Miss JSU crowned

Kelli Dobbs
Staff writer

The Miss JSU pageant concluded Saturday night with Julia Langley, a senior marketing major from Wadley, Ala., being crowned Miss JSU.

Fifteen girls competed in the 1993 Miss JSU pageant held at Leone Cole Auditorium.

The pageant, which had originally been scheduled for March 13 but was postponed a week due to the snow, is a preliminary to the Miss Alabama pageant.

Langley will represent the University at the pageant in June. If she wins Miss Alabama, she will then go on to compete in the Miss America pageant.

The Miss JSU pageant included an evening gown competition and a swimsuit and talent competition. Each contestant also had to go through an interview process with the judges before the pageant.

A new rule this year allowed the contestants to remain on stage only 20 seconds during the swimsuit competition.

This rule was made so that the judges could view the contestants' physical fitness and not their measurements.

Wendy Keith, a senior communication major, won the swimsuit competition.

Langley won the talent part of the competition singing "A Piece of Sky" from the movie "Yentl".

Fourth winner-up to Miss JSU was Jennifer Vinson, a senior. Third runner-up was Mimi New, a sophomore majoring in early childhood education.

Keith was named second runner-up and senior Amy Morrison was named first runner-up.

Heather Whitestone, the 1992 Miss JSU, crowned Langley, who was thrilled when she heard her name read as the new Miss JSU.

"I am elated," she said. "It is by far one of the most wonderful experiences of my life." Langley said she hopes to represent the University well this year.

Miss JSU wins a year's tuition scholarship to JSU, a $750 cash award, a Revere Bowl and roses.

Langley cited the scholarship as one of the main reasons she entered the pageant.

All the women who placed in the pageant won a Revere Bowl, provided by Couch's Jewelers, and roses provided by Evan's Florist. The first runner-up wins one semester's scholarship to JSU. The second runner-up wins a $200 scholarship, the third and fourth runners-up win a $100 scholarship, and the talent winner wins a one semester scholarship.

The pageant is sponsored and produced by the Epsilon Nu chapter of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, the Professional Fraternity for Men in Music in America.

JSU professor challenges grade appeal

Melanie Jones
Managing Editor

Robert Felgar, a JSU English professor, is challenging a program many students know nothing about: a policy that allows students to challenge grades.

Felgar said he has been asked to change a student's grade based on the decision of an appeals committee. In a letter to William Meehan, acting vice president of Academic Affairs, he questioned the nature of the appeals procedure. "I had never heard of this 'procedure'..." Felgar said in the letter. "... (it) is basically a shrouded one, intended for as few faculty and students as possible.... Proof of its clandestine nature will be the many students highly interested to learn of it, and irate that they have had no recourse to it, when one (and so far only one) of their disgruntled numbers has found a way to gain from it."

Felgar said the student in question missed class 11 times when the college's limit is 10. The student said she missed only 10 classes, and took the complaint to the department head, then on to the dean.

A committee made of eight faculty members and three students decided in the favor of the student. Felgar has filed an appeal with Meehan. The student's name is being withheld due to privacy laws.

In his appeal, Felgar said the committee did not judge whether or not the student missed 11 times, but the attendance policy itself. He felt some of the committee members voted against him because they believed it was unfair to fail a person for missing one extra class.

Meehan could not comment on the actual case because the appeal is still pending.

Meehan said the policy the appeal was filed under is simply a revised form of a policy that has been in effect in the College of Letters and Sciences for at least five years.

"(The colleges) must have a procedure to deal with grades,"

"(The colleges) must have a procedure to deal with grades."

Academic Affairs*

Meehan said. Each of the seven colleges at JSU has some type of grade appeals process. The two departments which are not in a college, technology and military science, also have policies through which a student can appeal his or her grade.

Apparently, this is not the first time a student has challenged a grade. One dean said at least six students have appealed grades in his college.

Many students, however, are not aware that such a policy exists. "I had no idea that you could (challenge a grade)," said Tray Crow, a freshman pre-med major. Freshmen are not the only ones who are not informed of the issue. Danielle Couch, a graduate student in Psychology, was surprised to hear that such a policy existed. "I don't think anyone knows about it," she said.

The three do believe the policy is a good idea. "I think teachers sometimes form opinions about students just because they speak out on an issue," Crow said.

Couch agreed. "Professors are not infallible," she said.

Most students feel the University should inform them of their right to appeal a grade and the policy

University bans smoking from all campus buildings

Dyana Blythe
News Editor

Campus buildings have recently become smoke-free in response to a University decision made in late February. The decision came after complaints by faculty and students about the cigarette smoke hanging in the air of the lobbies of many of the academic and dormitory buildings.

In addition, the SGA passed its own resolution stating that "it is the opinion of this body that the students of Jacksonville State University be protected from exposure to secondhand smoke."

The SGA resolution also adds smokeless tobacco as a health hazard and requests that it also be banned from buildings because it apparently resulted in significant damage to JSU property and additional expense

The problem with smoking arose because the University buildings are not equipped with make-up air (a method of exchanging the air in the building with outside air).

