intoxication when he refused to obey disturbed fans’ requests to keep his loud opinions to himself. “We strongly discourage drinking, especially at sporting events,” Nichols said.

Nichols said that the campus police were lenient as far as student matters were concerned, but that with the continued lack of respect students have toward alcohol-related laws, they will be forced to start being harder on students.

Nichols said, “Students need to understand that they cannot drink if they are under 21.” He also said that the city of Jacksonville prohibits public drinking and that the law is enforceable on campus.

Departments toughen attendance policies

By SHEILA LYNCH
News Writer

Departmental attendance policies have been established since the university turned authority of class attendance up to the individual colleges. The old attendance policy stated that “a student may not receive credit for a course in which he/she fails to be present 75% of the time...” Now, individual departments have the option of enacting stricter policies.

“Students abused the 75 percent cut policy,” said Ted Klimasewski, a Geography professor. The Geography department revised their policy this fall. Introductory classes are allowed three unexcused absences. More than three will result in a lower final grade. “JSU students need discipline. Attendance is just one form of discipline that requires them to be there and learn,” said Klimasewski. “Students can pass tests with poor attendance, but they are losing concepts which make them thinking people. You must be in class to learn those concepts.”

Freshman English classes, 098, 101, and 102 have had a strict three cut policy since the spring of 1988. Robert Felgar, an English professor, said, “We noticed a strong correlation between attendance and success in these classes. So much work is done in these classes—quizzes and writing—that you have to be there.” Felgar also noted, “These are such important courses. If you can’t read, write, or think well, you can’t hope to profit from other courses at JSU.”

Klimasewski and Felgar both said they had heard complaints from students concerning the attendance policies. “Students benefit, although many do not believe that. Why miss what is to your advantage? It is in every student’s benefit to come to class,” said Felgar. “If you are not attending class, why are you here?”

Students may lose aid

By SHANE MCGRIFF

Some JSU students who receive federal aid may soon be out of luck, and money.

Students who are not maintaining a 2.0 GPA and students who aren't able to graduate in a twelve semester time frame will become ineligible for grants and loans under recent federal guidelines.

To get federal grants and loans for students, the University must prove that the students receiving aid are making satisfactory academic progress. Bill Yates, associate director of financial aid, said many students were unaware that JSU had implemented the academic progress stipulations.

"Students don't understand that you have to graduate in twelve semesters, and that's whether you did or didn't receive financial aid during that period," said Yates.

Yates said that the April 1 priority deadline for financial aid will be even more critical this year. He said several aid programs provided by the University are based on limited government dollars and that this year JSU will give priority to those students who get their paperwork in by April 1.

Yates said a lot of students don't understand how the financial aid office works. "I think that when some students get turned down for federal money they think it's someone in here (financial aid) telling them that. The federal government says what you're (a student) eligible for...it's not like we're telling them how much they can have."

Yates encouraged students to come by the financial aid office three or four months before deadline to decide which forms to fill out and to get help completing the forms. "A lot of people fill their forms out wrong. We can help them fill out the paperwork and get their applications processed before the deadline," said Yates.

Loose zipper opens up professor's teaching style

"There's a certain amount of hucksterism that goes into good teaching, I'll admit that. Sometimes it doesn't work — sometimes it does," said Harry Rose, Education Professor.

"Some students wrote pages and pages. One student wrote: 'Why not?' and made an A,'" he said.

Rose remembers one of the zaniest things he ever did to make a point. A truck and doesn't mind if he teaches without a desk and no chairs. In this room everybody would wear overalls with gullies, sit on the floor and go barefoot — so the carpet would feel great."

Soon after the lecture, students presented Rose a pair of overalls and they began to wear them on Fridays — "including me," he said.

"There's a certain amount of hucksterism that goes into good teaching, I'll admit that. Sometimes it doesn't work — sometimes it does," he said.

Rose's classes aren't all fun and games. He requires his students to master quite a bit of information and to draw significant conclusions.

"It's important to me that they do well. I worry about them. I accept the blame for it when they don't do as well as they should," he said.

"If I can get the students stirred up — thinking and sufficiently provoked — there will be lively discussions and perhaps they will begin to think about their belief systems."

Rose was a 21-year-old science teacher at Caverna High School near Cave City, KY, in 1959 when he decided to become a college professor. "The decision was no sudden thing — it was gradual. I was making $2,610 a year and I thought I could do better in higher education," he said.

With an undergraduate degree in biology from David Lipscomb College, Rose began the long path to earning the terminal degree. He received his master's from Western Kentucky State University in 1962 and went on to complete his doctorate at the University of Cincinnati in 1965. He joined the faculty of JSU in September, 1965 and was appointed full professor in 1969.

He said one of his greatest accomplishments at JSU was designing a program to allow students who are not teachers to earn a master's degree and teacher certification at the same time.

Rose said his greatest accomplishment of all is receiving the Outstanding Faculty Award which will be presented during halftime of the Homecoming game with the University of North Alabama on Oct. 13.

"The other day I counted my class rolls. I've taught more than 7,200 students at JSU in classes ranging in size from three to 119. Basically, I was hired to teach. I've done that.

