A Terrific Day Fight

The day was fixed for the annual fight in the circus, and great preparations were made for it. The lists were set up, and the fighters were gathered, ready to go to work.

When the day came, the crowds gathered in the Ring, and the fighters took their places. The first battle was between John Smith and Jack Brown. They fought for hours, but the fight was decided in favor of John Smith by a narrow margin.

The next battle was between Mary Green and Laura Brown. It was a fierce battle, but the result favored Mary Green, who was declared the winner.

The last battle was between John Brown and Jack Smith. This was the most exciting battle of the day. They fought for several hours, but the result was a draw. The fight was ended in a draw, and the fighters were declared equal.

The day was a great success, and the fighters were declared the winners of the day.
Yates of Alabama.—We have received a copy of the speech delivered by the Hon. John J. Crittenden, before the House of Representatives, on the 21st instant, in which he expresses his opinions on the subject of the present, and future Union. In his address, Mr. Crittenden says:

"In placing the following resolutions before the House, I have done so in the spirit of truth and sincerity, and from a desire to promote the welfare of the Union. I have been guided by the principles of the Constitution, and of the laws of the land, and in all that I have done, I have acted in accordance with the dictates of my conscience."

The resolutions are as follows:

1. That the President be directed to appoint a commission to inquire into the state of the Union, and to report to the Senate, at the commencement of the next session, the result of their inquiries.

2. That the Congress be directed to consider the subject of the Union, and to report to the Senate, at the commencement of the next session, the result of their investigations.

3. That the Congress be directed to inquire into the state of the Union, and to report to the Senate, at the commencement of the next session, the result of their inquiries.

In conclusion, Mr. Crittenden says:

"The resolutions which I have presented to the House are founded on principles which I hold to be just and true, and which I believe to be necessary for the preservation of the Union. I trust that they will be approved by the House, and that they will be carried into effect.

"Yours truly,

John J. Crittenden."
