3 football players charged with assault

Shane McGriff
News Writer

JSU police arrested three football players on assault charges last week.

Director of Public Safety David Nichols said Sean P. Richardson, James M. Lester, and Terry L. White, all of Salls Hall, were charged on warrants stemming from two different assault incidents.

Richardson was charged Feb. 4 on a warrant signed by Jimmy Prestwood.

Campus police said Prestwood was leading a study group in Houston Cole Library and asked Richardson to quiet down. Allegedly, Richardson was angered and hit Prestwood in the head.

White and Lester were arrested Feb. 7 on a warrant signed by Joseph Patton. According to the statement, a group of up to 20 people were involved in a fight near Daugnette Hall Feb. 1. Several men assaulted Patton.

The reporting officer said Patton was "bleeding from the mouth and nose very bad" and an ambulance was called to the scene.

Police were unable to obtain information on a cause for the incident except that the fight apparently was related to a problem at an Alpha Phi Alpha party held earlier in the Montgomery Building.

Head Football Coach Bill Burgess said Tuesday that no disciplinary action had been taken against the players.

He said he would wait until the cases were through the court system before he would make a decision on any of the players. "We'll handle the situation in-house. That's all I want to say about it," said Burgess.

Richardson and White were both contributors to JSU's football program last year.

Richardson, a red-shirt freshman, was the number two fullback last year and White, a junior, started on defense at the left cornerback position.

The JSU sports information office lists Lester as a football player but his status was unavailable at press time.

SGA funds Special Olympians' trips

The SGA presented a check for $1,440 to the Alabama Special Olympics at Monday's senate meeting.

The check was accepted by Gina Willis, assistant executive director of the Alabama Special Olympics.

The money contributed by the SGA will allow athletes from the area to attend the 1991 Summer International Special Olympics, to take place in St. Paul, Minn. from July 17 to 29.

The students who have been selected to go are Dana Kilgore and Denise Clark, both of Wellborn High School. They will both be competing in the roller skating competition.

The SGA contribution will go toward the girls' transportation, food, lodging and uniforms.

portation, food, lodging and uniforms.

"We're very excited because we are trying to involve the universities," said Willis. "All of this wouldn't be possible if JSU students weren't involved."

Both Kilgore and Clark have been active with JSU's Special Olympics staff, which is directed by Glen Roswal. Both have attended the Fall Sports Camp and the skating clinics sponsored by the JSU staff.

Laura Blanchard and Barrie Ogletree are co-directors of the JSU Special Olympics. They will travel to St. Paul, Minn., this summer as coaches and are currently raising the money they need to attend.

Blanchard and Clark are senior special education majors. "I have a brother with Down's Syndrome and that's what got me interested in special education," said Blanchard.

The SGA senate presented Dana Kilgore and Denise Clark, center, with a plaque and $1,440 at Monday's SGA meeting.

Seven apply for executive positions

Melanie Jones
News Writer

Seven students have announced their intent to seek positions that will allow them to influence campus life in the coming year. They will be campaigning for the three executive offices of the SGA; president, vice president and financial officer.

Jackie Derrick and Clinton Baker are both in the race for president. Derrick is a senior majoring in education and has served on the senate for one year. Derrick said she is interested in what's happening on campus and wants to serve the students. She said, "I'll be here for the students, they won't be here for me." Derrick said she is pleased with the changes the SGA has gone through under the new constitution. She said she wants to, "go with that (change) and make it better."

Baker could not be reached for comment by press time.

Another applicant, junior Phil Pyle, was ruled ineligible by the Elections Committee Wednesday morning.

According to Pyle, he withdrew from school last semester after being told by ROTC officials he would receive failing grades if he dropped two courses, even though he was passing at the time. "After talking to my advisor, it was agreed that in the long-run, it would be better for my GPA to withdraw, Pyle said. After the withdrawal was complete, Pyle received "withdraw failing" grades from ROTC any way.

"I withdrew Nov. 7," Pyle said. The last day to withdraw passing was Nov. 13.

"I understand that rules must be followed, but this sometimes turns a deaf ear to fairness," Pyle said.

Yusef Al-Amein and Sam Witherspoon are running for vice president.

Al-Amein is a sophomore and has served as a senator for one year. If elected, he hopes to use his position to reduce racial tension on campus. He said his goal is to serve the people, not just get elected. "There is a difference between a politician and a statesman, and I like to think of myself as a statesman," he said. "I'm going to tell it like it is."

Witherspoon is a sophomore marketing major who has served as a senator for nearly two years. Witherspoon said he hopes to make the student body feel confident in the SGA's abilities. "I want to start a tradition of strong confidence in the SGA. I hope to prove to students that they are the SGA's number one priority."

The candidates for financial officer are Chris Phillips, Ashley Richards and Vickie Story.

Phillips is an education major in his sophomore year who has served on the senate for one year. He said the position of financial officer is a "stepping stone in leadership skills." Phillips said he likes things the way they are in the SGA, and, if he is elected, he will continue to provide senators with itemized financial reports like they have received in the past.

Story said her sister, who was financial officer in 1988, inspired her to seek the position. Story is a junior majoring in corrections. She has served on the senate for three years. If elected, Story said she will send senators a bi-weekly budget. "I would like to see more people get involved in the SGA," said Story.

Richards was not available for comment.

Elections will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. March 5, on the fourth floor of Montgomery Building.

South proud, not prejudiced

Karen Parr
News Writer

Ask Norman Dasinger about the Civil War and he will quickly interject, "We don't say Civil War. We call it a war for independence."

Dasinger said he and some other Southerners dispute the popular portrayal of Southerners as "the bad guys" in connection with the war.

Dasinger declared the media portray Southerners as "a bunch of Klu Kluxers." He said authors of textbooks depict a picture of the South that sells, not a picture that is complete.

Dasinger said his goal is to communicate history free of these distorted views. One way he does this is by visiting area high schools and elementary schools in an attempt to educate students about an often unseen picture of the South. He said his talks arouse curiosity and interest in the students.

During these visits, Dasinger dons a grey Confederate Sergeant Major uniform. He said he wears it in memory of his great-great-grandfather, who was a Sgt. Maj. in the 7th Mississippi infantry battalion during the Civil War.

Dasinger said that like himself, many Southerners are descended from Confederate soldiers. They are simply unaware of the fact.

He makes the claim that, "If you are a Southerner and your history goes back, you are descended from a man who fought in the Confederate army." He said this is probably the case in 98 to 99 percent of Southerners.

Dasinger said it is very important for people to understand the war was not about slavery. He said since about 91 percent of the Confederates did not own slaves, "it would have been stupid" for them to fight for other men's property.

He said the war-spawning secession was a Southern reaction to Northern injustice shown to them. The South was not being treated fairly, said Dasinger, as they were taxed for funds which were mostly spent in the industrialized North.

Dasinger called the Civil War "Lincoln's War." He said Lincoln started the war because he did not want the mar of a Southern secession and a disjointed Union on his presidency.

"They don't put what Lincoln said about black people in the textbooks," said Dasinger. He said Lincoln did not want blacks to gain the right to vote and he made remarks denoting blacks as inferior.

"Abraham Lincoln said these things," Dasinger said, "I'm not making it up."