"That's why this award means so much. This is the one area in my professional career in which I have tried the hardest to excel," he said.
Students benefit from library improvements

By LESLIE SMITH
News Writer

William Hubbert wants to make the library a better place for students. Four new copying machines, upgraded circulation desks, and extended library hours are all tools Hubbert is using to make his wish a reality.

The new copying machines are Sharp SF 7750s and cost students a nickel per copy to operate. “I have been working to cut photocopy cost to the students for some time,” Hubbert said.

The circulation desk procedures have changed. Checking out books should be easier due to continuing modernization. One of the latest improvements is the bar code scanning process.

Library hours have been extended and several JSU students appreciate the change. “I think the changes are great. The new hours should help us (students) tremendously,” said Leslie Adams, an SGA senator and junior at JSU.

Like many others, JSU Alumnus ready to serve

Tommy Warren is 36 short hours from the Persian Gulf. Warren is a member of the 167th material management center, a branch of the Alabama National Guard. A branch that has been put on 36-to-48 hour alert.

Warren is a JSU alumnus. He attended JSU from 1965-1970 and received his master’s degree here in 1977. He has served as the president of the Birmingham Metro Alumni Chapter and as a member of the National Alumni Board of Governors. The main objective of the alumni chapters, says Warren, “is to support JSU through scholarship funding, academically and athletically.”

Warren is an employee of the State Education Department and is assigned to the Disability Determination Division. He is the president of the Alabama State Employees Association. If Warren is sent to help with the Desert Shield operation, his job will be protected. “We are protected by the Soldiers and Sailors act of 1940. Once we are mobilized, we will receive the same job or one that is equivalent,” Warren said.

The situation Warren and thousands of other Americans are in are very stressful. No plans can be made, the soldiers must be reached at any time day or night. “Not knowing when you will leave is a bigger strain than job security,” says Warren. “Each time the phone rings, I think it might be them,” he added.

There are now over 100,000 American troops supporting the Desert Shield operation. There are JSU alumni and students in the Middle East already, with others waiting for their moment’s notice to join them.
Our turn...

Here we go again

It seems the gas companies are sticking it to us consumers again.

Gas is now 131.9 (at the cheap places) for regular unleaded. Why? Why must the people of this country continue to be bled to pay for a problem that doesn't really exist.

The reason: Our elected Representatives in Washington won't stand up for us. Oil companies in these countries know they can keep upping gas prices without having to explain it to anybody.

It's just about time somebody does something about it. Think about that when you cast your ballots in the November election.

By the way, there are two gas stations in Anniston where gas is still 124.9 for regular unleaded. One is located on South Noble and the other on Hwy. 431.

Unfair taxation

Tuesday night, President Bush gave Americans a pep talk on network TV, trying to drum up support for the bill that is supposed to relieve the budget deficit.

Congress wants to pass a measure that would increase luxury taxes on cigarettes, alcohol and gasoline as well as cut several domestic programs such as Medicaid.

As if we weren't paying through the nose for gas anyway, the government wants us to pay 12 cents on the gallon for such a luxury. Luxury, ha! Gas is a necessity in this country.

Here's an idea: How about taxing the American oil companies for the profit they are making on the already inflated gas prices?

We suppose that would be "unfair."

Respect the freedom of choice

By TONYA MORRISON

Lately, there has been a very heated argument over what is pornography and what is art. Possibly set off by a certain art exhibit which included several photos of young children posing naked and the freestyle performances of the controversial band 2 Live Crew, those who oppose, as well those who advocate it, have come out of their closets in swarms.

The issue seems to be whether or not to allow freedom in all forms, as guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution. Under magnifying-glass scrutiny, the Constitution is being ripped apart paragraph by paragraph and line by line. Everyone is complaining about either too much or too little leeway in the censorship issue.

While 2 Live Crew fans are objecting in every possible way to the censorship laws in states such as Florida that forbid the sale of 2 Live Crew's "As Nasty as They Wanna Be," picketers and talk show guests express their views on artist Robert Maplethorpe's controversial, as well as government-backed, exhibit that contained several photos of nude children. Both are big issues of today, and the only thing anyone really knows about them is whether or not they agree with the issues that they involve.

On the heels of the controversy is the media, snapping pictures, writing stories like this, and slapping 2 Live Crew's picture and album cover all over the television screen. This is preventing the censorship debate from being heard and providing an even more fertile breeding ground for other displays of pornography and obscenity material.

Little-known and underground bands are taking advantage of the limelight and doing their renditions of 2 Live Crew's stage show, risking arrest and hate mail for a little publicity and national acclaim.

Apparemdy it's working. 2 Live Crew clones are popping up everywhere around the country in clubs with not much to lose. Whether or not censorship is right and protected under the Constitution is not the issue with theyee people, it is merely the supposed fame that comes with it that sends them out in defiance of the law to dingy dives and local clubs everywhere.

If you want to buy "As Nasty As They Wanna Be," more power to you! But don't expect everyone else in the world to agree with your right to purchase something called a "pornographic, obscene work of trash." If you are a regular viewer of Roseanne, don't quit watching because your neighbor feels that Barr is a disgusting, vulgar loat. And if you think that art is art, dressed or not, don't condemn the man who pickets the gallery that decides to do the Maplethorp exhibit, because, after all, that is also guaranteed in the Constitution.

