Intramural 101

By: James Burton

Ah, intramural sports. The backbone of the college recreational experience. I know, you freshmen are thinking: “What the heck is an intramural sport?”

When I started writing this, I wondered the same thing. So, I sat down with Allen Gilbert, the head honcho for JSU intramural sports. And from that meeting, Intramural Sports 101 was born.

Intramural sports are a bunch of games played by groups of people within JSU. You know, kind of like the Orientation Olympics, just not as awkward.

Each group competes in a point championship that generally lasts a fiscal year. The season end reward is an Intramural Champion t-shirt and bragging rights.

There is also an award given annually to one student from each league.

“Me and my student officials,” Gilbert told me, “decide who was Sportsman of the Year.” The Sportsman of the year, he went on to explain, is something like MVP, but not exactly.

“Gee whiz! It sure would be swell if I could sign up for one of these teams. How do I do it?”

Well, first you’ll want to lay off the 50’s vernacular. Then you and a bunch of your peeps can head on down to room 215 in Stephenson Hall. You’ll fill out a registration form for whichever sport you plan to be involved with.

“But I’m anti-social and I don’t have any friends!”

That’s all right too. There is a ‘Free Agent’ list available where you can sign up to be informed whenever a team needs an extra player.

“Who all can I expect to see participating?”

That’s the beauty of it, just about anyone! Don’t let the Greek symbols on the home page fool you.

“Our program is not geared toward Greeks but they are the most active group,” Gilbert said. “Non-Greek groups sign on as time progresses.”

“What sports am I able to participate in?”

You have a whopping selection of twelve different activities: Badminton, Basketball, Beach Volleyball, Bowling, Flag Football, Golf, Inertube Water-Polo, Putt-Putt Golf, Racquetball, Softball, Tennis, and Volley ball.

“Flag Football attracts the most participants,” said Gilbert. “We’ll have between 350 and 400 students.”

There’s bound to be something to attract the eye of any JSU student who wishes to try something new and unusual. Even I, the chronic stock car racing addict, am very tempted to try out golf. So, if you have any questions, be sure to e-mail Allen at agilbert@jsu.edu. He is more than willing to help you in any way.

With the beginning of classes and gas prices rising, students who are already on a tight budget are forced to change their spending ways.

After the devastation of Hurricane Katrina, gas prices have jumped to well over $3 in some areas and over $7, reportedly, in certain areas of Mississippi. With JSU being a “commuter college”, a wide selection of the student base are affected. Students are forced to plan with their schedules, trying to get all their classes in on either Monday, Wednesday and Friday or Tuesday and Thursday.

“This sucks.” states Michael Smith, a drama student from Lincoln, Alabama. “I had to get a part time job just to pay for gas. I usually just go to school and focus on that but this semester I can’t.”

The hike in gas prices was caused by a variety of factors including a dwindling supply, a change in economy, and the war in Iraq.

Katie Nelson of ZTA goes up over AOPI Lindsey Holland during the sorority championship game last October. Sororities and fraternities make up the most active intramural groups, but individuals and groups of friends can also join the league.
Alumni House sees hope for future with a new club

Alan Renfroe, the Assistant Director of Alumni Affairs at JSU, has been overseeing the developmental processes of “Students Today, Alumni Tomorrow” or “S.T.A.T.” for short, the newest student organization at the Jacksonville State University campus.

Tuesday, September 13, the Alumni Association introduced the new student organization with an ice cream social free to all students. The ice cream for the event was purchased from locally-owned Wrights Dairy.

The “Ice Cream and Information” social consisted of a wide variety of cool treats ranging from vanilla to bubblegum served in red souvenir cups with the S.T.A.T. name.

Renfroe and Misty Cassell spoke at the event. Cassell is a former student of JSU who now works for the athletic department in Kennamer Hall.

Cassell was also the first intern to work at the Alumni House. In 2004 she took part in the initial research that went into the forming of S.T.A.T.

The idea behind this program is to teach students some things that are not taught in the classroom, like interview skills and resume writing, in a fun environment.

