As of Friday, Feb. 22, Jacksonville State University had been around for exactly one century and a quarter of another.

In those 125 years, it has had four names and 11 presidents, and it has risen from humble beginnings to become the fourth largest university in Alabama.

To celebrate the anniversary, the university is continuing to promote a capital campaign called “The Power of 125 ... Join the Celebration!” It is a $25 million, five-year endeavor “to mark and exceed excellence existing in the five colleges of JSU,” according to President Dr. William Meehan.

JSU is planning several signature events to mark the anniversary, according to Tim Garner, head of outside marketing for the school. A coffee table book exploring the first 125 years in written history and photographs is in the works as well.

In 1883, when the University was founded, it was called Jacksonville State Normal School. There were three instructors and three departments: Mathematics, English and primary. By 1884, there were 247 students on the roll book. The campus consisted of one two-story brick building, which sat on 12 acres.

Students could begin with elementary school and continue on through college graduation at the school, according to the 2007-2008 JSU Fact Book.

Now the university consists of five separate colleges, with 36 departments and 9,077 students enrolled last fall. Every state in America is home to JSU alumni. Students come from 47 states and 70 counties. The campus has grown to include more than 50 buildings on 459 acres and is home to the tallest academic building in the state.

Duff to run for SGA presidency again, this time against Nix

Bethany Harbison
News Editor

For Moody Duff III, the path to the Student Government Association presidency of Jacksonville State University has been a winding one.

Last year, a mere six votes stood between Duff and his dream — but David Jennings, who is now finishing his presidential tenure, took home the win. Disheartened but determined, Duff returned, humbled, to become an SGA senator once again.

As Duff began to hit the presidential campaign trail for the second time, now against current Vice President of Student Senate Jennifer Nix, his journey shifted gears yet again.

Seven days before the first vote could be cast, Nix opted out of the race, offering Duff an assured victory — but all that changed on Wednesday, Feb. 27, when Nix re-entered the race.

“I can’t even tell you what my reason was (for dropping out). I was tired,” Nix said. “But I looked inside myself and found the energy. When I said that I was dropping out, it was never official.”

Though Duff thought he had victory in hand and was one more step nearer to his goal, he said, even before discovering that Nix was back in the race, that he was being careful not to become too confident or complacent.

“Oh course, I’m happy, but at the same time, anything can happen in an election,” Duff said. “SGA hasn’t printed the ballots yet, so I’m just going to keep on campaigning as if she was in the race.”

With Nix in the running once again, Duff’s decision to continue his campaign proved to be a wise one. Though Nix lost three days of campaign time, she still won the vote.

Professors aid medical school hopefuls

Sugar-sweet recommendation letters may be the norm, but Dr. Benjamin Blair, microbiology professor at JSU, considers brutal honesty the best policy. It’s a policy that is just one part of the department’s strategy to get JSU students noticed — and accepted — by the professional programs they choose.

“This has caught the attention of the professional programs,” Blair said. “They know that if I write a good solid recommendation for a student that it is deserved and that the information is not simply a form letter sent out for each student.”

Though both Blair and colleague Dr. Mark Meade both wrote an average of 15 letters a week last semester, Blair explained that helping students find their way into medical, dental, pharmacy, veterinary or other programs is no easy task. Most such programs, Blair said, are flooded with hundreds, even thousands of applications — and the number of available seats is comparatively few.

The relationships formed by JSU’s pre-health professional committee are key, Blair said. The committee currently consists of Dr. Blair, Dr. Meade, Dr. James Rayburn, Dr. Roger Sautner and Dr. Al Nichols — each of whom shoulders an advising load of up to 100 students.

“If (the schools’ representatives) get to know me, then when a JSU student applies, they will remember that and pay attention,” said Blair, who, along with Meade, recently returned from a meeting of the Advisors of Pre-Health Professional Students at UAB.

Another way Blair and the committee seek to establish JSU as a reputable source of students is ensuring that classes are the best they can be.

In premedical classes, students are now often broken into groups and asked to determine the diseases that could fit a list.

AKAs present Skee Week

Alpha Kappa Alpha’s Skee Week has come and gone once again. It’s a week of events that AKA does every year, but members explained that this year was special.

This year, Alpha Kappa Alpha celebrated 100 years as a sorority.

Alpha Kappa Alpha was the first Greek-lettered sorority established and incorporated and school supplies for Imagination Library, an organization AKA works with to get books and supplies to children under five years old. They said the turnout for the event was great, and that other sororities donated lots of books and supplies to Imagination Library, a foundation AKA works with to get books and supplies to children under five years old.

Whiteside also serves as technology co-chairman in the class that AKA teaches. The class was the last event of the week.

how to use them,” Whiteside said. “It’s important for us to go out into the community and get the older generation to come so that they can participate.”

Jennifer Brown is the technology chairman for the class. She explained that this is AKA’s undergraduate signature program.

Brown said, “I hope that more people come because these are programs that are used everyday.”

College Council for Constitutional Reform seeks to educate students, community on the reasons why they believe the Alabama Constitution sorely needs a rewrite

Katie Freeman
Staff Reporter

On Monday, Feb. 25, JSU students gathered in the Roundhouse to learn more about reforming Alabama’s constitution.

Tim Wyatt, a 19-year-old sophomore majoring in political science, is the spokesman for the College Council for Constitutional Reform. “Alabama’s Constitution of 1901 is not a fair document,” Wyatt said. “It was born out of prejudice and ignorance, and it was designed to suppress the voting block of African Americans and poor white voters. It’s got close to 400,000 words in it, 45 times longer than the United States Constitution.

