The Republican or a New Deal

We find as perfectly satisfied with the manifest exactions of the Democratic Convention, for President and Vice-President, as we did with the manifest exactions of convention of several years ago when it nominated Mr. and Mrs. Black for the same office. It cannot be supposed that the Republican party is likely to make any greater improvement in our opinion. We do not see any reason why any political party should make any improvement in its opinion. We do not see any reason why any political party should make any improvement in its opinion. We do not see any reason why any political party should make any improvement in its opinion.