PBS' 'Civil War' does little to bring peace

By TIM LOCKETTE
Columnist

The latest skirmish in the Civil War was fought just last week. A tiny engagement, it was reported on the back page of the Sunday Paper, "Critics say 'Civil War' biased." A Public Televisiltion series on the war between the states is being attacked for being unfair to the South. I've seen the programs and they seem quite accurate to me. I'm no great authority on the subject, though, as I wasn't there when it happened. Also, I too may be biased, being after all a citizen of the Union.

Many other Southerners would do well to remember that they are citizens of the Union. This might save them, and all of us, a lot of grief. The South is perceived as a backward region because Southern society is sick. Our society is sick because it is riddled with lies and the belief in the Confederacy as a noble cause is the mother of all Southern lies. It's time we Southerners stopped sticking up for this odious agglomeration of flab- bidden dictatorships, this lousy excuse for a country, whose greatest achievement was the death of thousands, black and white, blue and gray.

This summer, when gubernatorial candidate Charles Busch accused his opponents of wanting to remove the Confederate battle flag from the state capital, the candidates fell all over themselves apologizing for ever hinting that they would do so. How can we believe in leaders who kowtow to ghosts? When the "haunts" of Jeff Davis come not only to haunt but to rule our state capital, then it is time for Alabama to secede from the Confederacy.

I may write my own name on my ballot this November, I ain't afraid of no ghosts. I'd just as soon wipe my floor with the Confederate flag as look at it, though it may give me a rash. This flag is the symbol of everything a democracy should not be. The Confederacy was insensitive to the rights of individuals and minorities, it was warlike and it was oligarchic. Our society's insistence that we respect the Old South because so many fought and died for it is absurd. The Iranians and Iraqis fought each other tooth-and-nail for the past 10 years. Should we respect them? I wouldn't mind if they all burned in hell.

The fact that my own ancestors fought for the South does little to assuage my hatred for the Confederacy. In fact, it increases it. James C. Lockette, though, probably white, was little more than a slave. He was a yeoman farmer, descended from coal miners, who risked his life to defend some nucci-snooring jerk's right to own other people and enjoy free labor. If the South had won, those jerks really would have had it made, as the song says. I, however, would probably be in the coal mines.

Many brave Southerners have fought for the "noble" cause of States' Rights. The right, that is, of a state to take away its constituents rights of free speech, assembly and religion. The right of the states is the right of George Wallace to tell me I can't eat at Brad's Barbeque or take a black girl out on a date or listen to Public Enemy. So please excuse me if I don't respect a long-dead nation that murdered hundreds of thousands to defend the rights of states. I happen to be an American.
A not-so-serious lesson in computer literacy

By R. Dale Johnson
Faculty Columnist

Dr. Homer S. McMurphy is one of the most respected computer scientists in the world. He is credited not only with the invention of the modern computer but also with that of the pocket calculator, the automatic teller and the automated flower vending machine. Yet, he has managed to find the time to write several episodes of "Star Trek" and to father 14 children. Recently, I was granted an interview with Dr. McMurphy. The following is an excerpt from that interview.

Q: Dr. McMurphy, since many people at JSU who will read this interview aren't computer experts, could we begin by having you explain a few common computer terms that many people have probably heard but have no idea of their meaning.
A: Sure.
Q: OK. We'll start with DOS.
A: DOS is a program that makes computers do things. No one is quite sure how it works because it was created accidentally by a group of IBM scientists in Iran who were trying to develop a program that let them see their tapes and print them without being billed for it. But, they didn't know what they were doing and when they fed it to the computer, the computer somehow knew how to tell a really good dirty joke, make coffee and answer the phone. DOS stands for "Do Office-type Stuff"
Q: DOS is an operating system. Could you explain what, in general, an operating system does?
A: Do you remember that Son of Sam Killer? He said that the reason he killed people was that he heard Satan's voice telling him to do bad things and he was powerless to resist. Well, that's sort of how it is with computers and operating systems, with operating systems playing the role of Satan.
Q: What about interface?
A: Interface is just computer lingo for "interpersonal relationship." Computers have to interface with disk drives, printers and screens. Most people buy these add-ons without any thought of the sex of the computer. YOU SIMPLY CANNOT HOOK A MALE PRINTER UP TO A MALE COMPUTER. On has to mate and one has to be female. If they have the same gender, they can't interface and produce data. They'll spend all their time fighting in frustration. Anybody who's had gerbils knows what I'm talking about.

Students speak out on behalf of JSU sororities

Dear Editor,
I am writing in response to an editorial written by a young lady who is obviously lacking in self-confidence. I was offended by her opinion of the sororities at JSU.
I have never met a group of girls that I respect so highly. They are true friends to share my college life with. Now that I have new and "true" friends to share my feelings about my sorority.
Obviously, I'm not as uninformed as you think. About my priorities as you think. I have come to college. Unless you really enjoy reading manuals, get a Macintosh.

"Macintosh practically eliminates the need to keep manuals next to my computer, because—regardless of which program I'm using—I can open, close, save, and print files in exactly the same way. And you can't say that about any other computer.