“The only constitution that comes close to it is the Constitution of Idaho at 135,000 words. As a matter of fact, one amendment in the state constitution is twice the length of the United States Constitution.”

That single amendment is just one of 799 in the Alabama Constitution. Wyatt explained there are only four counties in Alabama that have home rule, when a county can pass ordinances without going through Montgomery. Only Baldwin, Jefferson, Mobile and Tuscaloosa counties have home rule.

“The local elected officials have to lobby Montgomery in order to pass local ordinances,” Wyatt said. “Jefferson County can handle local matters without going to Montgomery.”

Half of the 799 amendments relate to one county only. Hill Carmichael, campaign coordinator with Greater Birmingham Ministries’ Constitutional Reform Education Campaign, was also on hand to educate about constitutional reform.

“If Moses can tell Pharaoh to let his people go, then we can tell the Alabama Legislature to let our people vote,” Carmichael said.

He also explained that with the current tax system, poor people are hit the hardest because they do not usually benefit from the low property tax, but they do pay a lot in sales tax.

“If you are like me and you believe that the best government is the one closest to the people, then the 1901 Constitution is definitely a broken document, because it gives all power to government, essentially, and no government was meant to have this much power over its citizens,” Carmichael said.

The issue is one that often goes overlooked by students, according to Wyatt.

“The biggest problem that I have found is apathy,” Wyatt said. “People love to stay as is. Ignorance is bliss. As long as people don’t know why they are suffering, they can let their politicians blame it on whoever they want.

“If you know the truth, you know that your politicians are all playing us for fools and I find it insulting.”

The Second Annual Martin Hall Chili Cook-off will be held March 5 from 11:30 a.m. - 1:30 p.m., with all proceeds benefiting JSSU’s Relay for Life team.

SENATE MINUTES
Rundown of the Monday, Feb. 25, meeting

• Student Bill 110, which would have allocated $300.00 to the JSU History Club, was tabled because club members were not present.

• Student Bill 111, which sought to allocate $300.00 to Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Inc., passed. The fraternity intends to use the funds to travel to their regional meeting.

• Student Bill 112, which sought to allocate $300.00 to the JSU Political Science Model Arab League, passed. The league will apply the funds to their trip to South Carolina for a regional debate competition.

• It was announced that on Monday, March 3, 2008, at 7:00 p.m., a debate between the candidates for SGA executive positions will be held. The debate will occur immediately after the senate meeting in the auditorium of the Theron Montgomery Building. Brandon Hollingsworth will serve as moderator for the debate.

• A reminder was issued regarding SGA elections, which will be held March 4 and 5 in the TMB lobby.

• Senator Kelly Wright reminded all senators and others present about the upcoming Higher Education Day.
V-Day: ‘Vagina Monologues’ to come to Anniston

"I heard about Eve Ensler and V-Day about seven years ago," said Fleming-Smith, who graduated from JSU with a bachelor's in social work in 2005. "I thought it was wonderful but we Mbnnificleor NEWS Page 3 never thought that we would see it in this community."

She knew that the play’s open discussion of sexuality and violence against women were controversial, but as time went on, she decided the reasons not to do the play were far too flimsy.

"The Vagina Monologues embraces these taboos and shines a big spotlight on them — for better or for worse," Fleming-Smith said. "In my opinion, when every victim of a sexual crime, there is not enough time to waste on arguing about saying words like ‘vagina.’"

She brought the idea to a WISE meeting, and the members loved the idea and have been at work on the project ever since.

As with any JSU student organization, WISE first had to seek permission to host The Vagina Monologues, which is intended for adults.

Fleming-Smith said that the office of student life, along with the sociology and social work departments were very helpful.

"There have been some negative responses with some folks either tearing down our flyers or defacing them," Fleming-Smith said.

In addition to inspiring progressive thought, the play seeks to help hurting women financially as well. Ten percent of the play’s local profits will go to an organization of the V-Day Foundation’s choosing. The remainder will be directed to charities that locally support ending violence against women. WISE has chosen to sponsor both a new scholarship at JSU and Daybreak Crisis Recovery Center, where Fleming-Smith works as the community programs manager for the center’s seven counties.

But before the curtains can swing open, however, Fleming-Smith says much remains to be completed. Auditions were held Tuesday, Feb. 26, 2008 at 6:00 p.m. for actresses, but Fleming-Smith says that’s only part of the work that lies ahead. The V-Day Foundation, which seeks to bring the play to communities and college campuses, has strict requirements — the script must not be altered in the slightest.

"After the paperwork, you’ve got to find a spot to have it, support, actresses and a million other little things," Fleming-Smith said. "It’s stressful and inspires madness, but it’s worth it."

After reading the play’s script over ten times, Fleming-Smith calls it one of the best things she has ever read.

"It takes no prisoners," she said. "It’s raw, delightfully funny and incredibly moving."

of symptoms. Though the new ways may better prepare students for professional programs, the transition from memorizing and regurgitating an encyclopedia of facts to a method that encourages more critical thinking has not been easy.

"It’s like herding cats," Blair said of some students’ responses to the new format.

"Part of the reason for V-Day is that he is such an approachable, nice, just really good guy," Duff said.

Duff said that last year, after Jennings’ victory was announced, Jennings called him, congratulating him on a well-run campaign and offering his best wishes.

"I told him this then, and I’ll say it again now. I couldn’t have lost to a more deserving candidate," Duff said.

"I want to continue the things that he has done, but I will do them in my way. I always say there is always room for improvement."

