Marion and his Men—Mc-

Donald's Rescue.

BY H. G. CHAPMAN.

The heavy tread of a horse echoed upon the air, as a solitary horseman rode along the banks of the Santee river, and took his way in the direction of the farm house of Ellersie Hunter. He was about twenty-five years of age, and was dressed in the uniform of Marion's men.—

He rode a tall coal black steed, and was completely armed for offensive or defensive operations.

He had evidently been belated, and was now wishing to make up for lost time, for his noble steed was urging forward at a rapid gallop, and his eyes wandered anxiously and warily around him; suddenly a bright light broke the forest and far down the stream he saw the lurid sparks ascending into the air, and behind a red glow pointed upon the cloud, by the conflagration below. Hastily raising in his stirrups, he gazed for an instant upon the scene, and then exclaimed:

"My God! it is the house of Hunter! Away! Away!

He stuck his spurs deep into the side of his horse, who giving a wild snort, sped like an arrow from a powerful bow through the wilds of the forest.

The red flames of the fire cast an uneasily glare upon the surrounding objects, and revealed with fearful distinctness the features of a strong man who had emerged from the depth of the wood and stood leaning upon the rifle, gazed at the glowing embers. His lips quivered with emotion, and a tear started involuntarily to his eyes—but brushing aside this evidence of his weakness, if weakness it may be called, he strode to where the form of a female lay stretched upon the earth, and stooping down he scrutinized with one deep, long gance, those pallid features and parted the matted locks from her gorge brow, where the fatal missile had forced its entrance and deprived her of life; and then raising himself to his fullest height, he rasped his ride with a spasmodic ch, and breathed forth in ferocious the single word—"Vengeance!"

turning around, was absolutely silent as the sun placable too.

The rush of the s-

and with a bound a horseman bolted in front of the burning mansion, and glanced, with an unearthly stare at ground him.

It was McDonald! the affianced

of Marion Hunter!

His lofty brow was pallid as that of the dead female that lay beneath his horse's hoof, and cheek

as pale as the white rose of Sharon, while every limb of the strong man trembled like an aspen leaf,

and his bosom heaved almost to bursting with the force of his emotion, as he shouted forth in the agony of his heart—

"My Marion! my Marion! where art thou?"

"Go seek the enemy of our land,

The party halted before the gate of a large tory farm house, and one of the men dismounted—threw it open, and the cavalcade entered the enclosure one after another; the space not being wide enough to admit of more than one going at a time. Their long ride had so wearied the men that they hurried in as fast as possible; and by checking the impatience of her horse, Marion remained outside until all but two guards had passed in. One of these then advanced before her, bidding the other to remain behind her, but as he left her side, quick as thought she turned the head of her steed, and applying her whip to the flanks of the spirited animal, he sprang off in the direction of the black forest. A deep curse broke from the lips of the remaining guard as he wheeled his steed to follow her; and it drew the attention of those inside, among whom was Ellersie.

"Mount men, and follow her! a thousand dollars to the one who secures her alive!" he shouted in phrensy tones of madness as he hastily mounted his own steed to follow.

"Go on Marion! God bless you for a noble girl! And I'll defy the villians to find you again. On, on, girl! There is hope before, and worse than death behind," and the tears of heartfelt joy poured over the cheek of Hunter, as he gazed upon the exciting scene.

"Take that old gray headed dog to the first tree, and hang him upon the first limb!" wrathfully cried Ellersie, as he spurred his horse through the gate, and urged him forward in quick pursuit.

Half a dozen men sprang forward to obey, and the old man was released from his horse, but so long had his limbs been confined in a position, that he was unable to walk, and his captors brutally seized him by the grey hairs of his head, dragged him forward to an oak tree which grew in the yard, and procuring a rope, prepared to carry into execution the last diabolical order of the blood-thirsty

Ellersie.

In the meantime the steed which bore the flying Marion, swept rapidly onward to the west, and turned around, was ab-

placable too.

ground him.

of Marion Hunter!

man trembled like an aspen leaf,

bursting with the force of his emo-

ony of his heart—

and releasing the form of Marion, he sprang to his horse; but when rose in his stirrups, his head was close to his chin by the reins of Ma-rión's palfrey, he turned him toward the farm house, and galloped hastily onward.

"Do not go there—a hundred red dragons are resting in the yard."