"Today lots of other computers are attempting to look and work like a Macintosh, but it's just not possible. They're too fundamentally different to begin with. This may sound a little strange, but comparing a Macintosh to other computers is like comparing apples to oranges. You can squish the orange into shape and paint it to look like an apple, but underneath the makeup, it's still an orange.

"It's funny—I work at the Vanderbilt computer store and I've seen lots of people switch from other computers to Macintosh, but I've never seen anybody with a Macintosh switch to another computer."

Gamecocks suffer first home loss

By RODNEY PARKS
Sports Editor

For the first time since 1987 the JSU football team has suffered back-to-back losses and two losses during the regular season as the Gamecocks fell in a rematch of last year's National Championship game to Mississippi College, 17-7.

Coach Bill Burgess felt that his team played some of its best football of the season, but played it during a loss.

"All I ask is that our team to go out and play hard for four quarters against an outstanding football team and I feel very confident that our team went out and did that and we're very proud of them," said Burgess. "We had our chances to win the ball game but it didn't happen.

Fifteen thousand fans watched Mississippi College open the scoring in the first quarter when they drove 75 yards in 11 plays. The drive ended when Shane Stewart hit a 30-yard field goal to put the Choctaws up 3-0 with 6:44 left in the first quarter.

JSU then answered with a long drive of its own, moving 57 yards in 12 plays. Terrence Bowens carried the ball across from two-yards out, and State Stinnett added the extra point to put the Gamecocks ahead 7-3 with 14:23 left in the first half.

The two teams traded punts the rest of the half as JSU went into the locker room still holding the four-point lead.

Falling behind at halftime is something that Mississippi College has gotten used to this season. The Choctaws have now trailed at the break in all three of its victories.

As in Mississippi College's first two victories this season, the second half of the game belonged to the Choctaws.

Mississippi College took its opening drive of the second half and drove to the JSU 17-yard line. The Gamecock defense stiffened and forced the Choctaws to attempt a 38-yard field goal that was unsuccessful.

After a JSU fumble on its own 35-yard line, the Choctaws were again in business. Mississippi College drove to the JSU two-yard line but on the sixth play of the drive the Gamecocks again stopped the scoring threat as they recovered a Choctaw fumble in the end zone.

JSU then drove out to its own 48-yard line but were forced to punt on a fourth down and inches.

The game seemed to turn around at this point as Mississippi College drove 80-yards in 10 plays and scored their first touchdown against JSU since 1987 to take a 10-7 lead.

Mississippi College then quickly put the ball game out of reach on its next possession as the Choctaws' Fred McAfee broke a 72-yard run to put Mississippi College up 17-7 with 14:36 left in the game.

"There are usually going to be about four or five big plays in a ball game," said Burgess. "The McAfee run was a big play in the ball game because if he doesn't make that run it's a whole different situation.

JSU did have two drives in the fourth quarter of the game but the Gamecocks were unable to score on either as first quarterback David Gulledge fumbled on the Mississippi College one-yard line and then Slade Stinnett missed a 30-yard field goal.

Burgess feels that his team still needs to work on offense to get in sync after the game.

Trainer pleased to work at JSU

By TODD BROOKS
Sports Writer

If you have ever been to a JSU game and wondered who the coach was who always goes out to care for the injured players, it’s Jim Skidmore, head athletic trainer for the Gamecocks.

Skidmore, in his 17th season at JSU, is a native of Harlan, Ky. He got his bachelor’s in physical education in 1973 and his masters degree in athletic training in 1974 at Eastern Kentucky University.

Why did he come to JSU? His reply was simple. “I needed a job,” Skidmore said.

He got into athletic training because he enjoys athletics and he felt that because of his size and limited athletic ability this was the way to stay close to sports.

Skidmore’s main responsibility is the health care of every student-athlete and some administrative work. He is responsible for the drug screening program and has been appointed to several different committees, which he thinks is good for his professional experience. He was also named associate athletic director, a position he has wanted if he ever gets out of the training room.

“Paperwork has become more significant,” Skidmore explained. “Liabilities have become more under consideration. There is so much more litigation going on for everything you do and don’t do. A whole lot of people, and not just in my profession but in the medical profession and every profession, are scared to death that someone is going to sue them about something. I think the job has gotten easier from a training standpoint because of bigger, faster, stronger athletes. People of better athletic ability don’t get hurt as severely and frequently and recover faster.”

“The thing I enjoy most about being an athletic trainer is being with the (athletes) every day, helping them work hard, watching them get better, watching them fail, watch them succeed,” Skidmore said. “I have a great job. It’s a pain, but I wouldn’t want to do anything else. It’s because it’s at JSU…because of the student-athletes…the staff…student trainers and medical personal. Everybody around me makes this an enjoyable place to work. I like the people around here.”

Skidmore has a small circle of associates in the area and does not want or need many people to associate with.

“The people I associate with please me, and I can only presume that I please them, because they appear to enjoy my company,” Skidmore said.

He seriously considered getting out of the training business one time, but his wife, Hope, had a major influence on him sticking with it. She didn’t know what she was going to do with him on Saturdays.

Games are a great outlet for him because he can yell and scream all day.

