They say hard work pays off, and for JSU baseball, their hard work has earned them a brand-new stadium.

In July 2016, Jacksonville State University confirmed a $7.5 million project to completely revamp Rudy Abbott Field.

The massive project will completely change the face of the 22-year-old field, adding many new amenities for the players and coaches, including an indoor training facility for both batting and pitching, a new locker room, a team meeting area, new coaches’ offices, a lounge and an athletic training treatment area. For spectators, the project adds a canopied 1000-seat grandstand, four VIP suites and a new press box. “The excitement around the baseball program with us building a new stadium right now is probably high since I’ve been here,” said head baseball coach Jim Case. “This is something we felt very strongly that we needed in order to compete at the highest level, and as we’ve gotten into this process, I feel like the stadium we’re going to have is more than we could ever have dreamed.”

But the project did not start out as massive of an undertaking as it is now. “In the beginning, I felt like we could never have afforded it. But the project adds a lot,” Case explained. “The excitement around the program, the excitement from the coaches, the excitement from the players and the excitement from the fans, for spectators, is there. It’s a big deal.”

The Student Senate acts as the legislative branch of the Student Government Association. They are responsible for creating and amending the JSU Code of Laws. If selected, these students will be responsible for making sure that JSU is a better place for all students.

During the election on March 9, 2017, each student currently registered and taking classes will be allowed to vote for three separate senators.

The choices for Student Senate are as follows:
1. Coleman Amason
2. William Arrington

“JSU’s participation in the Fulbright Scholars program has enabled us because the teaching and research experience international cultures, engage in scholarship with an expanded world view, teach in universities around the world, and bring those perspectives back to our campus,” said Peck. “It has enabled us to share our research with an international audience and take the opportunity to exchange ideas and contribute to finding solutions to shared international concerns. Over 1,100 US college and university faculty and administrators, professionals, artists, journalists, scientists, lawyers and independent scholars are awarded Fulbright grants to teach and/or conduct research each year in over 125 countries throughout the world.

One of my top "This Irks Me" things is ... "all y'all" Why say that when you could just shorten it to "you all" or "all you"?

Noooooo. Here in Alabama we say "All y'all better get in the car, y'all fixin' to get left behind."

Is it still called a shower if you lay down?

"La La Land ignored people of color" says everyone who apparently didn't actually see it or slept through John Legend who's the main, and really only, supporting character.

THERE'S POLLEN ON MY WINDSHIELD. WHY.

I was supposed to go the dentist in January. I finally made an appointment for next week. So at this rate it’ll be June before I go to the doctor to have my foot looked at...

The 89th Academy Awards Ceremony took place on February 26 in Los Angeles, California. It was presented by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences (AMPAS) and was aired on ABC. The Academy Awards are designed to honor the best movies and films of 2016, and was hosted by Jimmy Kimmel. It lasted for almost four hours and reached 32.9 million people. This presented a 4% drop in viewership since last year's ceremony, and had the lowest amount of watchers since 2008.

During the ceremony, the Oscars are awarded for 24 different categories, including Best Picture, Best Director, Best Actor, and Best Actress. Nominations for the Academy Awards were previously announced on January 24, 2017 on a global live stream. The nominees are voted upon approximately 6000 voting members and hundreds of actors, actresses, directors, cinematographers, editors, composers and more. An accounting firm named Price waterhouseCoopers handle the duties of mailing out ballots and tabulating results, and have for over 80 years. The ballots are hand counted and take around 1,7000 hours to conclude nominations alone. PwC has never experienced a problem until this year.

Presenters Warren Beatty and Faye Dunaway went on stage to present the award for Best Picture. However, the envelope that Beatty received was not for Best Picture, which was awarded to Moonlight. It was for Best Actress, who went to Emma Stone of La La Land. The cast and crew of La La Land came to accept their award, but after a few minutes, producer Jordan Horowitz stepped onto the stage to apologize for the mix-up. Moonlight eventually made their way to the stage and accepted their award.

The Envelopegate scandal has been traced to one partner, Brian Cullinan. He handed the backup envelope for Actress in a Leading Role instead of Best Picture. Tim Ryan, U.S. chairman and senior partner at PwC, says he has spoken at length with Cullinan about the incident, saying, "He feels very, very terrible and horrible. He is very upset about this mistake. And it is also my mistake, our mistake, and we all feel very bad," Ryan told Variety.

The rest of the night was almost dull in comparison. Damien Chazelle won Best Director for La La Land. At 32 years old, he is the youngest in Oscar history to win in the Directing category. He thanked girlfriend, Olivia Hamilton, and said, "This was a movie about love and I was lucky enough to fall in love while mak- ing it...It means the world that you're here sharing this with me."

The award for Best Documentary went to O.J.: Made in America by Ezra Edelman and Caroline Waterlow became the longest film to win an Academy Award. It was 467 minutes, which surpassed the previous record holder, War and Peace, which came in at 431 minutes. War and Peace won the Academy Award for Best Foreign Language Film in 1969. Iranian director, Asghar Farhadi, won the Best Foreign Language Film for The Salesman. Due to President Trump's immigration ban, he was unable to attend the event. He went as far as to protest it. Asghar Farhadi have decided to not attend the Academy Awards ceremony alongside my fellow members of the cinematic community.

The Academy president Cheryl Boone Isaacs react- ed, saying, “American should always be not a barrier but a beacon and each and every one of us knows that there are some empty chairs in this room which has made academy artists into activ- ists.” Farhadi’s award was accepted on be- half of two prominent Iranian American en- gineer Anousheh Ansari and Firouz Naderi.

So yeah, I’m that girl with two broken legs. And no, there’s no exciting story. My legs were misaligned, so I had corrective surgery to rotate the bones into the proper positions.

My surgery and recovery has taught me a lot, in particular that the term “handicap acces-sible” is a very loose term that covers a broad range of accessibility. JSU’s Disability Support Service states that their mission is to “enable equal learning and opportunities […] by increasing the capacity of Jacksonville State University to eliminate physical, programmatic, policy, informational, and attitudinal barriers,” but how feasible is it really to be physically disabled on a college campus? Below are some things that I’ve come across.

When I first returned to campus I had to drive back to all of my classes, which meant acquiring a temporary handicap permit from UPD. Thankfully, UPD has handicapped parking. They also have a door marked “handicap accessible,” but once you go through the door, there is another door labelled “Authorized Personnel Only” and a flight of stairs leading up. I was unable to get to work, as the book that I had to hand carry had to be carried into the UPD office.

While we’re on the handicap parking topic, JSU only issues their temporary permits for two weeks. I don’t need a permanent permit, but I’m clearly not permanently disabled, it is equally clear that I need a permit for much longer than just two weeks. I did manage to work out with UPD, but I would have been annoyed, not to mention, difficult on the floor, if they had actually made me renew the permit every two weeks.

Handicap parking can also be difficult, not only because there’s a lack of handicap parking, but because people blatantly abuse regulations, and there is little enforcement. There have been times that I had to keep my handicap parking if full, and then when I finally get up to the door I have to walk several people down the aisles.

As I promised, you can imagine, get your mind away from someone else, or the top of the mountain, have I promised, you can imagine, get your mind away from someone else, or the top of the mountain. I’ve always been able to walk a little bit, if push came to shove.

For anyone who is permanently handicapped, I imagine that they would have even greater difficulties than me, and they have all of my respect for doing this day in and day out. You guys are truly awe-inspiring.