"Their doom is sealed—listen!" and as he spoke a loud volley rang forth upon the blast and the thick volumes of smoke curled up above the roof of the house, and a loud crash of arms resounded through the yard. Marion fixed an enquiring glance upon her lover; who replied by simply saying—

"Tis Marion and his men!"

"Of the hundred men that went forth with Ellersie, not one escaped; and from the terror with which their fate inspired the Tories, the battle of that morning was recited by them, "McDONALD'S RES-CUE."

How a Coat was Identified.

In the Justice's Court in this city a case was recently decided in a most novel way. A coat was in dispute, and the evidence was direct and positive for both claimants; the parties were Irish and "full of spirit," ready to spend all they had rather than "give up beat." The affair had been carefully examined, and the Court was "in a quanary," not knowing who had the best claim on the garment. However, a moment before his Honor was to sun up the evidence, Patrick Power, one of the claimants, made the following proposition for settling the affair. Said Patrick:

"Timothy Maguire, now ye say that coat belongs to yourself entirely,

I say it is mine own. Now mind ye, Timothy, the both of us will take the coat 'n' look it all over; the man that finds his name on it shall be the owner."

"Done," said Timothy.

"An' ye'll stick to the bargain," asked Patrick.

Jacksonville Depot.

We are happy to be able to announce to our readers that it is highly probable this vexed question will soon be settled, in a manner satisfactory to all the parties concerned. Mr. Troost, the Chief Engineer, paid our place a visit last week, examined the ground, had an interview with several of our citizens and principal stockholders, and made some propositions that, so far as we can learn, will give satisfaction to all. The proposition is, to select a branch off from the main trunk of the road at the nearest and most convenient point, run it up through Messrs. Woodward's and Snow's fields by the Tanyard to Spring lot, and there make a passenger Depot. A separate freight Depot is to be placed a little below the Tanyard. From the Depot at the Spring it is proposed to carry the Rome road out along the hollow in front of the residences of Messrs. Whatley and Woodward, and thence on the most practicable route in the direction of Rome. In connection with this arrangement, Mr. Troost says the Directors will bind themselves in a bond, not to place any other Depot on the main Road, any where near Jacksonville.

We think our citizens will be most fortunate if they can succeed in effecting this arrangement. Every body looks forward with certainty to the connection of the Selma and Gadsden road with the great system of rail roads running through Georgia into Tennessee.

The citizens of Rome and Cedar Town are already moving in the matter. They propose to build their part of the road to the State line in time to carry off the Cotton crop of 1852, provided Alabama promises to meet them there.

We, at this place, are satisfied that this Rome branch will be of far more importance than the main trunk running on to Gadsden and Guntersville. It is now conceded on all hands that this road to Rome must become a great thoroughfare of travel from north Western Georgia, Tennessee, Virginia and further north, to the Gulf coast at Mobile. This, which we now call a branch, will, in fact, be the main and important road. Then by locating our Depot as is now proposed by the Engineer, this great thoroughfare, will pass immediately through our town; and, thus will be realized the hopes and expectations that induced our citizens to take such a large amount of stock.

The central and convenient position of the Depot, will do equal justice to all, while the place will derive all the benefits it is possible for a rail road to confer upon it. These it would be too tedious to enumerate. We have only to go to the beautiful and flourishing towns that have sprung up as if by magic in upper Georgia, to see what we may make our own.

We repeat, we have not as yet heard a dissenting voice to the proposed arrangement. Should the directors adopt the suggestions of the Engineer, and it is understood that they will do so, there will be an end of all the dissatisfaction and distrust that have arisen among us about this Depot question; and we have ample assurances that the stock that was taken upon condition the road should be brought by Jacksonville, will be paid as promptly as that which was taken unconditionally. We therefore expect soon to see everything moving on amicably, and, to see each man interested putting his shoulder to the wheel to move on the great enterprise.

It is known that many of the conditional stockholders who helped to make up the last hundred thousand have declined paying the installments called for heretofore, on account of this difficulty about our Depot. As this question will in all probability be settled to their satisfaction, at the next meeting of the Directors, it would be well for them to begin to get their cash ready to "fork over." It would look bad after getting all we have asked for, and upon which we have been making such promises, not to be prompt in performing our part of the contract.

Notwithstanding the temporary damper thrown upon the company by the uggardly policy of the Legislature in refusing to pass the Endorsement Bill—refusing to foster even by the credit of the State, a great work of internal improvement, while other States are appropriating hundreds of thousands of dollars of cash for similar purposes, we say, notwithstanding this narrow contracted policy of our Legislature, the work is going on prosperously. There is a sufficiency of stock taken already to grade the road from one end to the other. This done, or well advanced, and the company will be able to procure means for its completion without the assistance of the State.

