Kim Messer and Jeanie Mentavlos, two of the first four female cadets who enrolled at the Citadel after the college dropped its all-male policy last summer, transferred to USC just days after announcing they had dropped out of The Citadel.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. - Nicholas Ryan, a Yale University student, pled guilty Jan. 8 to committing computer fraud by creating a software program that let him access America Online for free. Known online as "Happy Hardcore," Ryan faces up to five years in prison and $250,000 in fines.

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. - Pennsylvania State University plans to welcome its first law class by the end of the century. Penn State announced Jan. 13 that it would merge with the Dickinson School of law. The two schools will merge officially in the year 2000.

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Washington Post reported that J.D. Salinger, the reclusive author of Catcher in the Rye, will publish his first new book in 34 years. Hapworth 16, 1924 will be printed in February by Orchises Press, a small press in Alexandria Va.

EVANSTOWN, Ill. - Exposure to extra light, even during the day, can help fend off the blues for those who suffer from seasonal affective disorder, or SAD, a team of Northwestern University scientists say. The depression is associated with the dark, shortened days of winter.

County residents heat up over incinerator

by Jennie Ford

News editor

"They're sacrificing us [citizens] to accomplish this mission and I feel it's unconscionable," said retired Army Colonel Tom Luchendorf. Luchendorf and other concerned citizens filled the Anniston City Meeting Center Tuesday night for the public hearing and final public meeting before the Alabama Department of Environmental Management (ADEM) decides whether or not to grant the final permits to Westinghouse for the building of the chemical weapons incinerator in Anniston.

The hearing was conducted by Tom Johnson, an attorney for ADEM. First to speak were ADEM representatives. After no elected officials seized the opportunity to speak, the floor was opened to the public.

Don Reeves, president of Persian Gulf Veterans of Alabama, stated, "It's simple, what goes up must come down." He says the veterans he represents were exposed to low levels (which he compares to levels which will come from the incinerator) of these same chemicals in the Gulf War and they now suffer from Gulf War Syndrome. Reeves contends that if the incinerator is built, citizens in the area will suffer from the same illness. Opponents of the incinerator out-numbered supporters at this meeting. However, Erma K. Wilkins, incinerator supporter said, "We want to be free from the threat of chemical weapons." Wilkins, who lives two miles from the Anniston Army Depot, feels that the chemical weapons stockpile at Bynum should be destroyed as soon as possible.

When the meeting began at 7 p.m. approximately 70 citizens had registered to speak. It was projected that the meeting would last about six hours if everyone registered spoke.

One local citizen voices Rhonda Helms his opinion on the effects of the incinerator on local life and jobs.

City council says no to Stumble In

by Tim Lockette

Contributing editor

It was standing room only at Monday's Jacksonville City Council meeting, and most of the citizens who filled the seats and lined the walls were there to address a single issue. Perhaps the title of a book in the hands of one petitioner said it best: "How to Shut the Devil's Door."

Local residents turned out in force to oppose the granting of a liquor license to Stumble In, a new establishment on 2700 Pelham Road. Residents presented the Council with a petition stating their opposition to the license, and the meeting was opened to public comment.

"We see a definite need for a nicer place than what's currently in town," said Donald S. Walker, one of the owners of Nomadic Enterprises, the company which owns the establishment. "We're looking forward to serving the community... We're not just a fly-by-night operation. We want to be here for the long haul." Walker said he expected his business to bring thirty to forty thousand dollars in revenue to the city, and to employ eight to twelve staff members.

Few others at the meeting agreed. Local pastor John Holloway (who led the meeting's invocation, the scheduled minister being absent) told the Council: "As a volunteer ambulance driver, I have many concerns about another establishment like that coming into our community. It's going to increase the risk ... to all the citizens here in our town, given the fact that 82 to 85 percent of all traffic coming into this community

SGA praised for involvement

Thomas Webb
News writer

The SGA invited JSU English Professor Rufus Kinney to speak at this week's meeting. Kinney passed around a packet of papers that contained photocopies of articles from The Anniston Star, a letter from the Bass Angler's Sportsman Society, and a community interest survey on the "Destruction of Chemical Weapons at Anniston Army Depot." He also passed out buttons reading "No More Emelles! No Incinerator!" Kinney strongly opposes the incinerator, calling it "insane. . . the economic death of this community." Kinney pointed to a decision of the Alabama Department of Environmental Management that he says would allow Westinghouse to "blow up Calhoun County, and never have to pay one cent in victim's compensation."

Kinney also encouraged students to express their feelings on this highly controversial issue. He congratulated the SGA on their record of involvement, saying "SGA leadership at this university. . . is second to none. You should have just as much self-respect as if you were an Ivy League school. . . You get involved in important issues."

