Trade With Us.

It's a Unique Position we occupy as Landlords. This is briefly explained by the fact that we are not in business for ourselves, but for our customers. As we are in business for ourselves, we are in business for our customers.

The Dealers who do so much talking about the amount of business they do, and the number of customers they have, are not the same men who are employed by us. We cannot afford to lose trade, and we do not want to lose it.

Who adversely goods at one half or one third of their usual prices and still make enough to pay for the advertising and doing business?

TRADE WITH US.

Ours is a Plain

Fair-dealing house. We sell our Merchandise at a price which is equal to the cost of the goods, and nothing more. No Credit is allowed in this house, nor will we sell on credit.

We have never refused to give back purchase money, nor have we ever taken any credit for goods which have been returned. We do not make a habit of selling goods at a loss, and we do not intend to sell goods at a loss.

A New Addition.

While enjoying his vacation in this beautiful country, near the city of Washington, a gentleman from England was passing through a small town in the state of New York. He stopped at a hotel, and as he was leaving, the manager of the hotel asked him if he wished any assistance in finding his way back to the city. The gentleman replied that he would be glad of any help, and the manager suggested that he take a ride in one of the stages which ran to the nearest station. The gentleman accepted the offer and was soon on his way back to the city.

A gentleman from Europe was visiting the United States and decided to take a trip up the Mississippi River. As he was boarding the boat, the captain of the vessel approached him and asked if he needed any assistance. The gentleman replied that he would be glad of any help, and the captain suggested that he take a seat in the smoking room. The gentleman accepted the offer and was soon seated comfortably, enjoying the scenery along the way.

A gentleman from England was visiting the United States and decided to take a trip up the Atlantic coast. As he was boarding the train, the conductor approached him and asked if he needed any assistance. The gentleman replied that he would be glad of any help, and the conductor suggested that he take a seat in the dining car. The gentleman accepted the offer and was soon seated comfortably, enjoying the view of the countryside passing by.

LETTER FROM PETERSBURG.

President Davis to Mr. E. B. Waddill.

Mr. President: The question of reorganization of the government of the Confederate States has been under the careful consideration of the Executive Committee of Virginia. At the meeting of the committee held on the 12th instant, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the reorganization of the government of the Confederate States is necessary, and that the executive committee of Virginia is willing to take steps to promote the same.

Sincerely yours, E. B. Waddill.

Incredible is the story of a fish.

One day a fisherman caught a big fish. He tied a rope around the fish's tail and began to pull. The fish tried to escape, but the rope held firm. Finally, the fisherman dragged the fish out of the water and onto the shore. But when he tried to kill the fish, it suddenly escaped and swam away. The fisherman was amazed by this incredible feat and decided to keep the fish as a pet. He named it "Eurydice" and taught it how to swim in the swimming pool. Every day, Eurydice would swim laps with the fisherman, and he always looked forward to their daily swims. The fisherman was so happy to have Eurydice as a pet that he decided to write a book about his incredible experience. He titled it "Eurydice: The Fish Who Can Swim" and sent it to his publisher. The publisher was so impressed by the story that they decided to publish it. The book became an instant hit and Eurydice - the fish who could swim - became an overnight sensation. Today, Eurydice is still swimming in the pool and the fisherman is still writing books about his incredible pet. The end.
