AGRICULTURAL

Agriculture, Youth, and Education

1. It is the duty of the schools of all countries to show the youth the advantages of education, and to encourage them to pursue it to the highest degree of perfection.

2. Great care must be taken to prevent the introduction of bad habits into the minds of the young. The influence of the schoolmaster and the teacher is very great.

3. Education is the most important means of promoting the welfare of the people. It is the best preparation for life, and the surest means of obtaining happiness.

4. In the United States, the schools are supported by the tax-payers, and the children are made to pay the price of education. This is a wise and just system, and it should be followed in all countries.

5. The schools should be free, and the children should be taught to love learning.

6. The schools should be open to all, and the children should be taught the same lessons, regardless of their race or color.

7. The schools should be well supplied with books, and the children should be taught to read and write.

8. The schools should be well taught, and the children should be taught to think and to reason.

9. The schools should be well managed, and the children should be taught to obey the laws of the land.