After Kinney finished speaking, SGA Publicity Director Heather Brackman announced that calendars for this semester were being printed. "It will be here Wednesday for everyone. It's got all of our functions on there, and it also has some just regular JSU functions on there," Brackman said.

2nd Vice President Angel Narvaez announced that a Casino Night meeting would be held Thursday at 3:30 pm. Narvaez encouraged students to show up for the meeting. 1st Vice President Christian LeBlanc said that he has received many applications to fill vacancies on the Senate. He says that next week, new appointments will be made.

Bob Boyle, who was unable to attend the meeting, sent his report to the SGA via Allison Logsdon. Logsdon, reading from the report, said that the Board of Trustees had approved repairs to the roofs of Weatherly and Rowan Halls. The Board also gave permission to the administration to plan renovations of the TMB.

Bill 29, tabled since last semester, was voted on this week. The bill, which sought to appoint LeTondra Davis as a SGA senator was defeated with little opposition. This bill was the first of the semester to be voted down. Ms. Davis was not to be found after the vote.

The following announcements were also made:

•The JSU vs. Sanford game will be televised Friday on SportsSouth

•The next Traffic Appeals Court will be held Monday, Feb. 3 in the SGA offices

•SGA officer and senator applications for the spring elections will be available beginning Monday in the SGA offices.

•Executive Board meetings have been moved to Thursdays at 2:30 p.m. in the SGA offices •Residence Life Committee is sponsoring a resolution supporting 24-hour security in dorms. Currently there is no security between 6:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m.

•5:00 p.m. Thursday 92J will be taking 22 students down to Sanford. Interested students should contact Robert Ray.

The SGA meeting was adjourned after these announcements. The SGA meets every Monday night at 6:00 on the 3rd floor of the TMB. All students are encouraged to attend.

Shakespeare in Georgetown? Not to be.

by Noel Hartman
The Yale Daily News

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — A day without Shakespeare is like a day without sunshine for most English majors.

But not at Georgetown University, where English majors can get their degree without ever cracking what most consider the most basic works of English literature.

Last year the school's English department voted to replace a long-standing system of distributional requirements, which obligated English majors to take at least two semesters courses in either Chaucer, Milton or Shakespeare.

Instead, students can choose from three areas of concentration, the first dealing with literature and literary history, the second with culture and performance, and the third with writing skills.

The change sparked a maelstrom of controversy within the Georgetown community.

In student debating societies, faculty lounges, and dorm rooms, critics of the new policy charged the department with trying to remove Shakespeare from the curriculum.

But English professors countered criticism of the new system by reminding its detractors that students will still be able to take courses in Shakespeare and other giants of the English literary canon.

"At Georgetown, it's not an either/or situation. The canon and cultural studies can and will coexist, and our students will benefit from both," professor Dennis Todd said.

English majors are still required to take at least two semester courses covering topics from before 1850 and while Shakespeare and company are not explicitly required, most students end up enrolling in a class that touches on his work.

Last year the National Alumni Forum, a non-profit organization devoted to stem-anyone here actually believe there will be more drinking in Jacksonville (because of this establishment)?" Anti-license petitioners responded with a unanimous shout of "Yes!"

Petitioners gave a cheer as the Council turned down the request unanimously. Mayor George Douthit called a five-minute recess as petitioners filed out of the building. Walker and Forrest left by a separate exit, without comment.

During the Citizens' Comment portion of the meeting, Mae Harris, wife of anti-license speaker George Harris, rose to ask the Council for forgiveness on the $150 utility deposit required for their home on No. 38 B Street. Harris says her husband's medical bills have put them under financial strain.

"I know it's tough, and I wish there was more I could do," said Mayor Douthit. The Mayor says that around forty people appear on the utilities cutoff list each month. "It's the toughest job I have to do as mayor, and if I do this for you, I'll have to explain to the rest of them why I can't do it for them."

Douthit concluded: "All I can do is, we can appeal and if the newspaper picks it up somebody will hear and help you. I don't know of an organization, myself. If I did, I'd certainly call them for you."

As part of Jacksonville State's first ever Martin Luther King, Jr. Week, Rev. John S. Nettles spoke on Thursday, January 23 to a crowd of 125 people. The event was sponsored by the Office of Minority Affairs.

ming the tides of declining academic standards released a report entitled "The Shakespeare File: What English Majors Are Really Studying."

Of 70 universities investigated, the study found 23 required that English majors take a course on Shakespeare.

"The abandonment of Shakespeare requirements is not merely a trend, it is now the norm," the report stated.

Although opponents of innovative distributional requirements have succeeded in creating controversy, students have taken the changes in stride.

"It's not a big deal. I am still taking all the classics I would have taken anyway," English major, Julie Kylie said.

