SEPTEMBER
Truth and Honor.

A resolution of gentleman is taking part in the F conclusive of a long-drawn out debate, and the proceedings of his party are being witnessed by the members of both houses of Congress. The resolution, which was introduced by Mr. Smith, is as follows:

"Resolved, That the truth and honor of our government are at stake, and that we must at all hazards maintain our independence and freedom."

The debate has been long and heated, and the members of both houses have been divided in their opinions. The resolution was seconded by Mr. Jones, and a vote will be taken on it later in the day.

Mr. Smith, in introducing the resolution, said:

"It is the duty of every member of this body to stand up for the truth and honor of our government. We cannot afford to compromise on these principles. We must stand firm in the face of adversity."

Mr. Jones, in seconding the resolution, said:

"I fully agree with Mr. Smith. The truth and honor of our government are at stake, and we must do all in our power to protect them."

The debate continued for several hours, and the vote will be taken later in the day.
