JACKSONVILLE Republican.

JACKSONVILLE, ILL.

January 9, 1863.

The following is the latest dispatch of the cablegram from Washington, as received at the telegraph office of the Republican:

The President of the United States has signed the "Confederate Bond Act," declaring a national "Confederate Bond," payable at the end of the war, to enable the Government to carry on the war against the State of Texas, and to raise the necessary funds to support the war efforts.

The President also directed the Secretary of the Treasury to issue a proclamation declaring the "Confederate Bond" valid and enforceable throughout the United States.

The Federal Government will now be able to carry on the war against Texas with greater ease and speed, as the national "Confederate Bond" will be a source of revenue for the maintenance of the war effort.

The President's action is welcomed by the people of the United States, who are grateful for his efforts to support the war effort and ensure the success of the Union.

The President's proclamation will be transmitted to the various States for their consideration and implementation.

The Jacksonville Republican.

ZARINVILLE, O.S.

Our most recent intelligence from the different parts of the State is from the North. We learn that the President has issued a proclamation declaring the act of secession null and void. This has been received with universal joy. The people are determined to remain in the Union at all hazards. The authorities have been instructed to take measures to secure the Peace and quiet of the State. The people are prepared to defend their rights and liberties, and to resist any attempt to deprive them of them. The President has also directed the military to be prepared to enforce the proclamation. The people are confident that they will be successful in their efforts to maintain the Union.

The editor of the Jacksonville Republican wishes to express his deep feelings of gratitude to the government for the protection it has afforded to the press. He believes that the government is doing all in its power to maintain the Union, and he hopes that the people will continue to support it.

OBSERTORY.

Joseph W. Beer was Sept. 30th, in his 33d year. His remains were interred in Woodlawn Cemetery, Sept. 25th. He was a bright light in the Wesleyan Methodist Church, a faithful and zealous Sunday-school teacher, and a valued member of the church. He was a man of singularly mild and amiable disposition, and his loss is deeply felt by a large circle of friends.

WANTED.
The 10th Army, the famed "Bluebirds of the West," has arrived in front of the enemy lines near the town of New Harmony. The soldiers are said to be in good spirits and are eager to make a quick end to the war.

The city of New Harmony is under siege by the 10th Army. The soldiers have been advancing slowly but steadily, and it is expected that they will reach the outskirts of New Harmony within the next few days. The residents of New Harmony are preparing for the worst, and the local authorities have ordered all non-essential personnel to leave the city immediately.

The 10th Army is led by General Ulysses S. Grant, who is known for his strategic mind and his ability to outmaneuver the enemy. Grant has been instrumental in the Union's success so far, and his troops are feared by the Confederates.

The war is far from over, and much blood will be shed before the final victory is achieved. But for now, the soldiers of the 10th Army are doing their best to bring peace to the nation. They will not rest until every state is free from the clutches of the Confederacy.
