WASHINGTON LETTER.

The House, Tuesday evening, was in session, and a long debate on the Indian bill had been held, and it was clear that several members were science in the amendment. The chairman, Mr. Stearns, then offered an amendment to the bill that a portion of twenty-five thousand dollars be appropriated for the purpose of protecting the interests of the Indian bill by striking, and the Democratic majority had taken the occasion to press for the adjournment of the session. The House adjourned at seven o'clock, after three hours of debate.

Mr. President, it is but justice to the House to say that the debate has been orderly and decorous, and that the members have afforded the public a opportunity of hearing the views of their representatives on the great question at issue. The gentleman from Ohio, Mr. Stearns, has presented the arguments of the amendment in a clear and able manner. He has shown that the amendment is necessary to the protection of the interests of the Indian bill, and that the House should not adjourn until the amendment has been adopted. The gentleman from New York, Mr. Brown, has opposed the amendment, and has shown that it is unnecessary and undesirable. The debate has been of great interest, and has afforded the public an opportunity of hearing the views of the members on the great question at issue.

The amendment has been adopted, and the House has adjourned. The gentleman from Ohio, Mr. Stearns, has been re-elected chairman of the committee on the Indian bill, and the House has adjourned to meet on Thursday afternoon at two o'clock.
“SEALED UNTO HIM.”
Thrilling, Powerful, Dramatic!

By George Valentine

The dramatic production of one of the most thrilling and powerful plays that has ever been presented in the history of the American stage is the new production of "Sealed Unto Him," which is being presented in this city tonight by the largest and most renowned stock company in the world. The play is based on the life of the great prophet, John the Baptist, and it is written and directed by the renowned playwright, John H. Jones. The cast is composed of the finest actors in the country, and the production is being presented in the largest and most magnificent theater in the city. The play is a dramatic and stirring portrayal of the life of John the Baptist, and it is certain to be a hit with the public. The audience is sure to be amazed and moved by the powerful performances of the actors and the dramatic staging of the play. It is a must-see for anyone who loves the theater and enjoys a good drama.

Isaac B. Winslow

The story of the Forty Days of Honor

The young man who was to become the first President of the United States was born in 1785. He was brought up in a humble home, and educated in the common schools of the time. At the age of 21, he set out on his own, and soon became a successful businessman. It was during this period that he began to develop his ideas of freedom and equality, and to think about the future of America.

The young man was deeply moved by the suffering of the poor, and he decided to do something about it. He became involved in the anti-slavery movement, and worked to abolish the practice of slavery. He was also a strong advocate of women's rights, and helped to establish the first women's rights organization in the country.

The young man was a leader in the fight for freedom and equality, and he was respected by all who knew him. He was a great man, and his ideas continue to inspire people to this day.

CHAPTER III

It was at last the day of the meeting. The Reverend Mr. Smith, of the Congregational Church, was to preach the sermon. He had been invited to do so by the Presbyterians, who, in their wisdom, had selected him as the best man to preach the lesson which the world was anxiously awaiting. The meeting was to be held in the Congregational Church, and the preacher was expected to be there at the appointed hour. The people had gathered to hear him, and the room was crowded to overflowing.

The preacher entered the pulpit, and, after a few words of introduction, began to deliver his message. He spoke with great force and eloquence, and the congregation listened with rapt attention. The words of the preacher seemed to pierce the very hearts of the hearers, and they were filled with a sense of their own sin and folly.

The sermon lasted for many minutes, and when it was over, there was a moment of silence. Then the congregation rose to give thanks to God for the great blessing that had been granted. They sang a hymn of praise, and then dispersed to their homes.

The sermon had been a great success, and the preacher was received with great respect and honor. He had done his work well, and the world was grateful for the message that he had brought.

Chapter III

As day dawned, in distant lands, the thin, misty fingers of the morning sunshine graced the city with its splendid presence. The sun, in its majestic journey, cast its warm embrace upon the earth, illuminating the verdant scenery with a golden glow. The peaceful solitude of the morning was broken by the distant echoes of a lone melodious bird, its harmonious effusion blending with the soft whispering of the breeze. The atmosphere was thick with the pungent fragrance of the blooming flowers that dotted the landscape. The world was set ablaze with the fiery orb rising in all its glory, casting its radiant light upon the city of the calm.

THE DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS.

The Democratic members of Congress, meeting in caucus, which was attended by the entire Democratic delegation, divided on the question of the rules of the House, and the three principal leaders in the party, James G. Blaine, James A. Garfield, and Thaddeus Stevens, met in conference to try to settle the question. The result of the conference was that the three leaders agreed to support the resolution of the caucus, which was adopted by a majority of the members present.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, March 28, 1894.

The week has been marked by the absence of any important legislation, and the House has been in session only a few hours. The trend of public sentiment is toward the Democratic party, and it is expected that the next session will be more favorable to the Democrats than the present one.

THE EDUCATIONAL BILL.

Mr. Blaine's educational bill has been sent to the President, and Mr. Veneer has been appointed to confer with the President on the subject. The President is expected to sign the bill, as he has already expressed his approval of it.

The bill provides for the establishment of a national university, to be located in the capital city, and to be supported by the Federal government. The university is to be free to all students, and is to be administered by a board of trustees, elected by the people of the United States.

The bill also provides for the establishment of state universities, to be supported by the state governments, and to be administered by boards of directors, elected by the people of the respective states.

The bill is expected to be signed by the President, and is likely to be a great boon to education in the United States.

The following combination was seen at the White Palace Academy, and was described as the most successful performance of the season. It is an electric wonder, and is said to be worth seeing.

The performance consists of a lady who stands on a platform, and is illuminated by electric lights. She then proceeds to light a torch, and is followed by a man who carries a burning torch. The lady then proceeds to light a second torch, and is followed by another man who carries a third torch. This process is repeated until the stage is illuminated by a great number of electric lights.

The performance is claimed to be a great success, and is said to be worth seeing.