“I’m settled here, my home is here, I feel secure here. I think the problems that we have at JSU are the same problems that they have at other universities. The things that disturb me here I don’t think I’m going to resolve them by going somewhere else. The trainers that I have talked to have attitude problems and discipline problems. These things I don’t have to deal with,” said Skidmore.

He is one of the most respected men on campus by the students who know him. Why does he think he gets so much respect from his student-athletes?

“I hope they know if nothing else I’m operating in their best interests. If they need somebody to talk to I try to make time to talk to them. If they have a problem not athletically related, I hope they feel like they can trust me and ask me for my advice and try to help them solve their problems. I try to be straight with them,” said Skidmore. “What I tell them is not what they always want to hear. I try to do what is best for them. I have to deal with each individual as he relates to the team.”

“Yancy Dials missing a game for example, it disturbs me as much as it does Yancy, Bill Burgess or whomever. I take it personally that Yancy is hurt or sick.”

Skidmore does have some pet peeves with the area. He hears a lot of complaining from students and faculty and says that if he were not so happy as some people are he would leave. Skidmore is critical of the way the city of Jacksonville treats its students.

“It’s God in His infinite wisdom reached His hand down here and pulled up JSU out of Jacksonville, there wouldn’t be much here.”

He thinks college athletes are very special that no one can do what athletes can. They have academic standards and practice several hours a week to play for a short period of time.

“It really disturbs me that people who are so critical of athletics say athletes are treated special. People has a good season going and a lot to work for.

“I told our team I didn’t want to see them walking around with their heads down because we’ve played four ball games and were 2-2 and the thing that we’ve got to realize is that we still have a chance to be an outstanding football team,” Burgess said. “I think most of the game today we played better than we did all year long but we lose, so we have a big challenge ahead of us and we’ve got to get ready to play Delta State.”

With the win Mississippi College now has a 3-1 overall record and stands at 3-0 in the Gulf South Conference. JSU drops to 2-2 overall and 1-2 in conference play.

The leading rusher on the day for JSU was Bowens with 89 yards. Guilford completed eight of 19 passes on the day for 126 yards.

Mississippi College was led in rushing by McAfee with 178 yards.

Mississippi College led JSU in total offense with 374 yards to JSU’s 296.

The Choctaws lead the all-time series over JSU 10-8-1. Burgess now has a 38-19-3 record at JSU.

This week Mississippi College will host Troy State and JSU will travel to Delta State.

Last season JSU defeated Delta 34-10 and JSU leads the all-time series 18-8. In the last four meetings between the two teams JSU has a 3-0-1 record.

Delta State’s last win in the series came in 1985, 27-23 over the Gamecocks in Paul Snow Stadium.

Delta State’s largest margin of victory was a 28-point win in 1982, 41-13, while JSU’s largest margin of victory was a 33-point win, 36-3, in 1980. The highest scoring game of the series was a 56-36 shootout in 1982.

Malone calls Jacksonville home

By JAY ENNIS
Sports Writer

Living in a military family can be both a challenge and a lot of fun. There is plenty of travel and adventure, but you never know where your next home will be.

Eight years ago, the Malone family was transferred to Fort McClellan, thus beginning the Jacksonville football career of JSU senior Darrell Malone. He played for Jacksonville High School as a running back and outside linebacker.

"One day I met Coach Burgess and he said that if I came here to play football, I would have an excellent chance of winning a national championship," said Malone. "Now, that really caught my attention. Three years later, we were there."

This marketing major is originally from Mobile. He has lived in several areas including West Germany. Malone though still calls Jacksonville his home.

"Jacksonville has been very good to me," said Malone. "I really like it here."

A talented athlete, Malone is a part of the twin tandem of kick-off returners, as well as defensive back.

"I was a running back in high school and I really enjoy running with the ball on kick-offs. Unless I get an interception, it's my only chance to make a score," said Malone.

As a starter in the defensive backfield, after three games this year Malone has accumulated 11 solo tackles, 12 assists, 1 pass knockdown and caused one fumble.

Malone is known around the league for his love of a high velocity collision.

Gamecock tennis teams are set for fall action

By THERESA MASKEW
Sports Writer

With school getting into full swing, JSU's men's and women's tennis teams are doing whatever it takes to get prepared for the upcoming season. Head Coach Steve Bailey is looking forward to the season with anticipation.

Along with the combined efforts of assistant Coach Jamie Bailey, racket stringer Lee Stansell and manager Pam Mikon, Bailey has been working hard in gearing the teams to go to the nationals this year.

Coach Bailey is optimistic about both teams potential, but the men's team is stronger because they haven't lost as many players to commencement exercises.

"The players are all hard working and the men's team should be even better than last year," Bailey said. "We have eight returning and five new players and with our competitive schedule we should pull out some winning matches."

Returning All-GSC Players for the Men's team are Jonathan Howes(Sr.), Peter Jacobson (Jr.), Michael John Garnett(Sr.), Mark Elliott (Jr.) and Eric Hoaglund (Jr.). Also returning from last years first place GSC, 12th National and 4th in the South team are Ronnie Hass (Soph.), Brian Wheels (Soph) and Charlton Files (Jr.).

Despite only having five returning player's from last years women's team, Bailey has confidence in his young players.

"The women look good on paper. They won the GSC in 1985, '86, '87 and this year."