If elected, Duff hopes to implement better, more innovative programming for students, and he suggested the possibility of receiving more student input on events like SGA movie nights. He also maintained that communication is key and said he hopes to establish positive relationships with JSU’s student media to find new ways to get the word out.

"Flyers have been somewhat overused," Duff said. He also hopes to develop a system where SGA representatives can attend meetings of most organizations on campus to educate them about the allocations from the SGA and events that SGA hosts.

For Nix, the SGA presidency would bring special significance. If elected, she would be the first female African American SGA president at JSU.

"It would be great, it would be something that I would never have dreamed possible," Nix said. "I came to school here just being myself and just being involved. To be elected SGA president would be the best thing in the world."

the transition from memorizing and regurgitating an encyclopedia of facts to a method that encourages more critical thinking has not been easy.

"It's like herding cats," Blair said of some students' responses to the new format. According to student Chris Walden, punter for the JSU football team and medical school hopeful, the nature of upper-level science courses makes it crucial for students to receive good advising early on — a luxury that Walden did not have. In his first couple of years at JSU, he was advised outside of the department and was led to "burn up his electives early on," leaving him with nothing to cushion the more difficult laboratory courses.

Blair echoed Walden's thought, saying that the numerous labs biology and chemistry majors take make scheduling especially difficult, both for professors and students — especially with the rocketing numbers of students each member of the pre-health professional committee is expected to advise.

"Laboratories take more time to teach and prepare than a regular lecture, and yet they count for only one credit hour," Blair said. "So when a science major's hard work is all worth it — and after taking the MCAT (or DAT or PCAT or whichever test their chosen program requires) and sending off their application, all that is left to do is wait.

As Walden readies himself to take the MCAT in July, gathers his letters of recommendation and strives to make top grades in his remaining classes, he says the matter is out of his hands, and that he is not wasting time worrying about it.

"I'll tell you this — my faith is strong, and if God decides at any point to call me elsewhere, I'm ready," Walden said. "He's paved the way for me so far, with grades and everything else, so I just don't sweat it like other people might."

Blair said while specific statistics on JSU students' performance and acceptance in professional programs are too difficult to track, he estimated that 90 percent are accepted into their first choice schools, and the other 10 percent go to secondary choices.

"I am thrilled when any of our students get into a program," Blair said. "They earn it themselves, but a part of me feels a little bit of pride in the knowledge that we did a good job preparing them for the experience."

Marijuana’s new science

When advocates of marijuana legalization defend their stance, they usually do so with the argument that there is no verifiable data to suggest the drug presents any real harm to its users.

But now, it appears the scientific tide is turning away from such assertions. The results of recent medical studies are beginning to change the way advocates and opponents should evaluate the legalization debate.

In December 2007, scientists at Health Canada (the equivalent of the Department of Health and Human Services) conducted a survey to investigate the toxins present in cannabis smoke. Their research turned up 20 times as much ammonia and four times as much hydrogen cyanide than can be found in typical cigarettes.

A study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, and featured in a Feb. 7 story on NPR’s Morning Edition, found people who smoke marijuana regularly have a higher risk of gum disease, tooth decay and tooth loss. Additionally, researchers suspect frequent marijuana usage could weaken the immune system and inflammatory response.

The evidence is building, and it doesn’t look favorable for the “marijuana is harmless” crowd. The old talking points are losing credence with every new piece of data that is released.

It’s true that the people who want marijuana are going to get it, regardless of legality. It’s also true that legalization doesn’t mean the next day no one shows up for work and store shelves are cleaned of their Cheetos stock.

But it does mean that the legalization argument should be losing steam. And rightfully so. Marijuana should not be legalized. Except for under the most dire of medicinal reasons, the drug has no place in our legal system.

Science is finally backing that stance.

Next-gen movie format battle over with HD-DVD’s demise

Remember Betamax?

...Sure you do.

It was the video format that revolutionized how people watched movies in their home.

Oh wait. That was VHS, which beat Betamax.

But that was over for decades now, but the new format fight between HD-DVD and Blu-ray is just heating up.

Oh, that fight’s over too, now.

Blu-ray has emerged victorious in the hi-def disc format war. Toshiba effectively waved the white flag for their HD-DVD format on Feb. 19, when the company officially announced that it would no longer produce HD-DVD players.

This makes Blu-ray the standard disc format for high definition movie watching. You can finally take advantage of that $3,000 HDTV you just had to have.

Well, first of all, she’s only 15, you pervert.

But don’t worry about those 400 DVDs you have on the shelf. The beauty of Blu-ray is that most players are backwards compatible and support both CDs and DVDs.

Oh, it looks like you have another concern. Let me guess. You want to know when movie companies will stop making DVDs?

Well you can rest easy. The DVD is far from dead and will be supported for several more years. DVD players are in so many homes that motion picture companies would be stupid to abandon the format completely.

As a consumer, I encourage you to embrace the one-format future that is Blu-ray. It might have a really stupid name, but
No school spirit in the Chanticleer

As an avid sports fan, I pick up the Chanticleer to look for the latest information on our Gamecock athletics. To see when the next match ups are and to keep up with the current happenings and standings of all the athletic programs that represent our school. Every athletic team needs support and a fan base for their program to thrive. A school’s fans give their athletes something to play for and create an exciting atmosphere that breeds success on the field.

The recent tone that is being expressed by the Chanticleer makes no one want to attend games or support JSU athletics. They bash the teams that are down on their luck with harsh headlines, which rub salt in the already open wounds of the athletes. Everyone has any knowledge of sports knows that only one team wins the championship. The same person also knows their team will not always be that team. Whether or not JSU is holding up the trophy at the end or scraping the bottom of the conference, a true school newspaper encourages and supports its athletes.