Organizations like S.T.A.T. are not a new idea. Other universities have groups that are similar.

Just as the students of Jacksonville State University have a senate where they can air their grievances and make recommendations to the administration, the faculty has its own organization called the Faculty Senate.

Monday, the executive officers of the group met for the first time to set the agenda for their first senate meeting, which will be held on Monday, September 19 at 3:15 in room 1130C of the Houston Cole Library.

“It was an unusual year in that we ended last year with not a lot of new stuff left on the table,” said Dr. Clark Hudspeth, the Faculty Senate historian, speaking about the 2004-2005 year.

Due to the fact that most of the old business was wrapped up during the May 9 meeting, the group has the opportunity this year to have a fresh start.

Faculty Senate President Dr. Jeffrey Dodd, who is currently serving his second term as president, hopes to use this to their advantage so that the senate can become a more proactive group.

“The way it’s supposed to work is that the individual faculty members either bring their problems to the senator from their department or they bring it individually to the senate,” said Dodd.

The senate itself has no power to make any policy changes in response to problems that are brought to their attention, but they are able to make recommendations to the administration.

While Dr. Meehan agrees that the senate has no governmental power, the respect that the administration has for the faculty does allow them a degree of influence.

“Without the faculty, we wouldn’t have any students and without the students we wouldn’t have the Wildcats,” said Meehan, adding that without either of those groups there wouldn’t be an administration.

“I will be doing the things I care about the most,” said Heather James as she signed up for the STARS Committee during the Student Government Association involvement meeting. James cited the reason for joining as her desire to go into the schools and help students with supplies and classwork.

On Thursday, September 8th, the SGA held the involvement meeting to encourage students to sign up for various committees. During the meeting, Jessica Firestone head of the SGA’s Residence Life and Facilities stated her goals to have wireless Internet access in all the dorms and lower dorm fees. She also wants more visiting hours in the daytime.

Lindsey Crow, along with other members of the SGA’s Concert Committee took surveys of music the students prefer. They will use the information to bring different groups in for concert night. Past acts have been Hootie and the Blowfish, Pat Green and Rascal Flatts.

Chauncey Slater, head of Constitution and Code, set his goal to help the student body understand the significance of the constitution. It helps the students know do’s and don’ts of the university and how to abide by the rules.

“The reason I joined Athletic Support Committee is because I was captain of the dance team in high school,” said Tiffany Deardorff. “I wanted a way to support my team at JSU.”

The next on-campus event for the Student Activities Council is Family Day on October 15th. The purpose of the event is to allow the student body a chance to invite their family to JSU. It is a day of fun and activities for adults, students and children. Face painting and teddy bear stuffers will be on-hand for kids. Sodexo is catering lunch.

J-Day will be Thursday, October 27, during homecoming week. It will be held behind the Theron Montgomery Building. Hot dogs and hamburgers will be served along with drinks and cotton candy.

Students signing up to join the Cultural Affairs Committee.

Games like laser tag and a mechanical bull will be available for the students enjoy.

Later that night, there will be a bonfire and the presentation of the homecoming court. Organizations on campus will be encouraged to make and present their homecoming banners as well.

“It is really a day for everybody to get out and meet one another and get to see new faces,” said Casie Sanders, Vice President of Student Activities.

Sanders and the rest of the Student Activities Council will attend the National Activities Council conference on September 29 through October 2 in Chattanooga, Tennessee.

There, many entertainers from different companies who present their acts. Colleges go to see what they have to offer and JSU’s SAC books many of their activities during this time.

“This meeting was just to get everyone on the same page,” said Vice President of the Student Senate, Justin Lord when Jacksonville State University’s Student Government Association met Monday night.

It was their third meeting of the year. The first two meetings were held in April, after the elections for the 2005 - 2006 school year. Lord, affectionately called J. Lo, is a junior Life Committee Head. The office of Campus Safety Committee Head was given to Tremaine Kelley in SB 41. Old SB 27 appointed Catherine Hammond as the new Chaplain of the Student Senate.

