Md.
‡ The case of Johnson vs. Tompkins and others.
§ Mr. Kennedy of Hagerstown, Maryland.

He now returned to the question of the admission of Missouri into the Union and he immediately proceeded to give a brief sketch of the differences connected with it, and the consequences to which it has directly led. In the latter part of 1819, the then territory of Missouri applied to Congress, in the usual manner, for leave to form a State constitution and government, in order to be admitted into the Union. A bill was reported for the purpose, with the usual provisions in such cases. Amendments were offered, having for their object to make it a condition of her admission, that her constitution should have provision to prohibit slavery. This brought on the agitating debate which, with the ef-to so far from maintaining the doctrine of the issue implies, we hold that the Federal Government has no right to extend restrict slavery no more than to establish it nor has it any right whatever to distinguish between the domestic institutions of one State, or section, and another in order to favor the one and discourage the other. As the federal representative of all and all the States, it is bound to deal within the sphere of its powers, equal exact justice and favor to all. To act otherwise, to undertake to discriminate between the domestic institutions of one and they may not, and probably will not, win this session. But when we take into consideration, that there is a majority in favor of one of them, and a large minority in favor of the other, and as the sense of the House has been taken; that there will be in all probability a considerable increase in the next Congress of the vote in favor of non-intervention, and that it will be largely confirmed in the next succeeding Congress, under the census to be taken next year it amounts almost to a certainty that they will be adopted, unless a decisive measure is taken in advance to prevent it.

But, if, even these conclusions should be erroneous— if fanaticism and the abuse of power should contrive to thwart, for once respect constitutional rights; or if the calculations of politicians should retard the adoption of these measures, or even defeat them altogether, there would be still left one way to accomplish their object, and that is, determination avoided by the simple method to incorporate all the Territories.

to every thing may be, is to be at among yourselves on this great moral question. The want of union and concert in reference to it has brought the South, the Union, and our Government, to their present wretched condition. Instead of placing above all others, we have made it subordinate, not only to mere questions of policy, but to the preservation of parties and ensuring of party success. As long as we hold a due regard for those, we hold them subordinate to that other question involving safety and happiness. Until they are held by the South the North will not believe that you are in earnest opposition to their enroachments, they will continue to follow, one another, until the work of abolition is finished.

to convince them that you are, you will prove by your acts that you hold other questions subordinate to it. If become united, and prove your sincerity in earnest, the North will be brought to a pause, and to a calculation

attic'd shade kneel while Church-bells peal'd their plaintive grief-stricken Jack prostrate fell his fall was not that of Death angels soon came with returning breath
To a world of misery he woke
And wild words of distraction spoke—
Under this canopy of green
Will rest the mortal part of Pauline Till called to join the select throng
In the strains of heavenly song.

Here secure is her sepulchre
From the heat of the sun culture,
In the depths of verdant bowers
Where spring exerts all her powers;
Her frame will sleep in quietude
Unracked by the torments of life
Beyond the bitterness of strife.
But, oh! poor, lone, widow'd Jack!
How great his trials here below!
While Paul's spirit communes with saint Hear his deep groans and heart-felt plaints
Ah! more than hard is Jack's fate,
None, far from his native State—
And no brother or sister near—
Or a friend, of his tribe, to cheer!
It certainly is too from us all
To condole with Jack his loss of Paul.
Her virtues were very many,
And charms unsurpass'd by any.
If she e'er gave Jack a sharp word,
'Twas to make him a better bird;
Her sinless terrestrial walk
Was devoted to him and his folk.
None can urge to his dying time
Gainst Paul up to his dying time
Error she trampled under foot,
And boldly asserted to fight;
Yet, no thought of warring kind
E'er entered her angelic mind:
And if she chafed at her track,
'Twas but to make him "step the track."
On Paul's intellectual face,
Was depicted the fairest grace—
Kindness was in every motion—
Her whole life was warm devotion.
To the loss of such a being
Is short of God's decreeing.

Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry.
THE GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY
For Lung Complaints, and all Affections of the Respiratory Organs.
The best Remedy ever known to Man,
For Coughs, Asthma, Colds, Croup, Bronchitis, Influenza, Bleeding of the Lungs, Difficulty of Breathing, Liver Affections, Pain or Weakness of the Breast or Side, First Stages of Consumption, &c.
This Balsam has come when Consumption may be checked among the curable diseases. It is excellent food, which skillfully combines the virtues of the Prunus Virginiana, or Wild Cherry, with chemical extract from the Wild pine, &c., &c., is now everywhere acknowledged by Doctors, physicians, and all who have used it, to be the most efficacious preparation ever yet offered for the cure of diseases generally of the Chest and Lungs; and on account of its wonderful popularity and ready sale, stands without a parallel in the history of medicine. It was discovered and first introduced by a regular physician and gentleman of high standing in Philadelphia, Pa. Its surprisingly invigorating effect upon the debilitated constitution, has secured for it general use, and made it the favorite medicine in nearly every family in our country, where Coughs, Colds, or other symptoms of consumptive diseases have made their appearance. And with such astonishing rapidity has it gained its public estimation, and so extensively is it used, that even with difficulty, scarcely more than sufficient quantities are sufficient to meet the demand for it from our numerous agents, who are in the sale of it throughout the South.

