JANUARY 1, 1864.

The public school system is the backbone of any country, and the establishment of a system of education is one of the highest duties of government. A well educated people are the strongest support a government can have, and the best protection against foreign influence. The public schools, therefore, should be supported and maintained as long as they are necessary to the welfare of the country.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 30, 1884, 6:30 a.m.

To the Editor of the Jacksonville Republican:

Dear Sir,

I have just received a letter from my brother, who is now visiting my family in Washington. He tells me that the government is in a state of great activity, and that many important changes are about to be made. The Treasury is expected to increase the revenue by a large amount, and the President has instructed his cabinet to look for ways to increase it. The Secretary of the Treasury is expected to present a bill to Congress to increase the duties on imports, and the President has already signed it.

With regard to the political situation, I can only say that the Democrats are still in control, but the Republicans are making a strong showing. The election is expected to be very close, and the outcome will depend on the way the voters in the northern states vote. The Republicans have been able to gain some ground in the West, and they are hoping to make a comeback in the next election.

I send you a copy of the latest issue of the Washington Herald, which contains a number of interesting articles. Among them is an account of the recent meeting of the National Republican Convention, at which the platform was adopted. The platform is a strong one, and it will be a guide to the party for the coming election.

I am, Sir, yours truly,

P.S. I have enclosed a copy of the latest issue of the New York Times, which contains a number of important articles on current events. The Times is a respectable newspaper, and I think it would be of interest to your readers.

JANUARY 29, 1909.

15th Biennial.

On the 13th of January, 1909, in her sixtieth year, passed away, at her home in the city of New York, Mrs. Elizabeth L. Brown, aged 60 years, 8 months and 17 days. She was the beloved wife of the late Dr. John H. Brown. In the household of Dr. Brown, she lived a life of great usefulness and devoted service, in which she was remembered with affection and esteem by all who knew her. She was a member of the First Presbyterian Church, and a consistent Christian in her life and work. She leaves behind her two children, a son and a daughter, both of whom she loved dearly. She was a kind and gentle woman, full of cheer and care for others, and her memory will be cherished by those who knew her. She was buried at Gracelawn Cemetery.

The News.

The Great Revolution in the Great West.

The cause of the moment is the great revolution taking place in the West. The United States is being reorganized, and the new government is destined to be the greatest and most powerful in the world. The great revolution is being carried on by the people, and it is destined to bring about a new era of peace and prosperity for the country. The people are taking the reins of government into their own hands, and they are determined to make their country great and powerful. The great revolution is being carried on by the people, and it is destined to bring about a new era of peace and prosperity for the country.
