A candidate for the Legislature was out yesterday morning so anxious to be in time for the half-year session that he engaged his Broadway coach for the purpose of getting to the city in time. The coach he engaged was one of the best in the city and he engaged it in order that he might have a comfortable ride. However, when he arrived at the hotel where he was staying, he found that the coach had been engaged by someone else. He was out of luck and had to wait until another coach was available. It was only a small inconvenience, but it was enough to make him feel discouraged. He decided to take the train instead and arrived in the city in time for the session.