I will give the Chanticleer credit for the coverage of campus issues and they do all the things that you would expect from a school paper. However, the lack of school spirit expressed from the Chanticleer directly deprives our athletics of adequate student turnout and support. Students want to be proud of their school and not embarrassed to be a Gamecock. That is why our campus publication should choose its words more wisely in the future because you never know who you are going to have an impression on.

So, I ask the staff at the Chanticleer, set an example and be the biggest Gamecock on campus.

— Skylar (no last name given)

Editor’s rebuttal:

While we appreciate yours and any other student’s passion to be a Gamecock, the assertion that it is a student newspaper’s job to be a beacon of school spirit and to always root for the home team simply is not true. It is a student paper—any paper—job to get the facts straight.

Right now, the fact is that most of our teams stink.

Until that isn’t true, our tone will be the same.

For what it’s worth, we think our spring teams will be with any other OVC team right there at the end. We hope that to be true because we are as tired as anyone else of being bottom feeders.

SGA elections time to show school pride

By Zach Childree

Staff Reporter

As you drive (or walk) around campus, you will see large sheets with giant Technicolor letters—some with glitter—blowing in the wind or lying on the lawn. It can only mean one thing: It’s Student Government Association election time again.

But can you honestly say who is running for office? Do you know who is running for SGA president? How about for the three vice president positions? No?

That’s okay. Neither do I.

In fact, a lot of students all over campus are amazingly unaware of who is trying to get their vote in the upcoming elections.

I wish I could blame it on student apathy, or even low budget campaigning, but these things only part of the problem. While interviewing for a recent article I wrote for the Chanticleer, a question was posed to me that stayed in my head: Does JSU lack tradition?

I’m convinced that we as a school do indeed lack the traditions of larger universities. Like rolling toilet paper on trees or Toomer’s Corner in Auburn, or cheering “Rammer Jammer” before ’Bama games in Tuscaloosa.

Traditions are established because of pride in your university.

Do the students here at JSU lack pride in your university? Looking around at all the Cocky T-shirts, one would guess not.

But wearing something with your school’s name on it doesn’t necessarily constitute pride in your school any more than wearing a cross makes you a Christian or going to see a movie buff Matt.”

All of the big movie companies are on board with Blu-ray now, so you will be able to enjoy and collect all of your favorite films on one format. This is much more convenient than having everything split up and buying two different machines to accommodate.

So, what put Blu-ray on top of the hi-def plateau?

Sony’s own PlayStation 3 can be attributed to a big portion of the success. The company has sold nearly 10 million of their combination game and Blu-ray movie machines.

other film companies quickly followed with similar announcements.

This caused distributors such as Wal-Mart and Best Buy to abandon the format.

THE CANDIDATES, IN THEIR OWN WORDS

SGA PRESIDENT

MOODY DUFF III
Senior from Birmingham, Ala.
Political Science / Pre-Law

What's the one thing about the SGA that needs the most improvement? I believe the one thing we need to improve is student involvement! In order for our SGA to thrive, we must bring the STUDENTS back into the STUDENT Government Association.

Strength: I am a very determined person. I never give up on something I believe in.

Weakness: I am somewhat of a perfectionist. That sometimes can work to my advantage and other times to my disadvantage.

Slogan: “Progress is a Process.

Let's move the SGA forward. TOGETHER. Vote Moody Duff III SGA President!”

Platform: 4 Point Plan — 1) Motivate the campus to get involved with the SGA through NEW programming, activities and entertainment. 2) Excite the student body by increasing school spirit. 3) Promote the use of new safety measures to ensure a safe environment for all students. 4) Keep the SGA moving forward, doing bigger and better things for the student body.

Career ambition: To be a counselor and work with kids at a school. SGA needs to improve: The involvement because the students just don’t participate in SGA. We need everyone to know and feel they are a part of the SGA.

Strengths: Social and leadership skills

Best thing about JSU: The people that you meet and the friends you make.

Favorite Class: Oral communications

Random fact: Play piano

Slogan: Win with Nix.

Platform: As SGA President, I want to use the 3 E’s. First, we must EMPHASIZE the value of the SGA. We need to maximize the knowledge in every student that they are all members and that everyone has a voice. Next, we have to EDUCATE students of the vast opportunities available to them through the SGA. We have to let students know that anyone can get involved. And last, we must ELEVATE the energy of the student body. The same fire that we start with we must end with. Let's make SGA more than a group of letters, but a way of life!

SGA PRESIDENT

JULIA D ABBOTT

What’s the one thing about JSU’s SGA that needs the most improvement? Involvement! We need to not only make sure the students know what is going on but make them want to get involved by improving our events and bringing to experiences.

Favorite class you have taken: I feel that I can bring to the Senate.

Campaign slogan: I’m not making promises but getting things done!

Goal for the Student Senate:
The SGAs needs to improve: The involvement because the students just don’t participate in SGA. We need everyone to know and feel they are a part of the SGA.

Strengths: Social and leadership skills

Best thing about JSU: The people that you meet and the friends you make.

Favorite Class: Oral communications

Random fact: Play piano

Slogan: Win with Nix.

Platform: As SGA President, I want to use the 3 E’s. First, we must EMPHASIZE the value of the SGA. Tyrone Smiley
Junior from Birmingham, Ala.
Communications / Marketing

What’s the one thing about JSU’s SGA that needs the most improvement? Activities & entertainment for the student body are just planned out and expected to be well-attended. The student body does not have a say in what type of activities we are being planned. We also need activities for the students that stay on the weekends or for more students to stay during the weekends.

