Obama clinches second term with decisive win

Barack Obama won the 2012 presidential election by 2,626,958 popular votes and 97 electoral votes on Tuesday night to become the 17th president in U.S. history to be elected to a second term.

In what some had feared would be a repeat of the 2000 election, over 80,000 reports of voting problems were made throughout the nation, including voting machine malfunctions in Ohio and power outages in the Northeast.

Obama won over the swing states of Ohio, Wisconsin, and Virginia, with Florida considered too close to call at the time this article was being written.

In his victory speech Tuesday night, Obama told his supporters, "You, the American people, reminded us that while our road has been hard, while our journey has been long, we have picked ourselves up, we have fought our way back, and we know in our hearts that for the United States of America, the best is yet to come."

According to exit polls, Americans who decided at the last minute who they would cast their vote for chose Obama over a slight margin, partially because of the president's response to Hurricane Sandy.

Obama received the most support from African Americans, Hispanics and the Millennial Generation, while Romney was favored by seniors and Caucasians. No previous presidential candidate with such a high percentage of the white vote failed to win the election.

"I so wish that I had been able to fulfill your hopes to lead the country in a different direction, but the nation chose another leader," Mitt Romney told his

Alpha Omicron Omega is a co-ed professional education fraternity that was founded at Jacksonville

State University over the summer. This fraternity was founded by JSU student Reginald Swanson, and there are currently pledges completing the new member process in the hopes of becoming a brother of the fraternity.

As a part of this process, the potential members have to raise a set amount of funds as a collective group. In order to do so, the current pledge class decided to showcase the talents of one of their own.

Tyler Schultz was the man for the job. He has taken ballroom dancing lessons himself for over the past seven years. He has also taught ballroom dancing lessons for four years. Schultz is also the president of the pledge class that is currently seeking membership. "I thought it was an awesome idea when it was brought up, even if it was something I just sort of came up with. No other organization on campus has done anything similar that I know of, and it seems like it's worked for us," said Schultz about what he thought when the group first had the idea.

The event was held at the Wesley Foundation on November 6, 2012. It was separated into three different sessions, with a $1 admission price for each session. During the first ses-

SGA Senate meeting covers many topics and events to be held at JSU

Taylor Brown
Staff Writer

The Theron Montgomery Building was full of discussion on Monday as the Student Government Association held its weekly SGA Senate meeting in the TMB auditorium. The meeting began as always with everyone reciting the Pledge of Allegiance.

Next, the senate addressed the audience about the SGA Blood Drive being done in conjunction with the American Red Cross, with the event taking place on Nov. 7-8, from 10:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. each day. The stated goal for each day of the event is 42 pints of blood.

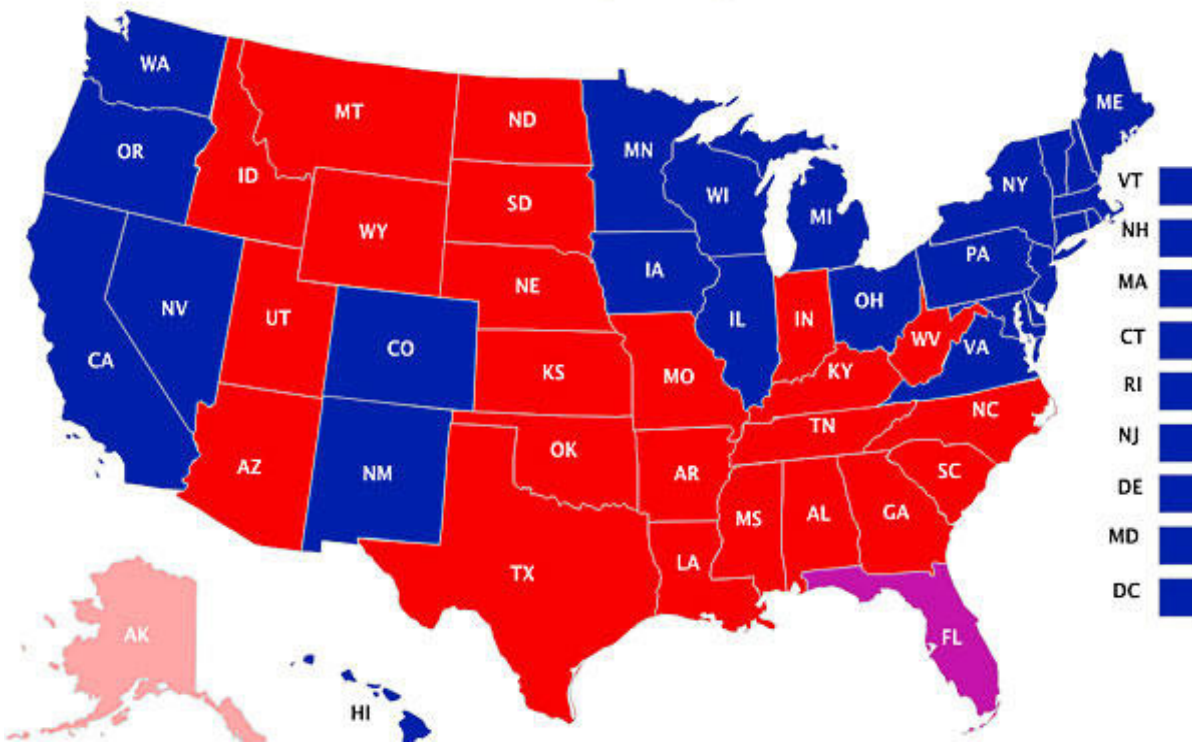

Afterwards Senator Brown announced a roll call for all members present. Following the roll call, Senator Colson gave her Chaplain Report by delivering a quote from President Barack Obama: "Change will not come if we wait for some other person or some other time. We are the ones we've been waiting for. We are the change that we seek."