Chief Justice Brandy Pollard swore in the new senators with their pledge, promising to serve the student body to the best of their abilities.

SGA President Mardracus Russell then congratulated each of the 2005-2006 senators and presented them with a pin.

“We are the face of JSU,” said Lord, showing his belief that the SGA has a major responsibility to the school and community.

All Senate meetings are held in the TMB auditorium at 6:00pm. The meetings are open to all students, and Lord stressed that if students have a problem, the meetings are the time to address it.

William Meehan the SGA has started a committee aimed at helping with the aid of Hurricane Katrina’s survivors.

Russell also cited some members for not fulfilling their duties during welcome week, “the numbers for attendance were dramatic.” Lord and Russell, however, cited some members for their part in welcome week, “they keep the minutes of the meeting and performs other secretarial duties.

The Parliamentarian, Rachel McCombs, makes sure that the rules are followed during the meetings.

President of the SGA, Mardracus “Drake” Russell, spoke very fervently about the Jacksonville State University Hurricane Relief Project.

During the past two football games, they collected funds for what they are calling the “Quarter ‘n’ up” program. Together with Dr. William Meehan the SGA has started a committee aimed at helping with the aid of Hurricane Katrina’s survivors.

“It [fundraising] isn’t going to stop after a week,” said Lord.

Russell also spoke of the tailgate party that the SGAs of UAB and JSU will be hosting together at the football game this Saturday. It will begin at 3:00 pm at Legion Field.

The two associations will work together to raise money to aid the people of New Orleans.

Russell also reminded the Senators to keep their academics up, and he applauded them for attending the meetings.

In the middle of the meeting the SGA had a photo op in front of Bibb Graves.

When they reconvened, they presented the student bills for the meeting. Old business included SB 14 and SB 27 that remained from last month. Student bills 31 through 38, excluding SB 36, officially inducted new senators. These seven students were appointed over the summer since there were not enough people to fulfill the positions. Bills 39 through 41 inducted new committee heads.

Emily Rollins officially resigned as the acting Director of Publicity for the 2005 - 2006 term with SB 36. In her place, Raynard Cargill, last year’s Director of Publicity, took over the position.

Kati Richards was designated as the MADE Committee Head in SB 39. SB 40 appointed Jessica Firestone as the Residence Hall.
STAT will help students plan for their futures

lar. JSU’s S.T.A.T. tries to improve on this concept by giving its members a mentorship program.

Current JSU upper classman will have the chance to be mentored by JSU Alumni, giving students a chance to meet prominent Alumni in their field of study as well as prominent Alumni of other fields.

Lower classmen are mentored by upperclassmen that will pass on knowledge that may not be known about the school.

Renfroe calls it “establishing a life network.” He added that the program is “also giving Alumni more connection to the school and students.” These networks may prove helpful to members after graduation because, in today’s job, world having a degree doesn’t always get you the job.

S.T.A.T. is a student organization but will also be recognized officially as a chapter of the Alumni Association. Being both a student organization and an alumni chapter means S.T.A.T. members will participate in both student functions as well as some alumni functions.

The democratically elected president will hold a seat on the Alumni Board of Governors, just like the other 20 Alumni chapters. “The alumni are thrilled about the idea of being able to sit down with a current student,” said Renfroe. This will give students more knowledge of what it means to be Alumni.

“Due to S.T.A.T.’s being in its inaugural year we will only be allowing 30 members to join this year. In future years this may change to allow more but I can’t yet say,” said Renfroe.

As of the 12th of September, S.T.A.T. has 14 members, which leaves room for only 16 more. Applications are being accepted until the 16th of September. There is a $20 application fee to join which will be refunded if you application is not accepted.

The first meeting of S.T.A.T. will be September 27 at 4:30 p.m. at the Alumni House.

Dear Southerners and all those affiliated with JSU's esteemed marching band:

By: David Howton
Chanticleer Staff Writer

Let me start off by saying, to all those I may have offended with my last article on the Marching Southerners, I do apologize. Being a former member of a marching band, I understand that band members are sensitive about certain subjects and, apparently, I have forgotten what areas are touchy and what aren't. I have relearned each of these areas over the past week.

