After your horses have eaten all your hay and grass, turn them out on the farm, and they will find food enough and to spare. If you keep them in the barn, they will be sickly and likely to die. If you keep them in the stables, they will be文章的下文缺失。

Little one, come to my hand,
We are in the promised land.
Over the rock, in the pick, black
The band of robbers surrounding.

Down by the lake, in the pick, black,
My dearling, my dearling,

A LEGEND
Of the Great Falls
of the Ohio.

On the banks of the Ohio, there grew a tree whose branches reached to the sky. Its leaves were as green as the summer's grass, and its flowers were as white as the snow. It was a place of beauty and wonder, and many a traveler paused to admire its glory. But one day, a young girl named Elizabeth came to the treening to its branches, she discovered a secret hiding place within it. In this place, she found a magic book that would grant wishes.

Elizabeth wished for a beautiful house and a princely garden, and these things were granted to her within the hour. But her joy was short-lived, for she soon realized the price of her wishes. For every wish granted, a portion of Elizaabeth's soul was lost.

As the years passed, Elizabeth's health began to fail, and she knew she would soon die. But before she passed, she wished for one last thing: that her tree might forever remain a place of beauty for all who saw it. And so it was.

In memory of Elizabeth and her wishes, the tree is now known as the Legend of the Great Falls.

The hopeful and grateful words of love
That long awaited my mother's name
Cannot express the deep feeling found.
Our loving friend's actions.

Although upon our journey's end,
The dear old house at the corner stood,
Our hearts and spirits were at peace.

My mother's love, the first I knew,
Was but a reflection of her own;
But oh! what love and care she gave.

My brother, too, in his own way,
Brought joy and love to our hearts;
Our home was filled with love and care.

We left the dear old home, and started out on Our journey to the city of our dreams;
Mother's love and care we found.

My mother's love, the first I knew,
Was but a reflection of her own;
But oh! what love and care she gave.

The love for mother, for her care,
Was but a reflection of her own;
But oh! what love and care she gave.