JSU's 'Dressed for Breakfast' put on display

Sherry Fraser
News Writer

"Dressed for Breakfast," JSU's new literary magazine, premiered Monday night in Houston Cole Library with a student reading.

The reading, which was open to the public, featured works from the authors included in the magazine. The poets and essayists are students from all over the JSU campus and the magazine was produced by the English department.

Funding for "Dressed for Breakfast" came from James Earl Wade, dean of the College of Letters and Sciences, who granted seed money to start the project.

"If we could raise more money, it would be neat if (the literary magazine) could be longer."

Dorothy Tobe is the sponsor of the publication and is pleased with the new literary magazine. "If we can raise more money, it would be neat if (the literary magazine) could be longer," Tobe said. "The problem is with printing. We were told that as far as stapling goes, the limit was 32 pages.

"And it's also a problem of cost. We had 300 copies of "Dressed for Breakfast" and it was $145. So, the cost depends on the type of binding, the cover stock, the quality of paper and the length."

The English department called for submissions last fall. After submissions were in, they were passed to one of the three section editors; a fiction editor, a poetry editor, or an essay editor. Once the section editors made their choices, then Tobe looked at them

Copies of "Dressed for Breakfast" are available in 228 Stone Center. Anyone interested about involvement with next year's publication should speak to Tobe in Stone Center.

DJ threatened at campus radio station

From staff reports

Campus radio station WLJS-FM is on alert after a late-night visit from a mysterious listener.

Last Saturday night, just as the station began to sign off the air, a person which appeared to be a woman dressed in black slipped through the door, which was accidentally cracked open. The person appeared outside of the control room, and, as the DJ on duty tried to leave, refused to move.

The DJ notified campus police before he went outside, only to be followed by the visitor, who subsequently pulled a stun gun and tried to grab the DJ's keys.

"She told me I couldn't leave," the DJ said, "and when I tried to, she told me she had a real gun in her car and she would get it if she had to.

"She also said that this area was not ready for her kind yet."

The DJ then managed to get into his car and drive home. However, the woman followed him and yelled that she knew where he lived now.

The radio station is not taking this lightly.

"We don't know how serious this is," Calvin Wilbum, 92-J program director, said, "but we are taking precautions. You can never tell."

The woman made contact again Sunday but has not been heard from since. Campus police are currently investigating the situation.

The student handbook does not address the issue, and the catalog only addresses it indirectly. According to the 1991-92 catalogue, "No grade except Incomplete may be changed after the submitting of final grades except in the case of error in communication of student's grade to the Office of Admissions and Records."

However, in the following paragraph it states, "Students who have not processed an official withdrawal from the University may not petition for grade changes beyond two weeks from the close of that semester," but it does not give any specifics on how students can file an appeal. Some students said they believed more people would appeal their grades if the knew they could. "Last semester I had a question about a grade and didn't know I could do anything about it," Crow said.

Other students believe publicizing it would result in students appealing needlessly. "If you truly felt your grade was wrong, you'd do some research," Elisha Gilliland, a junior majoring in early childhood education, said.

Greeks hit busiest time of Spring semester

Greek Week provides 'friendly competition'

This week is Greek Week, an annual event in which all the Greeks on campus get together for a week of fun, games and "friendly competition."

The Panhellenic Council is sponsoring this year's Greek Week, which in past years has been sponsored by Order of Omega.

Most of the events scheduled for earlier in the week, such as the tug of war and the one-mile run, have been postponed until today, due to rain predictions.

Skit night, which was held Monday night in Leone Cole Auditorium, was a funny and entertaining night for all Greeks.

The brothers of Delta Chi and the sisters of Zeta Tau Alpha took first place in the skit competition Monday night.

Various events will be taking place all week. The Chariot Race was held Monday, as well as a doughnut-eating contest.

A two-day blood drive is being held Wednesday and today, and the SGA Blood Drive committee, which sponsors the event, has set a goal to beat last semester's Halloween blood drive.

The week will conclude tonight with the annual Greek Week Banquet. Awards will be given and Greek God and Goddess will be announced.

Students voted for the Greek God and Goddess at TMB Tuesday, but the winners will not be known until the banquet.

The night will conclude with the announcement of Greek Week champs in the various competitions that have been taking place during the week.

Fraternities raise money to help non-profit organizations

The brothers of Kappa Alpha Order recently had a visitor from the Regional Muscular Dystrophy office in Birmingham, who brought along the State Poster Child for the Muscular Dystrophy Association and his mother. The KAs were pleased to present them a check for $2,184, which was raised in their recent Tennis-A-Thon.

The representative told the KAs how the MDA will use the donation, and they were able to spend time with the Poster Child.

The donations help send children to summer camp and help the families pay some of the costs for treatment.

The brothers are still accepting money to benefit the MDA.

The brothers of Kappa Alpha also have their plans in progress for their annual Old South Celebration to be held April 5-10.

