WAR RAGES ON

UP TO 30 MORE JSU STUDENTS WILL BE SENT TO MIDDLE EAST

Shannon Cooper
News Editor

For many JSU students, the war in the Persian Gulf has been seen through the window of television, but for at least 35, the conflict is personal and real.

At 8 p.m., January 16, the President of the United States made the announcement: "Five months ago, Saddam Hussein started this cruel war against Kuwait; tonight the battle has been joined." His words had a profound impact on the JSU campus.

The university community has sought news of the war and, more importantly, of the fate of loved ones. Freddy Henton, a student majoring in communication and drama, is worried about his father who is on alert. "I'm mostly concerned for my father. In some ways, when it comes to the idea of bloodshed and all, I'm worried about that. What really makes me nervous, though, is that my father gives me the impression that he doesn't think he'll come back," said Henton.

Like Henton's father, many other local residents are on alert, waiting only for orders to be sent to Saudi Arabia or the Persian Gulf. "There is a possibility that 30 more students will be sent (to the Middle East) before this is over," said Lt. Col. William Stone, head of the Military Science department.

Cadets support U.S. efforts

Shannon Cooper

Since "Operation Desert Shield" became "Operation Desert Storm," students in the military science department have been waiting for news just like the rest of the world. Their thoughts and opinions, however, come from the minds of military personnel.

Cadet Lt. Col. Ron Gaddie, senior commander of JSU's Ranger program, responded to U.S. involvement in the Middle East by saying, "Nobody wants to go to war and I think everybody believes that. Since it's happening, though, I think everybody should support it."

Gaddie said if he could send a message to Saddam Hussein, "I'd tell him he strongly overestimated the willingness of the American people to insure that America stays a free place," he said.

Cadet Lt. Col. David Crenshaw described Hussein as a bluffer. "Hussein kept thinking, 'if I can get all these other countries behind me, we can finally get back at the U.S.,' that was his biggest mistake. He wanted to bluff and bluff and bluff. We called his bluff and he wasn't ready for it," Crenshaw said.

Cadet Capt. Joe Ennis expanded on Crenshaw's point. "We gave him (Hussein) every chance in the world to get out of there before we initiated anything," he said.

Bryan Wilbur, a sophomore sergeant, speculated on the eventual removal of troops from the Middle East. "Once the fighting is over, it's going to be a while, a long while. I'm sure we'll set up some kind of base in Saudi Arabia. Before the war even started, they had air bases and airfields in the desert," Wilbur pointed out.

These men are anxious about U.S. involvement in the Middle East, but all of them agreed that, when and if they are called up, they will serve their time with pride for their country

Trustees keep up with JSU spending

JSU's Board of Trustees discussed a possible NCAA division move, a faculty shortage, and the "character of an individual" at the Jan. 18 meeting.

Charles "Pete" Mathews conducted the meeting which began at 9:30 a.m. on the 11th floor of Houston Cole Library. The opening discussion concerned suggestions that JSU move its athletic programs from NCAA Division II to Division I-AA.

"Most of these talks have been outside the board level," Senator Jim Bennett, a trustee said.

Bennett said considerations, such as the effect on other sports and finances, must be made before adopting the move to a larger division.

He submitted a resolution that JSU investigate the pros and cons of such a move and reach a decision by Sept. 1. The resolution was adopted.

Robert Kribel, vice president for Student Affairs, gave his report as he stood in the audience.

Although this semester's enrollment is good, Kribel noted a misfortune in the size of classes. As the student body has increased, faculty appointments have not kept up, Kribel said, "We have to make classes larger than we'd like to. It disheartens me to claim that our academic situation is getting better."

JSU President Harold J. McGee made a budget report. He drew attention to a report that JSU's financial support level was the second lowest in the state among 13 universities.

JSU's state-funded support level was $3,512 per student for 1989-90. The highest funded was the University of Alabama at Birmingham at $7,232. The lowest was Alabama State University at $3,210.

At the conclusion of business discussions the board recessed into executive session.

The session was explained only by Mathews in a statement to the audience, "If we are to discuss the character of an individual, we are to do so in an executive session."

No allusion was made to the identification of the individual or the nature of the discussion.

The trustees returned about 20 minutes later and adjourned only to adjourn the meeting.

Tech department gets beneficial grant

Texas Instruments has given JSU a software grant worth $3,000.

JSU will use the TISoft software to develop programs on IBM personal computers. Stanley G. Aman, head of the Department of Technology, said the equipment will mainly be used by students in the technology department. JSU will be able to make unlimited copies of the software as needed for educational use.

Aman said this is a positive step for the technology department. "We are currently using some Westinghouse equipment," Aman said. "Westinghouse has recently been bought out by a German company, and we would like to use American equipment like Texas Instruments whenever pos-

"Texas Instruments makes this service available to any university," Margi Berbari, education relations manager for Texas Instruments, said. To obtain this grant the university first applied to Texas Instruments, which was reviewed by the company.

Aman said the department wants to make sure the technology supplied to the students is comparable to what they will see when they get into the work force. "Texas Instruments wants to put their equipment into the hands of students who will be in mid-management positions making decisions to buy software," Aman said. "Some of our students are already in position to make those types of decisions."

Aman said the department is pleased with the grant and is happy to be using the equipment.

Ceremony honors new dorms

A crowd assembled before Patterson Hall to witness the rededication of both Patterson and Logan halls at 11 a.m. on Jan. 18.

The University demolished the former Patterson and Logan halls in order to construct the new facilities in the same location.

Former Alabama governor John Patterson began the ceremonies by cutting the ribbon which draped in front of the facade.

He spoke of his father, the late Albert Patterson, for whom the hall was named.

Recalling the dedication of the first Patterson Hall in 1961, at which he also spoke, Patterson said jokingly, "It's a wonderful thing to realize that I am outlasting these buildings!"

Charles "Pete" Mathews, Chairman of the Board of Trustees spoke afterwards. His opening remark provoked laughter in the crowd. "If you're wondering why I'm speaking with my hat on," he said, "it's because my head will freeze if I take it off!"

Mathews described the new dormitories as "ultra-modern."

He went on to say that students living in Patterson could be proud they lived in a building named after such a successful family.

After a brief ribbon-cutting at Logan, the group returned to Patterson for a tour and reception.

Major John Nisbet, a JSU alumnus, described the buildings as functional and practical, adding, "I just graduated too soon."

Other people for whom JSU buildings were named mingled through the crowd. They included Jack Hopper, Theron Montgomery, Don Salls and Houston Cole.

Work-study cutbacks result from proration

Krista Cavender
Copy Editor

Work-study funds have been cut this semester, resulting in a layoff of student employees.

Bill Yates, the associate director of Financial Aid, said the University's departments' budgets were actually overestimated from the beginning. Yates said that each department had a certain amount of money in the budget designated for work-study payroll.

The University allotted $600,000 for its work-study program, but it only received $430,000 from the federal government.

Yates said 25 percent of the work-study funds were reduced, and the departments have "realigned their budgets."

According to the December 1990 work-study statistics, there were 394 jobs awarded to qualified students. New statistics concerning the number of layoffs this semester will be available at the end of January. Yates approximated that 150 students lost their jobs. He also said many of the people who were unemployed found other campus jobs.

All departments' budgets were reduced, including Student Affairs, which had a substantial cut, especially in the Stephenson Hall staff.

According to regulations, students applying for work-study must fill out a federal government need analysis form from the Financial Aid Office. When approved, the student is interviewed for job placement. If hired, the student then contacts Financial Aid.

Work-study pays minimum wage of $3.85 an hour, with the federal government paying 70 percent of the employees' salaries. As of April 1, minimum wage will increase to $4.25 an hour. Yates said this is also a reason for the cutbacks of work-study employees.