Citadel must accept change

Rebecca Matanic

Sports Editor

I wandered the campus of the Citadel with two female military friends the summer before Shannon Faulkner entered the school. At the time, I was still an active-duty member of the Army and was curious how the cadets at the tradition-laced institution felt about Faulkner's impending entrance. Since my visit was in the summer, there were few cadets around, but the two we spoke with were respectful, but honest. Neither wanted women in the corps of cadets. They both spoke of their displeasure in terms of tradition.

However, it is now two years later and no amount of hazing, sexual harassment or other immature actions will return the state-funded school back to an all-male institution. It is time for the cadets and more importantly those who lead them to accept that the Citadel is now coed. Faulkner was an embarrassment to me. As a military veteran, she epitomized all the stereotypical reasons that are given against women in the military. I didn't go through the mental and emotional anguish she claims she received during the court battles and when she arrived at the Citadel, but I do know she came to class overweight and out of shape. She didn't even make it through a full day. Instead she spent four days at the infirmary before tearfully bidding farewell to the Citadel and further damaging the image of women in the military.

This past August, however, four seemingly qualified women entered the Citadel. Currently only two remain. Yes, the attrition rate at the Citadel is greater among freshmen than at your average institution of higher education. However, the reasons these female cadets allegedly departed speak loudly about the institutions commitment to its female student body.

All organizations, military or civilian, are led from the top down. Although Citadel graduates do not have to enter the military after graduation, the cadets are taught in a military style atmosphere. This atmosphere, like any military atmosphere, allows the Citadel administration to have a greater impact on the conduct of its students. The cadets that allegedly carried out these acts of immaturity against the two female cadets and some male cadets would probably have not have done so if the Citadel chain-of-command (the administration) had worked properly.

Yes, the Army is currently undergoing a public relations nightmare with sexual harassment. However, they are treating it with openness, punishment and training. The Citadel, on the other hand, still seems reluctant to change. Rather than demanding zero tolerance, the Citadel seems to be committed to the idea of investigation.

What is tragic in all of this is that the Citadel is a prestigious learning institution. The young male graduates of the Citadel enter the military or the civilian world with an outstanding classroom education. Unfortunately, the Citadel seems to fail with the real-world education. Whether they enter the military or IBM, there is a good chance their first real-world job will require them to say, “Yes, ma’am.”

Political correctness is derogatory

Sam Dillon
A&E Editor

If you can read and decide that this might be something interesting, then I feel that I should forewarn you. What follows has the potential, hopefully, to offend the narrow minded. It is my personal opinion that political correctness is derogatory and demeaning to those who insist upon having a PC label.

Let's start with the actual phrase “political correctness,” what is political about referring to a deaf person as hearing impaired. It should be something more along the lines of social correctness. It really is more of a concern for other human beings and our relations, isn't it? PC is not a matter of being offensive or sensitive, it is basic decency, perception, and understanding. To me, it seems as if we are just spoon-feeding artificial sensitivity.

There is, however, a need for social correctness. Social correctness is not about labeling and relabeling and relabeling again; it is not pity or pretentiousness either. All of those things can be harmful and only add to the cultural barriers of misunderstanding or a complete lack of understanding at all.

Unfortunately there are and always will be ignorant, insensitive people. You can't, without genetic reconstruction, help it. An acquaintance of mine, let's call him X, is a perfect example. In a crowded mall X spots a woman in a wheel chair and decides that he needs to skip past her and, while laughing, say “I bet ya can't do this, I bet ya wish ya could do this!” X is a complete moron and I'm sure not too many of you would disagree. It is people like X that cause people to use PC as a soapbox to find an end to their own needs or gain, whether good or bad.

It does not matter what the issue is, be it racial, physical, social, cultural, mental, what ever. Just because you intel-lectualize a synonym does not make the X's in society any less or more than what they are. If there are moral issues that need to be addressed, then address them, don't mask them under terminology. I personally do not think that, along PC lines, there are many issues to be “addressed.” We are all very aware of X. Unfortunately I am nicotine impaired and cancerously predisposed that does not mean that I am going to get upset whe I am refered to as a SMOKER!

So in conclusion, I only wish to say that I think that social correctness is my philosophy, and not a bad one at that! A friend of mine recently told me that he was “all about love.” It is that kind of logic that people need to embrace. A general concern and friendship towards other human beings and common decency in relations. Now I am not saying “love everyone,” just be nice and don't overintellectualize for the sake of certain people's narrow-minded political gain.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor,

This issue on "Ebonics" has reached an uncontrollable peak. The use of "Ebonics" in our schools is simply a mistake by the Oakland City Schools. First of all, THERE IS NO BLACK ENGLISH. What they are calling Black English is non-standard English. Some critics and activists say African Americans should recognize Black English as a part of our culture. What we should recognize is non-standard English has been part of our history. Our ancestors were not taught to read or write. Therefore, the English they spoke was incorrect, non-standard English. It was not Black English. It was the same English as any uneducated American would speak, non-standard. The Oakland City Schools should reexamine "Ebonics." There are only two ways to teach students standard English and it doesn't involve the school system. Parents should teach their children at the early age to speak standard English. It is not the responsibility of our school system to teach English but only to enhance our English skills. Second, society should use standard English more. Society must stop using non-standard English in television and music. Our children are influenced by what they see and hear. Until parents and society teach standard English, there is nothing the Oakland City Schools or any school system can do to teach standard English.