I would like to take this time to go step by step, touching on each of the complaints that have come to my attention.

First of all, the glaring mistake about Spirit going to Japan and Great Britain. After speaking with a friend of mine, who is a former member of the Southerners, information was mixed up. He was a member of the DCI band "Cavalier" and not Spirit. I did not realize this mistake until it was too late. It was an honest mistake, and, as a human being, I can guarantee you that every human being at one point in their life will make a mistake.

To all those in the great sorority Sigma Alpha Iota: you ladies rock. Please don't take my lack of coverage of you as an insult. I tried to touch on several subjects throughout the article and was well past my limit with what I had. I meant no disrespect and I can assure you that it will be made up in due time.

To those of you who were offended with my comments about members of the band playing poker, I did not get my information on that from your website. I didn't say at any time that "ALL" members of the band play poker. I said "many".

It's common knowledge around JSU that many band members play poker. Last year at Sigma Pi's Sam Spady Week poker tournament, a large portion of the 32 players were affiliated with either the Marching Southerners or Phi Mu Alpha.

I have connections (friends) who play poker with many of you and that's where I got this information. I had more, but mentioning where the games are held and that some times currency is involved just seemed wrong and, after all, I was only trying to help the visibility of the band.

As I mentioned before, I am a former member of a marching band and I may have let my brass bias lead me to talking about the greatest section on earth . . . the Trumpets. Many of you are thinking "What else?" right about now.

I admit that I did get a lot of my information on the band story online at your website. I apologize for having to work 70-80 hours a week to pay for my education. I apologize for no one being on campus during Labor Day. I apologize for only spending four days walking around band practice, climbing to the top of the tower and taking pictures and I apologize for no one being in their offices to take phone calls or interviews, even though Mr. Bodiford did call me back and left a message.

To those who think that I only speak to hear myself speak, you're half-right. Ok . . . Ok . . . You're completely right! How many journalists do you know who do everything without having their name attached? That's why God invented the "Byline" . . . for us selfish people.

I mentioned the movie "Drumline" because I am a movie lover. I love to go to theaters with friends and spend a few hours not worrying about tuition increases or the 20-page paper I have due next week. When doing a band story, the first two "band" movies that came to mind were, of course, "Drumline" and "Mr. Holland's Opus" . . . Enough said.

Controversy sells. If it wasn't for controversy, people like Jim Rome, Stephen A. Smith, Rush Limbaugh and Howard Stern would be a blimp on the map. No one would know who they were and no one would care. You can't please every person every time you do an article.

For those of you who are interested in trying, the Chanticleer is always accepting applications and to those who have already filled them out, welcome to our team. We are sure that you will be able to better our outlook on JSU news.

To those who liked the fact that we are covering the band, know that we are going to be doing that more often. This year, and hopefully years after this, we plan on covering a lot more JSU stories. We plan on looking into what makes JSU the friendliest campus in the south.

In closing, to everyone who has a problem with what or how I say something, my response is simply, thanks for reading my article. Have a great day.

It never amazes me what President Bush will do next. Prior to Hurricane Katrina I was a die-hard Republican. Now I’m like... umm... well... please, I’m almost ashamed of my political preference.

For those of you who don’t know, Michael Brown, the director of FEMA, resigned on Monday. However, that is not what I am writing about. My beef is; why in the world would Bush appoint someone to be the director of an emergency management organization with no emergency management training. That is like expecting nothing to go wrong when giving the car keys to an infant and telling him to go get milk. How stupid do you have to be not to think there will not be a problem?

The fact that we are just now hearing that Brown has no experience in this field angers me even more. But of course, leave it to the government to cover everything up. Nothing out of the ordinary there, now is it?

Another thing that has me scratching my head is that five head officials of FEMA also have little or no experience in emergency management. In fact they only got their job by helping out with the Bush campaign. I say, “Screw college, give me a piece of that action!”