TESTIMONIALS.
Read the following letter written to the proprietors at Cincinnati.
Messrs. SAWYER & PARK—Gentlemen: I take this opportunity to inform you of a remarkable cure performed in my own case, by the use of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. About the 1st of September, 1846, I was attacked with a violent cold, which settled in my lungs, and during the space of five months, I labored under a distressing cough. I had quite lost all appetite of recovery, until about a week or so ago,
I was induced to try your Balsam of Wild Cherry, and before I had used half of the bottle, my cough was relieved, and I am now, by the blessing of God, and the fatherly use of this Balsam, restored to perfect health. Yours respectfully HARRIET S. HILL.
Our Agent at Marksville, La. writes—Messrs. SAWYER & PARK—Gentlemen: I enclose you a letter from Dr. Dufany, a graduate of medicine, and one of our most skillful physicians, testifying to the remarkable effects of Wistar's Balsam in his own case. He states to be highly among the profession here, and has a very extensive practice.
(Signed) G. A. STEVENS.
Dear Sir: I promised to inform you of the result of my trial of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry upon Mrs. M. I have the pleasure to inform you that her cough was so much improved, that she fancied herself entirely cured, and contrary to my advice, she discontinued the use of it and all other remedies, and recommenced her coughing in the middle of the week. She had a return of spitting of blood. She is now, however, using the Balsam again, and is recovering under the use of it.
The Balsam was also used twice by Mrs. M.
family for Croup, with the most beneficial result. In a very violent case, which I am informed was relieved in three hours, after taking three doses. The other, a little girl, less violently affected, was relieved by taking one dose. Before writing you further, I wish to say, that this medi-

WANTS TO SELL HIMSELF.

The New York Sunday Times (Major Noah editor) thus describes a singular scene:

Passing down Nassau street, three or four persons were standing inside of a store, talking to a black man, and they directed us to come in. "Here is a black man," said one of them; "he is a slave for $150." We entered the store, and saw a short, stout fellow in rags, with a good countenance, and no indication of vice.

"Where do you belong?" "To New York. I was born here." "Don't you know you can't sell yourself as a slave in this State?" "What am I to do? I can't get no work; I have had no breakfast; I am almost naked; no one cares for me, and I have no friend. It is not better to have a good master, whom I can work for, and who will care for me?"

Here was an illustration of the practical benevolence of domestic African slavery, while it exhibited the rank hypocrisy of the abolitionists. They could raise $2000 to purchase the liberty of two mulatto girls, and yet allowed a poor black to offer to sell himself as a slave, to save himself from starving in a free North State!

The same paper exposes the hypocrisy of the northern philanthropy on the subject as follows:

Here, at the North, the poor blacks are not permitted to work alongside of the white man. We reduce them to the lowest grades of civilization by making them our servants, our waiters, our dependants. Once, they were permitted to follow the humble employment of carrying up bricks and mortar, but they were kicked from the ladder by our white fellow-citizens.

They clean boots, scour clothes, but are not permitted to sweep streets—they do not own or command a ship; they are only cooks and stewards—they are not merchants, bankers or brokers—they hold no public appointments, and are rudely thrust from our cars and carriages—we do not eat with them, and in our places of amusement, there are pens and divisions, in which they may sit by themselves. Is it any wonder, that they are poor, vicious, and the inmates of our hospitals and prisons? And yet we, who persecute, neglect, and repudiate the free black man here, are filled with holy zeal to make the slave free at the South, and to deprive him of a home, of food and clothing, and of a kind, considerate master; and we struggle for that freedom, even at the expense of breaking down, dividing, and destroying our glorious republic. Well may the blacks say, "Save us from our friends! Save us from the pity and protection of the political abolitionists!"

THE SOUTH AND ITS INTERESTS.

