JANUARY
THE FaIRiNG HUSBAND.

There is no anything more gentle than the fits of the fairing husband. They are so mild in their onset, that in most cases, they are quite overlooked. The symptoms are generally accompanied by a sensation of heat in the face, with a feeling of distress in the heart. The patient frequently becomes flushed, and the skin may feel hot to the touch. There may be a feeling of nervousness, or a sense of uneasiness, which may be accompanied by a general feeling of weakness, and a desire for rest. The patient may also experience a sensation of numbing or tingling in the limbs, and a feeling of coldness in the extremities. These symptoms may be accompanied by a feeling of dizziness or lightheadedness. The patient may also experience a feeling of restlessness, and may have difficulty in sitting still. The symptoms may be accompanied by a feeling of nausea, or a sense of discomfort in the stomach. The patient may also experience a feeling of weakness or fatigue, and may have difficulty in concentrating or remembering things.

THE DEsERTED CHILDREN.

"I will record in the closing," says Mr. G. F. C. of a young man, "who is deserted by his wife, that his children are in danger. A young man has deserted his wife and family, leaving them destitute and homeless. The man is a married man, with a wife and children. He has deserted his family, and left them to shift for themselves. The children are left without care and protection, and are in danger of becoming destitute. The man has deserted his family, leaving them to their own resources, and is in danger of becoming destitute. The children are in danger of becoming destitute if they are not provided for.

A young man has deserted his wife and family, leaving them destitute and homeless. The man is a married man, with a wife and children. He has deserted his family, leaving them to shift for themselves. The children are left without care and protection, and are in danger of becoming destitute. The man has deserted his family, leaving them to their own resources, and is in danger of becoming destitute. The children are in danger of becoming destitute if they are not provided for.

ADDITIONAL MOVEMENTS.

The new movement in the South is known as the "Black Face," which is a movement to take care of the freedmen and their descendants. It is led by a group of freedmen who are determined to have a voice in the management of their affairs. The movement is led by a group of freedmen who are determined to have a voice in the management of their affairs. They are determined to have a voice in the management of their affairs. The movement is led by a group of freedmen who are determined to have a voice in the management of their affairs. The movement is led by a group of freedmen who are determined to have a voice in the management of their affairs.

A young man has deserted his wife and family, leaving them destitute and homeless. The man is a married man, with a wife and children. He has deserted his family, leaving them to shift for themselves. The children are left without care and protection, and are in danger of becoming destitute. The man has deserted his family, leaving them to their own resources, and is in danger of becoming destitute. The children are in danger of becoming destitute if they are not provided for.

ADDITIONAL MOVEMENTS.

The new movement in the South is known as the "Black Face," which is a movement to take care of the freedmen and their descendants. It is led by a group of freedmen who are determined to have a voice in the management of their affairs. The movement is led by a group of freedmen who are determined to have a voice in the management of their affairs. They are determined to have a voice in the management of their affairs. The movement is led by a group of freedmen who are determined to have a voice in the management of their affairs. The movement is led by a group of freedmen who are determined to have a voice in the management of their affairs.

A young man has deserted his wife and family, leaving them destitute and homeless. The man is a married man, with a wife and children. He has deserted his family, leaving them to shift for themselves. The children are left without care and protection, and are in danger of becoming destitute. The man has deserted his family, leaving them to their own resources, and is in danger of becoming destitute. The children are in danger of becoming destitute if they are not provided for.

A young man has deserted his wife and family, leaving them destitute and homeless. The man is a married man, with a wife and children. He has deserted his family, leaving them to shift for themselves. The children are left without care and protection, and are in danger of becoming destitute. The man has deserted his family, leaving them to their own resources, and is in danger of becoming destitute. The children are in danger of becoming destitute if they are not provided for.