A reading of the minutes followed, and was subsequently approved. SGA Director of Publicity Amanda Cave reminded everyone to attend JSU's Rock the Vote event taking place in the TMB food court from 10:00 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. on Tuesday, the day of the Presidential Election.

The officer reports began with SGA Chief Justice Crystal Hardy announcing the results of the traffic court with 12 people on docket, 3 not guilty and 9 guilty. Hardy also mentioned that commuters who have one class on register at JSU will be able to trade their current parking pass for one that allows them to park closer to the building where their class takes place. She went on to explain the differences between a temporary pass and a visitor's pass. Hardy concluded her report with the announcement that the special parking passes given out to Resident and supporters after results were announced. “So Ann and I join with you to earnestly pray for him and for this great nation.” He also stated that, “The nation, as you know, is at a critical point. At a time like this we can’t risk partisan bickering and political posturing. Our leaders have to reach across the aisle to do the people’s work, and we citizens also have to rise to occasion.”

The incumbent president received votes from 90% of Democrats and almost the same percentage of liberals. He was also popular with female voters, including two-thirds of unmarried women, and more than six in 10 Americans who say that they never attend religious services. Romney was favored by married women, white men, and more than 90% of Republicans and conservatives. He also received the votes of more than six in 10 Americans who do attend religious services.

According to USA Today, eight in 10 Americans who think that “government should do more to solve problems” cast their votes for Obama, while a nearly equal amount who think that “the government is doing too many things” cast their votes for Romney.

“I want to thank every American who participated in this election, whether you voted for the very first time or waited in line for a very long time.

By the way, we need to fix that,” Obama told the nation. “Whether you pounded the pavement or picked up the phone, whether you held an Obama sign or a Romney sign, you made your voice heard and you made a difference.”

second session, students were taught three rhythm dances. These are the rumba, the chacha, and swing. The third session was a relaxed hour where the guests could mingle, buy food and drinks, and even show off their new found dancing skills. The group also sold $1 chances to win a private dancing lesson to be scheduled with Schultz at a later date. After much competition, Trent Ford took home the prize.

The event was an overall success. Not only did the group come closer to meeting their financial obligations, but they also hosted an event that appealed to those in attendance. Although some were skeptical at first, they left having learned much more than they came knowing. Some came as couples, perhaps even trying to learn for an upcoming wedding. Some singles came in the hopes of winning the attention of someone who shared similar interests as them. Regardless of their relationship status or reason for attending, everyone in attendance met and danced with new people, while also improving their dancing skills.

It went so well that Alpha Omicron Omega has hopes of hosting a similar event in the future.

p.m., at the TMB auditorium. Vice President of Student Activities Alex Rainwater helped drum up support for JSU athletes by encouraging everyone to attend the Thursday football pep rally as well as the basketball pep rally on Nov. 13 at 8:00 p.m.

SGA President Jason Sumner expressed his desire for everyone to get out and vote in the election: “It’s a big deal. Practice your right to democracy, remember those who sacrificed their lives for you to have that right and preserve it. Choosing the leadership of our country is very important.” He also encouraged everyone to attend the SGA tailgate on Saturday, and ended his report by announcing the JSU in Lights being held at JSU President Meehan’s house, which will help donate toys to the needy.

Vice President of Student Senate Jade Wagner reminded the senate to sign up for the blood drive, and discussed the need for senate leaders to attend basketball games.

The senate meeting wrapped up with various groups on campus detailing their events and concerns, and everyone was subsequently dismissed.

Briefly: Colorado, Washington both in joint agreement about marijuana

Maurice Winsell
Associate Editor

Marijuana reformists move one step closer in the move to decriminalize marijuana.

Colorado and Washington citizens voted and passed initiatives to legalize marijuana for recreational use. While it was a victory for many pro-marijuana supporters, the passing of Amendment 64 in Colorado and the initiatives in Washington are just the first strike against the government’s Controlled Substance Act that labels marijuana as an illegal drug.

Colorado’s new amendment will allow their citizens over the age of 21 to possess an ounce amount of marijuana and allow them to grow six plants at a time in a private setting.

However, public smoking of the herb is still outlawed.

Rock the Vote began on Oct. 5, 2012 in the Theron Montgomery Building. Rock the Vote was held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. by the Student Government Association. There was a table set up on the second floor of the TMB for students to receive information on voting. Members from the SGA were present to inform students on the importance of voting.

Vice President of Student Senate Jade Wagner, Director of Publicity Amanda Cave, and Chief Justice Krystal Hardy informed students about voting. There were balloons and signs decorating the table reminding students to vote.

“We’re here to tell students, ‘hey, don’t forget to vote’. We have balloons and signs to remind everyone to go out and vote,” said Jade Wagner.

As stated on Rock the Vote’s website, Rock the Vote is an organization that has become a trusted source of information for young people about registering to vote and casting a ballot. Rock the Vote uses music, popular culture, new technologies and grassroots organizing to motivate and mobilize young people in the United States to participate in every election, with the goal of seizing the power of the youth vote to create political and social change.