To the Editor,

I want to thank the Office of Minority Affairs and Mr. Zeigler for their great work in giving JSU students the opportunity to go to Atlanta to visit the Martin Luther King Center and tour King's home on Martin Luther King Day. I enjoyed touring Martin Luther King's house and visiting the center where incidentally, the Reverend Bernice King, Martin Luther King's daughter, was doing a book signing. I met her, and actually met and shook hands with Coretta Scott King. I had a wonderful time and as a history minor, I was able to get some historical insights that I would otherwise not have.

I would have to say that my only disappointment is that more people did not take advantage of this opportunity. There was one bus, and it was not entirely full. Also, there were only two white people on the bus, myself included. The price was only $2.00, and the trip was worth far more than the cost. The historical significance of civil rights transcend all racial and ethnic barriers. The Office of Minority Affairs will sponsor another trip on February 19, to the Civil Rights Museum in Birmingham. I hope that more JSU students will sign up for the trip as I know it will be tremendously worthwhile. For more information, contact Mr. Zeigler at the Office of Minority Affairs on the fourth floor of the Theron Montgomery Building.

Sincerely,

James Simpson

How do you feel about the use of undercover news gathering methods by the media?

--Compiled by Steven Wolfe

"As long as nothing illegal is happening, it shouldn't matter how they get their information. The idea is to reveal the truth, and if it has to be undercover, then so be it."

Five points loosened up

by Sam Dillon
A&E editor

The New York-based and female-fronted quartet New York Loose "loosened up" 5 Points South Music Hall in Birmingham on January 26, along with Reverend Horton Heat. NY Loose took over the stage, and the crowd, around eleven o'clock and proceeded to put on a great show. Their music is loud and thrashy and, despite the opinion of a Birmingham paper, very good. They have a good image and a great stage presence that, combined with the music, made for one amazing show. The songs "Pretty Suicide" and especially "Spit" were done terrifically. They had everyone reaching new levels of hypertension and sent blood pressures through the roof.

NY Loose has been on tour with Rev. H.H. for only a week but will continue on with them through March, and will be joined by Babes in Toyland for a show in Minneapolis. In 1996 they enjoyed touring with Gravity Kills and Marilyn Manson, but according to bassist Danny Nordahl "this is the best gig yet. We are such big fans (of Rev. H.H.) and really good friends too." After March, they plan to stay on the road in Europe for a while but will probably start touring in the U.S. when they return.

The band named themselves after their home town combined with the title of the Iggy Pop song "Loose." They formed in 1995 and moved to England for a stint. When they came home they hit the road and quickly gained industry interest when they released a five-song EP called "Loosen Up!" It was during the time after this release that guitarist Marc Diamond joined NY Loose and they signed with Hollywood Records. Soon afterward, they released their debut full length "The Year Of The Rat." The album draws its name from the year which -- according to the Chinese Horoscope -- dawned during recording. There are some incredible songs on the album, and one in particular provided a little controversy. The song "Pretty Suicide" was not allowed to be made into a video because its content was said to convey a potentially bad message to young viewer/listeners. Another interesting tid-bit is that they did a cool cover of The Velvet Underground's "Sunday Morning."

Since the release of "T.Y.O.T.R." they have kept themselves busy. They gained a lot of recognition with the song "Spit" which appeared on "The Crow: City of Angels" soundtrack, and was used in the scene when Iggy's character dies. Cheap Trick has a tribute album coming out and NY Loose did a trashed-out version of "I Want You To Want Me" that was produced by Sean Beaven of Nine Inch Nails. They also made videos for the songs "Rip Me Up" and "Broken" which will be released in the U.S. and the U.K. respectively.

If you couldn't make it to 5 Points than you have one more chance to redeem yourself before they come back later on this year, if they do. They will be in Atlanta at The Masquerade on January 30. We all know that Thursday night is party night, so why not head to Atlanta and "loosen up" with NY Loose and Reverend Horton Heat?