Dasinger is a member of The Sons of Confederate Veterans, an organization that supports his views.

The Sons of Confederate Veterans is a genealogical-based organization open to those who can prove they descend from a Confederate soldier. The group meets monthly to discuss issues concerning the war between the states.

The group created the General John Herbert Kelley, Legion of the Valley Award which it gives to men who die in battle.

Two of these awards went to white soldiers and three went to black soldiers, said Dasinger. "We honor Southern fighting men—black, white, or whatever," said Dasinger. "Our organization has nothing to do with race."

Local elementary school kids look on in wonder as JSU professor Norman Dasinger explains Southern heritage to them. Dasinger uses the Confederate flags in his talks.

Class cuts not as drastic as feared

Shannon Cooper
News Editor

Classes offered over the three summer sessions have been cut by 8 percent.

Robert E. Kribel, vice president for Academic Affairs, said the cuts in classes came about due to a $300,000 budget decrease.

The decrease was a result of proration. Kribel said reductions in travel and equipment expenses were not enough to meet the necessary reductions.

Faculty members on 12-month contracts will not be affected by the cutbacks, Kribel said. All departments' nine-month employees will be affected considerably, he added.

The College of Nursing was the hardest department hit by budget reduction. Classes dropped from 25 offered in 1990 to 12 offered in 1991. Kribel attributed the sizeable drop to the termination of the department's Master's program.

Classes in the College of Business Administration and the College of Education also dropped significantly, Kribel said. CBA classes dropped from 92 to 76, while CED classes dropped from 133 to 122.

The College of Communication and Fine Arts was the only one to see an increase in classes offered with 77 last year and 79 this year.

Kribel stressed that some of the changes would have occurred regardless of the budget cuts.

"Even if there were no changes in the summer budget, the course offerings change from year to year," Kribel said.

He said many courses have just had reductions in the number of sections offered, while very few courses have been cut out completely, he said.

"We're trying our best to meet the students' needs. They may not have as much flexibility as they would like, but hopefully no one will be hurt badly," he said.

Drug charges brought against three students

Melanie Jones
News Writer

University police have arrested five students for possession of marijuana in the past two weeks.

Officers charged Mark Bowan and Michael Sweiger, both of 113 Dixon Hall and Charles White of 116 Dixon Hall with possession of marijuana. Bowen and Sweiger were also charged with possession of drug paraphernalia.

According to David Nichols, head of the Department of Public Safety, police officers were already in the dorm to pick up a suspect in question.

The officers detected the odor of marijuana in the room and conducted a legal search after the occupants of the room signed a "consent to search" form.

The search resulted in the discovery of the alleged marijuana and drug paraphernalia which is now in a crime lab being analyzed.

Nichols said police have found more drugs in the past two years than in previous years.

Marijuana isn't the only drug police have found on campus, Nichols said. Cocaine, LSD and Crack Cocaine have also been confiscated by police in the past two years.

Although there has been an increase in the number of drug-related arrests recently, Nichols said he does not feel this indicates an increase in drug use on campus.

Nichols said the increased number of arrests is the result of an increased awareness of drugs and of police spending more time in the residence halls.

While the allocation was cut by one-third, each dean was given the given authority to transfer funds in order to offer more classes. # Illiteracy, drop-out rates scar state's rep

Myra Gaddis
News Writer

Alabama has weak economic and educational systems, according to J. Wayne Flynt, an Auburn University professor.

Flynt addressed the issue of faulty Alabama programs during a speech he held Feb. 5.

Flynt's recently published book, "Poor but Proud," is based on the economic and political background of Alabama.

Most of the book's information came from Flynt's family members.

"I come from a long line of story tellers," he said. Flynt said his mother would hurry his father along in his stories by saying, "Get to the point, Homer." Flynt said this advice has helped him, too.

The majority of Flynt's speech was on the weak economic and educational systems in Alabama.

"Alabama maintains a good tax and regulator environment but is crippled by inadequate educational resources, a below average financial sector, and an uneven infrastructure," Flynt said.

Flynt said the drop-out and illiteracy rates in Alabama are too high.

He said 500,000 adults in Alabama are illiterate, and almost one million did not graduate from high school.

His statistics also showed that 65 percent of every dollar spent on food stamps and welfare went to high school dropouts in 1989. ACT scores dropped three points on the average in 1990, and 8 percent of all high school seniors in Alabama did not even take the ACT.

Flynt did offer an ounce of hope. He said the scores on the verbal section of the ACT were much higher last year, and the ACT scores of minority students have increased for the last 15 years.

Take time to enjoy life, not just live it

"Times they are a-changin'," someone said the other day.

Indeed, they are.

Today's college students not only have school work and jobs to worry about, but now they have war, the economy and the state's funding — or lack of — for higher education as well.

With all these responsibilities, who has time to think? There are all sorts of time management classes offered to help students get organized. They give students direction by suggesting ways to divide their time.

Not many people, myself included, have time to attend these seminars, though.

How does one get organized when he doesn't even have time to go to the seminars?

Reports are often neglected to make way for studying for tests. Then, homework problems are neglected to make way for reports. The circle seems to be never-ending.

I have tried to bring some order to my own chaos, but outside forces always seem to break up the scheme of my "perfect" plan.

The "perfect" plan allots time for every project, homework assignment and test review. It also gives an hour for lunch and dinner; six hours are dedicated to sleep.

Shannon Cooper
News Editor

Professors advise two hours of outside studying for every hour of classes, so hmmm...that's 30 hours a week for 15 hours of classes. There goes 45 hours of the week. Meals take up 14 hours and sleep takes up 42 hours.

Now, students working part-time jobs need not forget the time they spend at work. Another 15 hours can be added for money-earning ventures.

Provided nothing runs over, students have used up 116 of their 168 hours in the week.

Social organizations take up another chunk of time with weekly meetings and parties.

Special research projects usually require more than their designated two hours.

Commuting time is also a factor. More than two-thirds of JSUs students drive from home. The seemingly short drive from Oxford takes about 30 minutes, but round-trip for five days adds up to another five hours.

Most people don't fall out of bed ready to go to class. They at least have to pull on a pair of pants and throw on a hat. Some even go so far as to take a shower and put on make-up. This can take anywhere from five minutes to two hours, depending upon how much appearance matters to each student. Either way, physical preparation takes up time every day.

Most students also like to have some kind of social life. Some even think the social aspect of college is an important part of their education.

How does one decide whether classes or friends should come first?

Most students cannot handle studying, working and sleeping all day every day; they need dating and socializing to cushion the blow of continuous stress.

I wish I had time to give 15 hours a week to friends rather than to classes, but I guess if it weren't for my classes, I wouldn't have the friends.

Regardless, there's no reason to leave time for fun out of the "perfect" plan. A few hours a day should be devoted to pleasurable things that don't necessarily pertain to classes or work.

Maybe there isn't enough time in a week to do everything, but by compromising, things seem to fall into place sooner or later. The end of the semester, after all, is less than three months away.

Anger may cause untimely death

From News Bureau reports

The director of the JSU Psychology Clinic has advice on how to handle anger before it kills you.

"If you tend to hold in angry feelings, you may be letting yourself in for a shortened life span," according to Loni Willanzheimer, Clinic director.