Best thing about JSU: The campus is small enough where everyone can get to know your name but big enough to participate in a wide range of activities on campus.

Campaign Slogan: Making

Real Plans for Real People

Platform: My platform for this campaign is comprised of three strong parts in which I feel that I can bring to the Senate.

Each senator needs to be responsible for writing bills and resolutions to improve the campus life and student body. Efficiency needs to be put into place to make sure all business is being handled in a timely manner. And also communication needs to be established with the student body to get them involved and also to let them know what the student senate is doing for them.

Graphic Design / Communications

What’s the one thing about JSU’s SGA that needs the most improvement?

Involvement! We need to not only make sure the students know what is going on but make them want to get involved by improving our events and bringing experiences to the community.

Favorite class you have taken: My English 101 class with Ms. Teresa Reed. It was a service learning class, and we volunteered in the community.

Campaign slogan: I’m not making promises but getting things done!

Goal for the Student Senate:

To bring the students back to the SGA. Without the rest of the student body, the SGA cannot grow. Too everything is connected. If we can get students involved in the SGA, then JSU as a whole will grow and become more prosperous.

Platform: “Bridging the Gap: Bringing the Students back into the Student Government Association.” I will do this by making it easier for students to get involved. Having places around campus for them to sign up for events and voice their opinions. Also making the Senate student-friendly and easy to follow. Making sure that the students are aware of what the Senate is doing ahead of time.

What’s the one thing about JSU’s SGA that needs the most improvement? Activities & entertainment for the student body are just planned out and expected to be well-attended. The student body does not have a say in what type of activities we are being planned. We also need activities for the students that stay on the weekends or for more students to stay during the weekends.

Best thing about JSU: The campus is small enough where everyone can get to know your name but big enough to participate in a wide range of activities on campus.

Campaign Slogan: Making

Real Plans for Real People

Platform: My platform for this campaign is comprised of three strong parts in which I feel that I can bring to the Senate.

Each senator needs to be responsible for writing bills and resolutions to improve the campus life and student body. Efficiency needs to be put into place to make sure all business is being handled in a timely manner. And also communication needs to be established with the student body to get them involved and also to let them know what the student senate is doing for them.

Career ambition: I want to be a traveling teacher!
The one thing about JSU's SGA that needs the most improvement: I think the enthusiasm directed towards the SGA needs to improve. We need to get people pumped up about events!
Best thing about JSU: Everywhere I go people are so friendly! Everyone always says hey and smiles.
Slogan: With a name like Wright, how can you go wrong?
Platform: My name is Kelly Wright, and I'm running for Vice President of Student Activities. This past year I have been a SGA Senator and STARS committee head, which has prepared me tremendously for this position. My plan (known as the Wright Plan) is based on three goals. These three goals include: 1) Developing activities that are actively engaging with the community (local schools and faculty), 2) To host events that are more inviting and appealing for all the students, 3) To give students an opportunity to broaden their perspective through meeting people. I have a heart for this campus, and I want you all to know that I'm here for YOU!
Strengths: I am a hard worker.
Weaknesses: If I had to choose one, I'd say... I really can't think of one. I'm really not a weak person.

The end of an era
Alexandria native Ginn closes out career with Gamecocks

By Jered Staubs
Sports Editor

Local product Will Ginn played his last home game for the Gamecocks last Saturday.

The senior from Alexandria High School has been the team's long-range marksman the past two seasons and has had a reputation for coming up with improbable shots at key times.

Coach Mike LaPlante says Ginn has a propensity to hit clutch shots with the shot clock winding down, and Ginn also hit a game-winning three-pointer from half court to win at SEMO last year.

Ginn has been one of the few reliable Gamecocks from the free-throw line, where he shot 82 percent both last year and this year. The team is shooting below 60 percent as a whole, but LaPlante feels confident when Ginn has the ball in his hands.

"He's hit a lot of big shots," LaPlante said. "That's been the role we've asked him to take, and he's had the courage to take them."

Most recently, Ginn made both a running three-pointer at the first half buzzer against Morehead State and a crucial three at the shot clock buzzer that ended an MSU run late in the second half of JSU's last win.

That win was only JSU's sixth of the season, which Ginn regrets.

"It's been tough," he said. "If the season would've started right now and we could play it all over, I think it would be a whole new story. We really just had some bad luck this year."

The win over Morehead was JSU's second in a row, and Ginn believes that the quality of play his team has exhibited lately is the result of playing with no pressure.

"It seemed like when that (losing streak) was over, it was like we're just playing to win just like you would in a pickup game," he said. "It's more relaxed, and just everybody's playing a lot more aggressive."

Ginn and Erik Adams were both honored on Senior Night last Saturday.

At the start of the year, JSU had three seniors — Ginn, Adams, and last season's second leading scorer, Dorian Brown. The three were called upon by LaPlante to help lead a very inexperienced team through what was sure to be growing pains.

Brown unfortunately contributed to those problems when he was declared academically ineligible after the fall semester, and Adams suffered a debilitating ankle injury on the second day of practice that has hampered him throughout the year.

As a result, Ginn has been the primary senior for the Gamecocks this season. With the loss of Brown and the limitations on Adams, he has led the team in...
Middle Tennessee State takes advantage of JSU pitching, sweeps Gamecocks

By Jared Gravette
Assistant Sports Editor

The Jacksonville State baseball team took the field on Friday afternoon poised and ready to get the season started to the right foot, but Middle Tennessee State had other plans sweeping the Gamecocks (1-3) in impressive fashion.

