LETTER FROM TEXAS.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 20, 1865.

My Dear Sir:

I am glad to hear from you, and hope that you are in good health. I have been in Texas for several weeks, and have found the climate to be very pleasant. I have met with several of my old friends, and have had some interesting conversations with them. I have also visited some of the principal cities, and have been much struck with the progress that is being made in the state. I have been much impressed with the hospitality of the people, and have been treated with great kindness by all whom I have met. I have also had an opportunity of observing the agricultural improvements that are being made, and am convinced that Texas is destined to become one of the leading states of the Union. I am now engaged in preparing a report on the condition of the state, which I hope to have ready for publication soon. I shall be glad to hear from you at any time, and shall be happy to answer any questions that you may have. With best wishes for your health and happiness, I am, yours truly,