The Quinsonics will appear at Acoustic Cafe on Jan 31st. Ideal Records

Quinsonics new and improved

by Sam Dillon
A&E editor

The Quinsonics were conceived by John Hansen (lead guitar) and Deron Harris (rhythm guitar/vocals) over a year and a half ago. Until recently the band was known as Kerosene and they released their first album, "Cowboy Angel" under that name. After the album's release, Kerosene changed management, picked up Walker Wright (drums) and Bo Butler (bass), and formed The Quinsonics.

Birmingham-based and on Ideal Records, which the band founded, they have high hopes for the future. In March they plan to head to Austin, Texas for the South by Southwest music conference. There they want to "shop around" for large-label contacts/contracts. Until then, they are content and busy with building a steady following.

Those fans who know them only as Kerosene should see them now.

"C.A." was all-acoustic and influenced partially by traditional country. The Quinsonics have kept to that, but have branched out into a more revved up electric sound. They definitely have a wide market of sounds and styles, John Hansen says, "Once people get a little taste of our music they like it...no matter what label you put on it, it's friendly...there are very few people who get turned off by our sound." When asked what label they would put on their sound, they told me that the Montgomery Advertiser labeled them "a special performance of R.E.M. at the Grand Ole Opry," an opinion which they all seemed to like. John added: "You never know when to sit down or to dance, it varies a lot and that's our strong point. We do a lot of different things."

If you want to hear these guys, then you're in luck. They will be back in town at The Acoustic Cafe on January 31.

Ear Candy: Here comes Danzig and Licious Jackson

by Sam Dillon
A&E Editor

Danzig
Blackacidevil
Hollywood Records
Rating ★★★

Blackacidevil was released on Halloween 1996 and is Glenn Danzig's fifth album with the group Danzig. This latest album is not what I expected at all, but it is incredible. Since the rebirth of "Mother" in 1994, which increased Danzig's commercial popularity and, substantially, their cult following, the fans have been waiting patiently for this new release.

Bad is sure to help broaden their audience and air-play because of its obscure style. Along with the new direction musically, Glenn has picked up new members as well as a new label. Joey Castillo and Josh Lazie joined Danzig in 1995 after Glenn let his former bandmates go due to artistic differences. Glenn, interestingly, brought in Jerry Cantrell of Alice In Chains fame to play guitar on three cuts on Bad; but the rest he did himself. What happened here seems to be a new phase in the experimenting process for Danzig.

The style of Bad is, at its essence, a kind of techno-industrial metal, but it isn't that easily labeled. There are a lot of interesting and complex effects happening throughout the songs both musically and vocally. Danzig still holds on to their trademark dark and moody flare for the spiritual and social awareness served with a healthy dose of brooding thrash and ballads. This new chapter for Danzig is absolutely a great one and it is a must for anyone who has a taste for the heavier side of music.

Licious Jackson
Fever In Fever Out
Grand Royal Records
Rating ★★★

Licious Jackson is on top of the charts again with their latest release, Fever In Fever Out. It seems as though the band can't lose and that every time they put out an album their following grows. Well, this album is only proves that once again.

The four-woman group has a funk-pop groove that is extremely catchy and dancy. The song "Naked Eye" is already a hit and has captured the ears of listeners far and wide. Fever is 14 tracks of mixed moods and emotions. L.J. really comes together in every respect on the album. Check out the songs "Naked Eye", "Under Your Skin", and "Electric".

Musically, Fever is better than their previous releases and shows improvement in both style and creativity. They also incorporate some experimental mixes compared to earlier recordings, and overall this seems to work very well for the band's sound. The vocals are very good, too, and meld with the music well. The lyrics are inventive and original and cover a wide range of feelings experience and emotion.

Kenny Sorenson, a Gamecock on a mission

by Rebecca Matanic
Sports editor

Kenny Sorenson enjoys the game of basketball, but the 6'8" Gamecock senior center has always put the sport in perspective. During his 23 years, Sorenson has accomplished a lot athletically, academically and religiously.

Sorenson has always been a student-athlete. During high school he played both football and basketball, but he says that getting a quality education has always been a top priority.

“Basketball wasn't my life in high school,” he says. “It is something I've used as a way of getting an education.”

Although born in California, Sorenson and his family moved to Utah when he was five. He has two brothers and an older sister. All of his siblings were involved in athletics while in high school, but Kenny is the only one who has competed at the collegiate level.

Kenny did not come directly to JSU from high school. Instead, he played one year at Salt Lake Community College in Utah before breaking for two years of missionary work in Germany. His Mormon faith led him to voluntary work in various cities in Germany, including Stuttgart and Munich. Before traveling to Germany, Kenny had taken German high school courses, but his time in the country greatly increased his proficiency of the language.

“It (the missionary work) was something I planned my whole life. It is voluntary,” he said. “We pay for it ourselves.”