"From a weekend standpoint, I know that we're all disappointed," head coach Jim Case said. "You put a lot in to leading up, and you are excited about getting off to a good start. Obviously, we didn’t do that. I don’t think that we played the way that we can or will in any area."

JSU’s closest game came on Friday, as they lost 6-2. Ben Tootle (0-1) took the mound for the Gamecocks on opening day and allowed five runs over the span of four innings.

Starting pitching hurt JSU’s cause all weekend long, as MTSU put up 34 runs over a three-game span. Gamecock pitchers ended the three-game series with a 6.33 ERA.

"We need to do a lot better job of finishing off hitters, especially when we are ahead in the count," Case said. "From a starting standpoint, our job is to go out there and get the game going under control, and we didn’t do that. Some of that was defense and some of it was pitching."

On Saturday, the Blue Raiders once again jumped out to an early lead scoring six runs in the first two innings. To make matters worse, the Gamecock offense struggled against Jordan Alvis, who allowed just three hits in five innings of work.

At the end of the day, the scoreboard read 11-3 in favor of the Blue Raiders.

The Gamecock offense came to life in the final game of the series, as Clay Whittemore put the team on his back. A disappointed Whittemore left Rudy Abbott Field on Sunday after going 4-0-3 and tying a career-high with five RBIs.

Still his performance wasn’t enough, as JSU lost by a count of 17-8 due to two critical fielding errors late in the game.

MTSU jumped out to an early 4-0 lead, but the Gamecocks never gave up. They put up six runs in the bottom of the fourth to take the lead for the first and only time during the weekend series.

Josh Hoyle scored the first run in the fourth after a wild pitch from PJ Francescon. After walking the next two batters, MTSU made a move to the bullpen bringing in Kevin Whittaker.

Blake Seguin then singled down the right field line allowing Daniel Adamson to score and advancing Josh Sanders to third. Kyle McCrory then reached on an error by the second baseman setting up a Whittaker three-run homer that gave the Gamecocks a 7-6 lead.

"We were down by two runs, and the home run put us up by one," Whittemore said. "I thought that was really big for us as a team because that was the first time we had been ahead all weekend. We really came alive there."

"You have to give credit to the guys who were on right now. It's almost as important as winning baseball games because if you have that attitude the wins will take care of themselves," Whittemore added.

"Even in the ninth inning, we were down by a good bit, but everybody was still in the game. Nobody was packing up and getting ready to leave. We were in there until the last pitch, and I think that is really important right now. It's almost as important as winning baseball games because if you have that attitude the wins will take care of themselves," Whittemore added.

First win

The Gamecocks used a couple of local players to turn the tide after being swept by MTSU.

Justin King, from Jacksonville High School, took the mound for the second time this season Tuesday afternoon, this time as a starter. He turned in by far the Gamecocks' best starting performance of the year.

King held Millie to two hits and one run in five innings pitched, and he got enough early offensive support for the Gamecocks to coast to a 11-3 victory.

"I think if he throws the way he can, he's going to push somebody for a starting job," Case said. "He put together a good outing the first time he pitched, and he pitched well today. He's just got to continue to do that."

Men's team relinquishes big lead, loses to Georgia State on Senior Night

By Jared Staubs
Sports Editor

The JSU men's basketball team took a step back this weekend.

After consecutive wins against quality teams, the Gamecocks reverted to their old ways and blew a 14-point lead against Georgia State.

The Gamecocks' BracketBuster opponent spoiled Senior Night with an 85-78 win at Pete Mathews Coliseum Saturday night.

"We missed a great opportunity to keep building on what we had been doing," coach Mike LaPlante said.

"We had just beaten two teams who were playing very well in our league, and Georgia State is a team that would be near the top of our league. Beating them would have gone a long way for this team."

Things started well for the Gamecocks, as juniors Jonathan Toles and DeAndre Bray both scored in double digits in the first half and ended the night with career highs in points.

Toles had 18 in the first half, but the Panthers appeared determined to make someone else beat them in the second half, and they limited Toles to only five points after the break.

"I came out aggressive, and they made it available for me to get to the hole," Toles said. "But then they made adjustments and made me kick it to my teammates."

Bray, typically a distributor for the Gamecocks, connected on his first five shots of the night, all from three-point range and ended with 15 points.

"It was still pass-first tonight," Bray said. "But I know I can make that shot, it was me receiving the ball in a good spot and making the shot."

The Gamecocks rolled to a 50-40 halftime lead and extended that early in the second half, but Georgia State found an answer. The Panthers scored on seven consecutive possessions to erase the Gamecocks' lead less than nine minutes into the second half.

"We didn't play defense in the second half," Bray said. "We'd miss our shot, not rebound, not get back, and they'd score in transition."

After struggling in the first half, Georgia State shot 14-for-24 from the floor, 4-for-8 from the three-point line and 13-for-15 from the free throw line in the second half.

Georgia State had a 39-25 advantage at the half, and that was a telling difference down the stretch, even after center Deven Dickerson fouled out. The Panthers scored 23 second-chance points, while the Gamecocks managed only three.

"They kept getting offensive rebounds and fouled us so I guess we need to work back on that," Toles said. "We had been doing a little better, but they beat us up pretty good on the boards and that killed us."

The physical game saw three separate players lay on the court for over a minute after hard fouls. Amadou Mbodji and Zack Winston both crashed into the basket support for the Gamecocks, but were able to walk off the court.

