JULY
CURTIS CAPTURED.

600 Prisoners Taken.

The Yankee News for September 10th.

A Dispatch to the Colfax from Charleston, S. C., Sept. 10th, 1863.

Some news from the Confederate States that the Federal forces were captured by the Confederates. The Federal forces were captured by the Confederates at the Battle of Chancellorsville.

The Battle of Chancellorsville was a turning point in the American Civil War. The Confederates under Robert E. Lee inflicted heavy casualties on the Federals under Ulysses S. Grant, but the Federals eventually withdrew from the battlefield. The battle resulted in a victory for the Confederates, but it did not change the course of the war.

There is no further information available about the captured prisoners or the circumstances of their capture.

Harrow, July 13.
A dispatch received here, dated July 12th, from Harrodsburg, says that Gen. Taylor and his son, Maj. John Taylor, both of whom are in the service of the Confederacy, were killed by guerrillas yesterday. The two were riding in an open carriage near Harrodsburg when they were attacked by a band of guerrillas, who fired upon them from ambush. The bodies of the two were found on the side of the road, and both were killed instantly. The guerrillas are said to have been led by a well-known rebel named John Brown, who has been charged with the murder of several Union sympathizers in the region.