The sisters and pledges of Alpha Omicron Pi would like to congratulate all their participants in the Miss JSU pageant.

A special congratulations to Julia Langley, who won the talent competition and was crowned Miss JSU 1993.

AOPi is also holding a Spring Break cooler raffle to raise money for their international philanthropy, Arthritis Research.

The cooler will contain soft drinks, snacks, tanning oil and various other items everyone will need to hit the beach during Spring Break.

Alpha Tau Omega raised money for the United Way with a roadblock and can drive they had recently.

Although they did not announce how much money they raised, they did say they were pleased with the turnout.

In addition, they had planned a volleyball tournament to raise more money, but it was cancelled due to last week's snowstorm. The tournament will be rescheduled.

They will also have an Easter Egg Hunt to raise money for Jacksonville Daycare Center.

The brothers of Kappa Sigma raised money through a pledge auction last week which also raised money for the Jacksonville Daycare Center.

A breath of fresh air

Congratulations to JSU for passing its own version of a Clean Air Act—making campus buildings smoke-free.

Not long ago, smoking was cool. At least in society's eye. However, the pendulum of social perception swings rapidly. And now, in 1993, smoking is on the decline.

The actual time period of when the number of smokers in America started to fall is fuzzy, but it is a trend that has happened for the past few years. Once warning labels from the U.S. attorney general were required for tobacco, the movement had begun.

Recently, however, the pace has accelerated. Government reports have indicated that inhaling second-hand smoke is as dangerous as actually smoking.

And last year, Congress passed a law stating "everyone has a right to a smoke-free work environment."

How true.

Many people misinterpreted this act as an attack on smokers' civil liberties.

Not true

When the actions of one person infringe on the natural rights of another person (such as clean air), an argument over civil liberties is a paradox.

Here at JSU, that is what had been happening for years. It was hard to walk up the stairs in Stone Center without choking on the thick cloud of cigarette smoke.

Smokers should not be discriminated against, and anyone should have the right to smoke if they so desire.

Aside from the annoying activists who think they should tell everyone else how to live their lives, no one disagrees with that.

But just don't do it indoors where non-smokers don't have a choice of whether or not they can be exposed to it.

Is the stairway in Stone Center that used to be filled with smoke not much better off now? Aren't the rest of the buildings on campus that are smoke-free, even if the areas now prohibiting smoke are small ones, much more pleasant to walk into?

JSU's action in cleaning up the breathing air of its buildings is definitely a wise one. But more importantly, it is a healthy one.

A few odds and ends...

Other countries around the world may be trying to move away from a government-dominated market and toward a capitalist society, but no matter how far those countries may progress, they will never be able to touch the United States.

MTV, that bastion of cultural enlightenment in cable's vast wasteland, provided a weekend full of Spring Break coverage from Daytona Beach

I believe full coverage would be the key words here

On one side of a stage, as part of a segment called "Beauty and the Beach," was a man and on the other side, a woman—both in cages. Each contestant had about 30 seconds to shake and grind before the next contestant came along

I didn't know basic cable television was allowed to broadcast what they were were broadcasting. The "stunt" part of the competition came after the cages.

One girl, wearing a see-through black top and a bikini bottom, popped a balloon without using her hands

MTV probably garnered some very high ratings for their Spring Break programming. It's sad to know men and women tuned in to watch such trash

Of course, the only reason we were watching was to make fun of it. Honest

Something's happening here

Times sure have changed over the past four years, and I can't say for the better

When I was a freshman, there were almost 1,000 less students enrolled and yet it seems our university was in better shape

More classes, services and fields of study were offered, students were generally happy and, believe it or not, JSU was the "Friendliest Campus in the South." Attendance at football games was high, parties abounded and times were good. Students actually stayed in town on weekends, even if the Bucks weren't playing at Brother's

Now it's 1993 and students are apathetic. Average attendance at football games was down about 3,000 from the figures in 1989. JSU is a ghost town on weekends, and parties have declined drastically Thursday nights

Are the students entirely to blame for their apathy? Not by a long shot

We have to pay for our handouts in some classes because the departments don't have the funds for paper; technological equipment is outdated, and can anyone find a piece of chalk that is not microscopic?

Even the faculty seems, at times, to be apathetic. It is understandable, to a point, because Dr. McGee has broken promises to them about interaction with the campus population and wage increases, and by the way, has anyone seen McGee walking around on campus? Probably not because he doesn't even live here. Students' tuition is being used for the upkeep of a president's house that the president doesn't even live in

BILL DOBILAS

All of these problems are compounded by the fact that our athletic programs are moving to Division I. I look forward to the day when our basketball team can defeat North Carolina by 10, or when our football team holds its own with the Crimson Tide, but don't take the quality of our education away from us to do it

The administration tells us that this move is going to be funded by the Alumni Association, but when the money comes up short, whose pockets are going to be picked? Surely not McGee's.