Despite the difficult nature of the loss, Toles was able to maintain a positive outlook.

"The future's looking good," he said. "We're feeling better about ourselves, playing better, our chemistry's getting better. We've had some ups and downs, but these past three or four games show what we can do."

Tennessee State's Kendra Appling drops 50 on Gamecocks in 91-77 win

By Jared Gravette
Assistant Sports Editor

The Jacksonville State women's basketball team came into Saturday night's tilt against Tennessee State looking to lock up a spot in the Ohio Valley Conference tournament, but Kendra Appling wouldn't have any part of it.

Despite the brave face she put on, coach Albert Einstein was famously quoted as saying that the definition of insanity is doing the same thing over and over again and expecting different results.

That's what makes the Kelvin Sampson situation so mind-boggling to me. Why are people so surprised that this is happening?

I was ecstatic when I found out Sampson was leaving Oklahoma, but equally perplexed that a renowned school like Indiana would take a chance on him.

Taking a chance isn't really the right way to describe what Indiana did. It was about the equivalent of hitting 20 in blackjack. Sure if you get lucky, you'll be unbeatable.

But nine times out of ten, you're going to bust. And that's exactly what happened to Indiana.

They hired a man who was proven to be trouble. Everyone knew his recruiting tactics were shady at best (he had already been nailed for making over 500 illegal recruiting calls at Oklahoma), and his graduation rates were hideous.

These things stand in direct contrast to the image the Indiana program held for years.

Say what you will about Bobby Knight, but he always ran a clean program. He always made a point of graduating players. And you never heard about troubles in the Indiana program off the court.

By contrast, Sampson is a renowned recruiter known for his high-protein approach to talent. He's been quoted as saying that the Kelving Sampson situation is the equivalent of hitting 20 in blackjack. She if you get lucky.

The Jacksonville State women’s basketball team came in to Saturday night’s tilt against Tennessee State looking to lock up a spot in the Ohio Valley Conference tournament, but Kendra Appling wouldn’t have any part of it.

Appling dropped 50 points on the Gamecocks (11-16, 8-10 OVC) in the Tigers 91-77 victory at the Gentry Center.

Appling’s 50 is the highest point total registered by any opposing player since the Gamecocks joined the OVC.

“We just didn’t play well defensively,” JSU coach Becky Geyer said. “Gosh, we allowed them to get a lot of really easy shots.”

The game was close throughout the first half, but the Gamecocks were still not on top of their game. They went into the locker room down by just one, but things got worse in a hurry.

“Even though it was just a one-point game at half, we just didn’t play well,” Geyer said. “If one person isn’t in help-side defense, where they need to be, it’s going to throw everything off. That’s just the way it goes.”

The Gamecocks took the lead on their first offensive possession of the second half, but TSU responded immediately going on a 37-9 run in just under 11 minutes to go up by 27.

Appling was the catalyst for the Tigers, scoring 24 points in the first half and 26 in the second.

She matched her career high with 30 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to record her seventh

Career double-double.

Freshman Cierra Duhart was the only Gamecock starter to score in double figures, as she added 13.

JSU has still yet to clinch a spot in the OVC tournament. However, they can do so with one more win or a Tennessee Tech or Morehead State loss.

“A lot of the factors are going to depend on what happens with the other teams,” Geyer said. “If Murray beats Tech, we’re in. If Morehead loses one game, we’re in. Again, is there a good chance that one of those two scenarios is going to happen? Yes. Are you absolutely sure? No.”

The Gamecocks will finish up the regular season this week with games at Eastern Illinois and Southeast Missouri State. With wins, they could possibly move up the conference standings and score a higher seed in the OVC tournament bracket.

“Definitely if we win one of those games, we are in a much better situation,” Geyer said.

Clutch performances from Kylie Jo Chandler and Ashley Eliasson seal Gamecock wins over Chattanooga

By Jared Gravette
Assistant Sports Editor

One thing that Jacksonville State's Kylie Jo Chandler doesn't lack is confidence.

The freshman from Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, put the JSU softball team (7-5) on her back Wednesday night hitting two game-winning home runs in a double-header against Chattanooga.

"Kylie is a very confident hitter, and that confidence will carry her a long way," JSU coach Jana McGinnis said.

In the first game of the double-header, the Gamecocks clearly looked like the better team in the early going.

After not scoring in the first frame, JSU scored one run in each of the next five innings.

Junior Melissa Dowling appeared to be in line for a complete-game shutout. Down 5-0 with two outs in the top of the seventh, Chattanooga didn't quit. With Tara Tembey on first, Lauren Flores doubled to right center field.

Tembey would score on a wild pitch, and Michelle Fuzzard walked, setting up runners on first and third. Toni Hutchison singled, scoring Tembey and advancing Kristin Holloway, a pinch runner, to second base.

Katie Blevins took care of the rest, blasting a three-run homer to right centerfield.

The Gamecocks were unable to score in the bottom of the seventh and the game went into extra innings.

"You see it in sports all the time when you blow a big lead," McGinnis said. "It's hard for the team that blew the big lead to preserve the win."

"We've told these girls all along that we're never out. Don't ever think we're beat until that last out is made."

In the top of the eighth, the Lady Mocs went ahead after a wild pitch from Dowling, but they could only muster one run.

In the bottom half of the inning, Jackie Jarman bunted Rachel Fleming to third and set the stages for a dramatic finish.

Chandler calmly walked to the plate and crushed a walk-off two-run homer that gave the Gamecocks a 7-6 victory.