Rock the Vote is dedicated to building the political power of young people by engaging them in the electoral process, urging politicians to pay attention to issues that matter to young voters, and protecting their fundamental right to vote. Their mission is to engage and build political power for young people in our country.

“We want each student not to just have their voice heard but to have their opinion heard,” said Hardy. “Which President we pick really plays a major role in our education as far as the future of Pell grants and higher education. We want students to voice their opinions so that everyone today and tomorrow will have a way to get to college and be able to afford it.”

The SGA had tables set up before the registration deadline to get students registered to vote. If the student registered with the SGA, the organization mailed off the form for them.

“We’re stressing everyone’s voice and everyone’s right to be heard. Your vote is making a difference either way you vote,” said Wagner. “We want to make sure everyone is aware and everyone does their part,” stated Jade Wagner.

Criminal justice students make mark in South Carolina

Randal Wood

Special to The Chanticleer

Several members of Alpha Sigma Omega (ASO), the JSU chapter of Lambda Alpha Epsilon (LAE), the student division of the American Criminal Justice Association (ACJA), recently (Oct. 25 – 27) attended the ACJA/LAE Region V Conference in North Charleston, South Carolina. The officer/member attendees were Lee Mann (President), Joseph Bramblett (Vice-President), Deanna Ruiz (Secretary), Annette Durham, Patrick Smith and Seth Owens. They were accompanied by the ASO faculty advisor, Dr. Randal Wood.

The attendees participated in various competitions, including written exams, firearms, crime scene analysis and physical agility. The students competed at the Upper Division (junior/senior level); Dr. Wood competed at the Professional Division. The group brought home a total of 13 trophies. The individual trophies were: 1st Place Police Management Exam, 2nd Place Juvenile Justice Exam, and 3rd Place Corrections Exam (Seth Owens); 3rd Place Criminal Law Exam and 3rd Place Police Management Exam (Patrick Smith); 1st Place LAE Knowledge Exam (Annette Durham); 1st Place Firearms Competition (Lee Mann); 2nd Place Firearms Competition (Joseph Bramblett); 1st Place Criminal Law Exam and 2nd Place Physical Agility – 36 years & over (Dr. Wood). The team trophies were: 1st Place Firearms (Lee Mann, Joseph Bramblett and Seth Owens) and 3rd Place Crime Scene Analysis (Deanna Ruiz, Annette Durham and Joseph Bramblett). Lee Mann also won the “Top Gun” Trophy for the best score of all of the competitors in the Firearms Competition (Lower, Upper and Professional Divisions).

A fine (and fun) time was had by all.

Crayons for kids currently accepting donations

Ebonee Roston

During Nov. 1st-5th, JSU students participated in taking up donations for the Circle K Crayons for Kids Collection. This event took place in the food court of the TMB from 11:00a.m. - 1:00p.m. Each day, two students were stationed at the table and greeted people with smiles and informed people about the organization.

“We are basically taking up crayons for kids who are in need, and monetary donations,” said Eric Glover, a JSU senior and Circle K member who is very passionate about helping those in need. “I just like to help people, when I have a chance,” he said.

Steven Boyd, also a senior at JSU, gave more information on the project. “This is our third year doing this project,” he said. “Originally this idea was given to us by a Kiwanis member who had done this project with a Key club.”

Circle K Crayons for Kids will still be accepting donations through the end of the semester.

According to Boyd, people who are interested in making donations after Nov. 5th will have to set a date with a Circle K member to drop off donations.

Last year Circle K Crayons for Kids donated up to 120 coloring books, 381 boxes of crayons and $200.

“It was really rewarding to be able to donate. The whole campus is invited to be involved. In fact many organizations have already donated and many others plan to donate,” said Boyd. “CKI’s motto is ‘Live to Serve, Love to Serve’. This project is a great example of this. It’s a great way to impact our community in a way that all college kids can participate in.”

“We will be taking all of our donations to the Children’s Hospital in Birmingham one day in December,” said Glover.

Those who are interested in donating before the end of the semester can contact Circle K’s president, Larissa Kellum. Her email address is lkellum@jsu.edu or call her at (256)-419-4008.

WLJS’ Ed Moore III announces the end of ‘Late Night With Ed Moore III’, last episode to air Nov. 30th “We have done the work that God has called us to do. A new chapter is on the way,” says Moore.

Jacksonville, Alabama, Calhoun County 04 Nov. 2012

WLJS’ Ed Moore III announced to the world Friday night that after three successful seasons, his powerhouse weekly talk show, ‘Late Nite With Ed Moore III’ would air its last episode on November 30th.

“I have grown so much from hosting this show,” says Moore during Friday’s broadcast. “I would not take a single second of it back. Not for anything.”

Moore says that though the decision was hard, just like all decisions in media, none come easy. “So much work has been done on this show,” he says. “Over 125 people have walked through the halls of WLJS studios here in Jacksonville, Alabama to be a part of this platform that has been blessed to us.”

Moore told the program’s listening audience that although the show is ending, he will still maintain his position as News & Media Director for WLJS and lead anchor for WLJS News At Five. “I will be leaving the late night scene to make the full transition into prime-time news in order to perform my new position to the best of my capabilities.”

During his statement to the world, Moore briefly reminisced on his starting days at the Alabama station, speaking on how all he wanted to do was be on the radio.

“I can remember the first time I walked into the office of my then boss, Billy Ramsey, program director of WLJS, in January of 2011. I told him I wanted to be on the radio. He then gave me my first shot at being on the air.”