Yates said it is up to the student to find a job. "We just certify them eligible," Yates said. "Not everyone approved will receive a job."

Because there are cutbacks in work-study funds, Yates is encouraging students to apply for other forms of financial aid.

According to a brochure from Financial Aid, funds for the loans program are provided by banks, credit unions and savings and loan associations. Funds for the Perkins Loan (National Direct) are provided directly by JSU and the federal government. Pell Grants are available to students based on income. Students can contact the Financial Aid Office for more information on scholarships and the other types of financial aid.

Yates wants to remind students of the deadline to apply for financial aid. According to the brochure, "April 1 is the preference deadline for applying for the need-based aid and is the absolute deadline for most scholarships."

War

Carolyn Hamilton is a junior majoring in nursing. Her husband is on alert and the constant worry that he will be called up any time has taken away from her studies.

"This is my first semester of clinicals. This (war) has really effected my concentration because I'm in school all day and I don't have any outside contact with anybody else. I worry all day because there's no TV or anything around, so I don't hear anything until the evenings and that's the time I usually study," Hamilton said.

Director of Public Safety, David Nichols, said because of the war, there is also heightened awareness of campus safety. He said a combination of factors makes the JSU community a sensitive area. He indicated that the campus's proximity to Fort McClellan, the Anniston Army Depot and I-20 to Atlanta, in addition to the ROTC building make the area a more likely target.

Nichols also expressed concern for the Arab students on campus because they could be perpetrators or victims of violence related to the war.

Ahmad Alzoubi, an instructor in the Center for Individualized Instruction, expressed interest toward a world-wide concern for the war. "I

"I love everybody ..., but that doesn't mean I agree with somebody who's doing something wrong."

*--Ahmed Alzoubi

love everybody here and there, but that doesn't mean that I agree with somebody who's doing something wrong. Here (the U.S.) we are living in a different world. Most Europeans see both sides of the problem. There are two sides," Alzoubi said. Alzoubi is originally from Jordan.

Kuwaiti student Mousa Mohammed sees Saddam Hussein as a power-hungry ruler. "I think from the first time he became a president, he was a person who would like to be in power and would like to be a great man. I think he's looking for the day that he can be the only president (leader) of the Arab people," he said.

Though Mohammed expressed support for George Bush, he disagreed with his decision to declare war. "I think he (Bush) did a great deed in dealing with this crisis, until now," he said.

The soldiers need support, said Cadet Lt. Col. Ron Gaddie of the efforts in the Middle East. "Don't make the soldiers overseas think that when they come back home, they're coming back to a bunch of people who hate them. They're fighting for our country and for a cause," Gaddie urged.

Though everyone seems to be worried about the outcome of Operation Desert Storm, Stone's optimism gives the community hope, "Time will tell whose side God is on. Hussein preaches, 'God is on my side.' I think the opposite is true. If he's violating the Geneva Convention with POWs, he and his army will face the consequences of war crimes."

Hamilton is also pained by the treatment of the POWs. "I should hope they stick with the Geneva Convention as we would as Americans and not hurt those prisoners. I wouldn't want to be a prisoner in Iraq right now, but I just hope that they have some human dignity and if they believe in God the way they say they do, treat them the way God would treat them," she said.

Teachers want fair increases

Melanie Jones

At the Faculty Senate meeting January 14, members of the faculty expressed their concern about several issues to the Vice President of Academic Affairs Robert Kribel.

The meeting centered around a statistical study of trends in employment and pay increases in the University from 1987 to 1990.

The study revealed a significant increase in hiring of administrators, staff and coaches, while the increase in faculty has not kept up with the increase in enrollment. In the 1986-87 academic year, faculty made up 46 percent of the total employment on campus, and the administrators, staff and coaches combined made up 52.5 percent.

In the 1990-91 academic year, faculty makes up only 40.5 percent of the total employment, and the administrators, staff and coaches combined make up 57.5 percent.

The faculty were most concerned about the pay increases from 1988 to 1990. Last year, a freeze was supposedly put on salaries, so salaries for the faculty and most administrators remained the same as in 1988, but the athletic director received an 8.7 percent pay increase.

The head football and basketball coaches received 13 percent pay increases each. At that time, faculty were told that coaches' salaries were determined by the Board of Trustees at the end of their seasons; the next year, however, the study revealed the athletic director received an increase of 7 percent this year, and that the same three coaches each received a 10 percent increase.

The cost of living increased by 10.7 percent from 1988 to 1990. McGee said the average faculty raise is 8 percent, but most faculty agree that the average is considerably lower.

The senate passed a resolution to be sent to the administration suggesting that the current merit pay system be replaced by cost of living pay increases and that a reward with merit raises be given to outstanding professors if there is any money left.

Holiday given second chance

Melanie Jones

The second resolution asking the University to recognize Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday an official holiday was defeated at the SGA meeting on Monday.

A quorum vote of 25 was needed before the resolution could pass, and the final vote was 18 for the resolution, 15 against the resolution and three abstentions.

Many students who were not senators attended the meeting, and some of them took an active role in the debate. "The debate was a very emotional one, and both sides argued valid points," said Leslie Adams, a senator. "In the beginning, everyone was saying it wasn't a racial issue, yet by the time the vote was called, it was," she added.

The point was made that the senators should not vote according to their personal opinions, but should vote for what they felt their constituents wanted.

Senator Ashley Richards justified his opposing vote by stating that many constituents, both white and black, had shown him their opposition.

Richards said the university does not officially recognize any holiday for an individual person, so the same policy should apply to King's birthday. "The only way the university could justify it," he said, "is if it officially recognized every federal holiday."

Yusef Al-Amein said he was satisfied with the vote even though it was defeated. "I feel the minority students have made their point," he said. He also said the most important point was the involvement of the students. "That (involvement) is what I hope for all students," he concluded.

Requirements cause conflicts

New moves to produce higher quality of public schools have brought changes for those entering the teaching field.

The changes are occurring after the Alabama Department of Education passed new regulations concerning the amount of practica and how they are utilized in the secondary education program. The education department is requiring that all students entering after the fall of 1989 have more practicum hours, with the hours being in large blocks of time.

Previously, students received 10 hours of practicum experience along with their regular classroom time in ED 382, "Educational Methods," and ED 484, "Teaching in High School." Now students do not necessarily take these classes during the same semester, giving them small blocks of practicum experience.

"After the new system is implemented, we hope to have the students take these classes together, which will give them a large block of practicum experience," Teresa Nichols, director of Clinical Experience, said. "It is very difficult for secondary education students to balance their schedules in blocks, because many of their classes are taken outside the College of Education," Nichols said. "This semester we are experimenting with the larger blocks of practicum hours. Students have the choice of taking the traditional 10 hours of practicum per class or to participate in an experimental method."

Kathy Haley, a senior majoring in secondary education, is taking the experimental route. The courses affected are ED 382, "Educational Methods," which is requiring 15 practicum hours in a school along with 10 practicum hours in the Teaching/Learning Center; ED 484, "Teaching in High School," requiring 25 practicum hours in a school; and EPY 442, "Educational Measurement," which requires 10 hours in the Teaching/Learning Center.

"They gave us a choice, but not until after we got back from the Christmas holidays," Haley emphasized. "It was really hard to work out our regular class schedule along with these extra practicum hours."

According to Nichols, after this semester the new method will be reviewed through committees inside the College of Education. Other colleges will also review the new method. Finally, the method must be reviewed and approved by a university committee before being permanently implemented next fall.

Nichols emphasized that the new regulations are being implemented because the students, as well as public school officials, feel that there is a need for more in-school practicum experience before the students are placed in their student teaching internship.