Willanzheimer said "suppressed anger can cause heart disease, high cholesterol, high blood pressure, headaches, constipation, diarrhea and insomnia. It can even cause depression and changes in appetite."

A study conducted at Duke University Medical Center reveals that chronic anger can shorten your life as much or more than smoking, obesity and a high-fat diet.

Willanzheimer's suggestions for overcoming anger are:

- Exercise

"Physical exercise is a good way to vent anger because it helps you take care of the adrenaline your body has released," she said.

- Talk.

"Find a friend — or even the person you're angry with — and talk it over. This will relieve you of some of the hostility that is inside and it may even help bring about a solution to whatever is causing the anger," she said.

- Be more assertive.

"Often, anger is caused by a person not being assertive enough to express himself. When this happens anger builds up."

- Join a support group if necessary.

"Sometimes it helps to find a group of people who share your problems. They will be able to relate to what you are going through," she said.

- Learn to recognize the signs of building anger.

"When you feel yourself getting 'stressed out' because of what you're holding inside, go ahead and let it go. Mow the grass or jog, whatever you feel like doing."

The key to controlling anger, Willanzheimer said, is to "find a suitable channel for the anger and it won't have a chance to build up."

Drug use declining

College Press Service

The number of college and high school students who use illicit drugs sharply declined in 1990, a nationwide study contended Jan. 24.

Students' consumption of alcohol remains at about the same high levels of prior years, the annual survey by the National Institute of Health and the University of Michigan also found.

"Clearly our young people are gradually moving away from nearly all forms of illicit drug use," concluded Lloyd D. Johnston, the survey's director and social scientist at Michigan.

Researchers found that about one-third of the 1,200 college students surveyed had used an illicit drug in the past year.

One-third of high school students asked also reported they had used an illicit drug during 1990.

By contrast, last year's survey found that 50.8 percent of all college students and high school seniors had used illicit drugs in 1989.

"We are seeing a continuing decline in the proportion of these populations who are actively using any illicit drug, as well as in the proportions using a number of specific drugs such as marijuana, cocaine, crack, stimulants and sedatives," Johnston reported.

Students' use of alcohol is declining much more slowly than other drugs.

In 1990, 75 percent of college students surveyed said they had consumed alcohol during the past month, down from a high of 83 percent in 1982.

While students apparently are using illicit drugs less frequently, Johnston added, it's not because drugs are hard to get.

"Our data strongly suggest that most of the decrease among young people in their use of marijuana, cocaine, crack and PCP is due to a change in their demand for these drugs, not a change in supply," he observed.

Students "have increasingly come to see the use of these drugs as dangerous and, probably as a result, peer acceptance of such use has diminished considerably," he said.

However, it's too early to become overly optimistic, Johnston warned.

"We must not lose sight of the fact that even today a significant fraction of our young people are involved with these drugs, and that there still remains much to be done."

SGA decreases own student representation

The SGA voted Monday night to reduce the amount of representation students can have in their only elected legislative body.

SGA is an acronym for Student Government Association, but this move is a regression from true student representation. The vote changed the number of senators from a percentage, which would have allowed the number of representatives to grow alongside student population, to a set number of 35.

Similar moves in the past to decrease student representation have failed because senators voted for progression and larger representation.

One reason given for the move is to allow people to work in different branches of SGA without being committed to the obligations of a senator.

However, it will probably decrease the amount of participation by students. It will definitely decrease the number of students whose voices will be heard on the debate floor.

The SGA has spent this year making some bold and positive changes such as forming five divisions of work and creating a new judiciary.

However, this latest move is not nearly as meritorious as previous accomplishments.

Much of the talk in the senate this year has centered around letting students become more involved in the decision making process. If this is truly the first priority of the senate, then why take away the students right to a well-represented assembly?

War changes no match for subtlety

More and more, the spotlight of American concern has been placed on change. The president is seeking to change the world order, students are changing as they become soldiers, and our perspective toward the globe is changing daily.

However, this is not a new phenomenon to Americans. In fact, change is so common place that we barely even notice how fast the world is moving before our eyes. We practically ignore change until it hits us straight on, as it has in the Middle East conflict.

Certainly, the changes are becoming more noticeable since our attention has centered on the Middle East, but the changes brought on by the war are really no more important than the ever-changing development our nation enjoys daily.

After the war is over, the world order (much as we may want to change it) will still be the same. The United States will still be the prevailing Western power and global security force. The Middle East will continue to be a hot spot for bickering and war. And in many ways, East will still be as far from West as it was in Rudyard Kipling's world.

Eric G. Mackey
Editor in Chief

No matter how the world changes, America will definitely see its share of change. But our most important changes are the subtle, everyday actions that maneuver the course of the nation.

Monday morning I was watching television when an upcoming special on U.S. aid to Egypt was announced. Wanting to see where we stood with Egypt, I decided to take the time to see the program.

The story centered around a small village where American dollars were building the area's first school, even though the town was hundreds of years old.

It baffles the mind to believe that any area of the world could be so far behind in education and technology. To some parts of the globe, change comes so slowly.

The education system in this country (as much as it is ridiculed) is one continual progression.

Like me, many students can remember the first computers in their high schools. Now those are archaic machines, after only a few years.

We are changing the way we do business. Though it seems like a ridiculous point, the discontinuing of the Sears catalogue heralds a new era of merchandising. Retail stores are so convenient now that many are saying catalogue sales are no longer profitable. Given, it's a small change, but it signals a vast growth in transportation, communication and retail outlets in this nation.

These were all subtle, but they have grown to the point they now affect the course our lives will take after college.

It seems clear, no matter how much the war may change the lines drawn on a globe, the most important changes take place because men and women continue to think and apply their knowledge to the betterment and change of the civilized world.

Hard to take anti-war protestors

Jason Thompson
Special to The Chanticleer

Americans should be accustomed to dissent. Laws of science say for every action there is an equal and opposite reaction. No matter what the cause may be, there is always one person or a group of people ready to play devil's advocate. The freedom to express opposing viewpoints is the fuel from which the fires of democracy feed. It is what sets America apart from the rest of the world.

For months now, supporters of the American troops in the Persian Gulf have shared the spotlight with anti-war protestors who feel our troops should be back on American soil, no matter what the consequences.

As citizens, we must accept all the opinions and marches, but some are easier to take than others. It is much easier to except those who bolster national pride with flags and signs which proclaim "God Bless the USA."

Anti-war demonstrators are not as easy to take. Mired in emotion they trample the American flag, projecting to our soldiers feelings of loneliness, abandonment and disgrace.

Of course, not all the protestors are so detestable. Many are peaceful and courteous in their demonstrations. That sentiment is understandable, but the fact remains that our armed forces are assembled to fight and defend. And that is what they've been called on to do. Everyone in the Middle East volunteered for his job knowing the dangers involved.

A group of 200,000 people marching in opposition to American involvement helps no one but Saddam Hussein and his Iraqi supporters.

War is never good, nor is it the best option. But sometimes it is the only option.

Was the Revolutionary War such a bad idea? Should we have let Germany conquer Europe while Japan terrorized the Pacific? Of course, if there were no such thing as war, we never would have had a choice because America the superpower never would have existed. Instead, there would be a weak United States and an even weaker Confederacy. And slavery might still exist.