Okay, I will admit that with the past hurricanes Brown, a.k.a. Brownie (I wonder why), has done a good job handling the cleanup. In fact when Bush first visited the ruins of New Orleans he said, “Brownie, you’re doing a heck of a job.” This just happens to be very funny to me because the President is not saying a word, good or bad, about Brown now. Both he and Brown have tried to keep media attention on the crisis itself, not on the lacking experience of emergency management officials.

Now that Brown has resigned, the focus is now on the President and the rest of the government. While Bush is taking responsibility for the slow reaction to the disaster, he is not being taken very seriously. As you may recall this is the man who was the President during September 11, the one who lead us into a falsely reported war with Iraq, and now is having to defend himself for his poor reaction to Katrina. Also, a quick note, his approval ratings are at an all time low.

With Brown resigning, Bush has now appointed David Paulison as the new acting director of FEMA. Fortunately, this man has experience. Among other qualifications he has had a career as a firefighter and certified paramedic, he was among emergency workers responding to Hurricane Andrew in 1992 and the ValuJet crash in the Florida Everglades in 1996. He was also in charge of Dade County’s emergency management office. He led FEMA’s emergency preparedness force from 2003-2004, and has been in charge of the U.S. Fire Administration, a division of FEMA, and the Department of Homeland Security since December 2001. Obviously he is more than qualified. Let’s just hope that he won’t wind up with his head in the sand.

"Would you like to see me cry?" Brian Seitel jokingly says as he auditioned early Wednesday night for a part in the George Bernard Shaw play, Arms and the Man. The comedy will be the first play of the season for the JSU drama department.

Emotions were running high. Some of those auditioning were very comfortable, like old pros at work, while others were very nervous. At 6:55 p.m., 10 people sat in "the black box," the room where auditions are held, but by 7 p.m. the room was filled with an overwhelming 30 people. All auditioning for a part in this play. Out of the 30, only eight would get a part.

"Thirty people auditioning for a straight play with a fairly small cast is excellent," director Dr. Wayne Claeren commented.

About half of those who came to try out were either freshmen or recent transfer students. Among them was Eden Riddlespur, who acted in high school, but was nervous because this was her first time trying out for a JSU production.

Arms and the Man is an epic poem in the old tradition of Homer, written by George Bernard Shaw in the time leading up to World War I. The JSU drama department always likes to begin their season with either a well-known playwright or a well-known play.

In this Shaw comedy, the hero, Bluntschli is known as the "Chocolate Creme Soldier" because he carries chocolate in his cartridge belt instead of ammunition. He is a professional soldier who has begun to see the silliness of war.

The heroin, Raina, is a dreamy romantic character who will be played by Lauryn Brook, a freshman majoring in English Language Arts.

"Acting is my passion," said Brook. "When I wake up in the morning, I think about acting. I love it."

Claeren commented, "Thirty people auditioning," and who let their personality come through the character are appealing.

Seitel usually plays the villain in the more dramatic roles he has held and is trying out for the comedy because he wanted to approach something different.

When you enjoy it, you enjoy both coming back in the spring for being mascots from schools like Auburn, They also have to keep moving at all costs. ing mascots are going to play fight it show up next year for the tryout! I know person on campus, being a college mascot can help advance a person into that type of profession. A former Cocky, LaSandra Nash, is currently doing her internship at Walt Disney World in Florida. They came to JSU for her tryout and may be coming back in the spring for Marcus to tryout. He is unsure of his plans, but is seriously considering it.

Cocky tryouts are held annually, but not too many people have made it out lately to them. The tryout consists of a minute to a minute and a half themed skit put to music. If anyone is interested in learning more about this you can contact Michelle Alford at 782-8345. After my experience as Cocky, I told Marcus not to be surprised if I just show up next year for the tryout! I had a great time!

Acting is my passion,” said Brook. “When I wake up in the morning I can’t imagine myself doing anything else. I found love for it.”

Justin Ridgeway, who was talked into auditioning for this play by another drama major, will play her hero, Bluntschli.