University renovation spending

Photo Editor

With the dedication of two rebuilt residence halls Friday, University officials have explained the sources of and problems with funding for JSU.

Sixty-five percent of JSU's operating funds come from the state. When the state budget decreases, so does the amount appropriated to the University. The state earmarks these funds for specific expenses.

When Harold J. McGee took over as president of the University in July 1986, there was $27.6 million in the University's various investment accounts.

Nearly $21.5 million of these assets were set aside for the physical plant budget, which is specifically marked for repairs and renovations.

According to Don Thacker, executive assistant to the president for Administrative Affairs, "The estimated life of a residence hall or academic building is 20 years. I mean, by that time it is in need of repairs and often total renovation. Most of our halls were built or renovated in the '60s and early '70s. The last new building project, prior to Logan and Patterson, was Stone Center done in 1979. So you see that we were due."

Projects of immediate concern for McGee and the Board of Trustees included replacing flat roofs with gabled roofs on several residence halls to stop the internal damage caused by leaks. Other projects included renovation of Hopper Dining Hall, Leone Cole Auditorium and McCluer Chapel in The Quad area. Also renovated were Salls, Dixon, Crow, Curtis and Fitzpatrick residence halls. One apartment complex, Campus Inn, also received improvements. Academic buildings which have been remodeled in McGee's tenure include Self Hall, Merrill Hall, Bibb Graves and Houston Cole Library. Stephenson Hall and Mathews Coliseum are student facilities which also have been renovated.

Renovation costs ranged from $4 million on Stephenson Hall to $750,000 on Salls Hall. The buildings had to meet building code standards, which added to the expense.

An unforeseen $500,000 cost was updating campus electrical capacity. Larger incoming lines had to be run underground to meet the growing demand for electricity.

A majority of the columns on campus were decaying and have been sealed to halt aging.

Whenever contractors disturb asbestos insulation, federal regulations require the entire building to be stripped of the asbestos at a tremen-

A new facade was added to Hopper Dining Hall as part of a major renovation the building underwent in the late 1980s.

"That is the problem with proration: It affects morale. We're forced to live with the best evils."

--Harold J. McGee
JSU President

According to McGee, one misconception is that state funds or University assets can be used for anything. "We can not co-mingle funds," he said. In other words, salaries or work-study program cannot be covered by state appropriations earmarked for other programs.

"That is the problem with proration: It affects morale. We're forced to live with the best evils," said McGee.

The University has three sources of money: state appropriations, tuition and borrowing. JSU borrowed $8 million recently to complete some renovations and rebuild Logan and Patterson halls. The University will depend on residency fees to cover these debts.

The board and McGee have tentatively begun sketching out a long-term schedule for repairs and a new music building. Priority supposedly will be parking expansion, more classrooms in Martin Hall, completing the walkway lighting project and the new music building.

McGee is proud the campus is more aesthetically appealing. "It should help us attract new students and keep the students we have proud of their University," he said.

Dixon Hall is one of several residence halls which were remodeled inside and out during the University's recent building program.

Public college a great deal

College Press Service

It's a "complete misconception" that public colleges have gotten too expensive, a researcher who tracks campus finances nationwide said the first week of January.

In fact, public campuses are a great deal for students, he maintained.

Although many states appropriated a smaller share of their 1989-90 tax revenues to higher education, students at most public schools still paid only one-fourth of the cost of what colleges spend to hold classes, operate dorms, pay teachers, police the campus and provide food service, said Kent Halstead of Research Associates of Washington.

There has been "a complete misconception (fostered) by articles that emphasize the tremendous costs at" private schools, Halstead said.

Public colleges and universities are "extremely affordable," he maintained.

Halstead, ever the contrarian, also predicted the current recession may actually keep tuition increases down at public schools.

"Public colleges are particularly sensitive to the tuition issue (because of bad publicity), so obviously they want to retain enrollment and increase tuition as modestly as they can," he noted.

He added the situation will vary from state to state.

Students at public campuses in Idaho, Montana, Utah, Wyoming, North Dakota, South Dakota and Hawaii may have to pay higher tuition in coming years as schools in those states receive less tax revenue per student, the report says.

Public schools in Connecticut, the District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Maine, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Nevada, New Jersey, Vermont, Virginia and West Virginia will receive more tax money relative to student load, and therefore will impose smaller tuition hikes.

In September, the College Board reported college tuition nationwide had risen faster than the rate of inflation for the 10th year in a row.

The College Board report said tuition at four-year public colleges in 1990 increased 7 percent over 1989, while the Consumer Price Index rose only 4.5 percent.

University spending needs assessing

Last Friday the university dedicated two new residence halls, completing the latest of several recent capital improvements around campus.

Needless to say, the improvements have increased the aesthetic value of our campus, and reasons for the renovations and landscaping are valid: to increase student and faculty pride and recruiting capabilities.

Hardly anyone would be against the idea that the appearance of campus is important. In fact, students and faculty would like to continue to add to the natural beauty of our campus.

However, they would also like to have classrooms where each student can have a desk. They would also like to have smaller classes and better laboratories.

Recent proration is not the fault of the administration. In fact, they are to be commended for working to try and meet the state requirement for cutbacks. Nevertheless, some appropriations must be questioned.

For example, last Friday there were a dozen or so pots of new shrubbery being prepared to be set out along the sidewalk by the president's mansion. The new hedges on campus are nice. But it seems to be an insult to students that more shrubbery is being added while classrooms are overcrowded and work-study jobs are being slashed.

If we have the money to continue capital improvements and keep up our standard of academic excellence, then it should be done. Evidently, the money is not there for both. So what little money we have should be spent on academics.

It would be foolish to believe that a single new professor could be hired with the money spent on these new shrubs. But cutbacks in unnecessary spending all around campus could furnish the academic departments with some needed supplies and part-time student workers to lessen the load on instructors.

Next October should bring an end to proration, and campus life can return to some normalcy.

For now, though, it would be prudent to consider how funds are being spent and to reapportion what funds we have to improve our academic program.

After all, neither the pride of students and faculty nor recruitment capabilities will increase if the academic program is not funded properly to assure quality education.

Troop support

January 16 is another date to add to the history books. However, I doubt any of us will need to read about it to remember the horror of hearing the first reports of war coming out of the Persian Gulf.

We have entered a new era. The cold war is over, but now we must be continually aware of the ever present threat of third world countries which are becoming real threats to world peace.

Suddenly, Iraq and Saddam Hussein have caused our eyes to open wide and see the way world peace can be violently destroyed by one man with even a small nation behind him.

I know there are mixed feelings about our presence in the war. In fact, I have mixed feelings myself. But my strongest feelings are that my country is at war, and I fully support our troops and the president.

We are in the gulf to protect democracy. Kuwait is not the only land threatened. The world balance of power is threatened with a ruthless Hussein on the loose. Liberty itself is coming under fire from this dictator.

In one of my classes this week we were discussing the war. Some of the older students, who lived through Vietnam to remember it, were commenting on the difference in the way this war is affecting people on the home front. They said Vietnam seemed a world away. Somehow, this is different they said. Everybody knows somebody there. Everyone seems to be concerned and supportive.

Eric G. Mackey

Another thing is our increase in awareness. CNN is bringing the whole war into our homes continuously, as if it was a mini-series with all the high tech graphics and dramatic music when it breaks for commercials.

After a week, I think we're all still confused about what is really happening to our world. Luckily, most of us are content to trust our president's lead and support the effort. One mistake of the Vietnam era, which we cannot make, is taking out any hostility on our soldiers.

The military of the United States is the bravest fighting force in the world. I fear for my own friends who have been activated. I wish no one had to go. I wish we could go back to Aug. 1, 1990, and start all over. But we can't. And now we have got to do the best we can with the situation we have.