Sorenson, an International Business major, with a German minor, said the experience was rewarding and allowed him and the other Mormon missionaries a chance to share their religious

Lady Gamecocks drop two of three on the road

by Rebecca Matanic
Sports editor

The Lady Gamecocks have found that life on the road can be difficult. After securing impressive home wins against TAAC foes Florida International and Florida Atlantic, JSU hit the road for two conference games and one match-up against non-conference foe Alabama State. The Gamecocks first stopped in Macon, Ga., Jan. 23, where they faced the Bears of Mercer.

JSU connected on only eight of 27 field goals in the first half, but entered the locker room trailing by only seven, 32-25. In the second half, the Lady Gamecocks improved their field goal percentage and played the Bears even, but were unable to gain an advantage in the 74-67 loss. Suzan Shirley kept JSU in the game with a 5-12 performance from behind the 3 point arch.

Shirley led the Gamecock attack with 15 points.

“I was glad to see Suzan get hot that night,” Coach Dana Austin said of Shirley's long range shooting. “We needed that.”

As a team, JSU connected on 8-18 3-pointers, committed only 14 turnovers and lost the battle of the boards by just two, 37-35. However, the Bears took advantage of 38 trips to the free throw line, converting 30. Mercer's Christen Edwards led all scorers with 17 points. Edwards made only three of 10 shots from the field, but sank nine of 12 from the charity stripe. Christy Cogley hit 8-12 free throws for Mercer to finish with 16 points.

Melissa Harden added 14 points for JSU and center Alfredia Seals grabbed a team high six rebounds and scored 11 points. Seals was limited to 25 minutes of action due to foul trouble. Guard Lori Breedlove played less than 19 minutes before fouling out. The loss dropped JSU to 4-3 in the TAAC and 6-8 overall.

JSU takes one on the road

The Lady Gamecocks earned their first conference victory away from Pete Mathews Coliseum handing a 59-52 defeat to Georgia State, Saturday. JSU used a balance scoring attack and a 47-40 advantage on the boards to defeat the Panthers. Alfredia Seals led the way with 12 points and nine rebounds. JSU guards Lori Breedlove and Shneka Whaley added 11 and 10 points, respectively. Shirley contributed 10 points and five rebounds. Harden was limited to just three points and was allowed only two shots from the field.

“Teams are keying in on her,” Austin said of Harden, who entered the game averaging nearly 13 points.

The Gamecocks were able to overcome the additional defensive focus on Harden with the 3-point shooting of Breedlove and Shirley. The Panthers were led by Etolia Mitchell's 12 points and 11 points from Tammy Felton. The victory improved JSU to 5-3 in the TAAC and 7-8 overall.

Alabama State denies Lady Gamecocks

JSU had the opportunity to even their overall record to 8-8 when they traveled to Montgomery to face Alabama State Monday. However, ASU guard Eboynnee Williams scored 23 points and five assists in leading her team to a 70-61 victory.

“They were doing everything

see Ladies page 10

right," Austin said of ASU. "Williams shot well from the 3 point (arch). She also hit key free throws at the end."

Breedlove led the Gamecocks with 14 points, Kathy O'Konski added 13, Seals 12 and Whaley 10.

Seals grabbed a team-high 10 rebounds, but JSU was out rebounded 44-31. JSU only trailed by three at half-time, but the Gamecocks only connected on 12-39 shots from the field in the second half.

Harden was limited to one of three shooting and just two points. "We're going to throw in some new wrinkles in trying to free her up," Austin said. "We can play her outside or inside. We have to concentrate on working the ball inside and keeping her open."

Despite the loss, Austin said that her team is, "mentally where we want it to be."

"The conference games are the most important. We have to focus on the conference."

JSU faces in-state, but non-conference rival Troy State today at 7 p.m. The Lady Gamecocks return home and resume conference play against Southeastern Louisiana, Saturday at 5 p.m.

beliefs. "We were teaching in Germany about our religion. Being able to share the beliefs and values that have worked in your life and them seeing them work in other peoples' lives is rewarding."

After completing his work in Germany, Kenny returned to Utah and Salt Lake Community College. He played basketball, continued his education and continued his relationship with his future wife, Annie, who played for SLCC's women's basketball team.

His basketball talents at the junior college level enabled him to select from many different schools to complete his education and further his athletic accomplishments. Sorenson was not familiar with JSU, when Coach Bill Jones first called him. However, after a recruiting trip to the university, Kenny and Annie decided to come to South and

JSU. "We wanted to get away from the area (Utah). We wanted to be on our own and see a new culture," he says. "The basketball program had a good record and a good reputation. We've never regretted our decision."

Along with the desire to live in a different region of the country, Kenny wanted to come to JSU because he was confident he could earn quality playing time, have fun and still earn a quality education. Despite their desire for independence, Kenny says the closeness of his family has been instrumental throughout his life.