The town of Selma has recently taken one hundred thousand dollars more stock; and if the work continues to progress favorably, as it will if the present stockholders pay up promptly, general confidence will soon be inspired, and there will be plenty more men found willing to take stock and help to complete the road.

So, we say to one and all, be of good cheer: Alabama is destined to be a great State yet, and this line from Rome to Mobile will be the great artery along which her people and commerce will travel; or, the great centre of vitality around which her wealth and interests will cluster.

Huzza for Falladege—and a Hundred Guns for Selma!

We clip the following gratifying news from the last Alabama Reporter: "We have just been informed that a report is in circulation below here, that the contractors on the Rail Road in this county, have quit work, which we take pleasure in saying is false. The Road is progressing more rapidly in this county, at this time, than it ever has—

The contractors have gone to work with the determination to show the opponents of the Road, that it will require more than the action of the last Legislature, to deter them from the completion of an enterprise of so much importance. We learn that the public spirit of the citizens of Selma, a few days since, subscribed over one hundred thousand dollars stock, in addition to the large amount heretofore taken by them, which amount we understand is to be paid immediately. The enemies of this great enterprise seem determined to leave nothing untried in their efforts to shake the confidence of its friends, and impede the progress of the work. Such attempts as the above, however, will prove unavailing. Notwithstanding the action of our last legislature, the zeal of the stockholders and friends of the road is nothing abated; renewed energy seems to have infused itself into every one connected with the project; and all along the line the work is moving on rapidly.

The cause for lukewarmness upon the part of some of our citizens, we think is, or will be soon removed. It is hoped then, that all will be up, and doing.

We shall have something to say in a subsequent issue about Jacksonville and its position on this great thoroughfare.

Mobile Cotton Market.

The attention of that portion of our readers who expect to ship Cotton in the direction of Mobile, is respectfully called to the advertisement of Messrs. Tarleton & Whiting, Commission Merchants of that city. One of the firm, Mr. Whiting, has been long and favorably known to most of our community, first as Cashier of the Montgomery Bank, and afterwards as Assistant Commissioner for winding up the affairs of the State Bank and Branches.

Mobile is a better Grocery market than can be found in any other direction—internal improvements of various descriptions are now in progress of construction from that city to the interior to which the citizens of Mobile have extended a most liberal and generous aid and assistance; and we are gratified in being able to state the fact, that there is a general disposition prevailing to build up our own commercial mart. These and other circumstances cause us at present to refer to the business of that city with feelings of more than usual interest.

call attention to the business card which we have been publishing some time, of the firm of R. R. McLELAND & Co., one of the oldest and best established firms in Mobile, and which from its long and well established reputation needs no commendation from us.

COACH MANUFACTORY.—We call the attention of persons interested in the purchase of articles in this line to the advertisement of Mr. Wm. T. Price, who holds forth fair and strong inducements in his notice of a new establishment, opposite the Railroad Depot, Rome, Ga.

The True Policy.

Charles P. Freeman & Co., of New York, are trying the experiment of advertising their goods in most of the papers throughout the Union. This is as it should be. Such a wise and liberal policy is like "bread cast upon the waters" to be gathered many days hence. The wealthiest Merchants in the whole country have already realized the oft repeated boast of the Printer, "He who advertises liberally is sure to make a fortune." Others can be equally successful if they will pursue the same course.

We call the attention of our readers to the card—found in our advertising columns—of the above Firm. Let our merchant readers or friends who visit New York give them a call.

Hon. James Buchanan.

This distinguished statesman, while on a visit, a few days since, to Richmond, received an invitation (signed by a large number of the members of the Virginia Legislature) to a public dinner. He replied in the following letter, which we publish with great pleasure. Its closing admonitions to Democrats in favor of co-operation between those whom the Compromise divided, are nowhere more needed than in Georgia. We heartily approve of them—and what ever impression we may have made to the contrary—would not willingly open a sentence in violation of their spirit.—Georgia paper.

RICHMOND, Feb. 12, '52.

Gentlemen:—On my arrival in this city, last evening, I received your very kind letter welcoming me to the Metropolis of the Old Dominion, and tendering me the honor of a public dinner. I regret, deeply regret, that my visit to Richmond will necessarily be so brief I cannot enjoy the pleasure and the privilege of meeting you all at the festive board. Intending liberally to pass a day with my valued friend Judge Mason, my previous arrangements are of such a character that I must leave here to-morrow, or, at the latest, on Saturday morning.