The best we can do is to support our president, our soldiers, and one another. Also we can continue to pray for these as well as for a quick end to the war and restored peace.

Dependability rates attention

Shannon Cooper
News Editor

There aren't many dependable people left in today's society. When someone says they are going to do something, it's nice to think they will actually follow through with their commitment and do it.

Too often, though, I am left waiting for someone on whom I depend and I don't hear another word about their forgotten promise.

I am not saying I do not on occasion call to cancel plans, but I do give notice when I cannot make my appointments.

Organizations like The Chanticleer, 92J and the SGA are primarily made up of volunteers. They have no monetary incentive for their labors. Yet, these organizations are dependable, reliable sources for students views and entertainment.

It amazes me that such great accomplishments are made by these units, and many others on campus, but when it comes to the personal level, people are more apt to forget or disregard prior arrangements.

Perhaps a seemingly minor appointment does not appear to be necessary, so it is slighted to make room for something more important. After all, only so much can be accomplished in one day, so room must be made for the significant matters.

Little forgotten things, however, build up to enormous meaningful ones. Even someone with all the patience and understanding in the world grows weary of excuses and frivolous apologies.

After two or three rounds of "I'm so sorry; I know you think I'm scum; how can I make it up to you?" I have lost interest and am eager to go home and watch 12 hours of "Cop Rock."

College students are almost always busy doing something, whether going out for a night on the town, working on a term paper until dawn or just laying around the room relaxing. It's often hard to budget time when hours, days and sometimes weeks seem to fly by in a matter of seconds.

However busy things get, though, there is always time to show consideration. A phone call to cancel plans takes no more than two minutes. Dropping by with donuts when time does not permit an extended stay is better than no visit at all.

In a world where time is scarce, dependability deserves special attention because it can be easily overlooked.

Letters to the Editor

King holiday

I am writing in regard to the comments made by SGA Senator Ed Crook in last week's edition of The Chanticleer in an article entitled "SGA dedates King holiday." I was disturbed by his ridiculous and bold statements.

Obviously, he didn't pay attention in his history classes, or he might remember that the so-called "slave master" Abraham Lincoln was one of the most influential figures in the abolishment of slavery. It sounds to me like Mr. Crook doesn't have any idea about the "dramatically different ideals and aspirations" between Abe and Martin Luther King Jr.

New Year 1991. Self delusion is running rampant in the world. The most obvious, of course, is the war in the Persian Gulf. Closer to home, or reality, is the continually growing gap between the races. It is time for this nation—this world—to come together in peace. January 15, 1991 was the deadline for Saddam Hussein to remove his troops from the oppressed Kuwait. He didn't, so we're at war.

January 15, 1991 was the 62nd birthday of the slain civil rights and non-violence advocate Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Here at JSU we do not celebrate the war or King's birthday.

In the words of Brian Brown, SGA senator, "He (Dr. King) fought to get people into schools, so why should we get the day off?" What Brian and so many people fail to realize is that Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. not only fought for education but for a collective consciousness of peace, social and economic equality, and racial harmony for the entire country. "We should get the day off?" Brian Brown, SGA, the State of Arizona, and the United States of America: because his holiday is an opportunity for our nation to have a collective consciousness of peace, if only for one day.

We need that collective consciousness, especially this year. Our War in the Persian Gulf occurred because economic sanctions did not work. Economic sanctions are not working in South Africa to end apartheid, the oppression of the land's people. Will we go to war there. Violence begets violence.

Who or what are we fighting for? Democracy, freedom, or oil? I do not know. I am certain that many will interpret this commentary as anti-war and anti-U.S. policies.

This commentary is about anti-hate and anti-ignorance and peacefully motivated. This is about honoring a man who has given the best example of peace this nation has seen. Happy belated birthday and holiday Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

The Super Bowl and war

Mike Livingston
Staff Writer

February 3—in the middle of the war—the National Football League will crown its season with the 25th Super Bowl. President George Bush has given permission for the game to go on even though the nation is fighting in the Middle East.

One can assume this war is not as serious World War II, and we can watch our football game in peace.

Half time, much like in last week's conference games will be filled with reports of the war's progress.

Maybe Bush just wants us to feel comfortable with this war and to let us do the normal things we do on Sunday, that is if we watch football.

However, shouldn't this country focus on the war we have in the Middle East. We need information on the war, and if something happens during the Super Bowl the network should cut away from the game to give us an update on the happenings which definitely affect all our lives.

The war should certainly be more important than any football game. The country should be wary of the president's decision to encourage us to go about our normal activities while our armed forces battle with most the difficult war since Vietnam.

During the past week it has become apparent that this is a difficult foe, and our country has made the decision to be a long term player in the Middle East.

The cost and personnel which we have put at risk should make us realize that this is not a war that will end in just a few days.

NFL players, of course, will be wearing American flag emblems to show their support.

The point is not whether the game should be played, but that the nation—hard as it may try—cannot return to normalcy.

Americans must stay in tune to the actions in the gulf.

A look into history will show us that the nation is at its best in a war when all focus is on the war.

Still, the game will be played. And if the first quarter is interrupted because of changes in the gulf, then let's remember our first priority.

The worst case scenario would be one mad fan ignoring the importance of the war, and subsequently calling the station, the network, or whoever to bring the Super Bowl back on.

Army commends students

Doctor Harold McGee
President
Jacksonville State University
Jacksonville, Alabama 36265

Dear Doctor McGee:

This holiday season has been a trying time for Army Reservists and their families. During the past four months I have deployed over 300 soldiers from this command to Operation Desert Shield.

Words cannot express my appreciation for the support your students have shown to the families left behind. Having served during the Vietnam era, its refreshing to see the dramatic change in the patriotic fervor of today's college students. Your students are to be especially commended for putting their patriotism into actions that help those impacted by current military events.

I would like to singly commend Miss Jolene Roberts for organizing the sororities and students at Jacksonville State University in contributing to our Family Support Activities in December. Her efforts will most certainly help fill the void in our families created by military activation. Her caring, sharing attitude and those of your students will be remembered this holiday and many to follow.

Please convey my appreciation to Miss Roberts and your entire student body for their invaluable gifts of time and money. They truly have made a difference.

Sincerely,
Robert H. G. Waudby

Parking problem could be solved with more student initiative

Andy Hayner
Special to The Chanticleer

For a long time it has been said that JSU has a parking problem. Whenever students are late to class because they are not able to find a space, or when they exit a building to find a ticket under their windshield wiper, inevitably they blame the parking problem.

JSU's parking problem is not a result of a lack of spaces, but rather students' poor attitudes when faced with inconvenience.

This campus has more than 5,500 parking spaces, all of which never get filled—even during the busiest time—between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. on weekdays. Most students have classes during this time, making it difficult to find parking around the academic buildings. During this time, there are spaces in the library, coliseum and residence hall parking lots.

When similar complaints about parking arose at other universities, they solved their difficulties in different ways. For instance, freshmen at UAB are not allowed to park on campus. At Georgia Tech each student may park only in the lot to which he or she is assigned.

Steps as drastic as these are not necessary at JSU. However, if students continue to complain about the difficulties of finding a parking space, administrators will be forced to adopt programs such as those at UAB and Georgia Tech.

The most reasonable solution to JSU's situation is for students to walk to class whenever possible.

More than 3,000 students live within a one-half mile radius of Bibb Graves Hall. If these students walked to their classes instead of driving, there would be many more open parking spaces for those who must drive.

JSU's problem is not too few parking places. Our problem is too many people running their mouths instead of walking to class.

'Greenpeace' expands circulation, sounds trumpet

Karen Parr
Features Writer

The bold, black caption of the magazine cover reads "Children of Chernobyl," with the faces of three Ukrainian children staring blankly into the readers' eyes.

