The New Code.
A new code of laws has been enacted in the State of New York, which is to go into effect on January 1. The code is designed to prevent crime and promote the welfare of the community. It contains provisions for the punishment of theft, murder, and other crimes, and is based on the principle that every person shall be entitled to the full protection of the law.

Mr. Everett of the United States Senate, in a speech in the Senate of the United States, said:

"The great body of men in the United States are agreed that the present system of education is inadequate to meet the needs of the country. There is need of a new system, which shall be based on the principles of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. The new code of laws is an attempt to meet this need, and we shall watch with interest to see how it is received by the people of the United States."