Take this to heart: when you go for a job, holding your degree from Jacksonville State in your hand, do you want your prospective employer to think what a great and successful athletic school you attended or what a challenging institution you graduated from?

We cannot go back to how things were unless the University begins to care about our needs again. That will take a lot of work and that is not something that our administration is used to, so maybe the student population should come together, for we do pay for the services and classes that are being usurped, and without us there is no Jacksonville State University

Give me that old time religion

I'm looking for the Rev. Floyd Tenney. He's the pastor of a Methodist church somewhere in the Atlanta area. Somebody told me that recently, but they didn't have a name or address of the church.

I knew Floyd Tenney when I was a boy. He was a preacher at my home church, Moreland Methodist.

He was the first preacher with whom I really identified. He wasn't a somber old man in a blue suit, preaching out of revelation, scaring me about the moon turning to blood and the seas boiling over.

The Rev. Tenney kept it simple, kept it where a young boy could get some idea of what the Methodist Gospel was all about, kept it where you didn't doze.

I recall he always asked us to stand when he read from the Bible. I'd never known a preacher to ask that before.

Floyd Tenney married me for the first time in 1966 at the Moreland Methodist Church. We had loved each other since the 6th grade and it was supposed to be forever.

When it turned out not to, four years later, I tried to find the Rev Tenney to help me figure out a way to get her back.

But he was no longer at the Moreland Methodist. I found out he'd gone into the used-car business. My barber died the same week I got the news about the Rev. Tenney.

My preacher goes into used cars and my barber dies in the same week. I was a lost soul.

But youth gets over setbacks as it gets over almost anything.

I found myself, moved on, and except for the mention that the Rev. Tenney was back in the pulpit somewhere, he hadn't crossed my mind in years until I attended a fancy, big city Methodist service Sunday.

The people were nice. The minister gave a thought-provoking sermon on repentance. But they spent at least ten minutes lighting candles. The choir was in fancy robes and sang something that could have been opera. And there were all sorts of associate ministers involved

We were asked to sing the first and third verses of some ponderous Christmas hymn with which I was not familiar. And across from it in the hymn book was "Away in a Manger."

I still know all the words to "Away in a Manger," but we didn't sing that.

Concerned about this, I turned to the hymnal's index. I did find "The Old Rugged Cross," but "Precious Memories" wasn't in there.

Yes, give me that old time religion. Give it to me as I had it when I was a boy.

The choir in Moreland Methodist occasionally was off key, but when they rendered "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," it was a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

When they asked the congregation to pray, there were no fancy words, no quoting of big name theologians. It just came from the heart and said, "Lord, help us to do what's right."

I've just got the feeling that Floyd Tenney's church, wherever it might be, is still like that.

Floyd, I want to come hear you again. I want to sing the old songs.

"Would that you stand as we read God's word," he used to say.

I'll stand again as I did when I was 14, next to my mother. I want to sing, "Precious Memories," and "When the Role is Called Up Yonder," and "Dwelling in Beulahland," from that old brown hymnal.

It took a visit to a big city church to make me remember how good it used to feel on the square at Moreland Methodist, where I married the first time, where I said good-bye to my mother, and where they will say good-bye to me one day.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Students should be grateful for cafeteria

Dear Editor,

I am outraged at the complaints of many students about the service of the JSU cafeteria during the snow storm last weekend.

What are these people thinking? They should have been grateful that the dedicated staff worked as hard as they did on preparing hot meals for the students.

Many families in the Jacksonville community went without power, water and food during this crisis situation and these students are complaining because their meals were not free!

How ungrateful can one be? If these students would analyze this situation, they may realize that every restaurant in Jacksonville was closed.

Therefore, they should consider the cafeteria a luxury rather than condemning the service.

Furthermore, if the people making these complaints would have better prepared themselves for this situation like we were all advised, they would not have to blame the cafeteria - yet blame themselves.

Another way to look at the situation is that if the cafeteria had not opened, the students could have walked to the grocery stores or found some kind of transportation just like everyone else - who were just happy that the food stores were open!

Disgusted,
Dawn Stolz

Stacie Gwiazdowski's spring break wasn't exactly a normal one.

"I come to Alabama to escape the cold St. Louis spring and what do I get? Two feet of snow and no snow plows! It was crazy," Gwiazdowski says in a flurry.

Gwiazdowski is a student from the University of Evansville in Evansville, Ind. She came to Alabama to visit friends and stayed three days longer than she expected, courtesy of the Blizzard of '93.

necessarily want to stick around home, but says she doesn't have much of a choice. "I don't have any money, so I can't go to Florida," she says. "I guess I'll just stay home and work."

Whatever one does for spring break, it has a definite psychological importance.

"By the time spring break comes along everyone is ready for it," says Marti Warren, a counselor at Anniston High School in Anniston.

where people go

"It was memorable and fun being stranded (in Alabama) although I'm paying for it now," says the St. Louis native, "I'm way behind in my classes."

Gwiazdowski was lucky. At least she was in a house when the storm hit.

