JULY
The Empress having reached the Tiber, left the city, and the ladies were driven in a horse-drawn carriage along the Via Flaminia to the villa of Mr. Godolphin, near the site of the ancient Roman forum. The Empress was accompanied by her personal attendant, a young lady in a blue dress, and a young man in a white coat, who carried a small bag of letters. They were met by Mr. Godolphin, who was accompanied by his wife and a young lady in a white dress, and a young man in a black suit, who carried a small bag of letters. They were met by Mr. Godolphin, who was accompanied by his wife and a young lady in a white dress, and a young man in a black suit, who carried a small bag of letters.

The Empress was received by Mr. Godolphin and his wife, who offered her a chair and a glass of water. The Empress, who was seated, turned to her attendants and said:

"My dear friends, I am delighted to be here, and I look forward to spending a pleasant afternoon with you."