"My parents are the biggest role models that I have had. I feel I come from a strong family. They're my role models."

Sorenson has also felt at home among his Gamecock teammates and coaches.

"Especially at this time there is really good team chemistry," he says of his TAAC Western Division leading teammates. "We pick each other up and we help each other out."

Along with balancing his time between basketball, academics and his wife, Kenny also teaches Sunday School at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Lenlock. Annie and Kenny both play an active role in the church. Along with teaching on Sundays, they work as youth group leaders for teens 16-18.

"We have youth group activities usually on Wednesday nights. There are also scouting and youth camps. Everybody who works in our church, including the bishop, works on a voluntary basis," he says.

Despite the challenges faced by today's youth, Kenny says his relationship with the members of his group is good.

"I'm only five years older than some of them. They are good, strong youth."

Along with staying active in his religion, Kenny's future plans include graduate school. He has earned a 3.6 GPA in college and is applying to various graduate schools including his number one choice, the University of South Carolina. He plans to earn a master's degree in International Business and hopes to work for an international corporation either in the States or in Germany. Somewhere down the line, Kenny says he and Annie want to increase the size of their family, but for now he wants to focus on his educa-

Dear Prospective Member:

Liberia should have a special place in the conscience of the United States of America. Its impetus to become a nation came from the United States. For 149 years, it was a stalwart ally of the United States. Yet for the past years, as a civil war has taken almost 200,000 lives, displaced more than two-thirds of the population and destroyed its infrastructure, the United States has treated this great tragedy as a regional problem.

Liberia has a unique historical and cultural link to the United States. Settled by African Americans, many of them former slaves, in the early decades of the 19th century, Liberia became a republic in 1847. The United States influence on Liberia is reflected in the African nation's constitution, the star and stripes of its red, white and blue flag, the structure of its government, the names of its cities, its schools' curriculum; its official language and the remarkable degree of good will its citizens feel toward America. Through all the major conflicts of the 20th century, Liberians been among the most dependable allies of the United States. In both World Wars, Liberia declared war on the enemies of the United States and offered vital air bases, ports, and natural resources to support the United States military. During the Cold War, Liberia voted with the United States on every significant resolution at the United Nations, It hosted facilities for electronic monitoring and became the largest base for United States intelligence-gathering in Africa.

Yet when Liberia's security was most at risk because of civil conflict the United States government deferred to ECOWAS, an under-funded regional organization composed of some of the world's poorest nations. Half of the $10 million earmarked by the United States to support a peacekeeping force had not been committed by April 1996. Meanwhile, the cost to the United States of responding to the humanitarian crisis since 1990 has been emergency relief assistance valued at over $445 million, over $66 million provided in the past year alone, more than eight times the amount committed to peacekeeping.

In the absence of a viable security plan, the torrent of refugees continues to undermine Liberia's relations with its immediate neighbors. Though the United States has implored those nations to admit Liberian refugees, its own record of Liberian admissions decries the long relationship with that nation.

The approach to achieving peace in Liberia has revolved around the ECOWAS process for six years. This process has, in turn, been dependent on a core group of ECOWAS nations with the will and very limited resources to engage in diplomacy or to commit forces for peacekeeping. Fourteen peace agreements have been largely brokered without the United States and other international parties, such as the United Nations or OAU, present with ECOWAS as working partners at the negotiating table. The result of this agreements and the resources, and leverage, necessary for successful implementation, This failure to produce a concerted approach to all aspects of the peace process, from mediation to negotiation and implementation, produced the tragic results that we have witnessed in Liberia.

On August 17 the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) concluded meetings that provide a new timetable for the peace process. Starting August 20, the warring factions are to observe a cease-fire, dismantle checkpoints and withdraw from zones of combat. The peacekeeping force, expanding from 8500 to 18000 troops, is to deploy throughout Liberia in November. Demobilization is to be completed by January 31, Elections are to be held on May 31 with a turnover to an elected government on June 15. The revised plan calls for sanctions against members of the warring factions that obstruct the peace process. Sanctions include restrictions on travel, freeze on economic activities, exclusion from electoral process, and war crime charges.

Now the United States has another opportunity to assert its international leadership at a critical juncture to ensure that the success of the new peace process. This leadership will not lead to an involvement of United States troops. It does mean that the United States must heighten its diplomatic efforts to help coordinate the process of peace and gather the funding that is necessary for effective peacekeeping and demobilization in Liberia.