This particular, first-year issue of "Greenpeace" magazine, a division of the well-known, radical environmental group, focuses on the tragedy which lingers after the Chernobyl nuclear accident in 1986. As a result of this "accident," children were exposed to high dosages of radiation and babies were deformed.

Such hard-hitting topics are to be expected of "Greenpeace." This magazine is as radical as "Save the Whales" marches and tuna boat chases, making readers aware of global environmental irresponsibility.

According to "Time" magazine writer Leslie Whitaker, "It ("Greenpeace") suffers from an over reliance on unnamed and Greenpeace connected sources for its allegations and opinions."

Nevertheless, "Greenpeace" is expanding its circulation. For a while, this publication was available only to Greenpeace members.

Now, however, "Greenpeace" rubs shoulders with other popular publications, such as "Vogue," "Sports Illustrated" and "Time," at area newsstands—even the magazine shelves of JSU's Houston Cole Library.

"Greenpeace" is available in the library, courtesy of Mary Bevis, head of the library's magazine circulation and Greenpeace member. Although she agrees with the intentions of Greenpeace, Bevis admits, "They do blow their own horns, so to speak."

Nevertheless, "Greenpeace" does serve its purpose. It sounds the trumpet which calls the people of the world to arm themselves, not with nuclear weapons, but with information.

Music department hosts Jesselson/Fugo Duo

Jessica Mueller
Features Writer

A bit of cultural entertainment came to JSU as the music department hosted the Jesselson/Fugo Duo Jan. 14 in the Mason Hall Performance Center.

The duo, which consists of cellist Robert Jesselson and pianist Charles Fugo, performed for 45 minutes before an audience of more than 100. Among the duo's musical features were the Prokofieff Sonata, the Capriccio for Cello and Piano, by Lukas Foss, and two unpublished 19th Century American works by composer John Knowles Pain.

Music professor James Fairleigh said, "Both Jesselson and Fugo were excellent.

The balance between cello and piano was well-handled."

Fairleigh added, "Jesselson and Fugo are fine performers who work well together."

These two performers have been playing together for the past 10 years and are currently faculty of the University of South Carolina in Columbia.

Cellist Robert Jesselson and pianist Charles Fugo, who have been performing together for 10 years, were featured at a Jan. 14 recital.

In-line skating becomes newest sensation

Michelle Martin
Features Editor

Physical fitness trends, like all other trends, are popular one day and gone the next. In the '70s, the fitness craze was jogging; in the '80s: aerobics and running. The exercise trend of the '90s—in-line skating—seems to have lasting ability, however.

This phenomenon, also referred to as rollerblading (a term taken from the in-line skate brand Rollerblade), is much like both roller skating and ice skating. The skate features a single blade of wheels on a ski-type boot.

As a matter of fact, "A lot of people are using them as a cross-training device for skiing," said Michael Milam, in-line skate buyer, in Sports Trend magazine.

In-line skating has actually been around for several years, but its popularity just recently escalated.

"I have had them for four years and each year they do better," said Dan Brandenburg, footwear buyer at Brandamours Sporting Goods in Cincinnati.

The areas where in-line skating is most popular are California, Florida and Minnesota. The skates are particularly popular in Minnesota because two skate manufacturers, Rollerblade and Ultra Wheels, are located there.

Locally, in-line skate sales are doing well for those stores that carry them, but the craze is not close to what it is in California or the other areas.

"We are about four years behind California—we just got the skates in late Summer," said Mike Monnet, salesperson at Hibbett Sporting Goods in Quintard Mall.

Monnet said, "The sales have been good, but not overwhelming. We probably sold 10 pairs during Christmas."

While 10 pairs may sound like a small amount of in-line skate purchases when compared with regular footwear purchases, it is actually a fairly reasonable figure, considering in-line skates are not the average footwear.

"In-line skates are not something people shop around for," said Monnet. "People want the skates, find them and buy them."

And what a pretty price they are paying. In-line skate prices range from $150 to as much as $240. While these prices may seem outrageous to some, devout skaters do not hesitate to dish out the money.

New, though probably not any less expensive than current brands, models are expected this Spring. The new skates will be targeted for specific purposes, such as racing and playing roller hockey.

Faster wheels, lighter boots and quicker stops are among the new features of in-line skate brands.

Roller Derby will offer front stops, as opposed to back stops, on their new line. These front stops are reported to be quicker than the back stops, and particularly useful in roller hockey.

As if there was not enough in-line skate merchandise to be confused by, Rollerblade now sports an apparel collection to complement the fashionable skates.

It certainly would be a shame to all the in-line skate manufacturers and retailers, who have obviously invested a great deal of money into the item, if the public were suddenly to lose interest in rollerblading.

Such does not seem likely in the near future, however. And why would it? In-line skating is one of the few ways people can actually have fun and exercise at the same time!

This Ultra Wheels adult model is only one of many in-line skate brands.

Outreach director gets mission

Andy Hayner
Special to The Chanticleer

Having established Campus Outreach at JSU, Weyman Prater will be leaving with his family to go to Tokyo as Christian missionaries.

Prater was hired by Campus Outreach after he graduated from the University of Montevallo. His first assignment was to begin the ministry on a new campus, JSU.

"Here I was, a single guy, fresh out of college, all by myself on the largest campus we were involved in," said Prater. "I did not know anybody, so I would just introduce myself and begin talking to people. At first they all looked at me like I was nuts. That is a humbling—almost scary—thing.

"Those first months were spent telling people about Christ and trying to meet people on the campus. As people expressed interest in the Lord, I would invite them to a meeting," Prater said.

Prater has been campus director of Campus Outreach at JSU for the past six years. In those six years, the attendance of the meetings has grown from about 15 to as many as 250.

Prater has also since married during his time at JSU. He and his wife, Sandi, have been married for almost two years and now have a new baby, Lindsay.

"Weyman and I balance each other out," said Prater. "We both love people, but Weyman likes to go out and do things. I like to stay home. I guess you could say Weyman likes to paint the town, and I like to paint the house."

While she paints the house, Prater works with students around campus, hoping to train them to be dedicated Christians who will change the world.

"What I want to do with my life, and what I think will have the biggest impact for Jesus Christ, is impacting the lives of college students," said Prater. "College students are movers and shakers. They are the shapers of society. What starts on the campuses affects our country, and ultimately affects the world."

To train students, Campus Outreach holds weekly meetings with Bible lessons. There are also weekend and vacation retreats. Beach projects and mission trips are also available to students during the summer.

It was on a summer mission trip to Thailand that Todd Gerald, now a senior at JSU, realized there are places where the gospel of Jesus Christ had never been heard.

"There are people in the United States who know the Lord well enough to teach others about him, but there is not really anybody to do it in other parts of the world," Gerald said. "I was really struck with that fact and decided that is what I wanted to do. I didn't know where I would be going, but I knew I wanted to go someplace."

Prater, along with other campus directors, realized that not only Gerald but many students were having the same problem. Students wanted to reach the world for Christ, but they weren't sure how they would get there.

"The Campus Outreach ministry has been going for about 12 years on some of our older campuses," said Prater. "Students were coming off the campuses with a burden for people outside of the United States, and yet we have not had a track for them. All we've had were our campuses in the States. God has given us a commission to reach the world, not just America, so we thought it is important to open up new ground for the students, giving them the opportunity to go where they are needed."

To give the students the opportunity they wanted, Campus Outreach decided to branch out to three foreign countries: Japan, Mexico and Thailand.

Prater and his family volunteered to go to Japan. They are scheduled to leave in March 1992, so Prater will hand over his duties as campus director to Trent Hataway during the spring semester.