Just as fighting was necessary in the past, it is necessary today. But it is not about an oil company's profit margin, or George Bush's quest for power, as many illogical people think. It is about preventing a man, who freely murders his own people, from controlling the most volatile region of the world.

It is about preventing a known terrorist from gaining enough power to threaten our own country. Unfortunately, America is the only country in the world strong enough to stop Iraq's aggression. And it must be stopped now. History demands it.

In 1938, Adolf Hitler demanded area in Czechoslovakia. In return, he promised Germany would expand no farther. At the time, Britain and France could have stopped Hitler. Instead, they compromised. One year later Hitler invaded Poland and began World War II.

America has taken the correct course of action, our only course of action. There will always be those who are too short-sighted and too narrow-minded to comprehend the current situation on a global and historical scale.

There will always be those who refuse to stand up and fight for America and for its ideals. They are the ones for whom American troops die. They are the ones who criticize the country that gives them the right to criticize.

As the fighting continues, so will the protests, marches and demonstrations by those people who live in a dream world where peace is freely given. But that's the United States of America. May God bless us all.

War coverage okay

I am sorry all the war coverage is interrupting your news flow. I would point out, however, there are some of us who have friends and others who have family on that "sand dune." We appreciate the coverage, even when it brings us painful news.

I can forgive the war stories about covering the Vietnam War, because it shows that we as a country have learned from our mistakes, and these veterans won't come home to the same reception. There is also a need to inform those of us who are too young to remember how these things are done and under what restrictions the reporters are operating. The last reason for war stories is to fill time, rather than breaking in and out when they know the story is still coming in.

As for the Soviet Union, they are not the only ones in history to violently suppress members of their own society. Perhaps we don't have the moral right to judge them? Death is deplorable under any circumstance, but it is a political reality that most countries have resorted to at one time or another.

Editors make the decision daily as to what news will be covered and what will be ignored. They make the decision as to how much coverage a story will get. Perhaps you should review your own decisions before criticizing others? You, as they, have a responsibility to cover your audience's interests and needs. In your case a proof reader would be a welcome addition to your staff.

About Abe Lincoln

I am writing in regard to a statement in the Jan. 24 edition of The Chanticleer. The comments were made by Doug Ford in regard to Ed Crook's comments in an earlier edition.

The statement I speak of is: "Obviously, he didn't pay attention in history classes, or he might remember that the so-called 'slave master' Abraham Lincoln was one of the most influential figures in the abolishment of slavery." Was he really? I am not a big history buff, but from what I have read outside of class, I think Lincoln was more concerned with saving his union than abolishing slavery. He was "influential," but he had ulterior motives for being "influential."

If you, Mr. Ford, ever get bored, pick up a copy of Lincoln's opening debate at Charleston, Ill., in 1858, against the incumbent for that state's senatorial seat. You can see Lincoln was not concerned about blacks. This was Lincoln's opening statement: "While I was at the hotel today an elderly gentleman called upon me to know whether I was really in favor of producing a perfect equality between the Negroes and white people. I will say, then that I am not, nor ever have been, in favor of making voters or jurors of Negroes, nor of qualifying them to hold office.... I, as much as any other man, am in favor of having the superior position assigned to the white race." This was before his presidency, but his attitudes did not change much during office.

The main point I wish to make is that everything we learn in a classroom is not "the Gospel." Am I to believe everything I hear inside of a classroom simply because it is a class. History is told from various perspectives, and it is only as objective as the person telling the story.

I wish to take nothing from the "image" of Abraham Lincoln, but sometimes we, as logical people, need to be less acquiescent about all subjects.

Did Socrates, Aristotle or Plato learn from mere listening? Where would our nation be if everyone took information without questioning? I can think of many cases where lives could have been saved had there been more inquisitive people...the one that comes to mind is the Jewish holocaust.

Support biking for MS

Dorothy Tobe
Special to The Chanticleer

Imagine pedaling a bicycle not only for your health, but for the health of other people who cannot ride a bike or walk unaided because of a disease called multiple sclerosis. Imagine reaching for what may be your first athletic award of any kind—a medal for the MS 150 VI 1991—dangling from a tricolored ribbon held out by an MS volunteer as you coast to the finish of a bike tour that many bring the cure for multiple sclerosis one year closer. Imagine the feeling of accomplishment, for in the past two days you have just ridden 150 miles on a bicycle.

This year's MS 150 bike tour through north-central Alabama hopes to raise $200,000 for funding research in finding a cure for multiple sclerosis. It is a disease of the central nervous system which causes unpredictable symptoms like blurred vision, slurred speech, loss of mobility, and even total paralysis. Multiple sclerosis has interrupted and slowed down the lives of a quarter-million Americans; at least 1,500 of those are here in Alabama, and one, at least, is on this campus. Students need to support the fight against the disease, because it most often occurs in people between the ages of twenty and forty -- people your age. Students should either sign up to ride the tour or sponsor a cyclist.

The tour leaves Birmingham May 18 and goes north to Lake Guntersville State Park, where riders may choose free overnight camping or rent a hotel room.

Saturday night will feature a barbecue supper. After a hot breakfast Sunday morning, riders will continue to Decatur. From there a bus ride will be provided back to Birmingham.

Rest stops will be provided every 10 miles. Support vehicles will patrol the route for help with bike repair or injuries.

Everything on the trip is free except transportation to and from Birmingham and the optional hotel room. One need not be a bicycle jockey to ride, and any bike in good condition will do.

For more information about riding the tour or supporting a cyclist, please see Dorothy Tobe in 104 Stone Center or call her at 782-5412; or call Barbara Grosenbaugh at 879-8881.

Last year a form a multiple sclerosis was cured in mice, but human application is at least 10 years away. That time can be shortened with research done by scientists sponsored by the Multiple Sclerosis Society. All JSU students need to do is ride a bicycle.

Assessment test to be given to seniors this semester

Allen Smith
Special to The Chanticleer

Most students are now aware that seniors who are planning to graduate during the spring and summer semesters are required to take a test called the College Base Examination (CBE). Some seniors have expressed concern their performance on the CBE might keep them from graduating. To allay these fears, I want to use this opportunity to describe the CBE, to explain why we are administering the test, and to suggest how the students can benefit from the test.

What is the CBE? It is one of nationally administered exams designed to assess the extent to which students have acquired the knowledge and skills expected of most college graduates. The test is not used to determine whether students may graduate, as is the English Competency Exam. Students' performances are used to assess the effectiveness of the University's curriculum, programs and instruction. The form of the CBE being used this spring does not give us scores on individual students. The scores we receive will represent an overall profile for the group tested.

Why are we requiring graduates to take this test? There are three interrelated reasons. First, our accrediting association, the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS) requires that each member institution provide evidence of its effectiveness in meeting its mission, goals and objectives. In other words, we must provide convincing evidence the educational opportunities we provide are worthwhile. The CBE is only one of the many assessment activities we must employ to demonstrate our effectiveness and to remain accredited. The second reason is accountability. Our assessment activities, including the CBE, are designed to answer the questions which will assure accountability of the University to its constituents. The third reason is to improve our programs and policies. Only by measuring our students successes can we determine what adjustments are necessary for improvement.

