Whole No. 369.

MR. DAWSON OF LOUISIANA.

The Bill to Resign General JACKSONS' FUGGE.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. DAWSON—The Committee on:

He said: Gentlemen, I am acquainted with the conduct of this house, and believe that the measure in question should be referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as a great many important questions are involved in it, which require a careful examination. I therefore move that the bill be referred to the Committee of the Whole House, to which I am willing to yield my seat.

The motion was adopted.

The bill was then read a second time, and ordered to be referred to the Committee of the Whole House for a further examination.

The Committee of the Whole House was then appointed, consisting of Messrs. DAWSON, WILLIAMSON, and RAYMOND.

Mr. DAWSON, the Committee of the Whole House, said:

He had been informed by a gentleman who had been present at the meeting of the House of Representatives, that there was a great deal of excitement in that body, and that the question was one of great importance. He believed that the bill was one of the most important measures that had ever been presented to the House, and that it would require the closest examination. He was willing to yield his seat to the Committee of the Whole House, and to leave the question to them.

The bill was then read a third time, and ordered to be passed to the Senate.

The Senate was then adjourned.

John B. Taylor, President.

The J. B. Taylor, President.

The amendment of the reader's friends in the United States lands, which is now published in the New York Times, is an echo of the sentiments expressed in your paper by Proclamation of the President of the United States, in which he announces his intention to grant the right of voting to all citizens of the United States, without regard to color or previous condition of servitude. The amendment will be submitted to the people of the United States for their consideration, and the result of the vote will be taken into careful consideration by the Congress.

The powers of the President are vested in his office, and he is the Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy of the United States, and of the militia when called into the service of the United States. He is also authorized to prescribe rules for the government of the army and navy, and for the regulation of the army and navy when called into the service of the United States. He is also authorized to make rules for the government of the army and navy, and for the regulation of the army and navy when called into the service of the United States.

We are authorized to announce that the last days of the war have been marked by a signal victory for the South and the South is now considered as the paramount power in the world, and that the Southern people are now in a position to determine their own affairs, and that the Southern people are now in a position to determine their own affairs.