The United States should take the necessary steps to ensure that its commitment of $30 million to support the ECOMOG peacekeeping force is obligated before the end of the fiscal year 1996. While the United States pledge of $30 million is a step in the right direction it will not alone enable a doubling of ECOMOG to the 18,000 troops necessary for deployment by November. It is vital that the United States provide additional funds to make up this shortfall or take the lead to obtain significant pledges from other donor countries. A top priority of the United States should be the implementation of a serious program for demobilizing Liberia's combatants. Regretfully, no additional funding has been pledged by the United States to improve what was an inadequately funded and designed demobilization plan. In fact, some of the funds allocated in early 1996 for reintegration of Liberia's 60,000 combatants have been diverted elsewhere. The United States should take the lead in designing a comprehensive demobilization program. This program will not involve United States troops, but should include the resources for every stage of demobilization from encampment to training and counseling of combatants. A contribution of $20 million (non-food related) from the United States will provide the resources necessary to initiate a wellconceived demobilization program and encourage future contributions from other international donors.

President Clinton and the United States Congress must make Liberia a priority on our foreign relations agenda in Africa. United State leadership is critical if the key elements are to be achieved on schedule under the new peace plan. This leadership will not lead to an involvement of United States troops. It does mean that the United States through its Special Envoy, must heighten its diplomatic efforts to coordinate the implementation of the peace process and gather the additional resources necessary for effective peacekeeping and demobilization.

The United States should strengthen the response of the international community to the needs of the peace process. The foundation for a new international approach to the peace process already exists with the International Contact Group for Liberia, the group of donor countries that have pledged support to the peace process. The concept behind the ICGL should be expanded to a tightly coordinated partnership that includes the United States, ECOWAS, and the United Nations. This high level of cooperation will ensure that scarce resources are effectively utilized.

The outbreak of fighting in Monrovia in April-May of 1996 was the latest in a series of clashes in Liberia's intractable war. During the past nearly seven years, the war has produced shocking humanitarian conditions for Liberian civilians. The most recent fighting exacerbated even further these conditions. Humanitarian assistance organizations have been unable to deliver food and other emergency services because of the fighting in Monrovia. Their resources looted by gangs of combatants and the safety of their relief workers threatened, these organizations closed or dramatically reduced their operations in Liberia.

As a result of the civil war in Liberia, an estimated 800,000 Liberians are internally displaced; another 800,000 are refugees in neighboring countries that are among the poorest in the world. Approximately 50 % of the population in Monrovia, upwards of 350,000 persons, were forced to flee their homes due to the April-May fighting and another 3,000 died. During June-July some 3,300 new cases of cholera were reported in Monrovia and a July survey found malnutrition rates for children in displaced shelters have increased up to 25%.

Now that the dust of the Civil War in Liberia is settling down, an era of a NEW LIBERIA is at hand. Whether anyone likes it or not, a leadership is bound to emerge, supposedly to shoulder the national responsibilities of politics and administration and to ensure the continued survival of the Liberian people and culture.

That such leadership will be genuine and committed is a matter that you as Liberians and friends of Liberia can decide, or at least influence. But choosing national leadership is a serious and difficult business. In Liberia, bombed-out homes and shops are painful reminders of what happens when leaders are chosen unwisely. We cannot allow this to happen again. This is why the Liberian Social Justice Foundation is campaigning for PEACE, SECURITY, SOCIAL, ECONOMIC, EDUCATIONAL AND POLITICAL JUSTICE IN LIBERIA.

The Liberian Social Justice Foundation has carefully examined the administrative and operational policies of both the past and present administration in Liberia, and in our candid opinion, much more needs to be done to help Liberia go in the direction she needs to go. We as Liberians must try to have a positive influence on the selection of the national programs and the corresponding leadership which will inevitably affect our lives and the lives of our people for many years to come.

My fellow Liberians and Friends of Liberia, the Liberian Social Justice Foundation has embarked on a mission to ensure that PEACE, UNITY, SECURITY, FREEDOM AND SOCIAL JUSTICE prevail in Liberia. This is an awesome responsibility that can only occur if we cooperate as a team. History will judge us not by what we say, but by what we do. With God and the determined mind, there is nothing we cannot achieve for our Liberian Society. It is in this light that I urge you to support and contribute to the Liberian Social Justice Foundation's programs.

Liberia, the African nation established in the 1800s by freed American slaves, has been torn by civil war since 1989. What does the Liberian Civil War mean to Americans in terms of health care, humanitarian relief, stability throughout Africa and the continuation of missionary work? If you share in the dream of peace in Liberia, a country founded upon American ideals, you are invited to become more informed by writing to the LIBERIAN SOCIAL JUSTICE FOUNDATION, POST OFFICE BOX 31438, CINCINNATI, OHIO 45231. (513) 931-1872.

I am writing to introduce you to the Liberian Social Justice Foundation, Inc., a broad-based social nonprofit organization. The mission of the LSJFI is two-fold: we are dedicated to restoring a just and stable society in Liberia, and to improving the quality of life for all Liberians, both at home and abroad.