What can students gain from taking the CBE, or from participating in other assessment activities? If students' performances on the tests reflect their true abilities, the information provided will affect the University's planning, leading to better, more effective programs. These changes will lead to greater success of our future students, thus enhancing the status of the University. As the status of JSU rises, the status of JSU graduates also increases. Higher status of JSU and its graduates will increase competitiveness of our graduates in the job market.

Editor's note: Allen Smith is chairman of the University Assessment Committee.

Alabama Conservancy, Sierra Club accuse in-state companies of water violations

Karen Parr
Features Writer

Alabama citizens have threatened to sue 43 companies for alleged water violations in the largest anti-pollution, citizen campaign in Alabama's history.

While this is, for now, only a warning, two environmental groups, the Sierra Club and Alabama Conservancy, announced Feb. 6 their intentions to press charges if the accused companies do not clean up their act within 60 days.

A press release stated, "Under the Federal Clean Water Act, citizens and citizen groups may sue companies that violate water discharge permits issued to them by the Alabama Department of Environmental Management (ADEM)."

According to this law, a group must give the alleged violators, as well as the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and ADEM, 60 days notice.

Vice President of the Alabama Conservancy Pat Byington said, "Our hope is that every company will come into compliance (within the 60-day notice.) We (want) to avoid lawsuits if possible."

The question remains as to why the ADEM or EPA did not sue.

Ray Vaughan, lawyer for the Sierra Club and Conservancy, said he does not know why the EPA hasn't sued, but, "The ADEM likes to cooperate with companies and is reluctant to sue."

In fact, some of the companies may have already corrected their pollution problems without the public's knowledge. This is because it takes more than a month to process the water violation records, according to Byington.

For now, however, the companies stand accused.

Lee Brass Co. in Anniston is one company suspected of water violations. President Dale Rentroe said his company had not yet received the 60-day notice as of Feb. 8, and did not want to comment.

"Once we receive the letter, we will be glad to talk about it," Rentroe said.

As for public reaction to this citizen campaign, Alabama Conservancy President Pete Conroy said, "The response has been overwhelmingly positive."

Both Conroy and Byington agree this action is pro-business because it regulates all businesses and tries to make Alabama environmentally appealing for future businesses.

"It is significant for the nation because Alabama has always been seen as being lax in enforcing environmental law," said Byington.

If Alabama citizens continue to take the "environmental law" into their own hands, this nation-wide view may prove incorrect.

Whitton takes 'The Road to Mecca'

Sheila Lynch
Features Writer

The Anniston Community Theatre is currently presenting Athol Fugard's drama, "The Road to Mecca," featuring JSU English and drama professor Steve Whitton.

Josephine Ayers directs the play which includes cast members Patricia Kempas Miss Helen; Katie Robertson as Elsa; and Whitton as Marius Byleveld.

Helen is the focus of "Mecca," which is set in 1974, in a small South African village. She becomes the center of all gossip circles as she takes on a peculiar behavior after the death of her husband.

Helen begins practicing a type of voodoo, taking copper wires, beads, crushed bottles and mirrors and creates her "Mecca."

Naturally, this behavior worries Byleveld—in fact, he thinks Helen has gone mad—and he tries to convince Helen to enter an "old folks' home."

Elsa, on the other hand, is captivated by Helen's creation and urges Helen to stand up for herself.

But Whitton said he thinks the audience grows to like Byleveld, despite his view of Helen.

"The audience seems to like him because everyone has been in a situation similar to Byleveld's," in which he must look after Helen's best interest, but also maintain his friendship, Whitton said.

"The audience softens towards Byleveld because he unknowingly steps into an argument between Elsa and Helen." But basically, he is a good guy.

Of his character, Whitton said, "It took a while to get into the character of Byleveld, but even from the beginning I knew he was not a mustache-twirling villain. This helped me because I knew he was sincere in his actions."

For his role as Byleveld, Whitton had to grow a beard, which he said, "will be gone at the end of February," when the play is finished.

Whitton and others perform in "The Road to Mecca."

THE LEGEND OF THE VALENTINE

Helen Steiner Rice

The legend says St. Valentine
Was in a prison cell

Thinking of his little flock
He had always loved so well
And, wanting to assure them
Of his friendship and his love,
He picked a bunch of flowers and sent them by a dove...

And on the flowers' dewy leaves
He pierced these lines divine
That simply said "I love you"
And "I'm your Valentine"...

So through the years that followed,
From that day unto this,
We still send messages of love
And seal them with a kiss...

Because a saint in prison
Reached through prison bars one day
And picked a bunch of flowers
And sent them out to say
That faith and love can triumph,
No matter where you are,
For faith and love are greater
Than the strongest prison bar.

The Flip Side

'Maggie's Dream' reminiscent of '60s sound

History seems to be repeating itself as the '90s progress to more and more resemble those wild and crazy '60s. Just like the Vietnam war then, people today protest the war in the Persian Gulf. Hairstyles, such as the "French Twist," and fashions are popular again. Even the music sounds like that of the '60s.

Take "Maggie's Dream," for instance. This self-titled debut reeks of the ever-popular '60s "peace and love" harmony. In fact, the melodic guitar rhythms and soulful grooves resemble what could possibly be termed a Hendrix/Zepplin vibe.

Indeed, "Maggie's Dream" is the most refreshing and honest representation of musical creativity to hit the music scene since, perhaps, "Introducing the Hardline According to Terence Trent D'Arby," in 1987. Just as D'Arby rejuvenated the "soul" inside music lovers then, Maggie's Dream now are setting new standards for feeling through music.

Members Lonnie Hillyer, bass; Tony James, drums; Donny Palomo, vocals; Raf, guitars and vocals, do an excellent job combining melodic grooves with slap-in-the-face lyrics. From the first track, "Change for the

Michelle Martin
Features Editor

Better," to the final one, "Fly," Maggie's Dream do their part to raise the human consciousness level of their listeners.

"Human," for example, talks of the blind prejudices in the world, asking, "Why do people judge each other/ According to their skin's own color?/ No one seems to take the blame/For the fuss, yeah, it's a shame/We are all in the same race/ Put on Earth to recreate/ The human race."

"One in Six" is an emotional song which examines mortality. The title represents the one person in a crowd of six who dies, leaving the others to question their existence. "Pray for the souls of many who slip away/ And to understand that it's close at hand/ Will it always be a friend/ And alone his soul is crying/ While life goes on/ And we turn our backs and wonder/ Why life goes on" tug at the heart of the listeners, causing them to treasure friendships and even more importantly, life, a little more.

Although these and all other songs on "Maggie's Dream" are brilliantly aimed at sparkling human awareness, it is easy for listeners to overlook the messages. The dream-like melody which is present in almost every song causes the listeners to drift in and out of consciousness, losing themselves in only the music. It's like what acid trippers would listen to, but it's soothing and sincere at the same time.

Still, "Maggie's Dream" is not for the average music fan. This album actually makes them think, and even then the messages aren't always clear. For example, "Living for the Times" deals with the government's policy on war, saying, "Well the truth is now fruition/ And the leaders of their world/ Say we should drop the ammunition/ To create a brighter day." Granted, this is a powerful message, but how many people know what fruition means?