But whilst I cannot accept the dinner, I shall ever esteem the invitation from so many of Virginia's most distinguished and estimable sons, as one of the proudest honors of my life. Your ancient and renowned Commonwealth has ever been the peculiar guardian of State Rights, and the firm supporter of constitutional liberty, of law, and of order. When, therefore, she endorses with her approbation, any of my poor efforts to serve the country, her commendation is a sure guarantee that these have been devoted to a righteous cause.

You are pleased to refer in favorable terms to my recent conduct "at home, in defence of the federal constitution and laws." This was an easy and agreeable task; because the people of Pennsylvania have ever been as loyal and faithful to the Constitution, the Union, and the rights of the Sovereign States of which it is composed, as the people of the Ancient Dominion themselves. To have pursued a different course in my native State, would, therefore, have been to resist the strong current of enlightened public opinion.

I purposely refrain from discussing the original merit of the Compromise, because I consider it, to employ the expressive language of the day, as a "finality," a fixed fact, a most important enactment of the day, the agitation or disturbance of which could do no possible good, but might produce much positive evil.

Both our own and the preceding generations have seen the most dangerous breach she has ever encountered, and triumphantly ridden out the storm. Both those who supported the measure of the Compromise as just and necessary, and those who, regarding them in a different light, yet acquiesce in them for the sake of the Union, have arrived at the same conclusion—that it must and shall be executed.

They have thus, for every practical purpose, adopted the same platform, and have resolved to sustain it against the common enemy. Why, then, should they wrangle, and divide and waste their energies, not respecting the main question, which has already been definitively settled, but in regard to the process which has brought them, through from different directions, to the same conclusion? Above all, why should the strength of the Democratic party of the country be impaired, and its ascendancy jeoparded for any such cause? We who believe that the triumph of Democratic principle is essential, not only to the prosperity of the Union, but even to the preservation of the Constitution, ought reciprocally to forget, and, if need be, to forgive the past, and cordially unite with our political brethren in sustaining for the future the good cause of Democracy. It must be a source of deep and lasting pleasure to every patriotic heart that our beloved country has so happily passed through the late trying and dangerous crisis. The volcano has been extinguished, I trust for ever; and the man who could apply a firebrand, at the present moment, to the combustible materials which still remain, deserves execration, for he may produce an eruption to overwhelm both the Constitution and Union.

With sentiments of high and grateful respect, I remain your fellow-citizen, JAMES BUCHANAN.
Shelton F. Leake, Esq., and other gentlemen.

The oath which Louis Napoleon took, when inaugurated as President, was in these words: "In the presence of God and of the French people here represented by the National Assembly, I swear to remain faithful to the one indivisible and democratic republic, and to fulfill all the duties imposed upon me by the Constitution."

Washington Speculation.

We take the following extract from a letter written by Mr. Forsyth, Editor of the Columbus Times to his paper, from Washington: "The Presidency is, of course, the absorbing subject here, and it is owing to the multiplicity of candidates and the want of an overshadowing preeminence of claim and position in any one of them, that the uncertainty exists. On the Whig side, it is pretty generally conceded that Gen. Scott will be the candidate. He will run as the Northern candidate, (for whiggery can only be said to exist now in the North,) and he will marshal his hosts with Seward as his second in command. Except Tennessee, the Whigs have little or no hope of getting the vote of a single Southern State. They are playing for the anti-slave States. Messrs. Webster & Fillmore are still somewhat talked of, and their friends appeal to the Southern popularity (!) of the gentleman as a reason for the nomination of one or the other. If the President and his Secretary could agree between them which should take the race, and heartily combine, they might give the "Hasty Plate" a pretty good tug for the nomination.—Still, I believe Scott is to be the man—the Northern Whig candidate with Northern Whig Free-soil principles.