The decision to leave family and friends for a foreign country was not easy for the Praters. There were many options to discuss.

"Even if going to Japan harms me physically or emotionally, I believe I could deal with that," said Mrs. Prater. "My greatest concern is how it will affect Lindsay. I know God wants us to go to Japan, and He's going to take care of our child."

To Prater, the decision to go to Japan was not a question of what he wanted, but what God wanted. Prater's decisions are always based on eternity, and not just life and death.

"I could have gotten a job doing something else and be much better off financially," said Prater. "The bottom line is we have the choice to live comfortably now and see more people die and go to hell, or we can make certain sacrifices now and be used by God in the way He desires."

"We are talking about 70 or 80 years on earth versus an eternity with God. So, in the long run, it's not a sacrifice.

"It doesn't matter where Sandi and I are. We just want to be where God wants us."

Peer counselors for Summer 1991 have been selected. See next week's edition of The Chanticleer.

Nursing organizations form support group

M.J. Johnson, a junior who was studying pediatrics, was deployed in Operation Desert Shield in November 1990.

As the war in the Gulf escalates, more JSU students are being called upon for active duty. The latest figures from the ROTC office show at least 35 JSU students, four of whom are nursing students, as military personnel in Operation Desert Storm.

The Jacksonville Association of Nursing Students (JANS) and the Nurses Christian Fellowship organization (NCF) developed a type of support system for the nursing students who were deployed.

Bonnie Thornhill, associate professor of nursing, said, "The organizations contacted the families of those students and sent Christmas cards to them."

Care packages, containing items not easily accessible in the desert, such as junk food and baby powder, were also sent to the former JSU students.

Thornhill said the two organizations and nursing students have maintained contact throughout the crisis.

M.J. Johnson, a junior in pediatrics who was called to duty Nov. 26, 1990, wrote, "I have been trying to finish my R.N. degree for seven years. What is a few more months for my country?"

Sanford recognized in 'Who's Who'

Traci Slaton
Features Writer

With all the excellent faculty members here at JSU, it is not surprising when one of them is recognized for his outstanding teaching ability and dying dedication.

L.G. Sanford, JSU professor of biology, has been selected to the first annual list of Who's Who Among America's Teachers.

"I was very surprised," Sanford said when he received a letter from Who's Who, announcing his selection to the list.

Sanford, who received his masters and doctoral degrees from Auburn University, has been teaching at JSU since 1965.

"I was offered positions at several colleges, but I chose JSU based on the positive recommendations from JSU professors and area residents, as well as its beautiful setting," Sanford said.

"The students here are nice, cooperative and interested in learning," Sanford added.

All of the 24,500 honored teachers were chosen by students who themselves were in either the Who's Who Among High School Students or the National Dean's List.

Sanford said he thinks he knows who nominated him, but declined to name that person.

L.G. Sanford, recently selected to "Who's Who" among America's teachers, lectures to a class.

The Flip Side

Tesla's latest acoustic release 'jams'

Powerful acoustics, daring covers and (unedited) live tracks make up what is, perhaps, the most refreshing album to grace the music scene in quite a while.

The aforementioned album is "Five Man Acoustical Jam," the third product of the Los Angeles rock 'n' rollers Tesla.

"Five Man Acoustical Jam" is a rare compilation of Tesla originals and covers, as performed live, and, obviously, acoustically, at The Trocadero in Philadelphia.

To make such a daring album is not surprising of Tesla. Never have Tesla succumbed to the "laws of rock 'n' roll success" by dishing out ordinary, commercial songs which end up sounding like those of every other group. Tesla are known, however, for playing their own simple, straight-forward style of rock music.

It is ironic, then, that these other commercial bands, such as Warrant and Nelson, seem to get all the radio airplay. Not until "Signs," which was originally done by The Five Man Electrical Band (hence the title of Tesla's album), did

Features Editor

Tesla receive much attention from radio. Finally, better late than never, credit is given where credit is due.

Yes, much credit to the boys of Tesla for their work on "Five Man Acoustical Jam." They brilliantly--almost flawlessly--cover a variety of classic tunes on this live album. "We Can Work It Out," by The Beatles, "Lodi," by Creedence Clearwater Revival, and "Mother's Little Helper," by The Rolling Stones, as well as "Signs," are just a sample of Tesla's 14-track, 67-minute musical wonder.

The Tesla originals, such as "Modern Day Cowboy," "The Way It Is," and "Love Song," are not bad either.

The nine-minute, almost entirely instrumental, "Love Song" is sure to please listeners with its personal affects. Sometimes it is difficult to determine who--

Tesla or the audience-- is singing.

"Before My Eyes" is another emotional ballad which seems to overwhelm even Keith as he comments, "That was nice--different, but nice."

Do not forget about "Heaven's Trail (No Way Out)," which almost makes listeners forget about the problems of the world, which is the focus of the song, with its catchy, up-beat tempo. As always, singer Jeff Keith's raspy voice adds just the right "edge" to that Tesla simplicity.

It is doubtful listeners will soon grow tired of "Five Man Acoustical Jam." This album has real staying power, clearly representing Tesla's art of musical creativity.

Even more, it has the potential to gain such notoriety as Boston's "Boston" and The Eagles' "Hotel California."

One final note of advice: hang on to this Tesla release. Not only will it forever offer great listening pleasure, but "Five Man Acoustical Jam" just might be a collector's item one day.

UPC plans improved spring entertainment

Michelle Martin
Features Editor

Plans are already under way for this semester's Springfest, formerly called Spring Whoopee, on April 4.

Christina Dobbs, chairman of the Major Entertainment Committee, a division of the UPC, said, "This year's musical entertainment will be very different."

A Reggae festival will be the theme for the concert during Springfest; however, which bands will be featured is not yet known.

"We had hoped to get King's X, who are currently touring with AC/DC, but it just wouldn't work out," Dobbs said.

She also said the UPC may take some ideas from the results of the entertainment survey, although the most requested acts, such as Vanilla Ice and Chicago, were too expensive.

"The main reason for the survey was for the UPC to get an understanding of what the students want to see," Dobbs said. "Too much money was lost on the concerts in the past."

Although a considerable number of tickets—1,515 of a 4,250 seating capacity—were sold to the Taylor Dayne concert, the most recent entertainment event, several anonymous SGA senators agree the show was not a success.

"Taylor Dayne was a $16,844 loss to the SGA, which sponsored the concert event," Dobbs said. "We really expected her to bring in a lot of people. I do not know what happened. Publicity definitely was not the problem."

Dobbs said she hopes the survey will help the UPC bring in better names with the support of the students.

"If they (the students) do not support the concerts, we lose money. If we continue to lose money, there will not be any entertainment to even offer," Dobbs said.

'Little sibling weekend' events planned

Michelle Martin
Features Editor

The second annual "Little Sibling Weekend," a UPC-sponsored event, is scheduled for Feb. 1-3.

"This is an opportunity for students to bring their younger brothers or sisters to JSU and enjoy the special events of the weekend," said Sherryl Byrd, director of Student Activities.

"We also encourage faculty and students who have children to bring them, as well," said Byrd.

Among the planned activities for "Little Sibling Weekend" are the movie "Ghost Dad" at 7 and 9:30 p.m., Friday, in Montgomery Auditorium, and a comedy act, featuring Bob Garner, at 3 p.m., Saturday, in Montgomery Auditorium.

Not only are both of these events free, but free tickets to the men's and women's basketball game against Livingston will be given away at Garner's performance.

Garner has been entertaining audiences with his "outstanding showmanship" since his first act at age 13. Since then, Garner has established a name for himself, touring with "The Magic and Comedy Act of Garner" at least 10 months a year, capturing the interest of such famous entertainers as Milton Berle.