This is not to say the "deepness" of "Maggie's Dream" will discourage music lovers, but this is clearly an album for, perhaps, the more socially conscious listeners. Even so, once again, the music alone makes Maggie's Dream worth a listening.

Former drug addict, ex-satanist, now Christian crusader, speaks at Leone Cole

Tony Entrekin
Features Writer

Never before has there been a comedian like Mike Warnke.

Warnke, Christian comedian and crusader, is a former Vietnam Marine Corps medic, drug pusher, addict and satanist High Priest.

Warnke brought his unusual blend of comedy and evangelism to Leone Cole Auditorium Saturday, Feb. 2, before a crowd of more than 300. Still others were turned away.

Most of the audience had not ever heard Warnke and did not know what to expect of his act. They soon came to expect the unexpected.

When he appeared on stage, Warnke seemed the ultimate hippie, with long hair, an earring and button-covered denim jacket. For those who were shocked at his appearance, Warnke offered this explanation:

"I am not a vagrant, I am a Veteran. (All Veterans) look like this," he said.

Warnke also defended his long hair, citing Biblical references. "The first documented haircut in the Bible caused a man to go blind, (referring to Samson,) so it seems like something to avoid to me," Warnke said.

Warnke's appearance is only an illustration of his Christian philosophy, which is, "If you ain't radical, you ain't spit."

Radical, Warnke definitely is. Having travelled extensively with his ministry, Warnke has plenty of tales to tell.

He spoke of his California visit, saying it was the worst experience ever. "The first time I was in California, I was mistaken for some guy named Dude. I guess Dude was his last name because sometimes I was called 'Yo Dude,'" Warnke said.

Another humorous tale was of an encounter with an evangelist who made a practice of hitting people on the head as part of the healing process.

"When he hit me the first time," Warnke said, "I didn't fall down, so he came after me. Finally, I got back in line, and when I reached the front, he said, 'Hey, ain't you already been through?'" Warnke replied, "Yeah, but now I have a headache."

After an hour of funny tales such as these, Warnke shifted to a more serious subject, warning the audience of the dangers of following the rules and doctrines of a particular denomination too closely. "Religion can really get in the way of your walk with the Lord," he said.

During the invitation, Warnke asked all the Christians in the audience to raise their hand. While almost every hand went up, there were others that did not. Still, Warnke praised them for their honesty.

"I'd rather have an honest sinner look me in the eye than be kissed on the cheek by a hypocritical Christian," Warnke said.

Warnke still maintained his sense of humor to the end in during a solemn altar call.

In fact, when two men left early, Warnke joked, "You know, I got angels in the parking lot, letting the air out of your tires. And my angels wear Harley-Davidson jackets!"

JSU launches campus recycling program

Sheila Lynch
Features Writer

As the level of environmental concern grows across the nation, so it does on college campuses, including JSU.

JSU, with the help of the Campus Recycling Advisory Committee, has organized a campus-wide recycling program to do its part in preserving the natural beauty of the environment.

George E. Miller, vice president for Business Affairs, is director of the project.

Miller said the committee has already selected the chairman, Jerry Gilbert of the recycling campaign, and SGA, faculty and staff representatives. The committee is still searching for the right firm to handle the actual recycling of the goods.

The difficulty in finding a recycling company is with the profits gained from recycling. Miller said the committee wants to receive all the money and put it back into the University for community scholarships.

"We want this project to be on a volunteer basis, yet we need to solicit the cooperation of all JSU faculty, staff and students," said Miller.

To ensure the JSU recycling campaign is a success, Gilbert is studying the different programs at other campuses, but thinks the proper committee should be organized before any decisions regarding the program are made.

"We need active members from all areas of student life," said Gilbert, "and at this time, we do not have a greek representative."

Gilbert also said the committee is asking for slogan suggestions for the recycling campaign. For example, UAB used the slogan "Dollars for Scholars."

Deadline for entry is March 1. The person submitting the best slogan will receive a $50 bond.

Entries can be sent to: Philip Attinger, SGA, Montgomery Bldg., 4th Floor, JSU, 36265.

Special photo essay: litter on campus

What's wrong with these pictures?

Jay Ennis
Photo Editor

I took a stroll around the campus early one Sunday morning. It was peaceful and completely deserted, an excellent time to appreciate the beauty of the architecture and the precision of the landscaping on this campus. The silence was complete.

What really screwed up this serene experience was trash. Folks, I mean everywhere I looked there was a trace of litter. I'm not really qualified to preach to anyone about the sins of pollution. I'm as guilty as the rest of you, paper waste have been casually tossed into the grass, and beverage containers have hit the pavement. I can always justify these actions with the old "spit in the ocean" cliché.

What I realized that Sunday morning was that maybe we did need to start making a difference. Society suspects that we are going to be college graduates soon, and we will be the next generation of leaders and trend-setters. So if a change needs to be initiated, it should begin at JSU. We are being very poor role models right now, yet it is never too late to begin anew.

Being a photographer means that I will usually have a camera ready to try and capture those moments in life that are different. I present to you an example of what I saw that day.

Each of these settings is tainted by litter which has been strewn on campus. Unfortunately, this is a common sight at JSU.

Student money used to pick up trash on campus

Karen Parr
Features Writer

This campus is getting trashed. And the culprits are free to litter again and continue on a frenzied spree of wasting money.

Students' money.

JSU money, which could be used for students, bleeds into such cases as replacing vandalized trash receptacles and picking up used Marlboro packs from parking lots.

University Engineer Jim McArthur, who is in charge of grounds and building upkeep, addressed the problem, "(Littering) is a universal problem." He added that measures to curb the litter problem come out of the budget, which could be used for other worthwhile programs if the litter were not so bad.

For instance, he estimated the costs of the pebble-studded trash cans to be $100. Many have been broken in half by irresponsible people.

"We've had several of these vandalized," McArthur said. "They're heavy enough (that) you know they don't blow over."

Furthermore, the University has to hire people specifically to pick up what others throw down.

"There's one man assigned to (pick up trash) full time. At times they have to put someone else along with him," McArthur added. "In the afternoons they have a man on the east side of campus picking up trash."

In addition to this clean-up crew are housekeepers, who are supposed to clean up around the buildings.

While this crew solves the problem of trash on campus, at great expense, it is difficult to impose fines on those who litter.

"The trouble is it's hard to catch someone," said McArthur. He said he is sure the University Police don't have the time or extra men to watch for those who litter.

There is a flip-side to this expensive and problematic coin. If students choose to deposit litter in the right places, the University can actually profit.

Campuses are now mandated by law to instill recycling programs in their schools reported Jerry Gilbert, a member of the newly formed JSU recycling committee. "We need to get recycling on everyone's mind," Gilbert said.

Gamecocks pull away from undermanned Braves

Todd Brooks
Sports Writer

The JSU men continued to roll Monday night at Mathews Coliseum as they put away out-gunned West Georgia 91-66. The game was quite methodical, nothing flashy, but the Gamecocks did what was most important -- they won. The highlight of the game was when Pat Madden was announced to have broken the all-time assist record at JSU.

The Braves were able to hang-in early but didn't have the depth to stay with the Gamecocks for the entire game. The West Georgia bench only scored eight points.