Moore realizes that over the next couple of weeks, there will be much speculation as to why he is choosing to end the show. He makes it clear the show is not ending on a negative note.

“It has been such a pleasure and an utmost honor to have been able to host this show. It gave my first big break. It has allowed me to meet, interact and work with hundreds of great people. Many of these people, just under two years ago, I never even knew existed. These same people have now become some of the most important people in my life.”

The 20-year-old broadcaster says that despite the end of its course, the show will continue to do what it set out to do until the very end.

“For the next four weeks, until November 30th, we will continue to work as hard as we have since our first night to leave you with nothing but our best.”

Moore has not yet released plans for the final episode.

Until November 30th, ‘Late Nite With Ed Moore III’ will continue to air live every Friday night at 11 P.M. Central Time. Northeast Alabama listeners may tune into 91.9 FM. The show is also available worldwide on-line by logging onto www.latenitewithedmooreiii.weebly.com.

AKA pink tea brings awareness to Women At Risk

Sierra Garner
Senior Staff Writer

On Thursday, Nov. 1st, the ladies of the Lambda Pi chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority hosted their 3rd annual pink tea.

The annual Pink Teas focus on the sorority initiatives of getting campus awareness in health initiative, global poverty, and social justice, among other things. The main focus for this year’s tea was

W.A.R. International, Women at Risk. The organization focuses on awareness of the abduction of women and children across the world, including the United States, and being sold into trafficking.

The key speaker for this event was Teacher Service Department Secretary Kay Coger. She spoke as an ambassador for W.A.R. International, and was there to simply bring awareness to this growing epidemic of human trafficking.

According to Coger, “It’s real. It’s not just a made up Hollywood story”. She stated that she hadn’t heard of W.A.R. until last year at a church function. After listening to stories, she felt this was calling and now wants to be a voice. She, along side the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, want to get the awareness out in the local communities.

At the event were several different booths bringing up different conversations of awareness, and alongside these booths were tables covered in items as simple as threat bracelets, exotic coffees from Rwanda, dresses and scarves, and pearls from Thailand. The jewelry and clothes there were made by women and children who were saved by the foundation’s efforts. 100 percent of money raised went straight to W.A.R.

Disney buys Lucasfilm, announces new Star Wars movie

Madison Rhoads
Staff Writer

The phrase “A long time ago, in a galaxy far, far away...” is one that most people have heard before. If not, it is possible that they have been hiding under a rock for the past 30 years that the Star Wars Saga has been in existence.

News was released by The Walt Disney Company on October 30th that they would be purchasing Lucasfilm, which includes the rights to the beloved series and cult phenomenon, for over $4 billion.

Disney plans to release their first attempt at a Star Wars film in 2015, and then every two to three years after that. Disney is also in talks of maybe building a Star Wars theme park or making a Star Wars inspired section to one of the pre-existing parks.

Perhaps no other series has such a great following like Star Wars does. Their fans range from those who saw the first film when it first came to theaters to those who aren't old enough to see the films, but own a light saber in every color.

It's estimated that the franchise has had a revenue of over $27 million from the various toys, books, and other related products.

This is definitely a smart venture on Disney's part. However, one thing is certain. If Disney plans on making any money off of their Star Wars venture, they need to keep these die-hard fans happy.

Many fans of the series have mixed feelings about the purchase already. Some feel as if instead of helping to improve the series to its former greatness, Disney will simply add Hans Solo to its ever-growing list of heroes and make Princess Leia into just another Disney Princess. George Lucas, the creator of Star Wars and the previous owner of Lucasfilm, has decided to let go of his responsibilities and simply serve as a creative consultant for the films. Some fans are thankful that Lucas has decided to step away from the films, and blame him for the lack of success of the most recent film.

Others would go on the record of saying that maybe the purchase won't exactly be the death of Star Wars and Lucasfilm. Disney has taken over several other companies over the past few years, like Pixar and Marvel. The Pixar films that Disney has made have been well-received by audiences since the purchase.

The single Marvel film that Disney has made, The Avengers, was one of the most anticipated films this year. Many Marvel fans are very hopeful for the direction that Disney plans on taking with the comic book characters.

Disney also has a successful ride themed off of the Star Wars Series. It's possible that Disney can draw from these successful ventures and help create Star Wars films that will be of high quality and impress the already existing fans so that they continue to go to the box office. Maybe the selling of Lucasfilm to Disney will even help a new generation discover the Force.

Doctor Who strikes chord with U.S. audience

UWIRE

Running in one form or another on the BBC for nearly 50 years, “Doctor Who” has recently exploded in popularity, growing from an obscure British sci-fi to one with a significant American audience. It's not hard to see why the show has caught on. “Doctor Who” is a particularly addictive mix of comedy, adventure and horror with separate threads held together by its endlessly compelling main character. Armed only with his wits, a blue police box time machine, and a succession of enthusiastic young women, The Doctor is an anarchic, mercurial force for good in a hostile universe, a symbol that brains and heart can triumph over repression and power.

What truly gives the show longevity, however, is a clever storytelling trick. The Doctor's alien biology, it seems, gives him the ability to regenerate into a new form (and more importantly, a new actor) when he's gravely wounded or killed. With a new face often comes a new mood; one era of the show played at gothic horror, while others have leaned more on science fiction trappings. Most recently, the prevailing mood of the show has been one of conspiracy and deceit, with unseen enemies playing mind games with the Doctor for the fate of worlds.