Magician and comedian Bob Garner will perform during "Little Sibling Weekend" Feb. 2.

Delta State crushed by Lady Gamecocks

Rodney Parks
Sports Editor

For the past three seasons, the JSU Lady Gamecock basketball team has ended its season with a loss in the NCAA play-offs to Delta State. The last two seasons Delta State has gone on to win the national championship.

The Lady Gamecocks got some revenge Saturday as they rolled to a 94-76 win over the Lady Statesman.

JSU came to the floor ready to play, jumping to a quick 32-18 lead. Coach Tony Mabrey felt his team built its early lead by sticking to the game plan.

"We wanted to stay in our zone and pack it tight," said Mabrey. "We also wanted to press them (Delta State) and try to cause some turnovers. We didn't get that many turnovers until we changed to a straight-man pass."

Just before half time, Delta State showed why it has won two straight national titles. They outscored JSU 22-10 to trail by only two points at the break, 42-40.

"We got a little tired just before the break, and I felt we were standing around," said Mabrey. "Delta State plays defense very well, and they overplay every pass. During this time, they were able to get back into the game."

Delta State opened a 58-55 lead by outscoring JSU 18-13 to open the second half. Tracy Linton then put JSU back on top for good by scoring eight consecutive points.

JSU continued to pull ahead of the Lady Statesman by outscoring them 39-18 to end the game.

Linton scored 25 points and pulled down a game high 15 rebounds in the game. Linton was pleased with the victory.

"I was really working to get open," said Linton. "This is a big win for our team because we're tied with Delta State in the Gulf South Conference with one loss each. This was also a great win for me because it's my first time to beat Delta State."

Dana Bright led JSU in scoring with 27 points. Michelle Hamilton added 20 for the Lady Gamecocks.

Gamecock Basketball returned from its extended roadtrip on Saturday, January 19, to be greeted by the roar of a near capacity crowd and the Statesmen of Delta State University. After a slow start, the Gamecocks turned on the juice to run away from the Statesmen by a final tally of 100-83.

The first ten minutes saw the JSU squad fall behind 21-9 before settling in to regain the lead with five minutes remaining in the half. A thirteen unanswered point burst gave the Gamecocks a 27-23 lead which they managed to stretch into a 40-30 advantage by half-time.

"This was our first home game since Jan. 2," said Head Coach Bill Jones. "After the girls big win prior to our game, I think our guys were just a little too pumped up right at the start."

Jones continued, "In the beginning, we rushed our shots and did things out of sync with our half-court offense. We were trying too hard to score, like we had to get six or eight points each time down court. Once we settled down, we had a nice crowd and a big win in the Gulf South Conference."

The second half was all JSU, as the Gamecocks built the lead to as much as 24 points. Alley-oop slam dunks and aggressive defense assured the fans that even when the score runs away, there is no reason to leave the coliseum early.

The big turning point in the game occurred when 6'2" Junior guard David Edmond checked into the game. Perhaps one should say that he was fired into the game. Edmond exploded for 18 first half points and ended up leading all scorers with 20 points. He was 2 for 4 on three-point attempts and bagged 3 rebounds.

Coming off the bench is something new for Edmond, but it seems to be working just fine. "We made the change at the tournament at Rollins (Jan. 4-5)," said Jones. "We decided to let him come off the bench and boy, has he responded. That was our biggest concern.

"David has turned the move into a very positive thing, which has ended up being very positive for the team. He has made a difference in every game as soon as he hits the floor. Like everyone else, he thinks he has to do too much at the start. Coming off the bench gives him an opportunity to settle down. Believe me, we consider him a starter, because that's what he is. David, Willie Williams, and Glen Wyche have all been coming off the bench. They're starters to us, they play as much time as anyone else."

Gamecocks build winning streak

Rodney Parks
Sports Editor

This season the JSU pressing defense has been the key to an outstanding 14-2 record. Monday night the Gamecocks used their press to turn a six-point half time led into a 28-point led in only eleven minutes. With this run JSU claimed a 98-69 win over Mississippi College.

JSU built a led with the aid of six three-pointers by point guard Pat Madden. Madden finished game high of 22 points.

"Pat (Madden) is a good shooter, but he doesn't always look for the shot and that is not always bad in a point guard," said Coach Bill Jones. "It's great to have a point guard who can do both. The way he runs the floor with the ball and the way that he gives the ball up, when Pat scores is just icing on the cake. Tonight the icing was just double thick."

Madden led JSU with nine assists during the game.

Mississippi College played well in the first half as they held a 5-0 led two minutes into the game.

JSU's press was not effective in the first half as the Gamecocks went to the break with only a 40-34 led.

JSU came out of the locker room and broke the game open by scoring the first ten points in the half. The Gamecocks continued to score quick points off of Choctaws turnovers and built a 75-47 led with nine minutes left in the game.

"I felt our bench play exceptional tonight," said Jones. "Willie Williams, Glen Wyche and David Edmond all came to the floor and sparked our press. This was a team victory. Each player came to the floor and did what they had to do tonight in order for us to win."

"We didn't really make an adjustment at half time we just went over our coverage areas a little. Our transition game began to take a toll as the game wore on."

Joining Madden in double figures was Edmond with 15 points, Charles Burkette and Willie Fisher added 12 each and Eric Hosey scored 10.

Charles Burkette leads JSU's hopes for season

TODD BROOKS

If a player wants to play center for Coach Bill Jones' basketball team, he must be able to run the floor like a guard but still rebound like a center.

Charles Burkette, the 6-6, 205-pound junior has filled this role very well for Jones this season. Burkette is enjoying his first year as a starter for the Gamecocks.

"I never really planned to attend JSU," said Burkette. "I just ended up here, but I'm glad I did. I like the campus and the people around JSU. I also enjoy the style (of basketball) we're playing."

Burkette not only likes the style of basketball, but he enjoys playing for Jones as well.

"I like the fact that he (Jones) means business," said Burkette. "He carries himself in a sensible manner, and he has a great sense of humor."

Burkette, who is the second-leading scorer in the Gulf South Conference and the leading rebounder, thinks the game he will remember most up to this time will be the game against Alabama A&M. JSU won that game 121-85. Burkette scored a game high 33 points and pulled down 12 rebounds.

"I thought that it was one of my best games," stated Burkette.

Burkette doesn't have one professional athlete he likes the best, but his favorites are all NBA players.

"I like Magic Johnson, Dominique Wilkins, Michael Jordan and Larry Bird," said Burkette.

The easy-going Burkette, when not dominating the boards, likes to play baseball and lift weights; he is a recreation major.

This is Burkette's second season playing for JSU. Last season Burkette averaged 9.2 points per game and pulled down seven rebounds.

Women keep on rolling

TODD BROOKS

There were some questions whether the Lady Gamecocks could come back after a big win over their rival Delta State and be up for a game against Mississippi College. The Lady Gamecocks answered the questions with a 101-77 trouncing of the Lady Choctaws.

Mississippi College played JSU close the first 12 minutes, as JSU held only a 26-23 lead. From that point on, it was all JSU as the Lady Gamecocks out-scored the Lady Choctaws 26-2, including 19 straight to end the half with a 52-25 lead.

The JSU bench played more than half of the second period and JSU still managed to score 49 points to preserve the win.

Dana Bright led all scorers with 23 points, including 12-12 from the free throw line. Jana Bright was second with 18 and Tracy Linton contributed 17. The JSU bench also did well led by Anita Davis with 14 and Meredith Crowder put in 12.

The Lady Choctaws leading scorers came off the bench with Nicole Ellis scoring 16 and Verlynsia Alexander with 11.

Coach Mabrey thought the defense played well and the offense was not in synch early.