West Georgia tried to do what most out-manned teams do by running down the 45-second clock as far down as possible before shooting. But they were not able to stick to the game plan very long, as they tried to match the Gamecocks' pace. The only time the Braves kept JSU from scoring is when the 45-second clocks broke from two dunks, one from each team. The delay in the first half lasted between 5-10 minutes and about two minutes in the second half.

Coach Bill Jones starting line-up changes seemed to work well in the game. David Edmund, who normally comes off the bench, started the game and finished with a game high 24 points. Willie Fisher had 19, Charles Burkette had 13 and Pat Madden had 12 to finish off the double-figure scorers.

West Georgia's Jeff Myers, Nathan Boyd, and Derrick Cooley, all had 18 points to lead the Braves.

"The line-up change was intentional," said Jones. "I thought our players played for the most part of the game hard."

"We didn't get as many breaks in the first half as we wanted to, but we did do a better job with some things that I was concerned with," continued Jones. "One was rebounding. I think that is the way you have to beat this team (West Georgia)."

Coach Jones thought the players did a great job, but was not sure he had done such a great job.

"With the change, I think it got our substitution pattern messed up a little bit, particularly the people who come off the bench," said Jones.

Coach Jones was impressed with the guard play of the Gamecocks.

"They (West Georgia) kept changing defenses on us. I thought our guards did a good job of picking up what scheme they were in and getting us into our offensive pattern," Jones said. "We had a couple of guards that were a little cool in the first half from a shooting standpoint, but they had good shots. They just could not get them down. In the second half, when those shots presented themselves, I thought Willie Fisher and Pat (Madden) both did a good job of getting the shot down."

Jones thought that the first five minutes of each half were the key to winning the game.

"We played with a lot of determination, a lot of intensity, and we got a lot done," said Jones.

Pat Madden now has the JSU all-time assist leader with 651, (including 8 against West Georgia) and broke the record of 645 held by Melvin Allen, who played at JSU from 1982-1985. The record was on Madden's mind as he came into the game.

"Thursday when we played against UA-Huntsville, I was really wanting to get (the record) then. I think that I was trying to get it in the first three minutes, and I made a few turnovers. So, I tried to quit thinking about it," said Madden. "When I came into tonight, I knew that I needed only two to break the assist record. What I did was try to concentrate to get those two. I knew once I got that second one I could go ahead and play my regular game. I thought about it a little bit. I would be lying if I said I didn't."

"I really wanted to get it over with, and quit trying to worry with it. A lot of people were asking me 'How many do you lack?' and I just wanted to get that out of the way, so I could just concentrate on the game."

The Gamecocks will be back in action this Saturday as they travel to Delta State to take on the Statesmen, who have won six in a row.

Payback time arrives for Lady Gamecocks

Rodney Parks
Sports Editor

So far this season, a loss at West Georgia has been the only Gulf South Conference setback for the Lady Gamecocks.

Revenge played a key factor Monday night, as the Lady Gamecocks scalped the Lady Braves 95-79.

The first half of this game proved to be much closer than the final score showed. There were five lead changes and three ties during the opening half of the contest.

After the game was tied at 5-5, JSU went on a 19-12 run to grab a 24-17 lead with 11 minutes left before the half.

West Georgia was able to work its way back into the game by out rebounding the Lady Gamecocks 51-32. Scoring off offensive rebounds, the Lady Braves went on a 33-22 run during the final 10 minutes of the half. This run pushed West Georgia to a 49-46 halftime lead.

"During the first half of the ball game, rebounding was the difference," Coach Tony Mabrey said. "We were busting our tails for 27 seconds and forcing them to rush their shots. After they (West Georgia) missed, they were able to get two or three more shots at the basket because of offensive rebounds. In the second half we (JSU) did a much better job on the boards."

West Georgia scored the opening basket of the second half to have a 51-46 advantage. At that point, the Lady Gamecocks took control of the ball game by out-scoring West Georgia 49-28 during the final 19 minutes of the game.

"In the second half we just came out and went to the boards," Mabrey said. "This was a big victory for us tonight after losing to them earlier in the season. I'm not trying to take anything away from West Georgia because I felt they played well at their place, but I didn't feel we played well against them. It's tough to lose when you don't play well, so this was a big win."

Robbie Wisener led the Lady Gamecocks in scoring with 22 points. Wisener felt this was an important game for her after an injury kept her from playing in the first meeting with West Georgia this season.

"Not playing in the last game (against West Georgia) about killed me," said Wisener. "I felt so helpless just watching the game and not being able to play. I felt our whole team had our minds set on revenge since they're the only team to beat us in the conference."

The Lady Gamecocks will travel to Cleveland, Miss. this Saturday

Future looks bright for JSU football team

Keith Langner
Sports Writer

By now most people have probably heard the song "My Future's So Bright, I've Gotta Wear Shades," but this song may especially ring true for JSU's football team as they embark on the 1991 football campaign. Signing day for high school seniors has already been and passed, and the future does look bright for Gamecock football.

JSU lost some key people, notably David Gullede and Cecil Blount, but the quarterback position may not be the only area of concern for Coach Bill Burgess and his staff.

"We had to have some offensive and defensive linemen, and we wanted to sign two option quarterbacks," said Burgess. "Other than those, we wanted an athlete that could fit in as a defensive back, wide receiver or running back, and that's exactly what we got," said Burgess.

"We didn't get as many defensive linemen as we wanted, but we got two," said Burgess. "We got four offensive linemen, two quarterbacks and the rest are the type of athletes that can play several positions. We really needed to get those type of young men, and fortunately our staff did a great job of finding them and signing them."

"The competition for these athletes is very strict," said Burgess. "A lot of times we (Gulf South Conference schools) are looking for the same type of player. Having a university and campus like we have is a big plus. With the facilities and tradition we have at JSU, we have an excellent opportunity to sign that special athlete."

"Our recruiting staff did a great job. They spent a lot of time on the road and a lot of time away from home recruiting those young men," said Burgess.

The Gamecocks did lose several key people from last season, but one of the biggest questions going into the season is who will be quarterback for the Gamecocks.

"Nicky Edmondson will be back for his senior year, and we have some good young quarterbacks who have served their time," said Burgess. "Nicky is our senior quarterback, and he has earned the right to play. The position is his, if anybody beats him out they are going to have to take it away from him."

Last year Edmondson became the leading punt returner in Gamecock history, and if Edmondson is the quarterback, don't look for him to be returning kicks for the Gamecocks.

"Nicky has always been in the quarterback picture, but he is just too good an athlete to let stand on

Lady Gamecocks double-up on MUW

Rodney Parks
Sport Editor

Last Thursday Coach Tony Mabrey took his Lady Gamecocks to Columbus, Miss., for a non-conference match-up with Mississippi University for Women. The Lady Gamecocks enjoyed the road trip by building their winning streak to eight games with a 94-46 win over the Blues. JSU was able to claim the 48-point win by using its pressing defense to cause 32 MUW turnovers. Mabrey felt his guards played a major role in the win. "We were able to play all six guards tonight," said Mabrey. "That was a big part of the effectiveness of our press." "The good thing about this game was that we were able to play everybody. We got a sustained effort and a good contribution off the bench." MUW held an early 5-4 lead. JSU then used its press to outscore MUW 51-21 during the final 15 minutes of the first half. Mabrey felt building the 29-point halftime lead was important for them.

