The King of Prussia has sent a direct letter of warning to his allies, the Prussian Government, announcing that if they do not abandon their present course of action, the war will continue. The letter is said to be written in a firm and authoritative tone, and to carry with it the weight of the imperial government. It is understood that the Prussian Government has already received the letter, and that it will be read in a council of war on the 15th. The war is now threatened, and the situation is grave.

The war with Japan continues, and the situation is becoming more critical. The Japanese have made it known that they will not accept the terms of peace offered by the Allies, and that they will continue their war until they have achieved their objects. The Allies have been forced to accept this situation, and are now preparing for a new round of hostilities.

The British Government has announced that it will not intervene in the war between Germany and Japan, but will remain neutral. This decision was taken after careful consideration of the situation, and it is hoped that it will help to maintain the peace in the world.

The American Government has also announced its decision to remain neutral in the war between Germany and Japan. This decision was taken after careful consideration of the situation, and it is hoped that it will help to maintain the peace in the world.

The war is now at a critical stage, and the situation is grave. The Allies and the Japanese are both determined to win, and the war is likely to continue for some time. The world is watching the situation with great interest, and is hoping that a peaceful solution can be found.

LETTER FROM ST. PETERSBURG.

[The correspondent from St. Petersburg writes:—]

The European in St. Petersburg was dated the 25th ult., and was published the 28th. The European portrays the Russian government as a monarchical autocracy, and holds that it is the primary object of the civil government to maintain the authority and independence of the Tsar. The European points out that the Russian government is the most powerful and influential nation in Europe, and that it is the object of the European powers to maintain the balance of power in the interests of peace and stability. The European remarks that the Russian government is characterized by a strong executive, a free press, and a system of education and religion which is modeled on the principles of the Russian Orthodox Church. The European concludes that the Russian government is a model of constitutional monarchy, and that it is a source of inspiration for the countries of Europe and the world.