This variability is the secret strength of “Doctor Who,” because not only is it free from relying on any one actor for too long, it is possible for the show to switch direction quickly and easily. All you really need to tell a “Doctor Who”

story is The Doctor himself, and many episodes run on the simple conceit of dropping The Doctor into a random story and watching what happens. The result is essentially an anthology show with a basically consistent set of main characters.

The Doctor's companions, usually women and often British, are also an integral part of the mix. While the show takes the occasional turn into damsels-in-distress style sexism, for the most part it offers refreshingly un-sexualized and capable female characters. The relationship between The Doctor and his various companions is seldom anything but platonic, and one of the strongest elements of “Doctor Who” is the affection between the characters. Beneath the clever banter, alien threats and endless running through corridors lurks a show that is deeply concerned with morality and family. “Doctor Who” at its best spends a lot of time examining ethical questions and exploring the deep bonds of friendship that can grow between very different people.

It would be easy for these heavier themes to weigh down the show, but the writers keep the tone light. “Doctor Who” thrives on a snappy format of thrills, chills and laugh-out-loud silliness. Between the mixture of sci-fi farce and moral themes, “Doctor Who” stands out as deeply rewarding and compelling television.

No Doubt pull new music video over racial complaints

Andrew Holderfield
A&E Editor

No Doubt have pulled their music video for the new single "Looking Hot," following complaints about the content from Native American groups.

The video, which debuted via MTV and YouTube on Monday, features the band in a heavily stylized Native American setting.

Upon airing, No Doubt reportedly received a wealth of emails from fans and Native American groups offended at the video's plot and portrayal of the band as Native Americans.

The band posted a blog entry explaining their decision to remove the video, saying:

"Our new video was never to offend, hurt or trivialize Native American people, their culture or their history. As a multi-racial band our foundation is built upon both diversity and consideration for other cultures. This is of great concern to us and we are removing the video immediately. We sincerely apologize to the Native American community and anyone else offended by this video. Being hurtful to anyone is simply not who we are."

The band plans on filming a completely new video for the single.

"Looking Hot" appears on the band's latest album, this year's Push and Shove.

Change (in the House of Representatives)

Zach Tyler
Staff Writer

First things first, I'd like to make a correction to last week's column: I incorrectly stated that Tuscaloosa and the University of Alabama were a part of the third congressional district of Alabama. They're actually a part of the seventh district, represented by Congresswoman Terri Sewell.

In my previous column, I responded to Rep. Rogers' comments on the direction our nation's Congress is headed depending on who wins the presidential election. I'd like to revisit that topic in light of the fact that Obama's re-election is guaranteed by the convoluted math equation that is the Electoral College.

At least it's finally over. Several of the most important swing states were hotly contested, but Obama won a clear majority of the 270 electoral votes needed to secure re-election.

He didn't come by it easily—for example, the difference of Romney or Obama winning Florida's electoral votes was less than 1%; that's the difference of a few thousand votes out of the seven million people who voted in that state. The situation was virtually the same in Ohio.

So, half of the Americans who voted will be stuck with a president they didn't want for the next four years. Normally I'd say tough luck—that's how politics work.

There's an ebb and flow to who holds power in our democracy. Political regimes rise while one party holds sway. Often-times, they fall when that party becomes too radical, or suffers from infighting and division.

I think that's what we're seeing happen with the Republican Party.

You can't please everyone, and there are some really picky factions that have arisen within the GOP—like the Tea Party Republicans, for instance.

How can the Republican Party appease them while also appealing to demographics (like Latino-Americans and women) that are increasingly vital to gaining political power in our modern democracy?

I don't think it's possible, and this election proves that. Romney's strategy of flip-flopping around in an attempt to appeal to several vastly different groups of people didn't work. Where does that leave the GOP?

In my opinion, there are two possible paths the Republican Party could take: either they double down on dogma and conservatism, or they resort to the one thing they haven't reacted well to—change.

What many members of the GOP refer to as the 'traditional' American—white, Protestant and male—is quickly becoming a minority. It's time for conservative politicians to stop pandering to that demographic and look across the aisle at people of a different color, belief system and gender.

There's a divide in our country right now, running down the middle—either you're Republican or Democrat, conservative or liberal, true believer or... something else. I'd like to see that gap get a lot smaller with the end of this election, but the opposite could be true if the Republican Party doesn't change to fit the times.

Letter to the Editor: Feedback on the election

My opinion of the election is that I'm genuinely upset. Gas prices are going to skyrocket because Obama doesn't want to drill in Alaska. I am concerned for not only myself but for my children because Michelle Obama's new nutrition plan is making kids not wanting to eat in cafeterias, resulting in the loss of jobs of the lunch room ladies. I have experienced this first hand with a family member. I will not go into the national debt taken in under Obama's watch. ObamaCare is a joke because who is this helping? I mean really? I am honestly 100% scared for my future and my future family's well-being because I think Obama was voted for for the wrong reasons.

Iran not as big of an immediate threat to U.S. as Pakistan

Kayvon Ghoreshi
The Daily Campus, U. Connecticut via UWIRE

If the foreign policy debate a few weeks ago proved anything, it is that Romney and Obama have fairly similar policies and both regard a nuclear Iran as the biggest threat to America and the rest of the world. While there is no denying the tension between Israel and Iran, the scale of the threat has been somewhat exaggerated and has caused people to ignore other, potentially larger threats such as Pakistan.