“He’s very old school. He uses his sense of humor,” said Ridgeway of his character. “No matter what’s going on, he’ll find something [humorous] about it.”

Arms and the Man opens October 20 and runs through October 23. Tickets are $5 for students and military personnel and $9 for general audiences. JSU faculty and staff as well as senior citizens can get their tickets for $7.

Erin Bruner, the attorney who defends Father Moore.

Director Scott Derrickson believes The Exorcism of Emily Rose may be the first ever courtroom horror film.

That may or may not be the case.

The problem with “Emily Rose,” though, is that combining the two different genres doesn’t necessarily make for a good movie.

Granted, they were obviously trying to make a different type of exorcism film than its predecessor, “The Exorcist,” and that’s commendable. But, if you’ve seen the previews then you’re probably expecting to see a different movie than the one they actually made.

The reason being is that there are some long, unexpected courtroom scenes that tend to drag on and make the movie flat and boring in spots.

They are the types of scenes that are a totally unrealistic portrayal of a courtroom where the witness is allowed to go on an emotional tangent for five minutes without interruption, but when the next question is asked, the opposing attorney stands up and yells “objection, your honor” and, amazingly, it’s sustained.

Simply put, Beitthemeans Rocks

By: Jeff Pruitt
Chanticleer Features Editor

From the first time I saw them this summer to their most recent show at Brother’s Bar on September 10th, this quintet from Birmingham, AL has never failed to impress me.

Luckily, it seems like I’m not the only one.

At a recent music conference in Orlando, FL, a couple of the band members met Warren Haynes of Government Mule. He listened to their album, Shotgun Radio, and liked it enough to offer the band an opening slot at two upcoming shows. They will be appearing at the Alabama Theatre on November 17th in Birmingham and on November 19th at the Tabernacle in Atlanta.

If you’ve listened to Government Mule, they are undoubtedly southern rock. So is Beitthemeans. But, with a little twist.

They are much heavier and more straightforward with limited guitar solos and they have a punk sensibility that gives their songs a sense of immediacy.

Comprised of Jeff Hendon (guitar, vocals), Matt Jones (guitar), Thomas Wilson (bass), and Butch Kelley (drums), their latest release, Shotguns + Radio, has never failed to impress me.

Their melodies are still melodic. The lyrics range from anger to sadness and Hendon and Jones’ soulful delivery give them an enduring quality.

If you get a chance to see Beitthemeans live, I highly recommend it. This band is really good.

They will be playing at the Alley Cat in Atlanta on September 16th and on October 14th they will be at The Nick in Birmingham.
uly, it’s sustained.

Oy vey!

On trial is Father Moore, Emily’s priest. Through a series of flashbacks, her story is told, including her possession and the exorcism that attempts to rid her of six demons.

It seems like the goal of The Exorcism of Emily Rose is to make the audience question their individual belief in the existence of demons.

This is partly done through the character of cliched, location for a possession.

So, if you like traditional horror films, you probably won’t be a big fan of The Exorcism of Emily Rose. But, if you’re interested in the combination of two genres, specifically horror and courtroom drama, then this might appeal to you.

Personally, the mixing of the two genres left me wanting for one or the other, but certainly not both.

Comprised of Jeff Hendon (guitar, vocals), Josh Jones (guitar, vocals), Casey Wilson (bass), and Nathan Kelley (drums), this foursome combines lyrics that tend to be dark and foreboding with a tight, powerful rhythm section and an all-out guitar assault that makes for a great live performance and an equally good debut album.

Vanderbilt is hot! Can they keep it going?

By Amado Ortiz

I am going to try something a little different this year. I have been walking down the halls and students have been screaming my name, "Armando! Armando! Who do you like this week?"

After going through all the fan letters and the emails, I have picked the three games I have got the most questions about.

I would give out free information in the past but now I am going to just write my list of winners in my column. I will give advice on three games and then I will have to say "no comment" to takers in the hall.

Upset alert

Watch the Bruins of UCLA win a good contest against Oklahoma out in Los Angeles. Even though Las Vegas has the Bruins favored by a touchdown, this will be a big win for the program. UCLA will force Oklahoma to run the ball and Adrian Peterson has got to get something going on the ground to give Sooners quarterback Paul Thompson a shot.