JSU enjoys victory at home

By RODNEY PARKS
Sports Editor

Last season the JSU Lady Gamecocks volleyball team lost only one home match.

Coach Janice Slays team looks just as strong this season as the Lady Gamecocks ended the month of September undefeated at home after a 3-1 win over UA-Huntsville.

This season the Lady Gamecocks have the most power and depth the team has ever had. Slays feels this depth will help the Lady Gamecocks.

"I feel our depth is going to help us down the road," said Slay. "We've got Dana Upton and Janet Ledbetter coming off the bench and they can play just about anywhere. Also Amy Vycital and Tesha Zito coming in and doing a good job with their setting and middle hitting."

The key to JSU's win over UA-Huntsville in the first game was the fast start which led the Lady Gamecocks to a 15-4 win.

"During the first game, we played real consistent and played our kind of ball game," said Slay. "When we play that way, it always works for us. This first game is what we want from our kids, and if we can get that all the time from them, then we will be alright."

JSU fell behind in the second game of the match 7-1. This lead for UA-H was to big for JSU to make up as UA-H claimed game two 15-10.

"We had a slump during that second game," said Slay. "They went out and basic got over-confident with their game."

The Lady Gamecocks quickly got back on track as they won game three 15-9 and game four 15-3.

"When we play our ball game we always do well," Slay said. "When you've got hitters like A.J. Sanders, Lynn Batey, Camille Ponder and Deanna Baker there's no reason why we should be playing pitty-pat with the ball.

"We're not getting off to as good of a start as I would have liked, but later on I think we're going to show up."

After the match, the Lady were ranked 6th in the south region of the nation for that week.

Lady Gamecocks travel for first tournament action of season

(critical of) are people who really don't know what they are talking about," Skidmore said. "The NCAA seems to keep wanting to take things away. We don't do enough for them (the athletes) and especially in Jacksonville because of financial consideration.

"People of Jacksonville seem to be extremely, extremely critical of the students, and like I said there wouldn't be anything here. You couldn't get a hamburger in Jacksonville, because all those hamburger joints would have to close down," Skidmore said.

"I enjoy periods of time when the students aren't here. For short periods of time it's kind of nice (with) no traffic jams. You go into town and these people are crying that they can't make a living, having to lay people off because the students aren't here, and then when school gets in session they're dog-cussin' you. They want to put you in prison because you bounced a check. They can't make up their mind."

Skidmore though really likes his job in Jacksonville and doesn't have any plans of leaving. He likes the people here and enjoys what he does. He is certainly one of the biggest Gamecock fans around.

88 and '89. They ranked 9th nationally last year and 2nd in the south," said Bailey. "We're rebuilding the team and since we lost our number 1, 2 & 6 players, we have to work hard. It's going to take a lot of effort to get a team like last year, because it was the strongest ranking team JSU has had so far."

Returning All-GSC players for the women's team are Amy Conner Sr.), Marne Audriutionis (Jr.), Lara Ashly Root (soph.), Carin Myers (soph) and Christy Smith (soph.). Ellen Conner (fresh.) Jennifer Gayden (fresh), Whitney Downs (fresh.), Terri Sisk (Soph) and Shannon Baker (Jr.) are new team members that will be the younger strength behind the Lady Gamecocks.

On October 4,5 and 6 both teams will get a chance to show they have the potential to compete in the Rolex Southern Collegiate Tennis Division II Championship. The singles and doubles winners from the tournament will go to Corpus Christi, Texas on October 30 for the Rolex National Division II Championship. The winners of these two events will then travel to Minnesota in February for the Division I Rolex National Inter Collegiates.

"Right now we have 42 men and 36 women from JSU, Troy State, Tennessee Martin, NC-Greensboro, West Georgia and Columbus, Ga," Bailey reported. It should be exciting . JSU has eight men and eight women in the tournament.

"I hope alot of people will come out and watch because there should be some of the best tennis in the south that weekend," said Bailey. "Some of the top ranked players will be there and hopefully we can do a good job."

New cult and 'comeback' queen recording

CRAIG MORRISON
Columnist

Fleetwood Mac has discovered the secret to getting in Rockline every other week. Christine McVie and Stevie Nicks are claiming now that people took what they said the wrong way. They were both upset at Mick Fleetwood's revelations in his book, but they now say that the band has not split. McVie and Nicks' story now is that they will still record with the band. End of story. Fleetwood Mac is now officially retired from appearing in Rockline.

The Cult is heading back into the studio in November to record a follow-up to their smash "Sonic Temple." Depending on how rehearsals go, Mark Morris will replace Jamie Stewart (who left for Albertville, tonight at around 10 or 10:30 p.m.).

Stevie Ray Vaughan material is slowly finding its way into record stores. The album he recorded has just been released. The Vaughan brothers also make guest appearances on Bob Dylan's latest, "Under the Red Sky." Blues fans should get a listen, Stevie left behind some of his best guitar work on these releases.

Cher was late for tea with first lady Barbara Bush. When she finally did arrive, she realized that she'd left her i.d. behind, so she took her limo back to the hotel to get it.

Why do soap operas appeal to the public?