The first and foremost misconception is this idea that Iran is building a nuclear missile and will launch it on Israel upon completion. There are two major discrepancies with this idea. The first is that Iran most likely desires nuclear weapons for the same reason every other country aims to have them. It gives the country leverage on an international stage where everyone else also has nuclear weapons. The second point to consider is that while Ahmadinejad and the Iranian government aren't the most reasonable voices in the international political sphere, they aren't fanatics. Over the past decades, Iran has had a self preservationist streak. They are more than aware that a preemptive nuclear strike would be disastrous for the rest of the world and for their own country considering how many nations would oppose it.

From a foreign policy perspective I would consider Pakistan an equal if not greater threat. Unlike Iran which has yet to develop a nuclear weapon, Pakistan currently has over 100 and is free to produce more. Pakistan's history hasn't been spotless. They came very close to nuclear conflict with India a little over a decade ago. The 2008 Mumbai terrorist attacks had links to Pakistani intelligence. Pakistan has also been involved in giving nuclear technology to other countries and potentially having terrorist ties within its own government. Questions have also been raised when terrorist groups set up shop in Pakistan and most notably Osama bin Laden who resided surprisingly close to a Pakistani military base.

The threat however doesn't necessarily come directly from Pakistan. I believe they also realize the stakes of a nuclear strike in today's age. However, the main threat falls in terrorist groups getting their hands on nuclear weapons or Pakistan's government providing technology to other countries or groups as they have done in the past. These groups are much more fanatical and likely don't see the rippling consequences of nuclear warfare, and are an even bigger threat if they have links in the Pakistani government.

However, there is a reason that the issue of Pakistan is often brushed over. We tend to consider them as an ally. The United States sends foreign aid to Pakistan, their military has supported us on occasion and they have leaders that the United States associates with. With these factors we tend to turn a blind eye when Pakistan does something shady, or something happens that isn't in our best interest.

There is also a lingering sense of hypocrisy here. As Israel is allowed to stockpile its nuclear weapons, Iran is called into question for simply following what has been natural protocol for any country. The underlying purpose of the nuclear arms race is that countries have nuclear weapons so as to protect themselves from other countries with the same capabilities. In the same way, no one brings a knife to a gun fight, countries can't bring a traditional military to a table of nukes.

This isn't to say Iran isn't a priority in foreign affairs. There is a chance that Iran could provide nuclear technology to terrorist groups as well. The difference is that Iran has yet to reach the stage where it can do that, whereas Pakistan has been in that situation for years now. This in no way warrants Iran as the largest international threat or justifies the drums of war and military action that some politicians have been beating as of late. Frankly you need to ask yourself which would currently pose a bigger threat: Iran acquiring a single nuclear weapon while being heavily sanctioned and opposed by the international community; or a country that already has over 100 nuclear weapons, has acted as a base for extremist groups and has been called into question multiple times for having intelligence tied to terrorist groups

Baseball announces schedule

Jacksonville State University head coach Jim Case announced the 2013 baseball schedule on Thursday, which includes home games against in-state rivals Auburn, South Alabama, Samford, Troy and UAB.

"We feel like this is a very exciting and challenging schedule for our team," said Case. "Obviously, we are excited to have Auburn come back to Jacksonville and also happy to renew our series with South Alabama."

The 56-game schedule features 30 Ohio Valley Conference games and home-and-home matchups against in-state rivals Auburn, Samford, Troy, UAB, Alabama State and South Alabama. The Gamecocks, who will host Auburn on May 7, will also travel to Tuscaloosa to face the University of Alabama on March 20.

The Gamecocks open the season Feb. 15-17 with a three-game series at Kennesaw State, before returning to Rudy Abbott Field for the home-opener on Tuesday, Feb. 19, against UAB.

Jax State will also host Southern Illinois and South Alabama, before traveling to face the University of North Florida for a three-game series March 1-3.

The Gamecocks open Ohio Valley Conference play on the road at UT Martin on March 8-9, and will host SIU-Edwardsville for their conference home-opener March 15-17.

JSU plays OVC home series against SIU-Edwardsville, Eastern Illinois, Tennessee Tech, Belmont and Morehead State, while the Gamecocks will travel to OVC foes UT Martin, Austin Peay, Murray State, Southeast Missouri and Eastern Kentucky.

"We know the OVC schedule will be a tough one again this year, especially with the addition of Belmont," added Case. "Belmont is a very tough team and they won the Atlantic Sun last year to advance to the NCAA Regionals."

The 2013 Gamecocks will have 13 newcomers and 19 returning players off a team that advanced to the OVC Tournament for the ninth-straight year and has appeared in the OVC Championship Game in seven of the nine years since joining the league in 2004

Seniors shine, Cocks fall to UT- Martin

The Gamecocks outscored UT-Martin in each of the final three quarters, but it wasn't enough to overcome a 21 point first quarter deficit. UTM's QB Derek Carr threw for seven touchdowns as the Skyhawks kept their hopes of an OVC title alive and ended JSU's.

Carr threw two quick touchdowns to receiver Quentin Sims that game UTM a 14-0 lead only halfway through the first. Gamecocks' senior QB Marques Ivory with senior receiver Alan Bonner, in what turned into a statistical good day for the pair, struck quick with a 66 yard TD pass to put JSU on the scoreboard.

UT- Martin and QB Carr weren't phased and tossed two more touchdown passes, each over 30 yards, before the first quarter expired. The Gamecocks had no answer.