"Some of my friends went to Florida and got stranded on their way back to school," says Meghan Hobbs, a freshman at Western Kentucky University in Bowling Green. "They had to huddle up in blanketed masses

"I'm going to head down to Florida with a friend from Birmingham who apparently has a friend with a really expensive condo," says JSU senior Steve Scott.

Cost isn't worrying Scott. He says staying in the condo enables him to get by fairly inexpensively, "barring the price of beer."

Not all vacations are quite so inexpensive, though. Christi Hicks of R & R Travel Services in Anniston says that there are several other popular ways to spend spring depending on the cruise line.

Some students utilize the time to go back home to visit family and friends. Patricia Lambert is going back to the town her husband is from.

"I'm going to Indiana, the sunshine state," says Lambert, laughing. "I'm going to spend time with my kids and not study one damn thing. I'm leaving my books at home. And I'm going to sleep late every morning."

Lambert says that if she doesn't go to

"I think you psychologically gear yourself up," she said, "You know in your head 'if I can make it until Christmas, I have Christmas break. Then if I make it to spring break, I've got that and I'm over the hump.'" Warren says that spring break enables to students to make it to graduation or to the end of the year.

Warren also pointed out that spring break is just as important to the teachers as it is to the student. "Teachers count those days.

what people do

in their freezing cars on the side of the highway."

Hopefully JSU's spring break won't be graced by an unruly blizzard. Many students have plans that don't involve being stranded on the side of the road, struggling to keep warm in a snow bound car.

According to Hicks, a typical four day ski trip would cost somewhere in the neighborhood of $450, hotel and air fare included. A cruise can be a bit more expensive. Just the cruise by itself can run around $450 to $500. If you throw in air fare, the cost can rise to as much as $800,

the fab five is back

Jamie Cole
Features Editor

Back in the '80s they called them the fab five. Well, now Duran Duran has changed its line-up and are back with an all new album. Their ninth album, to be exact. And the original nucleus of the band is the same: lead singer Simon Le Bon, keyboardist Nick Rhodes and bassist John Taylor. New to the band is Warren Cuccurullo on guitar.

As for the new album, it is self-titled. The band refers to it as "The Wedding Album," referring to the wedding photos of the members' parents on the cover.

No matter what they call it, we call it "Inconsistent." The British rockers wail on the first three cuts of the album. The future single, "Too Much Information," is an upbeat slam of the media, including the very medium that helped create them: "Destroyed by MTV/I hate to bite the hand that feeds me/Too much information." Good for anybody that can be that honest.

Next up is the brilliant single "Ordinary World," with the band sounding much more mature than the teeny-bopper sound from the mid-'80s. The lyrics are sobering: "Papers in the roadside tell of suffering and greed/ Feared today, forgot tomorrow/Here beside the news of holy war and holy need/Ours is just a little sorrowed talk/Blown away."

"Love Voodoo," the next cut, is lighter fare, but classic Duran Duran nonetheless. some sensual female vocals in the background add to the effect of the song.

From here on out, the album loses its footing. Among the malay of the last 10 tracks is one more terrific song, "Come Undone," which features those sensual vocals again, this time in a ballad set to a pulsating house groove. This song is certainly single-bound.

The rest are run-of-the-mill dance tunes you could hear on anyone else's album. Hohum. And it doesn't help that the band decided to include the oft-covered Velvet Underground classic, "Femme Fatale" (not a good idea; the raw power of the original version is only synthesized in Duran Duran's cover).

DURAN Duran

Overall though, the band's "Ordinary World" clip is anything but ordinary. It's rare that one single can actually carry an entire album, but when it's good, it can happen. Throw in cuts like "Love Voodoo" and "Come Undone," enough to please any hardcore D2 fan, and you've got a worthy, if rocky, effort.

Best Picture nominees are strong, make for tough choice Oscar plays 'The Crying Game'

Hooray for Hollywood! Yes, it's that time of year again when, this Monday night, one billion people around the world will tune in to one television show. No, Oprah's not interviewing Elvis. It's the Oscars! Billy Crystal and friends are back for another fun-filled evening, and this year, the Best Picture nominees are tougher to pick from than in years past.

Five films have received the hallowed designation of a Best Picture Nomination: "The Crying Game," "A Few Good Men," "Howard's End," "Scent of a Woman," and "Unforgiven." Everyone else is making their predictions, and this week, I'll make mine. But you may not want to bet the farm on it.

I always like an underdog. Last year, it paid off. My pick for Best Picture, "Silence of the Lambs," shocked everyone by walking off with the five biggest awards of the evening. I couldn't have been happier.

So now there's another darkhorse. I'll narrow it down for you.

"A Few Good Men" is not artsy enough for the Oscar crowd. I think it was the most overall entertaining film of the year, and it is certainly deserving of its nomination, but it lacks certain qualities that the other nominated films have (note its few nominations for technical awards and the much-maligned absence of Rob Reiner among the Best Director nominees).

The now legendary plot twist is only part of what makes "The Crying Game" great. The production is flawless and the story is brilliant.