By CRAIG HOWARD
Features Writer

What kind of person can be roped, kidnapped, have their first husband reappear at their second wedding after being presumed dead, have a dual personality and an evil twin that's a Russian spy? Why, a person on a soap opera, of course.

For those of you whose nose is bleeding after reading this, stop now, it only gets worse. You have been warned.

Although daytime drama, or soap operas, as they are popularly called, push the limits of the imagination, many people tune in every single day at the required time to see the likes of "Days of Our Lives" or "General Hospital." College students schedule their classes around them, some schools offer a course in Soap Opera 101, and VCR's are constantly in the record mode so that the working class can see SOAP OPERAS, p. 17.

See 'Cult' members Ian Astbury (vocals), Billy Duffy (guitar) and ex-member Jamie Stewart UAB, yes UAB, with the red-hot Black Crowes on October 26.

Brothers bar will host Terrell, who's lead singer is from Albertville, tonight at around 10 or 10:30 p.m.

Writer's Club kicks in to 'hone' crafts

By KELLY DESSAINT
Features Writer

This fall, the Writer's Club is forming again for all interested writers who wish to work with other writers to hone their craft. The Writer's Club is a student organization which encourages creative writing and offers a support system for writers. It gives poets, fiction writers, and essayists a place to share their work with other writers and a forum for discussion on how to improve. They are not looking for professional writers, but for people who show promise and a serious desire to perfect their skills.

This organization is not designed to be merely a social club. Dr. Susan Methvin, English professor, began the Writer's Club last fall as a "vehicle for growth," not just as a place for writers to congregate and be together. It is a club for serious writers who take their work seriously.

To achieve this goal, Susan Methvin and Dorothy Tobe, the two sponsors, are accepting memberships by application only. To apply, each applicant is asked to submit two pages of his or her work in an envelope, along with an address and phone number to either Ms. Methvin or Ms. Tobe in the English department, located in Stone Center.

So a non-biased decision can be made, the writer should indicate on the outside of the envelope whether he or she was a member during the 1989-90 academic year. Ms. Methvin and Ms. Tobe will judge by two non-biased instructors to avoid favoritism. The deadline for submissions will be in mid-October.

Members will be notified by phone or mail, and the first meeting will be scheduled before the end of October.

Interested students should contact either Ms. Methvin or Ms. Tobe. Visitors are welcome to observe the meetings if they see one of the sponsors beforehand.

Me, Mr. Tayrod and the moon

By M.Z. STRAUGHTER Features Writer

From the back seat of the car, viewed the Alabama scenery. The trees were tall and seemed to sway to the speed of the car. The wild flowers were brown and beautiful, reminding me of a romance long gone. In the car with me were two new friends whom I had recently met and agreed to ride to their home with this Saturday afternoon. I knew not what direction we were going on this long, seemingly endless road, but the music was loud and the drinks were cold, so I just sat and thought. I thought about the history of the South, where racism and hate stemming from ignorance was a prevalent factor in many lives. I wondered how much had changed, wanting desperately to believe that the smile on the face of a different race was not superficial, but a warm invitation to friendship. I expressed my thoughts, with a bit of anxiety, to my two new friends. I was quickly reminded that change starts with us. I made a sharp right turn onto a dirt road labeled "Tayrod." This is my grandmother's house, you'll like him," Ron said from the passenger seat. The "spread," as he affectionately called it, was two miles down the road. We pulled up to a magnificent, restored log cabin. There, an old man sat in a rocking chair on the porch. He did not rise until we were standing beside him. He hugged his grandpa and asked abruptly, "Who this boy?" Ron introduced me to his grandfather, Mr. Ronald Tayrod, the first. "You got to be from up North by the way you lookin' at me," Mr. Tayrod barked from his seat. Admittedly, I was intimidated by this elderly gentleman. I spoke assertively, trying to illustrate my confidence and self-assurance. All along, Mr. Tayrod studied my mannerisms. He asked if I wanted a drink. "Of course," I said, trying for some reason to impress this elderly gentleman. My friends declined, they wanted to go fishing. I decided to wait for them at the "spread." After they left, Mr. Tayrod instructed me to go to the "icebox" and get the jug of water. He did. He took a big gulp and passed the jug to me. I followed his lead and took a gulp. Needless to say, tears came to my eyes immediately. "Y'all ain't got this up [North] there," he said with a grin. "No sir, we don't," I said as I passed the jug back and sat down. "One thing you got to remember son, things happen slower downtown South but, damnit, they happen. Do you understand what I'm sayin'?" Mr. Tayrod asked. He passed the jug back to me and said, "You have good talk, what's on your mind?" I'm just thinking about people and how they act," I said as I passed the jug back. I continued, "I think a lot of people are superficial, but a warm invitation to friendship is quite possible that they are not, always running around trying to be 'hard' and too afraid to be themselves. Do you understand what I'm saying, Mr. Tayrod?"

"After another sip, he passed the jug and asked, "Why do you care about other people?" I thought for a moment and replied, "Sometimes I don't and that worries me more then when I do." When you boys are up there at that University, you'll forget your ideas and dreams. Runnin' around after those girls and drinking and dancing. You'll forget the dreams and hope that made ya'll go to school in the first place. I say you need something to remind yourselves where you came from." He passed the jug and continued, "I say look to the moon, reach for it! if you fail, you'll be bright among the stars."