Trailing 28-7 entering the second quarter it would have been easy for JSU to throw in the towel and accept they were going to fall like they did earlier in the season to ECU when they lost by 30 points. But Jax State fought back and began a slow comeback.

Ivory hit senior receiver Trey Smith for a touchdown on the ensuing drive to keep the game in hand, but UTM quickly scored soon after extending their lead to 35-14 midway through the second. After the Gamecock defense finally stopped UTM in a key situation late in the second JSU got the ball back and drove 80 yards just before halftime to score with under a minute remaining when Ivory found Bonner for the second time.

Gabriel Chambers, who returned to action Saturday after an injury gave the Gamecocks great field position to start the second half with a 51 yard kick return. Again, Ivory connected with Bonner in just four plays to make it 28-35 and bring the Gamecocks back into the game.

UTM was forced to punt following and downed the ball at JSU's seven. The Gamecocks began marching down the field mostly by DaMarcus James' ground game. Finally Ivory went deep for 35 yards for a touchdown to none other than Bonner. Griffin Thomas' PAT was good and the Gamecocks had rallied back to tie the game at 35.

The Skyhawks jumped back on top before the third quarter came to an end, 42-35. Early in the fourth history was made with IVORY hit Alan Bonner again for a passing touchdown, the fifth for the pair on the day. However, Griffin Thomas missed the PAT and the game stood at 42-41.

After Carr threw his seventh TD pass, the Gamecocks got the ball back with one final chance to try to score and tie the game trailing by eight. Ivory hit Kevyn Cooper to start the drive, but the combination of James and Washuan Ealey rushing attack carried the Gamecocks to scoring position once across midfield.

Ivory, Bonner rewrite JSU records

Daniel Porter
Sports Editor

Last Saturday in Martin, TN the Gamecocks fell to UT- Martin, but seniors Marques Ivory and Alan Bonner had career days. The two connected for five touchdown passes setting school records.

The 323 passing yards Ivory accumulated ties for fourth on the all-time school single game list tying Ryan Perrilloux's mark against Murray State in 2009. The six touchdowns Ivory passed for broke the school record which belonged to Montressa Kirby, who had five in one game in 1997. Behind Kirby, there have been four, four TD games, Perrilloux was responsible for three of those four.

Alan Bonner pulled in ten receptions which tied for second on the school's single game record list. Former receiver Joey

Hamilton holds the record with 11 catches in a game in 1999. The 235 yards Bonner had receiving places him second for a single game performance, previously Bonner was on the list at third, now fourth, with 205 yards against ECU last year. Bonner shattered the record for touchdown catches in a single game with Joey Hamilton formerly holding the record with three in 1999. Hamilton's was the only one over two TD catches, Bonner now sits atop with five, a record sure to stand for a while.

Ivory now has 128 completions in 2012 giving him 360 for his career placing him fifth on Jacksonville State's all-time list for QBs. He's only seven completions behind fourth place. The senior QB entered 2012 with 25 career TD passes, with his 15 so far this season Ivory now has 40 which is climbing on the list of career touchdown passes for JSU.

Bonner now has 19 touchdown catches in his career at JSU which is not far from the record.

The duo, along with other seniors will play their final home game at Burgess-Snow Field this Saturday. The 2012 senior class is currently the third most winningest class in school history with a 29-14 record, and a win against Austin Peay could notch a 30th win.

Gamecocks sweep preseason exhibitions

Daniel Porter
Sports Editor

The Gamecock Men's Basketball team took their first action of the season last Thursday night in an exhibition game against NAIA William Carey.

Jacksonville State won the tip and almost everything afterwards. Darion Rackley, who shined as a freshman last season, kick started what would turn into a hot shooting night for JSU. Rackley opened 3-3 shooting, including 2-2 from three point, contributing eight early points. Junior Brian Williams, the leading scorer from last season, soon came into a groove of his own from behind the arc and JSU took a double digit points lead after Williams hit a three with 12:00 remaining in the first half, 18-6.

Coach James Green's team climbed out to a 27-9 lead under ten minutes remaining in the half and hit the locker room with a comfortable 22 point half-time lead, 42-20.

Jacksonville State came out of the half with the same intensity and built a 60-30 lead with 13:10 remaining before the team slowed the pace.

Play seemed a little sloppy for JSU in the late stages as William Carey fought back to under a 20 point margin, but the Gamecocks were adjusting to their new team and testing what did or didn't work while they had a nice lead in an exhibition game.

The final score saw Jax State on top 75-58. JSU played a solid game for the first real action against other opponents. Rackley led the way scoring with 25 followed by Williams with 19. With the way these two can shoot it will probably become a theme that one of these guys will be a top scorer.

Senior Ronnie Boggs will have a larger role this year and had a solid game with five points, three assists, and two steals. Along with his six points, returner Nick Cook, added two steals, and three blocks. Tarvin Gaines added eight points as he prepares for his final season.

True freshman Alex Anderson out of Memphis, TN was credited four assists and a steal in his 16 minutes of action.

The Gamecocks shot 42% from the floor, including 10-26 (38.5%) from three point range. The team made 68% of their free throws.

On Monday night the Gamecocks finished their exhibition play with a 72-56 win over West Georgia. Jacksonville State opens the regular season tomorrow night, Friday Nov. 9, against Reinhardt in Pete Mathews Coliseum.