Don't look at Oklahoma's 17th ranking and think the Sooners will win because the Bruins are unranked. Oklahoma is having some serious offensive problems. UCLA by three.

The Amistot Star talked all week of the D1 transfers that are now playing for the Mocs. The thoughts in the air of the Gamecock faithful all said, "We are going to kill the Mocs like last year."

Something just didn't feel right about the game. The Gamecocks took the opening drive of the game 81 yards and pounded it on a Clay Green run. Brett Rumsing missed the PAT and the Gamecocks led 6-0.

Clay Green runs for some tough yards

There was just an uneasy feeling about the game. The scenario was brewing for an upset at Paul Snow.

The Gamecocks were fresh off losing on the last play of the game in a huge upset bid of the #2 ranked Furman Paladins. Coach Crowe mentioned the week before that there would be more athletes on the field against UT Chattanooga than against Furman.

Something just didn't feel right about the game. The Mocs answered by driving 78 yard and punched it in on a Elitra Buckley run. The PAT was true and the Mocs led 7-6 and looked very convincing on defense. Something just didn't feel right about the game.

Rushing would add a 41 yard field goal to take the lead for JSU 9-7 and the atmosphere started to peak as the Gamecock defense looked for the challenge.

The first half ended at 9-7 but during halftime the crowd learned Furman was leading 27-0 going into the third quarter to Western Carolina.

That had to be a (typo). Furman couldn't be losing, something just didn't feel right about the game.

The Mocs would open up the second half with a touchdown to lead 14-9 but the Gamecocks would answer on the next drive with a Maurice Mullins 40 yard touchdown to Tauren Rhetta.

The PAT was no good and the Gamecocks only led 15-14. The Gamecock would settle for a field goal after having first and goal from the nine yard line off some brilliant runs from Daniel Jackson. The lead was 18-14 and something just didn't feel right about the game.

Devlin Philips intercepts a Mocs pass on the next drive and Paul Snow erupted in cheers.

Cross Country runs wild

The JSU men's cross country team, fresh off a runners-up finish at last week's Seawane Invitational, captured the thirteenth title at the UAH Charger Invitational on Saturday.

Junior Josphat Waweru (26:18) won his second straight individual title to lead the Gamecocks while sophomore teammates Ashenafi Arega (26:24) and Ryan McKay (26:39) finished second and fourth respectively.

Other finishers for the Gamecocks included Stephen Calvert 11th at (27:28), Quadrell Stephens 20th in (28:17), Matt Morgan 31st in (28:55) and Jason Butler 36th at (29:14).

JSU tallied 37 points while the College of West Florida finished second with 53 followed by host UAH at 86.

"Our guys ran particularly well today, said head coach Steve Ray. " We expect it from our top three, but our four through seven guys picked it up and ran more like we expect them to." The JSU women's cross country team found the going a little tough at UAH finishing fifth in the field of fifteen teams.

"We knew we would have our hands full today as we were without some of our key personnel, but I think the girls will tell you that we were off as a whole compared to last week's effort (third place at Seawane)."

Sophomore Sarah Caine led the way for the Lady Gamecocks with a 12th place finish (20:17). First year student Amberlynn Mattice finished 22nd in (20:52) and sophomore Shelbye Roberts was 31st at 21:28.

Host UAH won the title with a score of 42 points with West Florida at 69 and Carson Newman third with 122.

Both squads return to action next weekend at the University of Alabama's Crimson Classic. The men's five mile race at 9:00 with the women's 5000 meter to follow at 9:45.

Soccer picks up first win in overtime 3-2

Joanna McCallagher guided her second goal of 2005 on a corner kick assist from Daniela Latina to help lift Jacksonville State to its first win of the season, downing East Tennessee State 3-2 in overtime.

McCallagher's goal came seven minutes and 40 seconds into the overtime period.