"Scent of a Woman" may fall into the same trap "Bugsy" did last year. Sure, it did well at the Golden Globes, but what they didn't tell you is that the voters for that particular award were all flown to New York for a special screening and a meeting with the film's star, Al Pacino. Like "Bugsy," it's overexposed and overblown.

The next two are a toss-up. "Howard's End" is the only Best Picture nominee I haven't seen (it never really went into wide release).

and a lot of critics are picking it to win. "Unforgiven," the gritty Clint Eastwood western, looks good to a lot of critics as well. Eastwood will probably win an Oscar Monday night, but it will be for directing.

So here it is: "The Crying Game" goes home with the top prize. If I'm wrong, so be it. But I was so taken with director Niel Jordan's fantastic film that I can't bear to pass it up. The now legendary plot twist (which I'll be a sport and STILL not reveal) is only part of what makes this film great. There are flawlessly developed relationships (observe the first half-hour of the film as Stephen Rea's and Forrest Whittaker's characters develop a pseudo-friendship) and even some nice comic touches (the song during the closing credits is hilarious...again, I'll leave it a surprise). The production is flawless and the story is brilliant. The performances are brilliant, as well, especially Stephen Rea in the lead (nominated for Best Actor).

There you have it. Now, I'd be remiss if I didn't say that "The Player" or "Aladdin" should take the place of "Scent of a Woman" on the ballot (I'd be happy with either). But I won't complain. I'll just watch, and wait.

UP CLOSE Joe Langston

Joe Langston, station manager for JSU's WLJS radio station, is a graduate of the University of Alabama. Langston is an instructor at JSU communication department. Langston teaches Communication 260 which is Introduction to Broadcasting. Aside from this, he has an in-depth background of experience to back up his teaching skills.

Langston was manager of WNPT radio station located in Tuscaloosa for 7 years. Langston also worked in television news for 25 years. When asked what was his choice in both mediums, Langston chooses television. "Television is more specialized than radio and also there is more money in television since it is a bigger market," says Langston.

Prior to Langston coming to JSU, he was awarded the Ayers chair which allowed him to come to JSU as a faculty advisor. Langston has now been at JSU for 5 years and commutes 140 miles per day round trip from Birmingham to JSU.

Langston considers 92J to be an excellent source for students to train and learn valuable experience. It also is an information source for faculty and students. The station was very helpful during Winter Storm 93. Langston submitted a memorandum to Dean Marsengill, the Dean of the Communication Department to commend several students for their contributions during the Winter Storm 93.

JSU sweeps Tigers to open GSC play

Tim Hathcock
Sports Editor

Last year, on its way to the Gulf South Conference championship, Livingston defeated JSU three straight games in Livingston to start the conference race.

The Gamecocks returned the favor this past weekend, beating the Tigers twice on Saturday and again on Sunday.

JSU 4, Livingston 3

Danley Bradford has worked his way into the No. 1 starter's role, and in Saturday's first game, he showed why. Working with only two day's rest, Bradford kept JSU close enough for a come-from-behind win.

JSU scored three runs in the final inning, the last two on a Ray Aschenbach double with two outs.

Bradford pitched a complete game, allowing just four hits and two walks, while striking out eight. He is now 4-0 on the season. His short work in Thursday's win over Montevallo had no affect on him, according to Bradford. "I only threw about 20 or 30 pitches that day," he said.

But the big lefty still needed help and he got it from his teammates. "Our catchers and coaches called a great game," said Bradford. "Our defense was outstanding."

For JSU head coach Rudy Abbott, Bradford's performance is getting to be old hat. "Some people, you give them a little work and they don't bounce back," said Abbott. "Bradford didn't bounce back the way we wanted him to. He didn't have his best stuff, but he's smart enough to win anyway."

JSU started the game with a textbook run in the first inning. Second baseman Rico Wood hit the first pitch of the game in the gap for a double. Chris Duck followed by advancing Wood with a ground out to second on the very next pitch. Designated hitter John Stratton wasted no time. either.

He hit the next pitch from Jason Eatman for an RBI single and a 1-0 Gamecock lead.

Livingston scored single runs in the third, fourth and seventh innings for the 3-1 lead heading to JSU's last turn at bat. Mike Howell led off with a single and pinch hitter Bryan Mitterwald followed with a walk. Wood popped up for the first out. Then Alan Barefoot delivered a pinch-hit run-scoring single that just eluded the glove of

JSU shares early lead in Gulf South Conference

From staff reports

With its three-game sweep over defending Gulf South Conference champ Livingston, JSU put itself in a tie with North Alabama for first place in the conference race.

The Lions defeated West Georgia three straight games to tie the Gamecocks.

Delta State won two of three games with Lincoln-Memorial and Valdosta State defeated Mississippi College two out of three games.

The Gamecocks are ranked fourth in this week's Collegiate Baseball poll. Other GSC teams listed include North Alabama at No. 7, Delta State at No. 14 and Valdosta State at No. 18.