Volleyball wins final home match of season

JACKSONVILLE – The Jacksonville State Volleyball team concluded their 2012 home schedule with a 3-1 (25-18, 15-25, 26-24, 25-15) victory to complete the season sweep over Tennessee Tech.

Nicole Merget registered nine of her 16 kills in the first set to help the Gamecocks improve to 13-16 overall and 7-8 in Ohio Valley Conference play. Tech falls to 3-24 overall and 1-14 in conference play.

JSU held TTU to a .098 hitting percentage in the first set while hitting .244 on the offensive end. Merget's nine kills on a .750 hitting percentage led the way for the Gamecocks in the 25-18 opening set win. The Golden Eagles turned things around in the second set, hitting .368 while holding the Gamecocks to a .073 hitting percentage to claim the 25-15 victory.

Abbey Heredia recorded three straight aces in the third set to help the Gamecocks build an early 10-4 lead. The Golden Eagles would then fight back to tie the match at 16 apiece before eventually taking a 21-20 lead following an attack error from Merget.

Gamecock volleyball beat Tenn Tech 3-1 in finale

The two teams then swapped points until the Golden Eagles found themselves with a 23-22 lead. Seniors Lauren Busing and Jen Meyer then combined for a block to tie the match. Meyer then recorded a solo block to give the Gamecocks a 24-23 lead as JSU held on for the exciting 26-24 finished.

The Gamecocks then went into cruise control in the fourth set, hitting .312 in the game and holding Tech to a .056 hitting percentage during the 25-15 match-clinching victory.

Merget finished the game with a .382 hitting percentage. Meyer added 13 kills while Emily Rutherford finished with nine kills and 18 digs. Kelsey Anderson also recorded 18 digs for the Gamecocks while Kelly Cole added 12 digs. Alina Agamy recorded a double-double with 38 assists and 13 digs.

Women Basketball come on late to top Blue Mount.

JACKSONVILLE – The Jacksonville State women's basketball team overcame a halftime deficit with a 49-point second half effort to surge past Blue Mountain College, 81-67, in an exhibition tune up for the 2012-13 season on Monday evening.

The second half onslaught was aided by a 51 percent shooting half by the Gamecocks and limiting the Toppers of BMC to just 8-24 from the field in the final 20 minutes. BMC, a NAIA program from the state of Mississippi, held a slim, 33-32, edge at the intermission after knocking down 13-of-30 from the field and four of its nine made three-pointers in the first half.

Sophomore Briana Morrow picked right back up where she ended her freshman campaign with a double-double effort. Morrow, who led JSU in scoring last season, poured in 21 points and 14 rebounds in the contest. The member of the Ohio Valley Conference All Newcomer Team last season scored 11 of her 21 points in the second half and pulled down eight second half boards. The Nashville, Tenn.-native was credited with four steals and a block on the night.

Jax State took its first lead of the second half, 37-36, on a Peyton Hisel lay up at the 17:36 mark. The Gamecocks would not relinquish the lead the rest of the way, but had to stave off a few Topper runs. JSU built its margin out to double figures with a 14-3 scoring run to take a 50-39 lead with just over 13 minutes left in the contest. After pushing the lead out to 14 points at 58-44 at the midway point, BMC trimmed the deficit down to four points at 60-56 after a 12-2 scoring spurt.

JSU pushed the lead back out to double figures the rest of the way to secure the exhibition win. JSU took advantage of the post by out-scoring BMC, 48-16 and turned 28 Topper turnovers into 24 points on the other end. The Red and White scored 30 of the 48 inside the paint points in the second half. A benchmark of an Annette Watts squad is winning the edge on the backboards and JSU was a plus-six in rebounding, while dishing out 13 assists and 19 steals as a team.

The contest marked the debut for many new faces in Watts' program. Hisel, a freshman from Lexington, Ky., drew the start in the post and finished her first collegiate action with 14 points and seven rebounds. Dashaunna Truss, a junior transfer from Stetson, garnered the start at the point guard position and turned in 13 points, five assists and seven steals in her Jax State debut. Candace Morton was the third Gamecock to register double digits in the scoring column with 19 points. Sophomore newcomer Marikate Gardler came off the bench for four points and four rebounds in 21 minutes of action.

JSU forced BMC to spread out its offense as Kati Prince and Jessi Hayles led the squad in scoring with nine points each. Brooke Ann Page, who poured in 23 points in BMC's last outing, was limited to seven points.

JSU Rifle takes another win in Mississippi

Monica Fyfe

Sportswire

OXFORD, Miss. – For the second consecutive week, the Jacksonville State rifle team turned back Ohio Valley Conference foe Murray State and Ole Miss this past weekend on the University of Mississippi campus.

The Gamecocks posted a 4654 aggregate score and claimed the top spot by a 22-point margin. The Racers of MSU finished with a 4632, while the host-Rebels turned in a 4628. Jax State accumulated a 2306 in the smallbore competition and tallied a 2348 in the air rifle portion.

Junior Monica Fyfe and freshman Samantha Bullard won individual medalist honors as Fyfe turned in a season-best 594 to pace the JSU air rifle score. She also claimed third in smallbore with a 577. Bullard was the top performer in smallbore with a 580. Her mark matched her season-best in smallbore and credited with a 581 in air rifle. Junior Sam Muegge carded a 588 in air rifle. Brent Books and Cole Tucker finished sixth and seventh respectively in air rifle with scores of 586 and 585.

Dan McCall posted a fifth-place finish in smallbore with a 576, while Tucker claimed ninth with a 573.