The Democrats, on the other hand, look to the South for success; and this circumstance is one highly important to the South and to the country, and offers an auspicious opportunity, if rightly used, to restore the Democratic party of the Union upon the basis of the principles of that party, in their ancient State Rights purity. The South holds the destiny of the great Democracy in the hollow of its hand. It can make or unmake it. It can consign it to defeat, or lead it to victory under the old banner which used to wave so proudly over Virginia and Kentucky. Never in the history of this Government, was this restoration so needed to the best interests of this great country and people. The man is blind, who at this point of observation does not see the racehorse speed with which the Government is rushing to a centralism of the powers of the State, and how it draws its vortex from the most disastrous points of the Union, the ambition, the hopes, the strength and the authority of the people and the country. Every year its expenditures are swelling. In twenty years they have more than doubled, and when, a few years hence, one hundred millions of public money shall be disbursed from this point; when here is the great Mecca to which the eyes of all political idolaters are turned—here the Government is in perpetual and powerful action, Congress sitting almost without intermission; while State local administration is paralyzed, and corrupted by the splendor that beams from the central luminary—what hope, I ask, without a speedy reform of the general administration, that the true principles upon which the Government was founded, can survive the laps of twenty years? None. Now, then, is the time for the South to perform its constant mission of arresting these Federal tendencies, and saving the Union from a wreck of despotism, wherein, while personal liberty may be left, the political liberties of sections and communities will be forever overthrown. The South never had a better opportunity to do this. I can dictate both the candidate and the creed of the Democratic party, and firmly depend on the great cause, it can be united in rallying the State Rights sentiment which still lingers in strong but neglected germs in West, Illinois, Indiana, New Jersey, New Hampshire and Pennsylvania can be rallied to the side of the South in its patriotic struggle, if she be true to her self. To do this, we must have a platform—Jeffersonian in its every plank, and a man for President, to carry it out with iron will, and drive from the capitol the political corruptions which have poisoned the pure streams of ancient democratic administration.

I confess, that since my arrival here, I have been inspired with new hopes for my country and country. Mortified and crushed in spirit, by the humiliating defeat we encountered at the South, in our struggle for the true principles of this confederation of States, I have been long lapsed in a mood of gloomy indifference to the future. But new light breaks upon me. I find here that our struggle was appreciated and honored—I find it is respectable even in this tainted Federal atmosphere to the State Rights man, and I find a growing opinion, not only that our struggle was done great good, but that a principles which lay at the foundation of it, are those alone upon which the government can endure, and maintain the rights and liberties of the people.

Intended to say something about the Democratic aspirants for the Presidency—on this subject, I have observed closely and seen much; but must reserve this for another communication.

THE RIOT AT CLEVELAND.—HORRIBLE DISCOVERIES.—GREAT EXCITEMENT, &c.—The riot at Cleveland, Ohio, on the 17th inst., commenced on account of the discovery of portions of human bodies in the cess pool of the Homeopathic College, which were identified by the friends of the dead. This caused great excitement, and, to satisfy the public mind, a committee of five citizens was appointed to go through the building and examine every part. At dark, the crowd increased largely, and hundreds, with lanterns, bludgeons, &c., were congregated about the building.—Every door, from the first to the fourth story, was burst in by the committee, the mob occupying the stairs, &c., awaiting their report. In the dissecting room, situated in the cock-loft, the committee found the bodies of a man and woman partly dissected, and a dry goods box filled with feet, heads, cranks and other portions of bodies. One of the committee recognized the hand of his own daughter by unmistakable marks. The crowd then went in and ransacked the rooms emptying their contents from the windows. A full length skeleton was washed to a barber's pole, and carried about the streets, and building was twice fired, and extinguished by the authorities. The Light Artillery and several military companies were called out and were on guard, as well as the civil authorities.

Removal of another Havana Invasion.—A letter from Havana, of the 10th inst., states that a good deal of excitement is again being created in that place by absurd rumors of an immense expedition fitting out in the Southern States for the Union for another invasion of the island. Considerable alarm is occasioned; and these reports cannot fail to have an injurious effect upon commercial operations. Some persons in a small town, called on a Quaker, known to be very generous, to obtain aid in building a Methodist Church. He remarked, it is against our principles to build churches; but said with a mild tone of voice, "take this and build a good fence around it." It was fifty dollars.

Considerable alarm is occasioned; and these reports cannot fail to have an injurious effect upon commercial operations. The attempts having been made upon Cuba within such a short period, each other, the people's confidence to these much larger

The Proposals must state the amount proposed to be paid for each year—also the names of the persons whom the applicant will offer as his sureties for the payment of the rent, and for the faithful performance of his duties.
On the 20th March or as soon thereafter as may be, the proposals will be opened by the Governor, and the proposal of the highest, or such other bidder as the Governor in the exercise of his best judgment may select, will be accepted.