We sat in silence passing the jug back and forth. It held me there. In a sense, the jug represented the passage of age and knowledge. We finished the jug of clear liquid as Shaun and Ron pulled up to the "spread." It was getting late and they were ready to leave. Tayrod, I began, "I can see the moon over those trees to your left." He grasped my hand and said, "I know you can see, I can see it in your eyes. Make sure you see them tomorrow and the next day. Why don't you help someone else at Jacksonville see the moon?"

From the back seat of the car, I viewed the Alabama scenery. The trees were tall, and the moon was bright...
Special Olympics

On Friday, September 15, twelve members of the JSU Special Olympics staff, under the direction of Dr. Glenn Rosval, met at Pete Mathews coliseum to begin their convoy to Camp ASCCA in Jackson’s Gap, Alabama. Camp ASCCA is the world’s largest camp for special children and adults and was also chosen as the site for the 1990 Alabama Special Olympics Family Reunion.

The staff arrived at Camp ASCCA around 10:30 a.m. and immediately began setting up equipment and preparing for the events for the weekend. By 4:30 that night, many of the 129 campers, parents, and siblings began to arrive, ready for a weekend filled with family togetherness and fun.

Throughout the weekend, the campers participated in numerous sports sessions of softball, handball, basketball, tennis, soccer, and aquatics. During this time, the parents were attending special sessions covering some of the concerns of parents of special children. The families reunited to participate in recreational activities like arts and crafts, treehouse, a confidence course, floor hockey, and bocce.

The purpose of this well-planned family retreat was not only bring the parents and their children closer together, but also to use Special Olympics as the common bond between each family. Overall, the Alabama Special Olympics Family Retreat was a huge success, everyone leaving with a smile, full of enthusiasm, and ready for the remainder of the Special Olympics events for the rest of the year.

At Brother's Bar

Drivin' -n- Cryin' rocks Jacksonville

THERESA MASKEW
Features Writer

Brother's Bar rocked Jacksonville on last Wednesday and Thursday when it hosted Atlanta-based Drivin' -n- Cryin'. Insane Jane warmed the crowd on Wednesday night, then D-n-C blasted original tunes, like "Honeysuckle Blue," and gave the crowd the ride of their life. On Thursday night, a special treat was added to the explosion. Rick Richards and Rick Price of the Georgia Satellites made their Alabama debut as The Ricardos.

Drivin'-n-Cryin' is a unique mixture of very talented people. The band members are: Kevin Kinney, vocals; Buren Fowler, lead guitar; Tim Nielson, bass guitar; and Jeff Sullivan on drums. Common interest brought the group together five years ago. "Tim and I started the band because we share a lot of the same interests. We like the same groups, and decided to make an album," Kinney explains. "Our record came out in 1988 and we've been able to make five records so far. That's pretty good success!"

On January 5, the band's next album, entitled "Fly Me Courageous," will be released to record stores around the country. This album will be slightly different from the country-oriented albums of the past. As Kinney explains, it doesn't have as many country songs or anything weird on it. It's pretty much straight-forward rock. If you like Malfunction Junction, you'll like this album, because that's the kind of will the music went into."

The inspiration behind D-n-C's music includes everyone from the Ramones and Bob Dylan to David Lynch and Jesus Christ. Recalling the time when they opened for REM, Kinney remarks, "It was fun, but it was over so quick, words are hard to find to explain it."

Drivin'-n-Cryin' puts a lot into their show and they enjoy the feedback from the crowd. They like to think of the crowd as cheerleaders at a football game, and they are the team making the winning touchdown. "I never went to college, and I didn't play sports. It's neat knowing that I'm 26-years-old, and all I have to do to make the crowd go crazy is sing a few songs. It's a neat feeling because I've never had anyone cheer for me," Kinney says.

If you missed D-n-C at Brother's, then you can catch their show in Atlanta at the Fox Theater. Kinney says, "We always look forward to playing at the Fox. It's like you get to put on a real concert a year. It's like a Frank Sinatra thing or something. Someday, I hope we can play at Graceland."

Outside the music industry, the group finds relaxation off the road in various ways: Kinney likes, "We play gold, go to the movies, or parties and we like to ride go-carts."

At present, the band is on the road and seem to have nowhere to go but a step further on the rock-n-roll ladder of success. "I'm really happy right now. We've been together for awhile and we're still having lots of fun. We make a good amount of money, all we have to do is keep going," says Kinney of their success.

This is one band that is driving down the rock-n-roll highway at maximum speed and they aren't shedding any tears. "I'd like lots of people to get into our music. I'd love to be massive someday. If we do well, then it happens. We'd love to win some sort of award someday, but it depends on which award it is. A lot depends on how well you work, and this year, our work is much better than it has been," Kinney says. "Our music is more focused and I think people will like it. I hope our album sells a couple hundred thousand copies, that would be great. It's a good record."

January is just around the corner and "Fly Me Courageous" will be waiting in music stores. Drivin'-n-Cryin' is a powerful band, so sit back in the driver's seat and give it the gas. As Kinney says, "We have no parental guidance, and we're truly wild at heart."