"We were trying to run our break but we had some turnovers," said Mabrey. "We finally got back into the swing of things and started to get some baskets. They played an aggressive man to man and they were all over us at times. They got after you pretty hard like Delta (State) does."

This win, coupled with a West Georgia loss earlier in the night put the Lady Gamecocks in a three-way tie with West Georgia and Delta State for first place in the Gulf South Conference.

The Lady Gamecocks now stand at 13-2 overall, 5-1 in the GSC.

JSU will try to remain at least tied for the lead when the travel to UT-Martin Saturday.

Gamecocks

When asked what he felt was the team's key to success, Jones replied, "Intensity level is a big thing for us and the way we play. If it gets high and can remain high for forty minutes, then we have the opportunity to do what we did tonight. That's, to get a lead and build on that lead."

Other double figure scorers included Willie Fisher and Anthony Kingston each with 15 points, Pat Madden with 13, Charles Burkette with 12 points and 12 rebounds, and Eric Hosey with 10 points and 11 rebounds.

JSU 102

Athens State 80

On January 16, the men's basketball team travelled to Athens, Ala. to face the Bears of Athens State. The Gamecocks proved too much for the Bears and ended their six game road trip with the impressive victory.

This night belonged to a 6'6" Junior from Montgomery named Charles Burkette. Athens State fans remembered last years performance where Burkette lead the Gamecocks to a victory with 17 points and 14 rebounds. Well, Bear fans, Mr. Burkette is one year older and one year better, and this time around it was 37 points and 10 rebounds.

Burkette was 3 for 3 on three point shots, 10 for 12 on field goals and 8 for 11 at the stripe. "Charles played one heck of a game," commented Coach Jones. "This was one solid team effort that we can all be proud of."

JSU outscored the Bears 43-32 in the first half and never looked back as they continued their streak of consecutive 100 point games.

Other contributors included David Edmond with 16 points, Eric Hosey with 11, Anthony Kingston with 10 points and 7 assists, Pat Madden with 9 points, 8 assists and 4 steals, Willie Fisher tossed in 9 points, Willie Williams added 6 and 3 steals, Glen Wyche with three and Steve Paci rounded off the scoring with one.

Award presented

FROM THE OFFICE OF
SPORTS INFORMATION
Special to the Chanticleer

Prior to the 1990 football season, JSU and Central Bank of Jacksonville were looking for some way to recognize outstanding players on the field. Then the bank made a $5,000 donation to the JSU Scholarship Endowment Fund, and the Central Bank "Player of the Week" award was born.

"We suggested that they sponsor an outstanding offensive and defensive player each week during the regular season," Jerry Cole, JSU

Athletic Director, said. "This plaque, which was originally presented to Central Bank; acknowledges the players and the support that Central Bank has given our program."

Last Tuesday, JSU President Harold J. McGee accepted the plaque from Henry Hobbs, president of the Central Bank of Jacksonville.

"Henry, in turn, presented the plaque to the University so that it could be hung in a prominent place for all to see," Cole said. "This is just one more example of the generosity of the area banking industry towards our program as a whole. We are pleased at the support we get from them."

Twins provide Lady Gamecocks' leadership

There are a pair of really "Bright" twins on the JSU Lady Gamecocks Basketball team. This twin-tandem is leading their team through an almost spotless season and their names are Dana and Jana Bright. If you can tell them apart, your doing better than this reporter.

The pair was born in Gadsden on June 6, 1969, and one would have to believe they have been playing basketball ever since. They play the game with a tenacity and determination not often seen at this level of competition, in any sport.

Dana, who wears number 20, more often than not is the player putting the ball in the hoop. She came into this season already listed as JSU's all-time leading scorer with 1489 points in 89 games. This season, she continues to set a mark which will be difficult to better. This two-time All-Gulf South Conference player was a pre-season pick to repeat at that honor and should be a strong candidate for national attention.

Jana wears number 12 and is more of a scrappy defensive player giving the opponents best players nightmares. She accumulated 139 steals over the past two years, as well as consistently contributing double-figures in assist, scoring and rebounding.

Both were named "Co-Freshman of the Year" in their first season with the Lady Gamecocks.

They came to JSU from Spring Garden High School where they led their team to the State Class 1-A championship title. "We knew that we would go to college as a pair," said Dana. "When we saw the campus and met the people here at Jacksonville, the decision was easy."

The transition into collegiate sports is difficult for most players, but in true twin style the pair has adjusted with ease. "In high school we had to play all positions, that helped to give us versatility," Jana commented. "Still playing together is a definite advantage as well."

Until one has had a chance to meet this unique duo, he may not

Dana Bright is JSU's all-time leading scorer

Jana Bright is JSU's all-time assists leader believe how much they are alike. They share a room on campus, idolize Los Angeles Lakers guard "Magic" Johnson, love league softball and all other outdoor activities. "We grew up on a farm; I guess that gives you an appreciation for the great outdoors," said Jana.

When you ask them a question, don't be surprised to get the beginning of the answer from one, and the ending from another. It seems to just be natural, just like their desire to capture the GSC title. A goal which is well within the teams grasp.

These twins also retain impressive GPA's and anticipate graduation in the spring. Jana carries a 3.3 average and Dana has a 3.2. Or was that the other way around?

Brasher assists with Intramural Department

Todd Brooks
Sports Writer

Whenever you go to Pete Mathews Coliseum to watch or participate in intramural sports you might notice someone who is always there to watch the games. This is Eric Brasher, the first Assistant Intramural Director ever at JSU.

Brasher is a native of Jacksonville and attended both Jacksonville High School and JSU. Brasher decided to come to JSU because he was already familiar with the University and liked the sports program. Brasher graduated in 1987 with a major in recreation and minor in business administration.

"It was something I wanted to do (to be around sports)" said Brasher. "If I couldn't do it in coaching, this was another good outlet for it."

Brasher said that he enjoyed the size of the JSU campus.

"You get to know a lot of the students when they are here, where as if you were at a big university you wouldn't," said Brasher. "You can get on a more personal basis with everybody that plays, especially fraternities. I think that helps if you know a lot of the players, you can cut down on some of your problems. If they know you, it helps too, because they're not going to show any bad signs while your watching them if they know who you are."

His responsibilities include everything that goes on at the coliseum including basketball games, graduation set-ups, concerts, and being out on the field during intramural sports.

"If we have any problems we can settle it out on the field and not have to worry about waiting the next day to settle something," said Brasher.

Brasher considers himself lucky to have the job. He was working for the city of Anniston when Mark Jones, the Intramural Sports Director, got in contact with him about working at JSU.

Brasher said there are not many recreational jobs, especially well paying jobs in the area, and so he decided to accept the job at JSU.

Brasher likes to play sports including softball and volleyball and he thinks he that helps him in his job.

"If you like what you do, you are going to try to do a better job and you care about the programs a lot more," said Brasher.

LOSE 20 POUNDS IN TWO WEEKS!

Famous U.S. Women's Ski Team Diet

During the non-snow off season the U.S. Women's Alpine Ski Team members used the "Ski Team" diet to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. That's right -- 20 pounds in 14 days! The basis of the diet is chemical food action and was devised by a famous Colorado physician especially for the U.S. Ski Team. Normal energy is maintained (very important!) while reducing. You keep "full" -- no starvation -- because the diet is designed that way. It's a diet that is easy to follow whether you work, travel or stay at home.

This is, honestly, a fantastically successful diet. If it weren't, the U.S. Women's Ski Team wouldn't be permitted to use it! Right? So, give yourself the same break the U.S. Ski Team gets. Lose weight the scientific, proven way. Even if you've tried all the other diets, you owe it to yourself to try the U.S. Women's Ski Team Diet. That is, if you really want to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. Order today. Tear this out as a reminder.