"It was a well deserved win," JSU head coach Julie Davis said after winning her first match at JSU. "We came out and collectively played well today to win. We did a good job on defending today and ran a very organized offense that we've been working on."

Never leading in the match, ETU's Meghan Morris scored with seven seconds remaining in regulation and forced JSU to its second overtime of the season.

"For us to win this game today, in overtime, took team work," said Davis. "ETSU is a very respectable team, but we worked hard and left no doubt we were the better soccer team today."

JSU jumped on the board first when Ashley Smith scored on an assist from Courtney Moore at the 17:48 mark. The Smith goal gave JSU the early lead and held through the first half.

The Bucs would tie the game just over 14 minutes into the second half on an unassisted goal by Emily Fulcher.

The Gamecocks would regain the lead at 2-1, when Liz Hendricks assisted Courtney Moore on a goal at the 62:50 mark.

"This win gives us a new start to beginning our season," Davis said. "We will use this to help propel us into conference play in a couple of weeks."

JSU is set for two home matches beginning Friday at 7 p.m. against Mercer and Sunday against Southern Mississippi at 1 p.m.
There's no place like home...

Someone once said, "There's no place like home."

The JSU Volleyball team made their long awaited return to Pete Mathews Coliseum Tuesday night and efficiently dispatched Tennessee-Chattanooga in three straight games.

"It's so nice to be at home," said Emily Withers. "You feel relaxed and comfortable. I love it."

The Gamecocks held off the Mocs to win the first game 30-27, while late JSU runs buried UTC in the final two games, 30-22 and 30-23, improving their home record since joining the OVC to 22-4.

"Getting back home is always great," said JSU Coach Rick Nold. "I thought we had a great crowd. The girls really need that. They thrive off the big crowds. They get excited. You look at our hitting percentage and they were just really playing aggressive."

The Gamecocks (3-4) attacked UTC at every opportunity from the beginning, keeping The Mocs on the defensive throughout all three games. The Gamecocks were led by middle blockers, Shari Weyer and Abbey Breit, with 15 kills while Withers had 41 assists. Weyer also led the team with an impressive .583 attack percentage. In all, The Gamecocks punished the Mocs with 61 total kills and a .344 attack percentage.

The first game set the tone for the Gamecocks as they finished with a .400 attack percentage and 22 kills, but defensive miscues helped the Mocs stay in contention.

"We actually switched our defense last night," Nold said. "We switched a few people around to different spots, so there was a little confusion, but it was also a lot better in terms of people making the digs when we needed them to."

On defense, JSU's all time leader in digs, Kisha West contributed with ten and also had one kill.

In the second game, everything seemed to just go right for the Gamecocks. The Gamecocks allowed UTC (5-3) to get as close as 16-16, but the momentum swung in favor of JSU as Breit scored three of the final eight points.

"That's what we're looking for from her," said Nold. "When she hits that way, she's going to be very effective and open things up for everybody else."

The third game was almost an exact duplicate of the previous game. Katie Moyers made huge contributions on offense on her way to an 11-kill performance.

"We did a lot better in the third game and it progressed as the match went on," said Breit. "We've got a lot of room to work."

Momentum seemed to be on the side of JSU until everything stopped for a moment. Late in the third game, Weyer went down with a knee injury, but early reports indicate nothing serious. Instead of letting up after Weyer's injury, the Gamecocks wasted little time in finishing off UTC.

"One thing I'm very happy with is that we didn't let down as a team," Nold said. "That's something you always worry about."

Despite the rough start, including an 0-2 showing in Miami last weekend, Nold isn't concerned with the 3-4 record.

"We needed to be in this position," Nold said. "Not that we needed to be 3-4, but we needed to get to where we are really challenged. If we don't make that next step, somebody's going to beat us. So far, we haven't been making the steps up. That's something we're learning."

The Gamecocks return to action in Cincinnati, Ohio tonight. On Friday, they will match up with Cincinnati, Wisconsin-Milwaukee, and George Washington. They will take on the host and make their return to Pete Mathews Coliseum on Friday, September 23 at 7 p.m.