"With a big game like West Georgia coming up, we could not look ahead," said Mabrey. "We came ready to play and executed as well as we have all season. That is the mark of a good team." During the second half, Mabrey was able to get everyone on the team some valuable playing time. The JSU bench played well in the game and outscored MUW 39-20 during in final 20 minutes. Dana Bright led JSU in scoring with a game high 20 points. Robbie Wisener scored 17, Tracy Linton tossed in 13 and had 10 rebounds, and Beverly Lee also broke double figures with 11 points off the bench. The JSU victory completed a season sweep for the Lady Gamecocks over MUW.

Gamecocks need jump start to claim victory

Keith Langer
Sports Writer

JSU took the court last Thursday night to play the UA-Huntsville Chargers. Granted, UAH is not synonymous with powerhouse basketball, but someone forgot to tell the Chargers to roll over and play dead. In fact, it seemed someone had given the command to the Gamecocks. But after a slow start, the Gamecocks regrouped to claim a 116-87 victory.

Four minutes into the game the Gamecocks were still trying to pull their game together, while the Chargers had built an impressive 10-point lead. The Chargers appeared to do no wrong, bombing from the three-point line and hitting the short jumpers. They even managed to throw in a slam dunk which, by the way, seemed to pale by comparison to the patented Gamecock alley-oop we have all grown accustomed to.

The Chargers managed a 13-point lead at one time, but the Gamecock pressure started tearing away at the lead. It was one of those Charles Burkette slams that let everyone know the Gamecocks were by no means out of this one. JSU outscored the Chargers 29-7 in the last nine minutes of the first half, going into the locker room with a 50-35 lead.

"Our team did a poor job at the start of getting ready to play," said Jones. "It disturbed me that was the way they felt. I think a team should be excited about its next opportunity to play, no matter who the opponent is."

"My degree is not in psychology. I have no idea what Freud meant by some of the things he said, but I do know that we were lacking mentally tonight."

The Chargers opened the second half with the same intensity in which they started the game, partly contributing to the lackluster start of the Gamecocks. The Gamecocks continued to apply the pressure in the second half and eventually led the contest by as many as 31 points.

"At stages, we played really well," said Jones. "We got a good effort on the boards, but obviously, we had some periods where we didn't play well. I saw several lapses in our style of play during the course of the game. I'm just far from satisfied with anything less than perfect."

The Gamecocks placed five men in double figures, led by David Edmond's career-high 29 points. Following Edmond was Burkette's 24 points, Pat Madden's 16, Willie Williams' 14 and 11 points from Willie Fisher. Burkette led the Gamecocks with 11 rebounds, while Madden handed out seven assists.

Future

the sidelines, so we played him at receiver and kick returner," said Burgess. "If he is our starting quarterback, it will be awful hard for us to stick him back there to return kicks."

"We won't know if we'll have any guys that can help us immediately until we get them here," said Burgess. "When we come in for two-a-days, we'll take every man we've got and assume that every one will play. If we have a freshman that can come in immediately and help us win, we'll play him. But we don't want to use up a year of their eligibility just to play a couple of downs a ball game. It's just not fair to them."

The Gamecocks ended up signing 18 players. The signees will join the team for summer practice to begin preparation for the 1991 campaign. The future indeed does look bright for the for the JSU Gamecocks.

Softball team set to challenge for conference title

Todd Brooks
Sports Writer

After coming off with a third-place finish in the Gulf South Conference (with a 25-13 overall record) and returning 11 players, the Lady Gamecock softball team has some big things to look forward to this year.

Coach Amy Hardeman was pleased with last year's performance but felt that maybe they could have gone further.

"I felt like if we could have beaten Mississippi College (a 1-0 loss in 10 innings)...we could have won the whole thing, because we were clicking and playing pretty good," Hardeman said.

Hardeman feels the team will be led by two seniors -- Karen Exner and Michelle Oakes. Exner is the No. 1 pitcher, and Oakes is the third baseman.

"She (Exner) led this team last year, and Michelle Oakes has had a tremendous impact also," Hardeman said.

As far as new players that might have an impact on this year's squad, Hardeman mentioned Elaina Ellenberg, a Birmingham native.

"She has been out of fast-pitch for a couple of years, and we're trying to get her back in shape. I'm hoping that she is going to help us out at pitching and the outfield," Hardeman said.

The softball team is making no secret of the fact it thinks it can win it all this year.

"We've got a good nucleus to start with because I only lost three players. I feel we should do fairly well, because I have the majority of the players back, and everybody's got experience," Hardeman said.

"We're looking pretty good, we just got a lot of hard work to do. I hope we can win the whole thing this year."

Hardeman mentioned that the toughest competition will come from Livingston and Mississippi College. Livingston has been on top for the past four years.

Many people do not know the softball team plays fast-pitch instead of slow-pitch, so it may be more exciting than most people think. When at home it plays at Germania Springs (heading out of Jacksonville toward Piedmont). All games start at 3 p.m., and all are double-headers.

to play the two-time defending national champion Delta State. Wisener feels that the Delta game is a key match-up for JSU.

"I think the Delta State game is a bigger game than the West Georgia game, because we have never beaten them out there," said Wisener. "Delta is still the defending national champions, and this is our first real shot at beating them there."

Other Lady Gamecocks scoring in double figures included Jana Bright with 21, Dana Bright with 18, Tracy Linton with 14 and Michelle Hamilton with 12.

Linton lead JSU in rebounds with eight.

The win improved the Lady Gamecocks to 19-2 overall, 9-1 in the GSC.

Kingston plays inside, outside

Todd Brooks
Sports Writer

Coming off his Gulf South Conference "Freshman of the Year" campaign, Anthony Kingston has proved to be one of the most versatile basketball players on the JSU basketball squad this season.

Kingston, a sophomore from Tanner, Ala., plays at guard as well as pounding it out with the big men underneath (despite being only 6-4, 175). Kingston said that he did not originally plan to come to JSU.

"I was not planning on coming here at first, but then I met Coach (James) Hobbs," said Kingston. "He (Hobbs) came to one of my games, and I sort of heard things about JSU. I heard about the basketball traditions and all the things (that JSU had to offer). It got me looking into them and seeing what Jacksonville was like."

Kingston feels his choice to attend JSU was a good one. He enjoys the small campus atmosphere.

"Everybody's very friendly," said Kingston. "JSU is a small campus, so you know everything that is going on. I like the little close-knit, family-type thing we have here."

Kingston is a business major and carries a 3.44 GPA. Last season he averaged 9.9 points per game and pulled down 4.3 rebounds in 29 games. During his freshman season, Kingston scored 23 points, including 11 of 12 from the free-throw line in overtime, to help JSU defeat defending national champion North Carolina Central in the NCAA playoffs.

Kingston said that he enjoys playing for JSU and Coach Bill Jones.

"He is fair and I like his style of play," said Kingston. "You run a lot, and he gives you a chance to showcase your talents. Plus with this style of play, everybody gets the same amount of playing time."

Kingston scores lay-up for Gamecocks .