Linton tabbed as Gulf South Conference MVP

Tim Hathcock
Sports Editor

Tracy Linton already owned the rebounding record for the Gulf South Conference. Now, she has claimed another prize.

Linton, who led the Lady Gamecocks to their only GSC tournament title this year, was named the GSC's most valuable player last week in a league-wide vote of coaches.

The senior from Thomasville, Ga., entered her senior season as the all-time leading rebounder in JSU history. She was also an all-GSC selection last year as well as honorable mention All-America. Linton was freshman of the year in the GSC in 1990.

The Lady Gamecocks defeated defending national champion Delta State on its home court for the GSC crown. Delta State avenged that defeat a week later by ousting JSU from the NCAA tournament, also at Walter Sillers Coliseum in Cleveland, Miss.

She is joined on the all-GSC team by teammate Shaun Thomas, a 5-foot 6-inch guard from San Antonio, Tex.

Delta State placed three members on the all-GSC team. Shorlone Crockam, Leslie McKiemon and LaTanya Patty all were named to the squad. Livingston had Bee Holland and Rancee Pringle on the team. Rounding out the 10-member team was North Alabama's Regina Chills, West Georgia's TaReon Kelsey and Mississippi College's Charsa Palmore.

Kelly Tomlin of Livingston was chosen freshman of the year and Lloyd Clark of Delta State was coach of the year.

Anthony Kingston, a GSC freshman of the year in 1990, was named to the men's squad. The senior from Tanner was a member of the pre-season all-GSC team and was academic all-GSC the last two years. He led the Gamecocks to the finals of the GSC tournament before JSU fell to Delta State.

Fellow Gamecock Jeff Terry was named to the team as well. Terry is a 6-foot 1-inch junior guard from Dora.

GSC champion Delta State had three players named to the team: guard Brad Longino, forward Murray McGaha and 7-foot center Todd Mundt. Adrian Dunn and Tracy Mabry from Mississippi College also made the team.

West Georgia's Lance Reinhard, North Alabama's Eartis Bridges and Livingston's Floyd Patterson completed the squad.

Patterson, a 6-foot 2-inch guard, was named the league's most valuable player. The Tigers also had the newcomer of the year in James McClendon. Steve Rives of Delta State was named coach of the year. Shun Stargell of Valdosta State was the freshman of the year.

From staff reports

JSU's Jeff Jordan came from seven strokes behind on the last day to win the Queen's Harbor Intercollegiate tournament at Queen's Harbor Country Club in Jacksonville, Fla. on March 14-16.

The senior beat out 90 participants from 18 teams with a final-round 68 to win the tournament. Jordan shot 73-77 in the first two rounds but turned it on to win individual honors.

As a team, JSU placed in a tie with North Florida for ninth place with a team total of 932.

Arkansas won the tournament with a 900. Fellow Southeastern Conference member Tennessee finished second at 902. Columbus College, third overall, was the top Division II team with a 906 total.

Other JSU team members were Mike Swiger in 34th place at 235,

GSC schedule maker a friend to the Gamecocks

The schedule maker gave the Gamecock baseball team a break in the Gulf South Conference. With Lincoln-Memorial now on board, there are now eight teams in the conference.

That means the Gamecocks had seven straight weekends of GSC play, supposedly beginning the weekend of March 13-14 against North Alabama in Florence. The Gamecocks decided not to break out the snowsleds and make the trip to northeast Alabama that weekend.

The GSC does not make up lost conference games, meaning the standings are determined by winning percentage.

The Lions are ranked No. 7 in the latest Collegiate Baseball poll. Doesn't matter now, since JSU will play North Alabama, at home on April 13, only in a single game that does not count in the GSC standings.

It also means the Gamecocks have six series left in GSC play, four of them at home.

It's early yet, very early, but the two road series are against the teams with the worst and next-to-worst GSC marks.

Add to that JSU's already-in-the-bank three-game sweep over defending champ Livingston and the Gamecocks are in a sweet position.

All that could fall apart if JSU doesn't hold its ground on the road and continue to win at home.

As it stands at this writing, the

Gamecocks are 18-1 at home and 0-2 on the road

John Stratton and his teammates are on a record-setting home run pace. Stratton now has 13 home runs. The school mark, set by Sammy Davis in 1977, is 25. Stratton has 27 games left to make his mark. At his current pace, the senior designated hitter would end up with 29 homers.

As a team, the Gamecocks have hit 52 taters. The NCAA and school record was set in 1977 by the Gamecocks at 115. The current Gamecocks are on a pace to hit 119 home runs.

It won't be easy, though. The vast majority of games played thus far has been at quaint University Field. More than half the games remaining are away from home

Gamecocks escape with pair of wins over Olivet

Tim Hathcock
Sports Editor

After disposing of Gulf South Conference foe Livingston over the weekend, the No. 4 ranked Gamecock baseball team took to the field Monday for a doubleheader against NAIA Olivet Nazarene of Kankakee, Ill.

