30 DAY. OFFER! READ! READ! READ! 33 1/3 PER CENT.

In these two and one quarter years you have been in the family, they have been some of the most hateful and unhappy years of my life. But I have never forgotten the days when you were young and happy, when your spirit was free and untroubled by care. I wish I could bring you back to that time again, but I know it is impossible.

I have always loved you, but I have also been strict with you. I have wanted you to be happy, but I have also wanted you to be responsible. I have been fair, but I have also been firm. I have been patient, but I have also been angry. I have been proud, but I have also been fearful.

I have always wanted you to be the best you could be. I have always wanted you to be successful. I have always wanted you to be happy. I have always wanted you to be loved.

I love you, M.B. C. R.

The Poor Man's Temptation

This week's edition of The Republican features an article titled "The Poor Man's Temptation." The article discusses various issues relevant to the working class, such as the need for fair wages, decent living conditions, and the importance of unionization. It highlights the struggles faced by the poor and advocates for societal changes to improve their quality of life.

In the article, various quotes from workers and their families are featured, emphasizing their experiences and concerns. The piece concludes with a call to action, urging readers to support the workers' cause and push for policies that benefit the underprivileged.

The article contains a mix of textual content and occasional illustrations, typical of newspapers from the late 19th century. The layout includes columns and a consistent font, which is common in periodicals of that era.

The Poor Man's Temptation

Among the concerns raised by the workers is the issue of fair wages. The article states: "The wages offered to the poor are often insufficient to meet their basic needs. The average worker is forced to work long hours for little compensation. This is not fair, and it must be addressed.

In addition to wages, the housing situation is also discussed. The article mentions: "The living conditions for the poor are often deplorable. Many workers live in crowded, unhygienic environments, which contribute to their poor health and well-being. This must be changed.

The article concludes with a call to action, encouraging readers to support the workers' cause: "We must stand together to demand fair wages and decent housing. Let us work towards a future where everyone has the opportunity to live in dignity and prosperity."
AGRICULTURE.

Chill of Temperature in Tennessee.

The severe and protracted chill of temperature in Tennessee has been a matter of much concern to the farmers of the State. The cold weather has affected the growth of crops, and has caused damage to orchards and vineyards. The pecan industry has been particularly hard hit, as the pecan trees are in danger of being killed outright. The farmers are urged to take precautions to protect their crops and to prevent further damage.