"When we went into extra innings, Kylie said, 'You're going to bunt Rachel over, and I'm going to hit her in.' And she did it," McGinnis said.

"My first walk-off," Chandler said. "It felt good. I told Jackie, if she got on, I was setting it up, and I did."

up early in the contest, allowing five earned runs in the first three innings.

To make matters worse, JSU's bats were silenced in the early going by the arm of Kandlce Irwin. Irwin held the Gamecocks to just one hit in the first three innings of play.

But in the bottom of the fourth, JSU fought back, scoring six runs to take the lead at 6-5.

Mary Beth Ledbetter started the inning with a walk, and Kayla Collins reached base by beating out a fielder's choice.

The Gamecocks then turned to Allie Barker who singled up the middle plat- ing JSU's first run of the game.

Collins and Barker both advanced on a wild pitch. Collins was eventually thrown out at home after Whitney Elder hit into a fielder's choice.

With two outs, Courtney Underwood and Jackie Jarman hit back-to-back singles, scoring both Barker and Elder.

With two on, Chandler hit her second home run of the day putting the Game- cocks up for good.

"I kind of knew I needed to get it done," Chandler said. "Everybody steps up in their own time, and I guess today was my time to step up. I try not to go out swinging for the fence, but it ended up just working out tonight."

Chandler finished the night 3-for-7 with two home runs and five runs batted in.

After the first three innings, Eliasson (3-1) settled down and didn't give up another run the rest of the way. She finished the game with five strikeouts.

"I was very proud of Ashley Eliasson. After we took the lead, she didn't give up anymore," McGinnis said.

"Her composure is one trait that is going to carry her a long way. That's a must in the pitchers' circle. When she learns to hit those corners like she did in the last four innings and learns how to make smart pitches, she is going to be a tough pitcher," McGinnis added.

The Gamecocks will travel to Oxford, Mississippi, this weekend to take part in the Ole Miss Red and Blue Classic.

JSU is slated to play five games over a three-day span. Their opponents will include Belmont, Troy, Stephen F. Austin, Louisiana Tech and tournament host Ole Miss.

"How big was Kylie Jo Chandler? A freshman

Gamecock tennis falls to Auburn, Samford

By Jared Bravette
Assistant Sports Editor

The Jacksonville State women's tennis team was swept by Auburn 7-0 last Saturday in a non-conference match at the Yarbrough Tennis Facility.

The Tigers came in ranked 30th in the country fresh off an SEC West title. JSU coach Steve Bailey thinks that playing such stiff competition will help the Lady Gamecocks in the long run.

"It's the first time we've played Auburn in a while," Bailey said. "They're a very strong SEC team. They hit it hard and had some good players."

"I think it's good for us to play that kind of competition. I think it's good for us," Bailey added. "Once we get into our conference, I think it will help us." Auburn won 12 of the 13 sets throughout the day. Babette Lombardo was the only Gamecock to take a set from the Tigers, but she ultimately was defeated by Heather Bybee after winning the first set of the match.

Despite the loss, the members of the JSU tennis squad enjoyed their short stay in Auburn, and Bailey will likely try to schedule another match against the Tigers next year.

"The girls enjoyed it, so we are going to try to get them back on the schedule next year and make it kind of a yearly event," Bailey said.

The women's squad dropped another non-conference match to Samford later in the week.

The men's tennis team also lost to Samford in a heartbreaker. The Gamecocks earned the doubles point, but the Bulldogs held their own in the singles portion of the match defeating JSU 4-3.

"We were kind of disappointed because we got the doubles point and went ahead 1-0. Then we were up 2-1, and Samford came back. We had two three-setters, and we had a chance to win both matches. We ended up losing them both in the third set." It's disappointing. You're disappointed when you lose, but Samford is a big rival. So, we were kind of disappointed after the match. We thought we should have won that one. We kind of let it slip away," Bailey added.

The two Gamecocks to win singles matches on Tuesday were Joey Uskenholz and Andres Amores, who both won in straight sets.

Pitching: Gets a boost from Justin King

"There's no doubt about his arm, there's no doubt about his breaking ball. He's just got to continue putting those outings back to back and good things will happen whether he is a starter or in the bullpen," Todd Cunningham said.

Cunningham got hits in three of his four at bats to boost his average to a season-best .455. The freshman switch-hitter was appearing in only his third game, but did a good job getting on base in front of Whitemore.

Cunningham didn't hit the ball particularly hard, but managed to find his way aboard. Two of his hits were infield singles, and the other was a well-placed line drive opposite way.

Cunningham was a teammate of King when Jacksonville High went to the state championship in 2005.

"It's good to see Justin throwing strikes," Cunningham said. "He had that surgery that led to problems with his control, but it looks like he's throwing good again."

After an Andrew Edge sac fly gave the Gamecocks the lead in the bottom of the first, John David Smelser delivered his first career hit in the second - a two-run triple - that gave King and the bullpen some breathing room.

The patient Gamecocks drew nine walks - eight off Milli- saps starter Tait Hendrix - and scored six of the eight innings they batted.

JSU had extended its lead to 7-1 by the time King left the game. Brian Booth and J.T. Wright pitched the final four innings, and both struck out four and allowed one unearned run. While the unearned runs didn't cost his team this win, Case still was not pleased at the defense his team played.

"We've got to be better defensively," he said. "We were outside a lot, we played a lot of scribbles, and I'm not sure that it's because it's so early in the season."

"I'm not really sure why we're seeing those errors. I think we're a better defensive team than we've shown, and we're going to continue to get better as the season goes along."