The true made by which the South is to gain strength and energy, and advance her prosperity, is pointed out now and then in Southern journals, which amid the stir and noise of political and sectional strife, maintain composure and the faculty of calm perception. The Richmond Republican is of the opinion that, to make the South great and invulnerable to the assaults of fanaticism, it would be better, instead of talking of the sword, to build the railroad and the canal, banish sectional jealousies and look to the good of the whole State; develop the agricultural and mineral resources of the Commonwealth, and afford to them and to the rich trade of the West avenues to Southern seaports; establish a direct trade between the ports of the South and the Old World; encourage the establishment of manufactures; be content even with inferior articles, if they are of home production—and so on.

"All this," says the Republican, is easier to teach than to practice, we know; but if we are willing to sink to a miserable province, and remain at the mercy of enemies of our institutions because there are difficulties in our way, we deserve our fate. We show that our State pride is the mere vapor of a hot brain; that we are too indolent and effeminate to deserve greatness; that we have none of the moral elements necessary to constitute a strong people—no self denial, no ambition, perseverance, no energy, no self respect; and it would be better for the land which we occupy, and for future ages, if war or pestilence should desolate the South, and leave it open to the race which has the fragility, the enterprise, the hardihood, the self reliance, and the true pride, to avail themselves of the countless advantages by which we are encompassed on every hand."

We find views of a similar kind in other Southern journals. Noticing the fact that the State of Massachusetts manufactures boots and shoes to the value of some seven million in dollars annually, the Columbus (Ga.) Times remarks:

The principal customer of these boots and shoes is the South. Why does not the South make her own boots and shoes, and thus save the millions drained from her pockets to make New England rich? The raw material is here in abundance, our labor is cheaper, and our market right at our doors.

The North formerly made everything for us—Now we have learned how to make our own coarse cotton fabrics, and our flour. The "Variety Works," in this city, is driving a whole lot of Yankee made "notions" out of the market, such as tubs, buckets, churns, bedsteads, &c., which are better made, and cheaper in price than the Northern—Paper is another article about to be made in this vicinity, on a large scale, by a mill in the course of erection. All these are fine starts in the race of disentanglement from dependence on the North.—We hope soon to see our shoes, saddlery and harness, and a hundred other branches of manufacture, in successful operation amongst us.

This kind of industry is the secret of Northern prosperity, and if adopted here, will prove the talisman of ours. The marvel is, that the South is not poorer than she is. We raise but one crop that represents money and purchases our wants.—With that, we have to buy our stock of mules and hogs from the West, and our manufactured goods from the East. The cotton crop is exceeded in value by the productive industry of several trifling articles of manufacture in New England. If we are not mistaken, the value of the leather manufacture is about of it. We believe that the umbrella crop beats the cotton crop in value. How then, are we to get rich, by pursuing a single branch of business, and overlooking that branch to the destruction of price, and to the impoverishment of our lands? What the South needs, is division of labor, variety of pursuits, and enterprise to develop the wealth that teems in our forests, our water courses, our hills and valleys. No people are blessed by nature with such abundant capabilities to be completely independent. There is not an article [i.e., perhaps excepted] of luxury, necessity, or convenience which we cannot make for ourselves.

LOUIS BONAPARTES DOG.

The ugliest of conceivable animals is the faithful Ham, the invariable companion of the Prince in his solitary promenades. Like many personages of a fiction, Ham has taken the name of his birth-place. He was born in the fortress where the Prince was imprisoned, and from early puppyhood attached himself to the noble captive, begging the weary time by his tricks and proofs of sagacity. He was accessible to the Prince alone, repelling all advances to intimacy on the part of the soldiers and servants.

It became one of the chief amusements of the inmates of the fortress, to experiment upon the dog-stepper, and witness the adroitness with which he evaded the various vexations to which he was subjected. But after having served the Prince as a burglar of weariness only, Ham, at last, had an opportunity of rendering more valuable service by aiding him to escape. It will be remembered that Louis Napoleon made his egress from the fortress of Ham in the disguise of a laborer. There were several employed in making repairs to his room, and taking the frock and cap of one of them, he raised a plank on his shoulder, which half concealed his face. To his dismay, on arriving at the last gate which he was to pass, and where the principal guard was stationed, he discovered Ham surrounded by the soldiers and amusing them with his tricks. As he had been present while his master changed his dress, and could not pass by, there seemed no chance that he would not betray him by an open recognition. He seemed to comprehend, however, that there was a mystery going. At the moment of the captive's going by, he redoubled his activity, leaping and frisking in a manner that wholly occupied the attention of the guard, and thanks to this decoy, there was no detection. The Prince went safely through, and, an hour afterwards, as he sped toward the frontier at the fastest pace of the post-chaise which had awaited him, he heard the joyous bark of Ham in the dust behind, and they passed safely together over the border.