JSU, still weary after the taxing

GSC contests, managed to pull out both games, but not without anxious moments.

"We just played three tough conference games," said JSU head coach Rudy Abbott.

"When you're tired, you throw the ball away. We played good enough to win."

shortstop Chris Hilliker, who would have had a sure game-ending double play if he could have come up with the ball. Stratton then struck out for only the sixth time this season.

Jeff Edmonds, running for Mitterwald, was now on third and Barefoot on first for Aschenbach. The outfielder thought he had a game-winner with a sharp grounder over the third-base bag. The ball was ruled foul though, and Aschenbach returned to the plate and promptly smacked a ball down the right field line.

Barefoot beat the throw that gave the Gamecocks the win.

JSU 14, Livingston 4

After the exciting win in game one, there was no stopping the Gamecock stampede in game two. In the third inning, 17 JSU batters went to the plate and 12 scored, 10 after two were out. The inning was highlighted by Eric Ford's pinch-hit grand slam home run. Stratton also hit a three-run homer and Howell a solo shot in the big inning. Mitterwald homered in the second inning to give JSU a 1-0 lead.

Bill Wolff pitched a complete game for JSU to earn his second win against one loss. Wolff said he relied on a pair of new pitches in the victory. "I just developed a slider and a changeup a few weeks ago," said Wolff. "I probably used them about 40 percent of the time today."

Wolff also credited his defense. "Our infielders were knocking balls down all day today. Our team was really into it today. It was a total team effort," he said.

JSU 13, Livingston 5

The Gamecocks once again used the big inning to move ahead in the single nine-inning game played Sunday.

JSU scored seven runs in the first inning and held on behind the pitching of Joe Burns and Brad Angel.

Robby Beaver started the assault in this one with a home run. Jason Troup hit the first of his two home runs on the game, a three-run shot later in the inning. Ford backed that up with another home run. Beaver drove in two more runs in the inning with a double that chased starter Donnie Faulk.

Stratton then drove Derek McDonald's first offering to the deepest part of University Field before centerfielder Casey Clark hauled it in. David Deerman homered in the third and Troup hit his second home run of the day in the sixth.

Earl Patrick homered twice for Livingston, the last cutting the JSU lead to 8-4 before Troup's homer padded the lead.

"We got a seven-run first inning and that's awfully tough to overcome on the road," said Abbott. "We had a lot of big hits but Troup's home run in the sixth put us in a real good position to win."

Abbott also said the luxury of left-handed pitching helped the Gamecock cause. "Last year we didn't have any lefthanders. In the first game, we just went with our best pitcher and he just happened to be lefthanded. Then, we took a chance and came back with Wolff, another lefthander.

"We didn't know if a lefthander could get them out or not. We had a little luck. (Sunday) we decided to go with Burns, a righthander, to start with. We wanted him to go two or three innings and then bring in Angel (another lefty) to see if he could finish. Sometimes things work out for you."

Angel worked the final six innings for the win.

With the wins, JSU pushed its record to 16-3 and 3-0 in the GSC. Livingston dropped to 9-10 and 0-3.

the very first inning when leadoff man Corey Bell tripled off the fence and scored on an Antoine Anderson groundout. That lead didn't last long, however, as Jason Troup singled home Rico Wood to tie the score in the bottom half of the first.

The Gamecocks jumped ahead with a three-run second inning. That lead evaporated in the top half of the fourth when the Tigers scored three runs.

It could have been worse, if not for the acrobatics of shortstop Mike Howell. Howell dove to his left and snagged a one-hopper, got to this feet and fired to first in time to nail Angel Delgado for the final out and keep two runs off the scoreboard.

JSU got a three-spot in the fifth, but Olivet answered with four runs in the sixth.

Robby Beaver hit a home run for JSU in the fifth.

Another sterling defensive play set up JSU's win in the eighth. Center fielder Ray Aschenbach slammed into the fence while hauling in Jake Krause's drive with a runner on and no outs in the top of the eighth. Reliever Michael Lewis then slammed the door on the Tigers, setting up another dramatic win.

Beaver strode to the plate with two outs and smacked a line drive that skimmed over the right field fence and gave JSU the win.

JSU 5, Olivet Nazarene 4

Senior Randy Gravett pitched a complete game to save a depleted Gamecock pitching staff.

Gravett gave up six hits and three earned runs to take his record to 2-0. His earned run average is now at 1.50 in his 18 innings of work.

Abbott was pleased to see his senior pitch well. "Gravett had an off year last year," he said.

"I've never had a guy work as hard as he did over the summer to get better.

"It's awfully nice to see a guy put in that kind of effort and get something out of it."

Designated hitter John Stratton hit his 13th home run of the year in the first inning. Stratton is now batting .468.

With the pair of wins, JSU pushed its mark to 18-3 on the year.

The Gamecocks play Olivet again today in a doubleheader starting at 1:30 pm at University Field.

They travel to Clinton, Miss. this weekend to face Mississippi College in a three-game GSC series.
