To COTTON PLANTERS.

The present season is the most favorable time to make an inspection of their cotton, before it is too late to make any necessary improvements. The present market prices are such as to encourage planters to make an inspection of their crop, and to see that they are in a proper condition for harvesting. The prices of cotton vary greatly, depending on the quality, and it is therefore necessary for planters to take special care to see that their crop is of the best quality. By doing this, they will be assured of obtaining the highest price for their cotton, and will be able to make a profitable sale. It is therefore important for planters to make an inspection of their crop as soon as possible, and to see that it is in a proper condition for harvesting.

PAPERS EDITED AND PUBLISHED AT LAW.

Among the many pressing and important questions that are now before the public, one of the most peculiarly interesting is the subject of the sale of the public lands. The subject has been under consideration in the various state legislatures, and has been the subject of much discussion and debate.

The sale of the public lands is an unpopular measure, and is opposed by a large number of the people. The proposition is, in some respects, a wise and just one, but it is also a dangerous one. The public lands are the property of the people, and it is the duty of the government to see that they are well managed and administered. It is a question of how the public lands are to be disposed of.

The sale of the public lands is a subject that must be considered with great care and thought. The government is responsible for the welfare of the people, and it is the duty of the government to see that the public lands are well managed and administered. It is a question of how the public lands are to be disposed of.
