The Brave Girl

For days upon the Carolina coast, away from the roar and din of the war, there was a home where peace and contentment reigned. Little Mary had the care of the house, and her work was to keep the peace. She was a little girl, with a sweet voice and a gentle manner. She loved her home and her family. She knew that the war was going on, but she was not afraid. She trusted in the Lord and knew that He would protect her and her family.

And the little days passed by, and the war continued. The spotlight was upon the home of Mary and her family. They were not safe. But Mary was not afraid. She knew that she had a home, and that was all that mattered. She would do her best to keep the peace.

The brave girl.

Food for thought.

The greater number of husbands are not the men of the common sort, but the men of the uncommon sort. They are not the men of the everyday world, but the men of the extraordinary world. They are not the men of the common sort, but the men of the uncommon sort. They are not the men of the everyday world, but the men of the extraordinary world. The Talisman.

It was nothing, and a bond was obtained within a moment of the trial. The bond was obtained, and the case was dropped.

The next time the Talisman would be tried, it would be with a different set of facts.
